Several copies of a very clearly printed and well got up publication "Boletin de la Guerra" have been received. It is described as a publication giving news of employees of the F.C. Oeste de Buenos Aires who are enrolled in the Armies of the Allies. It was felt that in view of the numerous enquiries made in that sense something in the nature of a journal was desirable and at the instigation of Mr. Frank Foster, the Sub-manager of the Line, a monthly has been launched. It is highly creditable to the enterprise and ability of all concerned. Subscriptions ($1 mn.) may be sent to the Secretary, Mr. J. C. Angel, Gerencia, Estación Once, F.C.O.

PETITIONS FOR PENSIONS

A large number of petitions for pensions have been received by the sub-committee of the Chamber of Deputies which has lately been sitting under the chairmanship of Sr. Rolon, to consider the question of allocating these.

The work of the commission has been very considerable and is not yet completed, but the Chairman has already announced that but very few of the petitioners will be granted the pensions claimed as the matter is being dealt with in a most strict manner.

CRITICS AT THE COLON

Festival Performance

VARIED AND ARTISTIC PROGRAMME

With such an abundance of riches, last evening's performance would be most difficult to chronicle were it not for the fact that nearly all the items are well known to music lovers of this city.

The performance was a special one, the programme being arranged by the "Asociación de la Crítica," a new institution whose aim is the furtherance of art in this city. The performance commenced with the second act of Strauss's charming "Cavaliere Jella Rosa" performed by the same artists, we have already spoken well of in the report of the first performance of this opera. The second part of the entertainment consisted of a vocal and instrumental concert. The vocal part was contributed by Mlle. Vix and Sres. Lazaro and Jorn, who gave selections from the operas in which they are so proficient and of whom such favourable notice has frequently been given in these columns. Amongst the instrumental items, especially notice must be given to the charming "Suite" of the popular conductor Commendatore Gino Marinuzzi, which is based on popular Sicilian themes and shows much skill in orchestration. Much applause was accorded the popular conductor for this item, as also for his skillful interpretation of the Prelude and Death scene from Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde." The third selection of the programme was devoted to the first act of "Pagliacci" and dances by the popular Belgian artist, Mlle. Felyne Verbist. The performance of "Pagliacci" constituted a record performance, as it was the first occasion in which Caruso and Titta Ruffo have sung together in any opera. Needless to say, the interpretation by these artists was perfect and called forth storms of applause. The dancing of Mlle. Verbist was delightful in the two items she gave. The whole performance stands as a record difficult to equal and certainly the best seen for many years in this city. Certainly the initial attempt of the new society is a magnificent beginning and well worthy of the support which was well evidenced by the packed house last evening.

SOCIAL AT Y.W.C.A.

Another pleasant little reunion, one of those which take place periodically at the Y.W.C.A. was held last night. Early in the proceedings Miss Neuman, a Swiss lady contributed a most effective pianoforte solo and Mr. Scott followed with a solo on the auto harp, being at the same time gorgeously illuminated like a peripatetic 25 de Mayo. This is Mr. Scott's speciality and any infringement of the patents will be proceeded against.

The rest of the evening was devoted to games, proverbs and others and tea which with the cake accompanying it, does the highest credit to all concerned. There were between seventy and eighty present which is a full house.

SERVING WITH FRENCH ARMY

COMMISSION FOR A PERUVIAN CAPTAIN.

Paris, Aug. 4.
It is officially announced that Captain Murga, of the Peruvian army, has been given a commission as a lieutenant in the French artillery reserve for the duration of the war. Lieut. Murga has been appointed to the French army operating in Africa.

BRITAIN'S COAL

Exportation Prohibited

FROM AUGUST 13

London, Aug. 4.

It is officially announced that from August 13 the exportation of coal from the United Kingdom will be prohibited to any country with the exception of the British possessions.

ALLEN GARDINER HOMES

BENEFIT ENTERTAINMENT AT SAN ISIDRO.

At the Pabellon Blanco, San Isidro, last evening, an entertainment and sale of work was given by the Ladies' District Dorcas Society in aid of the Allen Gardner Homes and of Sunset House, Quilmes.

The evening was both enjoyable and successful. The hall was full of prettily arranged stalls on the one side, and refreshment tables on the other, and the busy throng of ladies assisting the funds was an untiring one. Mrs. Prescott, Miss Irene Paterson, President and Secretary respectively of the Dorcas Society, were assisted by a host of ladies either at the stalls, serving refreshments, or assisting with the numerous raffles. They included Mrs. Owen, Mrs. Frank Hughes, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Hudson, Miss Heale, the Misses Thomas, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Cowlishaw, Mrs. Van Wassener, Mrs. Thomas, Mrs. Neill, and Mrs. Watson. The latter five ladies, assisted by a beautiful bevy of lady assistants, were responsible for the refreshments.

Some of the competitions were most amusing. They consisted of a cigarette and tie race, which was won by Mr. Waugh and Miss Paterson, a Bean, a Button, a Cake, and a Water competition. An exhibition of hat trimming, in which Mr. Dougall expounded the millinery art most successfully in producing a marvellous creation of black with white feathers, while Mr. Cowlishaw won the second prize with a spasm in white. These competitions were varied by songs and by raffles. There was one competition which created much amusement, and this was an unmusical one, named the "Whistling Competition." "Come, sing to me," "Drink to me only," etc., were changed completely in "Whistle and I'll guess thy thoughts," for it was well nigh impossible for the ladies to imagine what tune their partner was attempting to whistle except in their minds. The winners were Mr. Gilbert and Miss Hogg, the former performing quite a remarkable feat with "Yip I addy I aye."

Little Miss Ivy van Wassener won a great big doll, which brought her all the pleasure in the world, and it was a question as to whether she nursed the doll or the doll nursed her. Mrs. Ireland was the winner of a cushion and Mr. Hughes of a tea cosy. Mrs. Cowlishaw won a clock. There were a number of other lucky persons, but the essence of the evening was the success with which the entertainment and sale of work met. Details as to this will be announced later, but the ladies of the Dorcas Society deserve every congratulation for their arrangements and the success of the evening.

LAND OF LILLIPUT

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians:

All thoughts as usual are on the war and how everybody may do something to "keep the flag flying," or in other words to help those who are doing this national work.

Girls and boys do a great deal too. Several girls I heard about recently used to meet at each others' houses on certain days, to make cushions. Their parents entered into the scheme, and little tea parties were arranged at the different houses; and each girl brought materials, and so many handsome cushions were made and then sold to get money for the Red Cross funds. I think the idea came from a party of ladies who were responsible for what they called a "Cushion tea." One lady invited her friends to a weekly afternoon tea and their cushions were made in the colours of the Allies; and they were sent to the hospital ships, where they would bring much comfort to the wounded. All sorts of "teas" are the result of the first and "knitting" teas, "pillowslip" teas, "mitten" teas, etc., all help in bringing these necessary things to the use of the soldiers fighting or injured.

Now I will tell you the story of a very youthful warrior. A little Australian boy of twelve years, whose father and three brothers had gone to the war, decided that he, too, should do his share to keep the flag flying, so he stowed away on a mailboat, which had a large Red Cross contingent on board, and only appeared when the ship was well out at sea. Then the people on board gave him a good time and dressed in the uniform of the Army Medical Corps, he was the hero of the ship and a general pet. On arrival at Colombo, however, so the story is told, he was transferred to a mailboat going to his home again, much to his disappointment. He was made a member of the crew on this occasion, but naturally was not burdened with laborious duties; and on his return to Australia, he was given an honourable discharge from the ship and a cheer from his late fellow-members of the crew, for the pluck and resource he had displayed in his adventurous though ill fated attempt to get to the front.

I told you something about the wonders of the bee in one of my recent letters. I wonder if any of you remember about it and them. Now I will tell you a little bit about how the bees make honey. Do you think that the bees make honey or do they only gather it from the flowers? They really gather the nectar from the flowers, and I am sure you know what that is; for all inhabitants of the Land of Lilliput have at some time or another tasted the nectar from some flower which they have bitten or sucked.

The bees manipulate this nectar in some wonderful way, they change it to honey, the heat in the hive and cluster causing the moisture to evaporate, which the warm air in the hive absorbs. And now the bees have to get rid of this warm, moisture-laden air, and to do this they vibrate or move quickly their wings and new air rushes in, this going on until all the moisture has been driven out. The nectar is manipulated by the bees taking it into the honey sac and forcing it out into the mouth parts, drawing it back into the sac again, then forcing it out again, and so on until it becomes honey sac and forcing it out into the bee mixes something which it alone possesses—some secretion—with this honey until it becomes thick, and the flavour has changed completely from that of the nectar. If you think of it, the bees make honey, just as humans make jam. We gather the fruit and add the sugar, and change both into jam by means of heat. The bees gather the nectar, add the sugar which is the secretion, and generate or make their own heat by means of which the moisture goes and the honey is made.

Of course the nectar is mostly sugar, but so is fruit. Honey is the prepared food for the bee colony stored away for its future use. Humans eat honey because it is a rich nutritious food, and very much liked. Now, although the bees change the flavour of the honey from its first flavour when nectar, the honey gets its distinctive flavour from the flowers, which accounts for the many varieties of honey there are.

Now I think I have told you enough for you to understand that the bee is indeed busy, not only gathering honey but making it also. The gospel of work is indeed that of the bee.

Now for your usual story:— It is an Australian story and all about Australia. I hope you will like it. The writer has called himself "Coughdrop" and the story

"OUR FLAG."

Some time ago I wrote about "Teacher," and I promised I would do so again. Truth to tell there is so much to write about I scarcely know where to begin. Still I think to-day I will tell you about our flag. You perhaps know schools exchange flags. Perth, Western Australia, sent an Australian one to Perth, Scotland, and received their flag in return. Lots of other schools do the same.

Well! Teacher thought we should send a flag to—England and perhaps they would send us one in return. So we all brought some money for teacher to buy one, and she sent it with photos of the school and we children.

Miss Niel admired the Australian flag so much, she thought we should have one ourselves, so she got up a social to obtain enough money to buy one. Then of course we had to have a pole. She considered there were plenty in the bush for the getting, so one morning we senior scholars set out to look for it. After a good deal of tramping about we found one, not altogether suitable, but teacher shut one eye, squinted the other up the tree, and remarked: "It's a bit crooked at the top children, has not even the excuse of 'the crooked oak' either, but pro tempore, as time presses it will have to do. When I can raise sufficient nerve I'll go to the local timber yard and ask them to make us a present of the wood for a permanent one." We therefore cut the tree down and carried it to school.

The manual boys then braced it and as we had no pulley, we fitted in a cotton reel at the top for the rope.

A hole was then dug in the middle of the ground, deeper than the tallest scholar, the pole placed in, and the hole filled up, the little boys dancing on the earth to ram it down.

While we worked, teacher gave us a little homily on "self-help," thus:—"You see children, what we can do with energy and self-reliance. We earned the flag and rope, chopped down carried to the school, and fitted the pole, and now we are ready to hoist the flag unofficially for rehearsal, so that the ceremony this afternoon will pass off without a hitch."

The official hoisting was to be in the afternoon, when all the parents and friends were invited to attend. "Now!" said teacher impressively, "the babies will hoist the flag." They gathered eagerly round, and Bully Bell thereupon got a good grab of the rope, gave it a tug—while teacher was looking round and saying, how proud she was of our work—when presto! the rope jumped off the cotton reel jammed between it and the pole, and refused to budge up or down.

Miss Niel mildly said: "Now babies you were too rough, give the rope to teacher."

She took the rope gave it a gentle pull at first, then with more energy, but to no purpose. Some of the boys wanted to shin up the pole and put the rope on the reel again, but Teacher said the pole was too high, and thin at the top, it might break and the climber get a nasty fall, and she had quite enough "first aid" practise with us, without going out of her way to get more.

Well, she tried every way to coax that rope the move, but it wouldn't be coaxed, so at last she sighed, and murmured to herself "boast not!" then more briskly:

"Boys, get all the spades you can from the house, and dig the pole out as soon as possible, or it will never be ready for this afternoon."

We all worked with a will and at last it was out. Then we made the reel so that it could not jam again, placed the pole back in the hole, and had it nearly filled in when some of the big brothers came along and finished it.

In the afternoon, at times, it simply teemed with rain, but most of the parents and friends came between the breaks, and we had a jolly time. The flags were hoisted during a pause in the rain. The Union Jack was ran up first, by the youngest girl and boy in the school. It was rolled up and tied with a string and running knot, that only wanted a little pull to undo.

As the flag floated in the wind the children sang "God Save the King," and then recited "The Union Jack."

"'Tis thy flag and my flag,

The best of flags on earth."

Then two other babies did the same with the Australian flag, while the children sang:

"Lift up the Five Starred Flag."

When we had finished singing, the chairman spoke to us of the greatness of our Empire, that our flags represented the nation, and stood for honour and integrity all the world over, and lots more I cannot remember.

He then called for cheers for King and flags, and at last for Teacher, whom he said, had promoted the function, and brought us together for a very pleasant afternoon.

Afterwards we went into school, recited the "Recessional," and sang patriotic songs. We then had tea and cakes, and played games until it was dark.

Some days later, during morning recess, the girls came rushing into school to teacher, asking for permission to un up the flags, saying the soldiers were passing by.

It was before they went to the war.

Teacher gave the girls the flags, and they ran out and soon had them flying. As each company of soldiers approached the flag they saluted and cheered, scarcely one lot of cheers dying away before another commenced. The children were all perched on the rail of the fence, shouting at the top of their lungs.

There must have been over a thousand men march past. When near the end of the column one of the officers called out:

"Three cheers for the head-teacher. Now kids, hip-pip hoorah!"

The "kids" did shout, and teacher looked so pleased.

I feel very sad, as I write this story, for most of those brave men who marched so smartly, and cheered so kindly, are now sleeping their long last sleep in a foreign land, far from their loved sunny land of Australia.

With love from

EGERIA.

In a recent interview the Crown Princess of Germany expressed herself thus:—"I do not believe that any true German mother or wife was, or can be, in favour of war—German women are the mothers of men who are, or have been, soldiers. They knew and realised, as perhaps the women of no other country did, with the possible exception of France, what war really meant to them before it came. That they give their sons to the Fatherland when it is in danger has been shown and is being shown daily. But that they wanted war—ask any German mother or German wife!"

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

There are 40,000 Belgians in London. It is a nation within a nation, a city within a city. There is a whole little Brussels within four miles of Charing Cross. Belgium has bravely organized her new life in London. Here she publishes her daily paper, The Independence Belge, and sells 30,000 copies. A Belgian social club has been established at 20 Hanover square; the Criterion has become a Belgian theatre, with a Belgian company acting Belgian plays; the Belgian exiled engineers have established their civil institute in Great George street, Westminster; the Belgian doctors gather at King Albert's Hospital in Store street; and the Belgian lawyers in Hanover square. Kensington and Hampstead are the London districts that have been specially invaded by the more prosperous Belgian exiles. Croydon, too, has attracted many.

As they were able to leave their work at Wimeroux and Paris (in which places they were heads of military hospitals under the War Office), Dr. Louisa Garrett Anderson and Dr. Floia Murray were asked by Surgeon-General Sir Alfred Keogh, of the War Office, to take charge of a new military hospital of 500 beds in England, which, it is interesting to learn, was opened last month and staffed entirely, as were those in France, by women and women orderlies working under sisters. It is surely significant of the prejudice that still reigns that Cambridge University refuses to confer medical degrees on women graduates!

Queen Amelie of Portugal presided recently in the Royal College of Physicians, London, over the annual general meeting of the Royal Medical Benevolent Fund Guild. Her Majesty holds a medical degree, is a qualified nurse and takes a personal interest in the work of the British Red Cross Society. The report of the council for 1914 showed that war had taken its toll of the medical ranks. Seventy-three men of the Royal Army Medical Corps had been killed, and the guild had on its lists several widows who, in addition to the burden of poverty, had to bear the maternal anxiety of knowing that their sons were at the front.

Probably the only chieftainess of a great Scots Clan is Miss Egidia Menzies, of Menzies. The last male representative of the family was Sir Neil Menzies, eighth baronet, who died in Paris in December four years ago, and his place as head of the Clan was taken by his sister, one of the most charming of Scotswomen. The Menzies are a notable line in Scottish history. Their founder came over with the Conqueror, and they settled near Weem in the 13th century. With Sir Neill's death the baronetcy became extinct, but a claimant appeared, who was, however, unsuccessful.

The Duchess of Wellington possesses the splendid service of Servres made for Napoleon I., of which every single piece is different, the set being practically priceless. In the cellars at Apsley House is also the wonderful service of plate presented by Portugal to the Iron Duke, which has been valued at £200,000. The centre-piece is five feet high, and four men are required to lift it on to the table.

A clergyman who has earned the title of "The Fighting Parson" seems the right sort of man to be in the field. The Rev. Everard Digby, formerly an actor, then a student at Queen's College, Birmingham, afterwards curate of St. Michael's, Coventry, and now vicar of St. Agatha's, Finsbury, has been accepted as an Army chaplain. Mr. Digby, when at Coventry, promoted lots of boxing matches, and in London presided over the fight between Bombardier Wells and Colin Bell, at the Olympia.

PATRIOTIC FUNDS

BRITISH PATRIOTIC FUND

ELEVEN MONTHS' WORK

An interesting record of the working of the British Patriotic Committee up to the end of June has just been issued.

The total amounts received for the various funds shown in the 46th list of contributions published on July 4, were as follows:—

General Fund	$128,921.80
Prince of Wales's Fund	112,364.53
British Red Cross Fund	5,807.12
Belgian Relief Fund	3,929.10
Overseas Battleship Fund	1,260.90
Bank Interests at 4 per cent.	1,304.14

or $261,605.77, including £700 realised by a Patriotic Entertainment at Rio Gallegos.

The total amount remitted to the headquarters of the various Funds for which subscriptions are received is shown by the following statement, which embraces all remittances up to June 30, including those of the British Women's Patriotic Association and the Patriotic Dollar Fund.

Prince of Wales's Fund—
British Patriotic Committee	£9,350 0 0
British Women's Patriotic Association	2,490 6 3
Patriotic Dollar Fund	46 5 4

607 10 0

Pipe and Tobacco Fund—

£14,944 3 7

Since the date above referred to, the Committee have been enabled by the subscribers to send further remittances of £1,000 to the Prince of Wales's Fund, and £100 each to the Red Cross Fund and to the Overseas Battleship Fund; whilst the Association have been similarly enabled to send £500 to the Prince of Wales's Fund, £100 to the Officers' Families' Fund, £100 to the Red Cross, and £50 to the Belgian Relief Fund.

The total amount, apart from gifts of garments and comforts for the troops and for wounded and for Belgian refugees, collected to date by the British Women's Patriotic Association is $44,430.05 c/l, as follows:—

Prince of Wales's Fund	35,531.80
Belgian Relief Fund	2,824.65
Officers' Families' Fund	3,905.65
British Red Cross Fund	1,185.95
Pipe and Tobacco Fund	1,019.20
Bank Interest at 4 per cent.	162.80

$44,430.05

To complete the statement the details of the Patriotic Dollar Fund (Mrs. C. H. Pearson's) are reprinted below:—

Balance in hand $969.53

In connection with the scheme of sending chilled meat to England for the benefit of Belgian refugees, the Committee had received, to June 30, 150 lambs and 288 head of cattle; of these the lambs and 1064 quarters of beef had been shipped to London, leaving 88 quarters in hand for shipment when opportunity offers.

The amount realised by the sale of the hides and by-products will be expended in the purchase of further animals when the voluntary supply has become exhausted.

It may be noted that another Committee, International in character, has recently been formed, which devotes itself to shipping meat and other provisions for the benefit of the civil population in Belgium. The British Patriotic Committee confines itself exclusively to the relief of Belgians who have taken refuge in Great Britain, the support of whom is a voluntary burden upon the shoulders of our Government and our fellow-countrymen.

Turning to expenditure, the amount of $63,110.30 has been spent on Repatriation. 805 passages have been provided, almost all for volunteers, and the remainder for wives and families of such, and for a few distressed cases for whom there seemed little likelihood of obtaining suitable employment. To this account have also been charged the expenses of board and lodging for volunteers, etc., awaiting departure. The Committee here put on record their appreciation of the co-operation of the Steamship Companies, which has enabled them to keep down the cost per individual, including board and lodging, and occasional small cash grants to under $30 per head. The Committee calculate that the total number of volunteers who have left this Republic to answer the call of their country is, approximately, 5,000.

The total amount spent on relief is $17,530.91, viz., Board and Lodging at Salvation Army and Sailors' Home, $9,169.11; and in Cash Grants, $8,361.80. 657 cases have received relief in one or both of these forms; many on more than one occasion, and there are a small number in receipt of more or less permanent assistance.

Loans.—It is satisfactory to note that the amounts advanced by the Committee are in most cases being regularly repaid.

Administration.—This amount includes Office Rent, Clerical Salaries, Stationery, Cables, Postages, Hire of Typewriter, etc., etc.

Employment Register.—The figure given under this heading is the net expenditure in connection with the Employment Register, and represents fares paid to the camp for applicants, board and lodging whilst waiting for employment, small cash grants, and loans.

General.—The Committee do not propose at this stage to put on record their appreciation of the various and numerous services which have been voluntarily rendered them by many firms and individuals. They feel that this pleasant duty may be postponed to a later and more suitable occasion.

They have no reason to believe that the necessity for sacrifices from British subjects in all parts of the world is any less urgent now than at any time since the outbreak of war, and they are confident that British residents in all parts of the Argentine Republic will continue to respond gallantly to the calls made upon them.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN BENEVOLENT SOCIETY

HEAVY EXPENDITURE DURING JULY.

The monthly meeting of the general committee of the British and American Benevolent Society was held in the board room of the Royal Insurance Co., Calle Bm6. Mitre 478, on Monday, at 5 p.m., the following members being present:—

Mr. H. G. Mackie (in the chair), Mrs. Raynes, Mrs. Botting, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Huntington, Rev. Dr. McLaughlin, Rev. F. O. Spanton, Rev. F. H. Somerville, Rev. W. M. Laing, Rev. J. Stuart Cameron, Mr. W. R. Cassels, Mr. F. Phillips, Mr. James Marr (Hon. Treasurer), Mr. G. H. Hayward (Hon. Secretary), and Mr. Alexander Law (Superintendent).

An apology for unavoidable absence was received from Rev. Dr. Fleming.

The Minutes of the previous committee, meeting were read and approved.

The Hon. Treasurer then presented his statement of receipts and expenditure for the month of July, which was duly approved, the following being a resumé of the disbursements:—

Charity	$416.25
Pensions	291.00
Loans	25.00
Salvation Army . .	11.20
Funeral Expenses .	40.00
General charges . .	185.00

$968.45

British Aged and Infirm Fund	177.00
--------------------------------------	--------

Subsequently several new cases were submitted to the Committee and dealt with according to circumstances.

In presenting his cash statement the Hon. Treasurer drew the attention of the Committee to the fact that the amount granted in charity by the Society during the past month was more than double the amount received in subscriptions and donations during the same period. Whilst the Committee recognize the many calls and obligations on the British community at the present time, they hope the good work carried on by the British and American Benevolent Society for so many years will not be overlooked and that they will be enabled to continue to discharge charity in its most practical form, not only by its past supporters, but by sympathizers, who are not already subscribers, adding their names to the subscription list and forwarding their subscription, none are too small, to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. James Marr, Reconquista 144.

To those who are interested and may wish to know more of the work of the Society, on the receipt of a post card, at the same address as above, the Hon. Secretary would be pleased to forward an official report of last year's work.

AEROPLANE "RIVER PLATE"

Duty of Anglo-Argentines

BRITISH SOCIETY'S APPEAL

If the war has proved anything, it has proved the value from a military and naval point of view of heavier than aircraft, and the aeroplanes of the Allies have stood them in good stead against the German air squadrons and dirigibles. It has been proved that fast, easily handled biplanes and monoplanes may be dangerous or fatal adversaries to the enormous gas-bags wherewith Germany has sought to terrorise France, Russia, and the British South and Eastern Litoral. How many aeroplanes there are in existence in the British Government service it is impossible to even conjecture. The number is doubtless very large, but great as it may be, it cannot, in view of the numerous onerous duties imposed on the aerial fleets, be too great. Not only are large numbers required in the lines of battle for scouting and attack, and to stall off the enemy's attempts to gain information, but there must be considerable numbers both in reserve and ready to assail the murder airships of the Huns.

In connection with a proposal recently mooted the following letter has been sent to "The Herald" by the Chairman of the British Society in the Argentine Republic:—

The Editor, "The Herald,"
Buenos Aires.

"I am enclosing herewith a subscription list for the fund which we are endeavouring to raise in order to present to H.M. Government an aeroplane to be named 'River Plate.'"

"Similar appeals to the one we are now making have met with splendid responses in other parts of the world where the British communities are of less numerical strength than the British community in Argentina.

"The War Office authorities have publicly announced that they will gladly accept as many machines as can be provided. H.B.M. Minister, Sir Reginald Tower, warmly approves our appeal, and it is hoped, therefore, that every section of the community will respond.

"We realise, of course, that here the commercial conditions make it impossible to raise large sums, but £2250 for a biplane, complete with machine gun, ought not to be beyond our resources if a united effort is made, and we trust that for our credit as British subjects the flotilla of airships now being formed will contain at least one unit provided by the River Plate."

This appeal will, no doubt, be largely responded to. Those of us who are unable to be at the front in person can at least do something, if it be little or much, to help the Empire in this particular, and the essence of the thing is that the gift shall be one from all of us, not merely the generous donation of a few, but the offering of many. In this spirit it is hoped that a hearty response will be made to the appeal of the British Society, and that while Dives gives what he can, the equivalent of the widow's mite will also go to swell the amount destined to add another defender to the air fleet, which helps to keep the "Meteor Flag" flying, and to restrain the flood of German fury, savagery, and ruin which would fain make a Hell of Earth and Air and Sea.

It should be noted that donations will be gladly received by Mr. William Watson, British Society, Cangallo 536, Buenos Aires.

"A MASQUE OF DAYS"

HURLINGHAM CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINMENT

AT THE PLAZA HOTEL

"A Masque of Days," abridged from "The Essays of Elia," and dressed and decorated after the drawings of Walter Crane, was the story told by the programme arranged for July 31st, at the Plaza Hotel, presented by the children of Hurlingham, and in aid of the fund for Widows and Orphans of Officers.

The last sentence must be the excuse for the rest; for, as a gentleman remarked during one of the quarter-of-an-hour's wait between the pictures, "Charity covereth a multitude of sins."

The idea was good, the dressing and the decorating of the best, and the programme an excellent one; but the arrangements were bad. The whole work, which must have been enormous to those responsible for the presenting of the "Tableaux," was spoilt because of the difficulties under which the audience laboured to see the show. The gauze curtain veiling the pictures was so thick that even the best sight was strained in trying to get a view. Then nobody removed her headgear, and in some instances where two or three dear ladies, wearing enormous plumes and thick furs sat together, they formed an obstruction so formidable that those sitting behind them resigned themselves to the inevitable, and later contented themselves by standing in a doorway where an occasional glimpse was obtainable. Many were the complaints of the children who had come to see; and when they stood on their chairs, or were hoisted in their parents' or nurses' arms, nobody protested, for if the grown-ups couldn't see, how much worse was it for the children? Then a bevy of girls selling sweets, etc., plied their trade throughout each item, or stood in the gangway and so added to the obstacles. And then the interval between each item became painful, especially for those in charge of several little ones. But having given the disabilities, praise must be given where it is due. The children were splendid, and each picture, seen without the above-mentioned drawbacks, would have given a charming impression, for all the elements of perfection were there. The children of Hurlingham have once again demonstrated the wonderful ability and adaptability of the juvenile intellect, for properly managed, they are capable of wonders. The following is a list of the young artists and the characters which they portrayed in the eighteen tableaux submitted:—New Year's Day, George Edye; Christmas Day, Ambrose Cassels; Vigils, Kathleen Birmingham, Kathleen Anderson, Robert Birmingham, and Edgeley Willes; Hours, All the Children; Lent and Family, Evelyn Drabble, Kathleen Birmingham, Kathleen Anderson, George Edye and Robert Birmingham; Dripping Days, Stella Nodder and Ambrose Cassels; Sunshine Days, Kathleen Anderson, Dorothy Garrod; Wedding Day, Evelyn Drabble; Train Bearers, Kenneth Agar and Derrick Drabble; Pay Day, Desmond Jefferies; Messenger, Robert Birmingham; Doom's Day, Kenneth Agar; 21st of June, Evelyn Drabble; Shrove Tuesday, Ambrose Cassels; 22nd of December, George Edye; 2nd of September, Edgeley Willes; 30th of January, George Edye; March Many Weathers, Dorothy Garrod; Last of Lent, Robert Birmingham; April Fool's Day, Desmond Jefferies; Oak Apple Day, Ambrose Cassels; 12th of August, Stella Nodder; 23rd of April,

LASTRA VOLUNTEERS

ARGENTINE AIRMAN JOINS THE FRENCH ARMY

Paris, July 29.

The Argentine aviator, Benjamin Lastra, who has recently arrived in Paris, has volunteered for the French aviation corps and has been enrolled.

It will be remembered that Lastra was severely injured while accompanying Jorge Newbery in the ill-fated ascent, which cost the latter his life.

CHILDREN'S PARTY AT QUILMES

In aid of the Patriotic Fund of the Allies, a Children's Party will be given in the Station Hall, Quilmes, on August 30, (Feast Day). Fancy Dress will be in evidence but is not essential. A moderate price is asked for the tickets, Children $2, Adults $3, and special tickets for nurses at $1.

In the afternoon there will be games, dancing, a cinematograph entertainment for the Children and Bridge for any who feel so inclined. The function will last from three until six o'clock.

Festivities will be resumed at 8.45 p.m. This "Second House" which will consist of dancing and a Bridge Drive, is designed for the benefit of "flappers" and "grown ups."

Tickets may be had at Mitchell's Book Store, Cangallo 580; from Mrs. James Dey, "El Ombu," Quilmes; and from several others whose names will be published later. Contributions of sweets and cakes will be gladly received for the Funds by Mrs. Dey.

A RETURN TO SANITY?

POSSIBILITY OF A PEACE DISCUSSION.

Rome, Aug. 3.

Discussing the many messages and statements issued by various countries on the first anniversary of the war, the "Osservatore Romano" says:

"Reading these foreign messages, we have been pleased to note that the language adopted has been more modified in tone, so that, in a sense, it is more pacific and more humane.

"In place of inexorable warcries and proposals to annihilate the enemy, there begins to be substituted a more humane accent, although circumscribed. We see in this a possibility of discussion, leading to peace. It is a most comforting sign, although a very weak one."

Evelyn Drabble; Serving Maid, Edgeley Willes; Candlemas Day, Dorothy Garrod; Waiter, Kenneth Agar; May Day, Evelyn Drabble; Ash Wednesday, Robert Birmingham; Christmas Day, Ambrose Cassels; Sunday, Stella Nodder; Good Friday, Kenneth Agar; 29th of February, Derrick Drabble; Lord Mayor's Day, Derrick Drabble, Dorothy Garrod, Kathleen Birmingham; Shortest Day, Kenneth Agar; Longest Day, Stella Nodder; Valentine's Day, George Edye; St. Christopher, Desmond Jefferies. Various musical items were added to the programme, including songs by Dr. Sibbald and Signorina Francesca Rona, both of whom were encored on each appearance, cello solo by Mr. Davies, and violin solos by M. Dalette. By the time Miss Dorothy Stuart Small appeared, the audience was quietly melting away, but this lady gave "The Dying Swan" dance (which, by the way, ought soon to be laid to rest) in her usual style, which ended the entertainment.

Mrs. Edye and Miss Stubbs deserve many congratulations on the efficiency displayed by the children, whom they had made so skilful in their various parts.

THE LATE MRS. JOHN T. MARTINDALE.

On Thursday afternoon, July 29th, before a large gathering of mourning relatives and friends, who had met to do honour to the memory of the late Mrs. John T. Martindale, who died at the ripe old age of 81 years, and after a long and painful illness, at her residence, 155 Calle Montevideo. The Rev. Dr. McLaughlin paid a touching and well-deserved tribute to the Christian virtues of the deceased lady, who he said, was the oldest of the members connected with the American Methodist Church in Buenos Aires. The esteem in which she was held was manifested by the large number of friends who assembled at the house and accompanied the funeral to the Chacarita Cemetery, where the Rev. Dr. McLaughlin and the Rev. C. T. Turner conducted the concluding portion of the funeral service at the graveside.

The Rev. Mr. Turner, in concluding his remarks, called upon all present to emulate the example set them by the deceased.

MRS. GEORGE GREEN.

The funeral of Mrs. George Green, who died on Wednesday, took place on Thursday, July 29th, and was largely attended. The deceased lady, who was widely known, had lived practically all her life in Argentina. She was a sister of Messrs. Jordan and William Saunders, and related to the Green family of Uruguay. Her many friends included both English and Argentine families, and this fact was not lost sight of in the conduct of the funeral services, which were conducted by the Revs. Dr. Thomson of the Methodist Church, and D. M. Laing, of the Scotch Church, the former speaking in Spanish, and the latter in English. The funeral took place from Mrs. Green's late residence, Calle Cuba 2982, the cortege passing thence to the English cemetery at Chacarita.

Beautiful wreaths and flowers were sent by the following members of the family and friends:—From her loving husband; from her loving children; from her loving grandson "Pocho-lito"; from her loving granddaughters "Porota" and "Coca"; from Lulu and Emilio; from Jordan and Maggie (brothers); from her niece Jessie Gauthier; from Miss Dufrance; from Mr. N. A BRITON'S POINT OF VIEW

Facts and Fiction in the Argentine

By Addison Steele

Note.—The following is written without malice or evil intention. The characters drawn are purely imaginary.

Smithers lay back in his chair and laughed loud and long. What exactly tickled him we could never fathom, but that the joke was good there was not the slightest doubt, for every night after dinner he sat and sniggered—of course, none of us fellows really cared a tinker's cuss whether he laughed or whether he didn't, only it was annoying to have to face a man who wore a perpetual smile.

Timber, Perkins and myself had come out to the Argentine to make our fortune, because they told us at home that we should do so if we were only careful; in fact, Perkins' mother had hung a locket round his neck before sailing, with an inscription, "Where'er you go, wherever dine, remember the dollar is one and nine." So we all settled down to become rich and to save every cent we could. Timber said that to save money in a scientific way was an art, in which he was a past-master—"Where money seems to go nowadays," he added, "is in theatres, food, and somebody else's sister," therefore to get at the root of the matter, once and for all, these must be cut out, and to do that successfully one must have somewhere to go—to smoke, and read, or play cards for love, and do all those things which really sound expensive, but are not. I remember he had put his point most plainly at the confiteria at the corner of Maipú one night, when we were all fed up with working late, and there was not one of us who wouldn't have taken him by the hand and said, "Brains, old man, brains." The idea was this. We were to take a room, a sort of cosy "den," such as one has at home by the river; furnish it with easy chairs and pretty pictures of the flapper type and up-to-date sporting prints. Then we could have one or two bottles of fizzy drinks or vermouth, or perhaps, after a little while, we could put away so much a month and buy a case of whisky or Old Tom to go with the vermouth; but this would have to be considered by the majority. Well, we carried out the idea, found a place close to the Centre, or, rather, near Corrientes, where, with the help of our various business houses we furnished it very cheaply indeed. We had been installed about three months in our cosy den, and everybody said it was splendid. In fact, I believe our friends saw more comfort in the easy chairs than we did ourselves. Moreover, the drinking fund had to be raised. So we arranged to have the drinks supplied by the case, as we found it was more economical, but it was not always so. Sometimes we were just alone. Smithers, Perkins, Timber, and I. Then we made the most out of life, and often the cuckoo clock would strike twelve before we switched on the light, for we generally sat in the glow of a copper lamp, which cast a red shade over us. That night we had come early to the den, and being Monday none of us were in a condition to enjoy Smithers. Moreover, Perkins had the toothache, and couldn't stand it, so, throwing his lighted match in the fireplace, he demanded to know, after several months in this melancholy city of Buenos Aires, the reason of his continual enjoyment.

"Do you really and truly call this city melancholy, Perkins?" cried Smithers, "do you mean to sit there and say you have never seen anything humorous in the Argentine. Why, my dear fellow, from the smallest child playing in the street to the burial of its President, the Republic abounds with scenes of delightful merriment worthy of great authors; have you ever seen anything more farcical than the policeman at the corner directing the traffic? Have you ever watched him wave his newly-painted baton and tell the motor-driver to come forward when he means it to go back? Did you never notice when the drivers manage to crawl through on their own merit, the smile of contentment that comes over his dusky face, as though it said, "Alone I did it." You can't tell me you haven't noticed his sword which has borne him down on one side for years, and his revolver, which, by the way, is a new one. Surely that touch of the artist, as he waves his white-gloved hand in the air and knocks the ash off his cigarette, is wonderful. Ah, my dear Perkins, let me tell you, there is fun here, fast and furious, if you can only see it. The other night the policeman with two stripes, got a horse's head in one hand and his note-book in his other. In the excitement he calmly led the peaceful animal into one of Gath and Chaves' shop windows. Another Englishman and I nearly cried with pain, and we were nearly locked up. Consider, for instance, the girls of the Republic, speaking as an authority on the subject; you must admit they make you smile. They paint the English girl as being devoid of everything sweet and pretty. That as it may be, but if it were possible to catch an Argentine señorita early in the morning before her face cream is brought up, you will find she is a very matter of fact sort of person, after all. Her first thought is her powder puff; her second, her attire; this consists of an overall type of costume which she generally lives in all day. After she has taken her coffee, she dons her mop cap, and then with a dusting brush settles down to a wander round the cheap pictures, assuring her mother she is doing her duty. The last piece of furniture to be touched is the piano. Here she will most probably stay for an hour, playing or singing, generally in Argentine Italian; or she may practice a new ditty of La Goya. Perhaps she will play a tango, in which case the whole household, from the servants to the señora, will be heard chanting the weird tune. The mistress has been known to take one of the servants by the hand and dance the mystic valse on the patio, for the servants in the Argentine see the humour of things. Lunch is served somewhere between the hour of 11 or 12. Macaroni and puchero are the favoured dishes. There is little ceremony; the whole meal is taken with screams of laughter, and the chattering is marvellous. There is no need to change dresses, or remove the caps—no one will come. Even if someone does drop in, they wouldn't expect anything else. The only person the girl fears is her lover, and of these there are various selections. There is the one who wants to marry the girl. He has made a note of it in his pocket-book, has even bought a gold watch and ring. He may have seen her on the balcony; if he has, it must be after five, because before then the front of the house is prohibited to a señorita on account of her dress. Most of the afternoon is given up to the hair, and preparation of her skin to the rich velvet effect, so flushed with youth and so effective to the young bloods. At 5.30 she goes upon the veranda a few feet from the ground, standing on one leg, then on the other, dressed now in some simple artistic style, with a wrap flung carelessly round her neck. She never wears a hat. It would be fatal if she did, as her hair is beautifully arranged. Sometimes it has to be pinned into position over one ear. There was a terrible disaster in Flores last year, when one of the tiny curls happened to fall at the feet of a lover as he repassed her balcony. The poor fellow is now heart-broken because gallant like, he thought it was a token of love, and returned it. (Que cosa babara!). The Argentine señorita demands admiration. There is something romantic about the form or dress, the poise of her head, the flashes of concealed merriment from her dark eyes, all of which go to make them alluring and artistic. Of course, they seldom speak the truth, and they never for a moment deceive themselves; they are superb actresses, especially with the opposite sex. Under all their modesty there is a subtle flow of wickedness, coming, no doubt, from their education in the local colleges, where girls will be girls. At the age of 14 she is a señorita, and she is allowed to stroll; I mean, she is allowed to walk out with various other girls of the same age, to parade up and down the squares, or round the plaza, or again to the railway station platforms, where they meet and converse with other girls and naturally talk about the only thing they understand, dress and men. Most likely during one of the tours of happiness, she is marked by a young man; his fate is sealed; he has seen the only bit of love that will ever enter his café existence (quien sabe), what must he do? What he does is to follow her home, take a mental note of the casa, and then wait his opportunity. He may wait for weeks, still he doesn't wait in vain. One evening his heart flutters. She appears on the balcony; she comes forward; she looks—love divine. It is sufficient. He is now allowed to walk up and down every night for two months, and she in return will appear at last. He finds to his joy a friend who knows one of the young sisters. Now is the time to speak to my father, says the youth. Therefore from one father to the other father the story is taken up. Credentials are forthcoming, the family position discussed. Then he is allowed to the house to tea—a new fashion in the Argentine. After this no milk affair; they may go to the cinema, but in this burst of happiness he is accompanied by the girl's mother or any family relation that is in the vicinity—only never alone! Never. Even on the point of marriage, seated in the drawing-room, the mother is always present, and often the poor fellow would like to throw the mother

WAR FACTS AND FIGURES

FIRST YEAR'S CAMPAIGN

COST FIVE TIMES THAT OF ALL NAPOLEONIC WARS

London, July 31.

Financial experts estimate that the first year of war has cost the Entente 14,030 million dollars (gold), and the Central Powers 9,030 millions.

The total cost of the Napoleonic wars, covering a period of twenty years, was only 4,155 millions. That of the Crimea, which lasted three years, was 337,500,000; while the cost of the Boer war which lasted four years was 1,055 millions.

According to the Prime Minister, Britain is now spending 15 million dollars daily. M. Albert Meti, the General Budget reporter to the French Chamber of Deputies, calculates that the war is costing France 10,000 dollars a minute.

Mr. William Michaelis recently estimated the daily cost to Germany at 6,250,000 dollars, saying that forty days of this war has cost as much as the Franco-German war of 1870-1.

In March last, Dr. Karl Helfferich, Imperial Debt Commissioner of Germany, said that the war was costing the belligerents 375 million dollars a week, on the basis that the first year's estimated cost was 11,500 millions. Mr. Michaelis puts the figure at 15,000 millions, not including Italy's expenditure. This is more than 50 per cent greater than the total gold production of the world during the last 500 years. Other estimates run to more than 20,000 million, while Mr. Edgar Crammond fixes the total at 46,000 millions.

The lengths of the battle fronts are also record breakers. The great battle ground in the east extends for about 1000 miles, while the whole of that in the west is 250 miles. In the battle of Mukden the front was only 60 miles in extent; that of Waterloo 3 miles, of Gettysburg only 4 miles, of Austerlitz 11 miles, and of Gravelotte 5 miles.

out of the window and take the girl to his arms, but he never does; he just sits and dreams. Therefore after he has won his bride and taken her to the Registrar or to church, the highest of all honours, he suddenly wakes up and discovers he's been taken in. The trick is exposed, as it were.

Argentina can congratulate itself on three things—its beautiful all-round weather; its handsome race; and its irresponsible merriment, for nowhere in the world have the people so little to be merry about, yet stroll along any of the main streets in the city at any hour—midnight or morning, and you will find persons just as fresh, just as entertaining and polite as though they had all the money and comfort possible.

We shut up and left, and when we got to the corner I knocked my pipe out on a shutter of a door, and, to my surprise it was immediately opened by the patron, who asked me what I wanted? I told him I was sorry and explained the reason, and he returned smilingly to his shop. Smithers who was behind, laughed again. "You see," he exclaimed, jokingly, "the whole place reeks with pantomime."

F.C.C.A.'S NEW RETIRO STATION

A Wonderful Railway Terminus

Opening Ceremony performed by the President

Monday, August 2nd.

The actual ceremony of inaugurating the New Retiro Station was carried out with railway punctuality yesterday afternoon, just after four o'clock. Previous to that hour a great congregation of sightseers had assembled opposite the Station, where motor-cars and coaches incessantly disgorged "persons of honour" and "personages" of importance. Silk hats had a field day, and their sable glitter has never been more in evidence. Pickets of gendarmes in gala uniform kept the approaches, and police the actual entrances, which were gay with Argentine and British flags. Probably upwards of fifteen hundred persons were present in the Grand Hall when the smoke of the Presidential train appeared coming down the track towards the right platform of No. 1 Bay. It advanced at a dignified walk, and on stopping, the President and his party alighted. The engine, No. 191, is a 140-ton locomotive of the Rosario Express Service. The frame, boiler, cab and tender had been prettily outlined in blue and white rosettes and trails of ivy, and a large escutcheon of the Republic's arms was in front of the smoke box, supported by the bandera Nacional and the Union Jack. His Excellency Dr. de la Plaza was accompanied by Dr. Moyano, Minister of Public Works, the Ministers of Marine, War, and Education, Sir Reginald Tower, British Minister, Monseñor Espinosa, Archbishop of Buenos Aires, the President of the Supreme Court of Justice, Dr. Bermejo, Dr. Gramajo, Intendente, Dr. Jose A. Frias, President of the local Directorate, the Director-General of Railways, Dr. Benito Villanueva, Dr. Botet, Dr. Ruiz Guinazo, Mr. Hope Gibson, and other well-known gentlemen and members of the Legislature. On reaching the gate leading from the platform to the Central Hall, a key was presented, with which Dr. de la Plaza unlocked the barrier, formally declaring the station open. Instantly the police band, which was in the Grand Hall, broke into a crashing salute, and the Chief Magistrate and his party made a tour of the station, examining the splendid accommodation with great interest. Subsequently the Presidential party adjourned for a glass of champagne to the Comedor, where Dr. José Frias made a brief but interesting speech, in which he said that, notwithstanding the crisis, the F.C.C.A., in the face of difficulties, remained faithful to its engagements, and had continued its great work, opened in part that day. He recalled that under the Presidency of General Roca in 1889, and the Ministry of Dr. Civit, the project was suggested, but for various reasons was not carried out. He continued, the building which was partially inaugurated, contained every accommodation for a good service; it was situated on ground not long since covered by the waters of the River Plate and close to the spot where, half a century ago, the Northern Railway started, which line at the commencement of their organisation served the communications between this city and the Interior.

Dr. Moyano replied, recalling the fact that it was under the Presidency of Dr. Figueroa Alcorta, and with Dr. Ramos Mejia as Minister of Works that the foundation-stone was laid. In the Confitaria the invited guests were served with sandwiches, cakes, champagne, and cigars with a precision which augurs well for the Company's catering service. The entire proceedings were enthusiastic and successful, and passed off without the slightest contretemps. Among the engines at the platform, by the way, is No. 1, built in 1875, whose opinion of the magnificent station, evolved from such humble beginnings, would be interesting, if he could give it.

THE NEW TERMINUS: A DESCRIPTION

(BY J. B. E.)

Hitherto the Ferrocarril Central Argentino, although possessing the enormous mileage of 3,201, with further very large extensions projected, has been very modestly housed as regards terminal accommodation in the Capital. The truly venerable "galpon" at the corner of Maipú and Paseo de Julio and the larger temporary structure near the river, known as Retiro R., have for years past become increasingly inconvenient and unsuitable to the needs of the great and busy line. For a long time the project has been in the air, and quite six years ago Mr. Dulley, the constructional engineer, was engaged on tentative plans. About that time there were ideas, since gone to Limbo, of a terminus near Government house, and it was some time before actual work started. When it did, however, the buildings went ahead, if not quite with the speed of Aladdin's palace in erection, yet with astonishing celerity. To-day the huge terminus stands denuded of its scaffolding, a worthy monument of enterprise and architectural and engineering skill, worthy also of the great Capital of a progressive State, and indeed a credit and an ornament to any city in the world. Most London termini would look exceedingly mean beside it; the paltry huddle of sheds that was called Waterloo, the dismal caverns of Euston, and the cheerless vacancies of Paddington, all compare very unfavourably with this new construction, in which advantage has been taken to obtain wide, airy spaces, broad "vistas" and striking effects combined with everything new, modern and efficient in installations of every kind.

The aspect of the new station, with its central colonnade surmounted by the handsome dome, which however does not dominate everything else, and its massive wings, is handsome and imposing, and to avoid repetition it may at once be said that its construction throughout is of extraordinary solidity. The style of architecture is mixed, in parts Doric; it may be called "Condoresque" and is generally of a strong classic flavour, with an occasional suggestion of Norman in massive round arches; it always manages to be harmonious and pleasing. The public entrances nearest the Paseo de Julio are very wide, and are closed with lattice iron gates of magnificent dimensions. On entering by the doors under the dome and passing through a fine vestibule the Booking Hall is reached. It is of great size, and a small "plaza" might be stowed away in it. The range of thirteen ticket windows, for every possible class and for every conceivable destination, is a promise of rapid and efficient service. No excuse here for any excited passenger to shoot the booking clerk on account of delays. Throughout this fine hall, with its gallery high up and its splendid fretted dome, are disposed numerous groups of torches and classic lamps in groups of five, all of bronze. Mere iron makes little show except as gates, and the handsome signs and artistic decorations of metal are all of this valuable material. Beyond this is the Grand Hall with its innumerable offices and waiting rooms: ladies' 1 class, gentlemen's 1 class, ladies' 2 class, gentlemen's 2 class. The former magnificent and solid, and the latter very handsome, while all are comfortable and warmed by large radiators. The former are furnished in dark oak and leather, and the chairs and settees are such as are really restful, and not the hollow mockeries sometimes met with in places of public resort. Parcels offices, luggage deposits on a noble scale, bars, book-stall, toy shops, fine oak bancals, numerous stands with timetables, and a large train indicator clearly visible, with a handsome four-faced clock on bronze supports, prevent this magnificent circulating area from looking too much like the Sahara desert. All these floors are composed of an unobtrusive but handsome mosaic, and much decorative use is made of cool-toned tiles on the walls. Beyond are the sliding gates opening on the platforms, which, under the great roof spans fifty metres wide each and 250 metres long, stretch into the distance. The massive trusses of the roof spans are each imbedded in a huge pyramid of solid cement, and the whole might resist several earthquakes, so well have Mr. Dulley and his merry men done their work. The twelve platforms now open are in groups. Each set of rails has at its end the largest and most powerful buffer springs "in Creation." They are about the length of and look very like six-inch guns, and might stop a charging tornado. A locomotive stands on each set of rails, newly painted, and polished till steel is like silver and brass like pure gold of Ophir. By a happy inspiration, the entire population of the Company's running sheds is represented, from the energetic and toy-like tank 2-coupled of ten feet over all to the

CORRIDOR WITH APPROACHES TO PLATFORMS.

140-ton express leviathan 4-6-2, that is wont to "toss the miles behind" but is taking a rest for a day. Turning now into the interior again, the grand "Confiteria" is a kind of celestial dream to the connoisseur of cocktails. Cool, airy, lofty, spacious, comfortable, with prodigious counter space, how different to the fly-infested holes—but "we will not anticipate the past." It is a top hole "Confiteria." The fittings of this princely apartment are by Messrs. Thompson, and are alike handsome and comfortable. The same well-known firm are responsible for the delightful "boudoir" and private dining rooms above the "Comedor." Going from glory to glory and from luxury into magnificence, beyond this behold the grand "comedor." Parquet floors, rich quiet furniture, chastened magnificence, rich cream and the opulent gleam of dull gold with hints of crimson. Here might Lucullus dine with Lucullus and feel that his background was perfectly "It" and the picture a harmony.

This magnificent department can seat comfortably 200 diners. To prevent the necessity of bolting scalding spoonfuls of soup, and rushing frenziedly out at intervals to see if the train is starting, a luminous indicator on the wall informs the diner of the whereabouts of his train, and a bell automatically announces its impending departure five minutes in advance, thus enabling calm, and digestion.

Travellers arriving at the new Retiro Station will find indeed their creature comforts provided for in a manner contrasting most favourably with the former lack of facilities for refreshments, an elegant and commodious dining-room having entrances from Calle Maipú and also from the Grand Hall of the Station, through a spacious marble vestibule. The principal impression of the visitor on entering this room is one of cosiness and comfort. It has been entirely executed under the direction of the architect, Mr. E. L. Conder, in the thorough and finished manner associated for so many years with the name of Maple and Co., of London and Buenos Aires. The decorations have been carried out in a style which harmonises perfectly with the architecture of the station, displaying a happily sympathetic working agreement between the architect and the decorator.

The general lines are classic, relieved by a judicious use of dignified ornament in keeping with the utilitarian character of the apartment. One notable feature is the central dome with its artistically designed plaster work and leaded glass, from which is suspended a magnificent electrolier, a very fine example of the metal craftsman's art.

The columns and pilasters with their finely modelled and gilded capitals also add to the grace and dignity of the salon, the balconies approached on one side by a finely carved oak staircase and on the other by one of polished marble with their handsome gilded metal balustrade, are an important feature, and the animated aspect of the room on a busy evening with its cheery guests and myriad lights should make these balconies a favoured meeting place.

The fine oak panelling and other woodwork is of beautifully figured English oak of antique colour, the sombre shades of which are in happy contrast to the warm tints of the carpets and curtains. The upper walls are severely simple, ivory in colour, relieved by a restrained use of gilded ornament, and the whole effect is one of richness and luxury such as one meets with as a rule only in European Capitals.

The furnishings also supplied by this famous firm are in harmony with the decorations, being solid and comfortable, and it will undoubtedly be a great convenience for travellers to be able to drop into such a restful room and amidst cheerful surroundings and over a perfectly served and appointed table forget the fatigues of the journey.

Another important apartment designed to minister to the comfort of the lady traveller is the spacious first-class waiting room. This room has also been decorated and equipped by Messrs. Maple and Co., and is another evidence of their capacity to carry out schemes of the most varied character. The apartment is perfect of its kind, the solid walnut panelling and the cosy chimney recess with its beautifully carved chimney piece, on the hearth of which glows a real fire, makes the usual dreary wait for a train a by no means unpleasant necessity. The room is furnished with large and comfortable morroco covered settees, and there are many chairs and tables all tending to render the apartment homely and comfortable. Bath and Retiring Rooms are adjacent to this room, and are perfectly appointed. Altogether the architect and Messrs. Maple are to be congratulated on the artistic and practical manner in which they have carried out these important portions of the F.C.C.A.'s great undertaking.

There is, too, a charming boudoir, with walls covered in stamped leather and delightful wicker chairs for ladies, and an equally delightful couple of private dining rooms, with toilettes and so forth. Huge and handsome lifts lead down to the lower levels and to the subterranean where, in the enormous kitchens an army of cooks are chopping, steaming, roasting, basting, frying, boiling, stewing, baking, and turning out culinary gems that air of profound calm which characterises the higher walks of the Art of Cuisine. Coppers big enough to boil a man in, ranges and ranges of smaller ones, dishes, plates, etc., in myriads and more. A refrigerating plant and gigantic cold storage heladeras; also a compressor engine for the drainage system. The boiler rooms, wild and vast wastes of vaulting stretching away into infinity, shoots for luggage, and prodigious space and racks for the same. All these things and many more the basement holds, and the savour of the kitchens spreads like a benediction over all. It is at best only possible to give an impression of this magnificent terminus; for like the marvels of the Penny Shows at the Fair, its wonders "must be seen to be believed," or appreciated. The architect, the builders and the engineering staff have done themselves well, and have erected an enduring monument to their skill. Mr. G. Duley, the Engineer, who is an American of part British extraction, is a gentle man of remarkable energy and application, but he insists that his staff by their loyalty and good work have made the present termination of the work possible.

B.A.P'S. NEW LOAN

ISSUE OF A MILLION STERLING OF DEBENTURES.

The management of the Pacific Railway with a view of continuing various extensions of their system which have already been commenced, but discontinued on the outbreak of war, have approached the home government for permission to issue debenture stock to the value of £1,000,000 at 5 per cent.

The British Government have sanctioned the scheme, and the necessary permission of the Argentine Government has also been obtained, and in the course of a few days the stock will be on the market in London.

There is every belief in railway circles that the issue will be fully subscribed.

NORTH AMERICAN COAL

Owing to the restrictions of the British Government concerning the export of coal, the Argentine for her supply has turned attention towards North American coal. It is stated that there is not only more security in purchasing from the States, but that the consideration of both price and freight necessitate purchases from the States. At the present moment some 300,000 tons of the mineral is in order, for lighting and national purposes and the whole amount has been placed to the order of the United States.

TRADE WITH THE STATES

ARGENTINE METHODS: A CRITICISM

LESS VERBIAGE AND MORE WORK NEEDED

Elsewhere in this issue is a condensed summary of the conclusions arrived at during a recent meeting of the Camara Sindical de Comercio, dealing more particularly with the various reasons that have led to the restriction of Argentine-American trade. The old argument against American dealers is again trotted out, namely the disinclination to give long credit, and apparently no heed is to reduce credit, thereby bringing trade in general on to a safer and more workable basis. As a matter of fact there has been far too much talk and far too little work in connection with the development of American trade in this Republic. Unlike Brazil, where America had a kind of preemptive right to supply her goods owing to the steady market she afforded for Brazilian coffee, until quite recently there has been no special reason why Argentine should deal "up North." The war came, and at first sight the whole position appeared to be altered. Argentina, fearing that her European supplies would fall her, turned eagerly to the United States.

That the Americans met her more than half-way, in words, is undeniable. Almost simultaneously with the outbreak of hostilities in Europe one had an outbreak of journalistic and catalogue propaganda in the United States, all designed to show the American manufacturer and the Argentine buyer that their needs were one and indivisible. Apparently it had never occurred to the promoters of this very vigorous campaign that whilst the Argentine buyer might be only too eager to buy—on his terms, the American seller might not find the proposition so attractive when actual business was to be effected. It is all very well to say that American manufacturers and European manufacturers are on the same footing as far as credit is concerned, seeing that it is the wholesale house in Buenos Aires that actually grants long date credits to the retailers, but stern facts are against such generalisations. As everyone here in the wholesale trade is well aware, cloths and piece goods came out under a system of running credit that usually extended to six months, frequently to a full year, and, more especially in the case of some German and Austrian firms, occasionally ran for a year and a half. It is not the purpose of this article to show how such trade could be made to pay. British firms had for long kicked against the system, and briefly one may say that in all likelihood many a year will pass ere similar conditions return. What the great firms established in Argentina have been able to do to hold their trade against new comers has lain rather in the direction of helping customers of known probity by granting them exceptional facilities for liquidating old indebtedness. This has been possible owing to the fact that such firms have as a rule known their customers well, and have also been so plentifully supplied with capital themselves, or the means of readily obtaining same at reasonable rates, that they could carry the business on their own shoulders.

It is a policy that has turned out well. In the cloth trade, what at one time looked like being a universal disaster has turned into a profitable transaction. The inability to get fresh supplies from Europe, coupled with a reasonably cold season, has helped wholesaler and retailer alike. Old stuffs have gone to the dyers and thence to the shop counters, at a profit for all concerned. Nor can one see how America could have done much to wrest such trade from those in whose hands it has been for the past twenty years, to go no further back. Moreover it ought to be borne in mind that America is now besieged by orders from all manner of countries, including the belligerents; orders for everything from machine tools to dolls hosiery and paper bags. The cry of Pan-American trade is to-day swamped of the globe. America is certainly willing to enter this market if it can be shown that it leaves her a profit to do so, but one is very much inclined to doubt where her profit would come in at the present time, at any rate in so far as general trade is concerned. The great American interests connected with the meat trade, the oil trade, banking, and other matters wherein present efforts are designed for future results rather than for immediate profits, are going quietly ahead consolidating their position, and it is very probable that when the war is over American interests as a whole will be more strongly entrenched here than they were when the war began. But that does not mean to say that we shall all be using American wares, or buying and selling American merchandise. America may have much to learn about Argentina but it is just as true to say that Argentina has much to learn about conditions in the commercial world of the United States. Money as a rule is turned over there with much greater rapidity than it is down here, a certain profit being in sight ere a deal is made. Hence one is inclined to come to the conclusion that American trade with this Republic will be far more gradual in its growth than either side at first thought probable, and, far from being immediately affected by the war, will be more likely to show vigorous expansion in so far as general merchandise is concerned when once the war is over.

JOURNALISM AND THE WAR

Every phase of human life has been affected, directly or indirectly, by the Great War, and, although the upheaval in the financial and business worlds has probably commanded the major portion of public attention, it is nevertheless a fact that the newspaper world has been more influenced by the events of the past year than has any other sphere commanding the attention of man. If any doubt exists as to the truth of this assertion, it is hardly necessary to do more than to refer to the British and Russian Foreign Ministers' communications to the Associated Press, which appear in our cable columns this morning. That Sir Edward Grey, let alone M. Polivanoff, should have deemed it in accord with his dignity to comply with the Association's request is more than surprising. It is an indication of the trend of events and of the great changes which a state of war has brought into being. Indeed, "the old order changeth."

The pre-war position of the Press is understated of journalists and well known to the majority of newspaper readers. In those days, only twelve months past, the conscientious journal endeavoured to present the morning's news to its readers and to "give a lead" to public opinion. Great statesmen, great generals, and, in fact, all men who were, or were popularly supposed to be, "great," declined to be interviewed, except at very rare intervals. The newspaper was useful on occasion, but it was never admitted to be essential to the existence or progress of the "great." Favours were occasionally to be conferred, but rarely to be sought with success.

What is the position to-day? The establishment of a Censorship. Granted; but even allowing for the fact that the newspaper is no longer permitted to send its representatives whither it will, and that news items have to be approved before publication in any of the belligerent countries, it cannot be disputed that the rulers of the warring nations have been compelled to seek the assistance of a loyal and enlightened Press to further the welfare of those nations. We refer more particularly to the British Press.

From the outbreak of hostilities in August of last year, the newspapers have been used extensively to further the Government's recruiting plans; in point of fact, the publicity campaign on behalf of Kitchener's army has been the greatest in the history of advertising. Similarly with the appeal to the munitions workers,

Men have been urged to work longer hours at greater speed, and volunteers for spare-time employment in the Government, controlled factories have been sought, not only by means of orations at mass-meetings, but by displayed announcements in columns of the press. These points, however—important as they are—do not complete the record. We believe that the famous interview with Lord Kitchener, parts of which have since been refuted, was the first of an important series. Since then, numerous military and political leaders have confided their views to representatives of prominent newspapers and news-disseminating organizations. The latest recruit to the ranks is Sir Edward Grey.

The British Foreign Secretary is of a retiring disposition. (Some light on the man's characteristics may be thrown by the statement that prior to becoming the moulder of Britain's Foreign Policy, he was our recognised expert on trout fishing!). That he should contribute to the columns of the world's journals by means of a statement to the Associated Press, is therefore an event of the greatest significance. It proves that the ostrich-like attitude of the famous statesman—now in the Cabinet—who remarked that he did not read the newspapers, is not to continue under the new Order. The politicians of the future will not sit in a holy of holies while the leader writers applaud or condemn. They have learnt that the greatest pulpit is provided by the columns of our daily and weekly papers, and that there must be a closer alliance between the public, the Press, and the appointed rulers of the destinies of nations. That the newspapers are capable of taking their place in the scheme may, broadly speaking, be accepted as indisputable; they have proved that much during the war. In very few instances has anything detrimental to the interests of the nation been traced home to any journal. Even the famous Northcliffe case was far from being as disgraceful as political hucksters and commercial rivals would have us believe. The Northcliffes of the day possess a powerful influence which is, in the main, used in the interests of the Empire. That has been proved in the past, is being proved to-day, and will be still further emphasised as future years pass. Whatever the effect of the war may be on the individual journalist and the individual newspaper, it cannot be doubted by far-seeing men that in the future of the warring nations, especially those after-days when the wreckage caused by war has to give place to reconstruction, one of the most powerful influences in the work of re-building will be that of the Press. In Britain and in the British Colonies and Settlements overseas, we believe this will be especially the case.

THE SALVATION ARMY

RECORD OF A MONTH'S WORK.

Colonel Palmer, who is at present inspecting the Army's Work in the Paraguayan Republic, hopes to be back in town by Wednesday, Aug. 4.

During the month of July (up to and including July 30), the activities of the various Institutions in Buenos Aires were as follows:—

Home for Women and Children, (Calle Humberto 1, No. 3046), Beds occupied 1,587; Meals supplied 5,237; Night Shelter for men, (Calle Copahué No. 32), Beds occupied 8,535; Meals supplied 17,823. Asilo para Desamparados, (Avenida Saenz 923), Beds occupied 10,573; Meals supplied 8,822.

The Industrial Department at Avenida Saenz 923, is employing quite a number of homeless, workless men at paper-sorting, wood-chopping, etc. Any friend having articles of old furniture to dispose of, is requested to send a Post Card to Victoria 452 or a phone message to 2599 Avenida (Union).

ARCHDEACON'S WEDDING AT ST. JOHN'S PRO-CATHEDRAL

HODGES—LETT

If a crowd be a criterion of popularity, then have the Ven. Archdeacon Hodges and his bride popularity, heaped up, pressed down and running over. Very seldom, except in case of national gatherings, has so large an assemblage filled St. John's Pro-Cathedral as was to be seen there on July 29, at 5, and in the porches and on the steps thereof, for the sanctuary itself could not contain the multitude, and any late-comer who desired a view must have emulated Zacchaeus and climbed something. Everybody who is anybody, and the great mixed multitude who are nobody in particular, was there. Monsieur Tout le Monde and his wife thronged the Church, and the street gates had to be kept by a small detachment of police. The interior of the Church had been decorated with taste. An arch of palms between the choir stalls, numerous pretty ferns, white jonquils and roses, with more palms disposed in telling spots, made an effective background. Shortly after five, the bride arrived and entered the Church on the arm of her father, Mr. Richard Lett, of Palermo, who gave her away. Miss Lett looked exceedingly well in a handsome gown of white soft silk, the corsage being covered with rich lace and ruffled sleeves. She wore a tulle veil with wreaths of orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations and lilies of the valley. Her bridesmaids, the Misses Emily Lett, Lucy Lett, and Aphra Peard, wore white lilac silk with white hats and shoes, and carnation bouquets. The Rev. H. Westby Brady, Bishop's Chaplain, and of the Seamen's Mission, fulfilled the duties of best man. The service was fully choral, the customary wedding marches being played on the bridal party entering and leaving the Church. The hymns were "Thine for ever! God of Love" and "O Thou that hearest." The Right Rev. Blsuoop Every, assisted by Canon Stevenson, of Quilmes, conducted the service, delivering a brief but impressive address. The Venerable Archdeacon, whose bearing was a model to bridegrooms, and Mrs. Hodges leave for England by the next New Zealand steamer, the Remuera, probably on Monday next. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. William Abraham Hodges, of East Bridgeford, Nottingham. A guard of honour of apprentices from the Seamen's Mission, and boys from the ship Port Jackson, who had provided white neckerchiefs for the occasion, lined the entrance to the Church at the conclusion of the service. About 75 handsome presents have been received, including a cheque from the congregation and one from the clergy. The bridegroom's present to the bride was a diamond and sapphire pendant, and to the bridesmaids amethyst and pearl brooches were given. The bride gave the bridegroom a handsome silver-fitted dressing case.

LIVE STOCK FROM SWEDEN

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE PREVENTS IMPORTATION.

It has been announced that the Minister of Agriculture, Dr. Calderon, has issued a notice, on July 30, forbidding the importation of live stock from Sweden. The prohibition includes cattle, sheep, pigs, and goats, and all such feed from Sweden, with which these classes of animals could have been in contact. The prohibition dates from the date of the proclamation (yesterday), and all such animals, fodder, and the like that have been shipped since the first of the month are to be quarantined and examined by veterinary surgeons, appointed for the purpose. The reason of this step is due to the prevalence of foot and mouth disease in Sweden, especially in the provinces of Haeland, Malmohus, and Christaustad.

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

The concert that had been arranged for July 31 at the Victoria Sailors' Home had perforce to undergo some change.

Owing to a sad bereavement in the family, Mr. Philpotts who was arranging the entertainment, was unable to continue and so that at the last moment there was a complete change of items. The entertainment given was immensely appreciated, and throughout the evening encores were given.

One of the items especially enjoyed, was, the piano playing of Miss Millar. Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody was encored, and one of Mendelssohn's "Songs without Words" was given, but the gem both for execution and expression was Sinding's "Murmurs of Spring." Miss Vera Shaw and Miss Lillian Gamble were loudly recalled for the singing of their songs.

Mr. Fred White, Mr. Hazleton, Mr. Hilton, one and all most enjoyably contributed to the programme. While Mr. Adderley with his humorous recitations, and especially with "Rubenstein at the piano" created the greatest amusement.

Mrs. Storer and Mr. Stanley Parker assisted with the accompaniments.

It was a thoroughly enjoyable concert. The programme was as follows:

PROGRAMME.

Part I.

Duet, "Larboard Watch," Mr. Hilton and Mr. Parker.

Song, "They all love Jack," Mr. Fred White.

Pianoforte solo, Liszt's Rhapsodie No. 2, Miss Millar; encore: "Songs without Words," No. 9," (Mendelssohn).

Song, "Killarney," encore: "When other lips," Miss Lillian Gamble.

Humorous Recitation, "The Sandwiches and the Swallowed Frog," Mr. J. W. Adderley.

Song, "Wonderland," encore: more "Wonderland," Miss Vera Shaw.

Song, "Miller of Winchelsea," Mr. Lynn Hazleton.

Song, "Songs of Araby," Mr. J. Hilton.

Part II.

Song, "The Last Watch," encore: "The Admiral's Broom," Mr. Fred White.

Song, "Allen Water," encore: "Swanee River," Miss Lillian Gamble.

Song, "Village Blacksmith," Mr. Lynn Hazleton.

Pianoforte Solo, "Murmurs of Spring," (Sinding); encore: "Home Sweet Home," Miss Millar.

Song, "You made me love you," encored for a repeat, Miss Vera Shaw.

Humorous Recitation, "Rubenstein at the Piano," encore: "Brown Minor's Recitation," Mr. J. W. Adderley. God Save the King.

CURIOSITIES OF NATURAL LIFE

At the Y.W.C.A., on July 29, Mr. A. Stuart Pennington gave a lecture, illustrated by lantern slides, on many of the interesting matters connected with insect life, before an interested audience. The field covered was a vast one, but the lecturer found with a light word something interesting to tell of the thousand and one insects that were displayed upon the screen. Spiders, flies, frogs, butterflies, coral, sponges, cochireal, and many other weird habitué of this planet. He told interesting tales of the tarantula and exploded the theory of the dangers of its bite. The "common house fly" became the "typhoid fly" when the lecturer had finished with it. And so through a great number of interesting insects the lecture lead an audience with sustained interest and entertainment. Mrs. Walton distracted the mind from all these wonders with pianoforte music, and at the close of the lecture Mr. Huntington spoke on behalf of Mr. Pennington's audience of their appreciation of his lecture.

THE GREAT RAYMOND.

Mr. Raymond, the world's greatest magician, arrived in town on Monday night accompanied by his company. The coming of the Great Raymond has been heralded by some of the best advertising this city has ever experienced.

FANCY DRESS BALL.

A successful Fancy Dress Ball was held on Saturday night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindemann, Alta Cordoba. The garden was illuminated with electric lights concealed in Japanese lanterns and, with the patio protected by large canvas covers, there was plenty of room for the dancing. Prof. Lopez again had charge of the music and as usual his playing left nothing to be desired. The following is a list of the invited guests and the characters they represented:—Mrs. Baxter, Evening Dress; Miss Violet Baxter, Spanish Gypsy; Miss Gracie Baxter, Rebecca; Mrs. L. G. Babb, Persian; Miss Phyllis Davis, Spanish Dancer; Mrs. Guppy, Evening Dress; Miss Blanche Guppy, Night; Miss Gladys Guppy, Quaker Girl; Miss Bessie Hughes, Butterfly; Mrs. George Lang, Norwegian Married Lady; Mrs. George Larbaestier, Gypsy; Mrs. F. Lindemann, Snow; Mrs. G. E. Morton, Russian Princess; Miss Florence Morton, Georgian; Miss Nellie Mayne, Flower Girl; Mrs. S. A. Parker, Dutch Girl; Mrs. C. Redman, Pack of Cards; Miss Doris Robinson, Dresden China; Miss Gladys Symonds, French Fisher Girl; Miss Phyllis Symonds, "The Allies"; Mrs. K. Struthers, Punchinello; Mrs. V. R. Sadleir, 1820; Mrs. Talbot Wright, Night's Dream; Mr. G. A. Brigstocke, Pierrot; Mr. L. G. Babb, Black Pierrot; Mr. Castellanos, Argentine Gentleman, 1802; Mr. Davis, French Chef; Mr. Fowler, French Chef; Mr. Guppy, Evening Dress; Mr. Arthur Hughes, Gypsy Girl; Mr. George Lang, "Mr. Pickwick"; Mr. George Larbaestier, "Abeance"; Mr. F. Struthers, Port Said Donkey Boy; Mr. Donald Smith, Argentine Gentleman, 1802; Mr. V. R. Sadleir, "Johnny Walker"; Mr. Schibler, Pierrot; Mr. C. Redman, Evening Dress; Master Harry Lindemann "Pavaso". A ballot being taken to decide the prize winners resulted in Mrs. Louis G. Babb winning the ladies' prize as "Persian," and Mr. P. P. Schultz the gentlemen's prize for his personation of "Nero." During the evening a flash light photograph of the merry party was taken and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

TRAIN SERVICE TO MALDONADO.

The Central Argentine Railway announce a new train service to be inaugurated on August 1, between Cordoba and Malagueño on Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays, leaving at 7.40

TRES ARROYOS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

July 27.

VISIT OF THE REV. A. S. MCNAIRN

After having visited Las Flores, General Belgrano, Olavarria, Gral. La Madrid, Coronel Suarez, Pigue and Bahia Blanca, the Rev. A. S. McNairn, General Secretary of the Evangelical Union of South America came to Tres Arroyos, July 22. The same evening a welcome meeting was held in the Evangelical Church which was crowded with an enthusiastic audience. The Rev. R. F. Elder presided. Sr. Nicolas Visbeck, the church secretary, welcomed Mr. McNairn on behalf of the church and feelingly asked him to convey the thanks of the members to those who had helped to establish the work in the town and had supported the Missionaries. Sr. Juan Pluis, as Vice-President of the Young Peoples' Society and Superintendent of one of the branch Sunday Schools did the same on behalf of the young people and the Señora Maria V. de Pluis as Vice-President of the Women's League, voiced the feelings of the women in the congregation and those in Casallares. Mr. McNairn responded as the bearer of the good wishes of the Directors in London and the helpers in many parts to expressed himself gratified at meeting with such an enthusiastic reception.

On Sunday he preached morning and evening to a large congregation and in the afternoon visited two of the Sunday Schools.

On Monday, July 26, he visited Juarez where the hall was crowded to welcome him and hear him speak. He proceeded to Tandil on Tuesday where he is to preach on Sunday, August 1.

SERGEANT LAWRENCE WINKS.

Although particulars are not yet to hand word has come of the death of Sergeant Lawrence Winks who was with the 1st New Zealand Expedition to Egypt and the Dardanelles. Sergeant Winks was for sometime resident in this district, being with his brother, Mr. John Winks, of Estancia "Kia Ora." His death is keenly felt by a large circle of friends here for he was well liked and highly thought of. He was the type of man who would not flinch at danger. Much sympathy is felt for his brother here in his sad loss.

a.m. and 2.50 p.m., returning leave Malagueño at 8.45 a.m. and 4 p.m.

BANQUET TO OCTAVIO PINTO.

On Saturday night the Plaza Hotel was the scene of a banquet extended to Octavio Pinto, the artist, by his numerous friends in this city in honour of his success at the recent Exhibition held at the University of San Francisco, California, U.S.A.

FOOTBALL.

The principal match in the first division took place at the University field on Sunday afternoon between the League Champions "Belgrano" and the Central Cordoba teams.

The Railroad boys surprised their opponents by defeating them by the score of 3-1, after some very clever play. Goals were scored by the following: H. Savatelli (2), Prax and Lazcano.

An interesting game also took place at Rio Segundo between the Athletic Club of that city and the Jorge Newbery team of Cordoba. The home team came out victors by a 3-0 score. Goals were kicked by J. M. Juarez (2) and Paredes.

The second division game between the A and B teams of the General Paz Juniors was suspended on account of Referee Rimoldi not putting in an appearance.

The Juniors third team under Capt. Paiva, was awarded the customary two points over Victoria on account of the latter team not bringing a ball to play with.

CRIME IN PARAGUAY

MARRIED COUPLE DONE TO DEATH

Details of the horrible crime in Paraguay, in which a married couple Lorenzo and Emma Gadin, were done to death, have been received. The authors of the crime are Gaston Gadin and Cipriano Leon, and both are now under arrest. The latter's confession has thrown a lurid light upon the affair.

His statement is to the effect that Gadin for two months did all he could to persuade him (Leon) to enter into a compact, but that he resisted until Gadin at last offered him $50,000 to commit the murder. This sum was the temptation which he could not refuse, and he states he would have murdered 25 people. Continuing his confession Leon said that he was met by Gaston, who most carefully laid before him a plan, which he accepted. There was no going back. They both proceeded to the old people's house and entered without difficulty. Señora Gadin was sleeping, a lamp was burning which gave light sufficient for the foul blow which a moment later fell upon the old lady's head.

The murderer's confession continues that after this he had had enough of it, but Gadin still urged him on to attack the old man, by saying "What am I paying you for?" They then went into the other room and repeated their brutality. Gadin fell without a cry, and was then carried and placed at his wife's side, after this the murderers sacked the furniture and bed clothes with petroleum and fired the house. On searching they discovered $151 and £5 in English gold. This amount Gaston gave to Leon adding that the remainder would follow in the morning.

Gaston Gadin is the son of the murdered couple, and in his statement said that his mother was in no way to blame, but was murdered because she knew too much, and would have concluded who was guilty and have denounced him. He states he saw nothing, because when Leon delivered his death dealing blows, he shut his eyes!! The cold-blooded manner of the two criminals has even attracted the attention of the police, who state that they have never seen such a deed done with such complete sang froid. Leon is a butcher, and immediately after the crime returned to work as though nothing had happened, and when informed of the murder of the old couple, he expressed the most amazed astonishment, while all the time the neighbours were exclaiming the unknown murderers. His confession was extracted from him, after arrest, by being told that Gaston Gadin had already confessed everything. He learned afterwards that Gaston had said nothing! The latter is 18 years of age, and has spent 10 years of his life in Paris. During his time there he underwent an operation for hydrocephalus (water on the brain). His companions in Paris were Apaches, and from them he learnt his violence. The whole neighbourhood of Villa Mora where the crime was committed, is horror struck at the murder of these two aged persons, who were respected and beloved throughout the locality.

MUNITIONS FOR THE ALIES

FRENCH COMMISSION ARRIVES IN CHICAGO.

New York, July 31.

A telegram from Chicago announces the arrival in that city of twenty commissioners from France authorised to purchase munitions on behalf of their Government.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

A notable event of the week in Argentina has been the official opening of the magnificent new central station at Retiro, Buenos Aires, for the Ferro-caril Central Argentino. Three excellent views of the new station are given in our illustrated section, and others will be found on other pages in this issue. Turning to the war, which still absorbs the bulk of our readers' attention, we are able to publish several interesting pictures dealing with various phases of the great struggle. Though not known to be in possession of Zeppelins, the Austrians have a number of airships for military purposes, and a picture is given showing one of the "lighter" than air" type, lying wrecked, with Austrian soldiers guarding it. The wreck was believed to be due to accident. The Navy has co-operated in a splendid manner with the Army at the Dardanelles, and the Bluejackets have played a valuable part in support of the British and colonial forces. The naval brigades, in addition to fighting, have carried out all the work of transportation and disembarkation, and have supplied the heavy artillery with which to batter the Turkish positions. The field telephone, which is shown, is one of the most important factors in maintaining communications on the battlefield. The picture showing men of a French Alpine regiment holding a position won by them in the cemetery at Souchez, was actually taken under fire.

THIEVES' WAREHOUSE

DISCOVERED BY THE POLICE

The Argentine Tobacco Company lately reported to the police the robbery and disappearance of a considerable quantity of their goods and the police have been actively engaged in clearing up the business, which it was considered was the work of one of the carters in the employ of the Company.

News was received that some of the stolen property was lying at a house in Avellaneda and an arrangement of police cooperation having been made, certain officials and others proceeded to a cigarette shop situated in Avenida Mitre 326. Several parcels of tobacco were discovered there and the manager of the business, which belongs to Robustiano Fernandez stated that the goods had been purchased by his assistant, José B. Fernandez, from a carter called Vicente Cretano, who lived at Calle Madrid 218. Thither the police proceeded and on searching the premises discovered a number and variety of stolen goods including Havana tobacco valued at $6500, 1053 kilos of the same tobacco without the official customs stamps, 182 pairs of gaiters, 22 revolvers, 800 time pieces marked "Enigma," 400 watch cases, 33 bracelets, 48 silver medallions, 12 wrist matches, 317 rings, 41 alarm clocks, 40 men's suits and 10 pairs of cashmere trousers.

Several persons, a number of whom have already been arrested, are concerned in the robberies.

TIMBER FROM SANTIAGO DEL ESTERO

AN IMPORTANT DEAL.

The Central Argentine Railway have just completed arrangements with a firm in the Chaco for the purchasing of 60,000 tons of firewood at the price of $400,000. The wood is to be supplied in a relatively short period of time, and all of it will come from one firm. Business operations of this magnitude will convey some idea of the riches of the forests in these regions. The same Company also announce other large transactions in timber with other railways.

Sports and Pastimes

PALERMO

The Gran Polla de Potrancas has been won and lost, and the result of this classic event only went to shew what a phenomenal filly is the winner. Ocurrencia, who put up a "several lengths" victory over her stable companion Palanta.

As a race the event was lacking in much interest, owing to the very marked supremacy of the daughter of Val d'Or, who hardly seemed to get out of a canter and yet won just as she pleased. It was in this manner that Pretty Polly won her great races in England.

One peculiar coincidence was remarked, and that was the fact that the prize was $22,390, and that exactly the same number of tickets were purchased on the winner.

The result of the race goes far to confirm the notes published in the columns of the "Herald" concerning the Ocurrencia-Packoy race, when the former only won by half a length, at the time we stated that, whatever the verdict was Ocurrencia won as she liked on that occasion. On the highest authority we can say now that that statement was an accurate one.

We can express a sincere hope that this famous and phenomenal filly will not come to grief by accident, and as she is in such good hands we hardly think this will be likely, and thus we shall see Ocurrencia beating everything and anything in the country.

The meeting was greatly in favour of backers, for from the start favourite after favourite rolled up, and only in the sixth and last events were the public beaten.

La Loca had no difficulty whatever in annexing the first event, a length and a half from Delfina, with Eureka third. Madrileña ran a poor race, and should really have been more prominent.

The second event was one of interest on account of the running of the debutante Alheña, a full sister to the crack Aventurero. She won a head from Matrera with Inquisición third. Matrera is a greatly improved filly, but it should be remarked that not one of the fillies in this race were any great shakes. The time was 1.26 4/5 for 1400 metres. The winner will do much better than this in the future, and is sure to train on well. Guayabita, another debutante, should be watched. She has a good and free action, and will learn to make the most of it with practise.

The third race went to Estríbor, who had nothing whatever to beat. He won in 1.40 4/5 for the mile, and never got to galloping. His victory tells us tales for future events.

In the Premio Aldeana, the favourite Wotan was very nearly beaten by Curaco, who came up with a tremendous rattle at the finish, and only lost by a very short head. Campesino ran third. The public would have had a very painful shock if Wotan had lost. He did not strike us as running any too well, and seemed a little dull and lacking in energy. Still a win by any distance is still a win, although we consider Wotan very lucky to get home.

After the classic event the public plumped for Don Ramiro, making him favourite as against Floripar. In this they turned out to be wrong for Floripar won the race and Don Ramiro could not even get a place.

Faucheur has trained on wonderfully, and this colt, the biggest on training at Palermo, will do still better than he did on Sunday when he ran Floripar to half a neck. Blanco rode a good race, but as is so often the case with him, he got away badly. Sin Humo ran strongly into third place, which only shews that properly ridden Sin Humo should generally be in the place money in these races. The times he has run nowhere, have in our opinion, always been the fault of the jockey. Sin Humo is better than is generally thought.

The way Chucker Out put it across a field of four in the sprint race, was a treat. One and a half lengths to Last Reason in 1200 metres, time 1.11 1/5, takes some doing, and shews that Chucker Out has come well into form again. The surprise of the race was San Simon, dead last. We don't believe for a moment San Simon tried an inch, although we quite admit that if he had tried he would have still been well beaten. Still it was a disappointment to see him left so hopelessly.

The last event created the surprise of the day. Royal Drop beat Inspector, Maraschino and Podesta, and paid out the very nice sum of $22.05. We could ask what was Royal Drop doing when last out? Evidently not trying. What was El Kaiser doing? Surely he could do better than run last with only 44 kilos up. Oh, this racing, what a game it is.

In general the meeting was only fairly interesting, and there have been many more enjoyable programmes discussed at Palermo this season.

ROSARIO

The feature of the meeting at the Hippodrome Independencia on Sunday, was the running of Everest, who turned out in the first race, won easily by a length from Charny and with only an hour's rest, was out again over 2000 metres, and won by several lengths from Don Gabriel.

During the meeting only one favourite scored, so that the talent had anything but a good day.

The Classic event was won by Macabeo, the favourite Tommy Atkins doing no better than fourth. It was a distinct improvement to notice that there were none of those unpleasant incidents during the day's events, that have lately been the case.

The full results of the racing are as follows:

PREMIO MADEIRA, 1100 metres.
1. Afufa 54, $3.95 and $2.80; 2. Verdi 56, $3; 3. Monona 54. Won by 3 lengths. Time 1.7 1/5. Also ran: Lucilla, Kan Ja, Redoblona.

PREMIO MADREPERLA, 1200 metres.—1. Everest 57 $20.25 and $3.40; 2. Charny 57, $2.40; 3. Dorando 57, $2.30. Won by a length. Time 1.13 3/5. Also ran: Diabolina, Betrayer, Kaid, Oroño, Patapun.

PREMIO MAFALDA, 1300 metres.—1. Facundo IV. 56, $15.50 and $5.80; 2. Marco Antonio II. 56, $11.35. Won by half a length. Time 1.22. Also ran: Potcholo, Narvaez, Scala, Galliard, Songuita, Papagayo.

PREMIO MAGA, 2000 metres.—1. Everest 48, $8.65 and $5.9; 2. Don Gabriel 51, $3.55. Won by several lengths. Time 2.7. Also ran: Galarodon, Pagaré, Freyre, Riacho II, Sopton.

PREMIO MORENA, 2000 metres.—1. Macabeo 51, $16.65 and $4.90; 2. Farward 62, $4.55; 3. La Bulliciosa 48, $4.90. Won by half a length. Time 2.6. Also ran: Tommy Atkins, Sunbales, Pochita, Itaty, and Royal Nose.

PREMIO MAGNO, 1400 metres.—1. Duna $32.25 and $11.75; 2. Ponpoule $9.25. Won by a head. Time 1.26 4/5. Also ran: Suplente II, Socarona, Yelmo, Marobe and Pantomima.

PREMIO MAGNETICA, 1600 mts.
1. Gigantea 51, $4.80 and $3.50; 2. Pan Duro $16.80. Won by a head. Time 1.40 1/5. Also ran: Leutress, Button Hole, American Boy, Cleipan, Toupet.

LA PLATA

The racing which took place at La Plata on Sunday afternoon, brought about several surprises, and in general there was a complete upset of form. The peculiarity of the meeting was the remarkable easy way in which every winner galloped home. Bonci, Pretty Boy and Gaje all obtained verdicts of several lengths, and won their races in a common canter. In the Premio Lugones, Juanaco completely and surprisingly failed to shew up at all, and Tower, a colt that was a complete failure at Palermo, put it across such strong runners as La Tubau, Perlino, Sud America, etc., by an easy three lengths. It was a most astonishing result.

The course was in good condition, a trifle on the heavy side.

The results were as follows:

PREMIO LADINA, 1600 metres.—1. Jolie Jeu, 46 ks., $36.40 and $9.90; 2. Coquin 53, $7. Won by two lengths. 1 1/4 lengths. Time 1.45 2/5. Also ran: Chambery, Naranjita, Fable and Heresy.

PREMIO LAMAS, 1400 metres.—1. Estoico II. 55, $4 and $3.60; 2. Periwinkle 58, $7.50. Won by 2 1/2 lengths; a neck. Time 1.31 3/5. Also ran: Effusion, Condareo, Manito de Oro, Sigfrido (4), Saltarin (3).

PREMIO LAY, 1200 metres.—1. Bonci 56, $8.30 and $4.30; 2. El Rey 56, $7.20; 3. Rivadavia 53, $18.40. Won by several lengths; three-quarters a length. Time 1.18. Also ran: Satyricon, Malambo, Galleguita, Hirmita, Pitina II. Mari Mari (4).

PREMIO LUGONES, 1600 metres.
1. The Tower, 50, $20.30 and $4.60; 2. La Tubau 47, $8.40; 3. Perlino 52, $3.60. Won by 3 lengths; 1 1/2 lengths. Time 1.45 2/5. Also ran: Juanaco (4) Sud América, Fine Mouche, Diorita, Irenita.

PREMIO LUSITANO, 2000 metres.
1. Pretty Boy 46 $5.10 and $3.50; 2. Paul Pons 55, $6.30. Won by several lengths; three-quarters a length. Time 2.10 1/5. Also ran: Fox, Rendida and Guarapo.

PREMIO LASTIMA, 1400 metres.—1. Liberty 51, $8.20 and $4.40; 2. Torterola 58 $3.90. Won by 2 lengths; 2 lengths. Time 1.30. Also ran: Pilleria (3), Monedita (4), Driada, Genial, Pichina.

PREMIO LEANDRITO, 1300 mts.—1. Gaje 57, $4.60 and $3; 2. Peugeot 54, $5.40; 3. Camorsito 55, $5.30. Won by several lengths; 1 1/2 lengths. Time 1.23 2/5. Also ran: Saltarin (4), Villemil, Padin, Floweret, Herb. Tenebra.

PREMIO LEONCITO, 1400 metres.—1. Electro 51, $9.60; 2. Bamboche 53; 3. Trabuco 58; 4. Dronot 46. Won by 2 1/2 lengths. Time 1.29.

THE FILLIES OF THE SEASON

A BRIEF SURVEY

(By Our Racing Representative).

As we tear the date from our calendar this morning, and notice that we have arrived at August 1, we are also reminded that one more official year in the racing world has passed by, and that to-day is the birthday of all the horses we have lately been accustomed to see running at Palermo. No longer will the race programmes contain events for two year olds, not again this year, no longer can we regard Pan Pan as the crack 3 year old in the country, and Petite Chose the classic 3 year old sprinter. Ocurrencia no longer as the phenomenal 2 year old filly. No, with the passing of the night these things have all gone, and we must readjust our minds and look upon the racing world as one year older.

Although there seems but little point in drawing attention to the passing of the year and to the fact that the horse that sprinted to victory on Thursday has since added twelve months to his age, there is in fact a vast amount of importance in the change, and the readjustment of one's outlook is advisable. Horses do not last in this country as in some others and the habitué of Palermo is apt to give the name or perhaps the performances of a certain horse into his head and back him for the sake of old times, so to speak and yet quite forget, he is a year older and, unless quite an exception, may be on the point of retiring. Let us give an example. To-day Last Reason is a six year old, Walter Scott, Merito, Escandalo and many others too, and if one considers, there are not many winning six year olds at Palermo. People wonder why a horse does not do so well now as he did a few months ago, and that he must soon be running into winning form again. Such a good horse and so on, and yet they forget the passing of time, and that the animal is getting older. It is when one arrives at a sharp dividing line such as August 1, that such things as these are brought home, with their appeal.

It is not to be considered that such horses (and perhaps many others), as are mentioned above, cannot win another race because they are six year olds, but the example is taken to point out, what one is so apt to forget, that is the passing of time. A readjustment is necessary. Another example. The question is often asked, "Why can't that horse win and why is he so heavily handicapped, he has done nothing since—." What is forgotten is the passing of years, and the problem of weight for age. Therefore, let us readjust our minds and not be too conservative, and remember some of our old favourites are now old stagers, and their time is drawing near. We must turn our attention to the new generation, and in doing so, cannot do better than glance over the list of those two year olds of yesterday that have already appeared.

As the "One Thousand" is run to-day it might be advisable to confine ourselves to the fillies, and at a later date remark upon the colts.

We have come to regard as the best of last year's fillies some half-dozen animals, which by their record are head and shoulders above the others. Named in their order they are Ocurrencia (Val d'Or—Meltona), Decidida (Pearl River—Deception), La Sonambula (Dieudonné—Sandy Bay), Canora (Old Man—Campanilla), Portaña (Cyllene—Rivera), and the sixth place could be well filled by Palanta (Pippermint—Etoile d'Or).

The first two are unbeaten as two year olds, and each of them has run five times. The record of the former will be found in the notes on to-day's meeting. La Sonambula and Decidida have fought for supremacy in past days, and the latter has shewn superiority twice over by half a head. Candidly in spite of Decidida's unbeaten record, we believe and have always believed that La Sonambula is the better filly. In some degree this has been shewn to be correct. Decidida is delicate, she has already run herself off her legs, and is now laid up. The statement we hazarded long ago that La Sonambula would be winning races when Decidida was a "crock" is in some measure accurate. Portaña should have had an unbeaten record as a 2 year old, but unfortunately her jockey once lost her a race, and she had to be content with second place. She has run four times. Canora has done more work—good consistent work—and day after day has improved until—smash! and poor Canora will not now be seen for many months. It is a great misfortune to the owners, trainers, and public. She has run 10 times with four wins, three seconds, two thirds and a fourth.

Palanta is another filly who day by day improves. Her extreme nervousness was a great drawback originally, but she is getting over that. It can be remarked that on the two occasions when she ran once nowhere, the other time fourth, it was her ner-

FIRST DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP.

BUENOS AIRES v. GIMNASIA Y
ESGRIMA.

The above match was played at Saenz Peña on Sunday, and resulted in a win for Buenos Aires by 2 goals and 3 tries (19 points) to two tries (6 points). By the victory Buenos Aires secure the Championship for the year. The game was an exceptionally good one. Up to half time each XV had scored a try. Jurado for Esgrima was the first over the line. The kick failed. McCall equalised. This latter was a fine try, and secured by a most excellent bout of passing between the "threes."

After the restart Macadam got over twice in quick succession, the second try being converted by Smyth.

Gimnasia's second try was scored by Santamarina, after a piece of magnificent individual play in which he took the ball the whole length of the field.

The next two tries were scored by B. A. just towards the close of the match. Trillia and Drysdale were responsible for these. Smyth converted the last one.

Buenos Aires played one of the best games seen this season. Mr. Duncan refereed for the following teams:

Buenos Aires: Mackern; Trillia, Walker, Martin, and Macadam; Mold and Smyth; Wigg, McCall, Etchandy, Heriot, Hunter, Drysdale, Broome and Bagueriza.

Gimnasia y Esgrima: Rumbo; Crespo, Rioboo, Ortuño and Santamarina; Newbery and Garrie; Lagleyze, Henderson, Jurado, Casado, R. Buzzo, T. Buzzo, E. Buzzo, and Berisso.

ASSOCIATION

PLATENSE (1) v. BELGRANO (0).

An exciting game played at Belgrano on Sunday, resulted in a win for the visitors by one goal to nil.

It was only just on time that Spinelli scored the only goal for Platense.

It was only just on time that Spinelli scored the only goal for Platense.

These are the pick of the basket. It is a matter of interest to remark upon the fact that Val d'Or, the sire of Occurrence has bred better fillies than colts. Note for example this last year's phenomenon and Indecita. Both cracks in their day, whereas the horses, save perhaps Los Rosales and Molitor II. are generally poorer, and another peculiarity is that those of her progeny which have so far attracted attention are sprinters on the female side, and long distance runners on the male side.

Beyond the fillies named, this last year's two year olds are only a medium lot, of which the best are possibly Chaica, Carabeia, and Canoa.

The year has in no way been remarkable for produce, except in the case of Occurrence. Generally the colts are better than the fillies, but the six best fillies are better than the six best colts. It is to be noticed that times at Palermo are gradually being reduced, with the improvement in stock, but there is this also to be noted, judging by the report from some of the studs, that there are some sires being over used, which will be bound to shew to the detriment of some of their progeny later on, and we shall soon be noticing that because a colt or filly is a Cyllene, a Jardy, or a Diamond Jubilee it does not mean to say he is as good as the name might suggest he ought to be.

Whatever may have been noticed, we can say there is at any rate a tendency to over use sires, and also a tendency of carelessness in selecting dams.

tense, who on the run of the day were lucky to win. The following are the teams:

Platense: A. Perez, A. Ansaldo, D. Santangelo, F. Anaratone, J. Zacheo, A. Felisani, J. Spinelli, J. Colombo, T. Sinigalia, J. Pisa, M. Balmaceda.

Belgrano: T. Reddel, L. Hughes, C. Morgan, J. Peña, A. Mallen, H. Cox, G. Brown, C. Oliva, J. Martin, J. E. Hughes, C. Palmer.

F. C. OESTE v. QUILMES.

Played at Caballito on Sunday, this match resulted in a pointless draw. From beginning to end it was a well contested game, but many chances were thrown away. The home team were as follows:

F. C. Oeste: S. Zelis, A. Pini, A. Elordi, R. di Lorenzo, R. Caprile, R. Lamique, S. Barbera, J. B. Pini, E. Moggio, N. Angeletti, F. Crespo.

Quilmes: C. F. Pearson, A. Cerutti, J. Brown, G. H. Dent, H. Reid, A. L. Dickinson, B. Hoare, P. Raggi, J. Morgan, C. Gussant, E. Durante.

Referee: A. Guzman.

HURACAN (1) v. HISPANO-
ARGENTINO (0).

This match was played on the ground of the latter club on Sunday. Mr. T. Hasler refereed for the following teams:

Huracan: J. Pozos, J. Vasquez, J. Laurenzano, J. P. Bellatti, M. Basadone, A. Salerno, E. Acevedo, F. Santos, J. Laguna, V. Villar, A. Crespo.

Hispano-Argentino: A. Caballero, R. Montenegro, S. Evutto, L. Otin, S. Pardo, E. Cavenes, E. Martin, J. Cruz, L. Daveni, J. Manvonil, J. Danaher.

An excellent game resulted in a win for the visitors by one goal to nil. This was scored at the commencement of the match by Acevedo.

SAN ISIDRO (4) v. ESTUDI-ANTES (2).

There were a number of spectators present at San Isidro on Sunday afternoon, to witness the home team's victory over Estudiantes by four goals to two. The game was a fast one, and the champions fully deserved their win. The match was not free from unpleasant fouls and incidents, in one of which Croce was much to blame. The goal getters were Marini two, Antequeda, Ivanisovich, Alzua and Julio Fernandez.

The following teams turned out:

San Isidro: Wilson; Bruno and Rossi; Olivari, Idiarte, and Badaracco; E. and J. Fernandez, Sayanes, Marini, and Alzua.

Estudiantes: Croce; Alcardi and A. Pawlosky; Madero, Ivanisovich and Saenz; M. Susan, De la Barrera, Antequeda, A. E. Pawlosky and Vaccari.

LAWN TENNIS

BELGRANO ATHLETIC CLUB

TOURNAMENT IN AID OF RED CROSS FUNDS.

In perfect weather the American Lawn Tennis Tournament, which had been arranged by the committee of the Belgrano Club, was played on Sunday. The entrance fees for the tournament were set aside for the benefit of the British Red Cross Society, with the result that these funds were increased by $81.

The day's play was thoroughly enjoyed, and resulted in Miss Duckworth and Mr. J. J. Rugeroni heading the list at the close of play. Miss Kitching and H. F. Prescott succeeded in obtaining the best gross score as only 15 games out of 96 were lost by them.

Mr. Harry Thompson presented a silver cup for the gentleman's first prize, and Mrs. W. E. Sheward presented the first prize for ladies.

Both the second prizes were given by Mr. and Mrs. H. Dorning. At the close of play Mrs. W. E. Sheward gave them away.

Mr. George McHardy gave the tennis balls used in the tournament. The results were as follows:—

	W.	H.	Tl.
Miss Duckworth and Mr. J. J. Rugeroni	59	29	88

AMERICAN TOURNAMENT.

An enjoyable afternoon's tennis was played at San Isidro on Sunday, when various members met in an American tournament. The entries, however, were very few. Mr. D. Russell won the tournament, playing from scratch, the second prize going to Mr. W. B. Spufford.

Mrs. O. G. Babington presented the prizes, and tea was provided by Miss Neill.

The following were the results of the day's play:—

PLAY FOR THE CAPTAIN'S PRIZE.

As many as 40 cards were taken out at San Isidro on Sunday, when play for the Captain's prize was indulged in. The winner, Mr. G. F. Rae, returned a card of 3 down in the first round, and then in the second completely reversed this form by brilliant golf and finished 5 up. This won him the trophy by being 1 up on the second player, Mr. S. O. Marshall. The course was in perfect condition. Scores:—

LOMAS 2nd v. ARGENTINO 2nd.

On the links of the latter Club at Palermo on Sunday, the visitors obtained a creditable victory by ten matches to eight, and thus supported the win of their first team at Lomas.

Play was good and favoured by perfect weather. In the singles the Argentinos had the better of the play by one match, but in the afternoon they went to pieces in the foursomes and eventually lost on the day's play.

LOMAS AND ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETIES IN JOINT DEBATE

The joint meeting between the Lomas Literary and Debating Society and that of St. Andrew's produced one of the best and most interesting debates of the session.

There was an excellent attendance when the Rev. W. M. Laing took the chair at St. Andrew's Hall on Aug. 3, but it was unfortunate that Mr. Howard of Lomas could not be present. He is lying dangerously ill, but the wishes of everyone present for his speedy recovery were most sincere.

The subject chosen for last night's debate was "That education has raised the moral standard of the white races," a proposal made by St. Andrew's and most ably introduced by Mr. G. W. Gowland. Lomas under the lead of Mr. Diego Triggs disputed this point.

In his opening remarks Mr. Gowland dealt with the point that barbarians had always despised education. The Goths had their opinions on "the idleness of study" and yet the methods the Goths employed did not prevail in the end. Lord Brougham's famous remark concerning the schoolmaster and his primer as an upholder and extender of the liberties of his country being greater than the soldier and his arms was introduced. Man had two educations, that which was given him and that which he gave himself. Self government was the characteristic by virtue of which man was able to govern others and this self government could only be acquired by education. Probably, Mr. Gowland continued, the argument against the moral value of education would be deduced by pointing out that Germany with all her education had made no advance, but had retrogressed to savagery, brutality and violence. If so that proved the point because if retrogression were admitted, then there must have previously been advance. One cannot fall from a level. Briefly the status of women in India, China and the East was touched upon to show what advance education had brought about.

Mr. Diego Triggs argued against the proposal. It was wisdom not education that was the crux of the matter. Egypt a country admittedly the most advanced of her day fell through lack of wisdom not lack of education. Why if education was essential did the Master choose for his disciples uneducated fishermen, why did he not go to Greece and obtain his helpers from amongst the educated? The object of education was to help us beat our fellows.

Mr. Ashdown Taylor seconded the negation of the proposal and the Rev. S. Cameron seconded the affirmation. Mrs. Herald agreed that wisdom was everything. Solomon prayed not for education but for wisdom. Mr. J. A. Aird, Mr. Herald, Mr. H. J. Francis were amongst those who debated the point.

Mr. Gowland in a closing remark said that if we had had no education we should not be able to read or write books of wisdom and should thus not know what wisdom was.

The motion was put to the meeting by Mr. Laing and carried by a fair majority.

The Chairman in closing thanked all the ladies and gentlemen for the most enjoyable evening's debate. It was generally voted the most pleasant and entertaining of the season.

BARON SHOT DEAD

Sensation in Rio

STORY OF ATTEMPTED ABDUCTION

Rio de Janeiro is enjoying, or being horrified, by a scandal of the very first magnitude. It is no less than the death of Baron Werther, killed in an attempt to virtually carry off the children of whom he was father from the custody of their mother, the Baroness de Rio Branco. The circumstances of the affair are sensational to a degree. Baron Werther, who was married to the daughter of the late famous Brazilian statesman, Baron de Rio Branco, some years since, is said to have achieved a very bad reputation in the Capital, more especially on account of his violence and cruel treatment of his wife, being also a man of dissipated and most extravagant habits. He has been under suspicion of attempting to purloin State documents from the care of his father-in-law, the late Baron de Rio Branco, and which were of international importance. From his desperate character and pressing necessities it was believed that he was capable of selling these to a foreign Power. He was infuriated when, as the result of a long series of conjugal disputes, the Baroness succeeded in obtaining a decree of judicial separation with custody of her children. From that time he breathed continually threats of violence and revenge which, it was known, he was quite capable of executing. He particularly threatened to carry off the children in defiance of the law. Fearing that he could carry out this frequently expressed intention, the Baroness had gone to live with the children at Calle Riachuelo 95, the house of Dr. J. T. Nabuco de Conveia, Deputy for Rio Grande. Fearing that another judicial decision for actual divorce was about to be given against him, the Baron decided on a coup. He determined to seize the infants, and for that purpose hired a gang of ruffians with the intention of taking the house by assault, an incredible audacity. Yesterday, accompanied by the "capataz" of his "gavilla" of "gente maleante" and about sixteen of the rogues themselves, and one or two particular friends, the Baron made his attack on his wife's residence. One of the friends, who had found means to enter, entered the Baroness's rooms and demanded the children from her with threats. At the same time the Baron and his army made their appearance. Undismayed, the Baroness called for help. Her servants, all stout fellows and devoted to their mistress, had been armed, and they poured a close and heavy fire into the bandits, who, finding themselves in danger, fled. The head of the gang and Baron Werther, however, remained shot dead on the place. When the police arrived it was found that the Baroness, having hastily collected some valuables, had fled with the children, and so far her whereabouts is unknown.

CARUSO AGAIN VICTIMISED

Forged anti-War Letters

A GERMAN "INDUSTRY"

Sr. Caruso has again been the victim of German inability to distinguish genuine from forged letters, a weakness which seems to grow upon Teutonic newspapers. "La Nacion" observes that the severe comments on an alleged letter by the great Italian tenor, in which he is made to lament that Italy has plunged into war, is no doubt founded on the letter "Attributedly the Germans to Caruso and which our distinguished contemporary "Deutsche La Plata Zeitung" published as his. As may be remembered, Sr. Caruso, protested with the greatest energy against the imputation, declaring publicly that the document was a forgery throughout.

A DRAMA OF JEALOUSY

LADY DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED.

To the numerous dramas of jealousy that are from time to time occurring, another one which took place on Sunday night at Montevideo must be added, which has resulted in the grave wounding of a widow lady Gregoria de Campos.

The telegraphed details are as follows:

It appears that for some considerable time intimate relations had existed between Señora de Campos and her brother-in-law, Francisco Campos, who was married to Sara Azurgia. The latter was not long in having grave suspicions concerning the relationship, and determined on obtaining proof of it. When she did so, she resolved to be revenged.

Learning that her faithless spouse and Señora de Campos used to meet constantly at a place near the crossing of Calles Republica and Cerro Largo, she armed herself with a revolver and followed them to their rendezvous. Hiding behind some railway trucks she waited until she saw her husband and the widow meet, then appearing suddenly upon the scene, she fired her revolver, and dangerously wounded her rival in the stomach. Both ladies are well known in Montevideo, and are respectively 30 and 41 years of age.

U.S. VICE CONSUL

DEPARTING FOR SYDNEY.

Genuine regret will be felt by the members of the English-speaking community of Buenos Aires at the announcement of the impending departure to Sydney (N.S.W.) of Mr. Eli Taylor.

For several years, Mr. Taylor has been United States Vice Consul in the Capital, and, during recent months, he has been Acting-Consul-General, a post he did not relinquish until the confirmation of Mr. Robertson in his new office.

Mr. Taylor, who is, we believe, an old newspaper man, is an American of the best type. Courteous and dignified, he has made a host of friends, not only among the American community, but also in local British circles. His transfer to Sydney in the course of a month or so will leave a gap extremely difficult to fill.

TÉ AGUILA ES EL MEJOR

COMODORO RIVADAVIA

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

July 12, 1915.

Local Municipality.

Our port is at present about the most filthy place in the two hemispheres, occupied by the white race. Two or three years ago it certainly was such! At that time the man from the country coming into Comodoro Rivadavia marvelled at the positively unsanitary and repulsive condition of the place, as he saw dead dogs, cats, meat to the quantity of a quarter of an ox lying in the streets, all which carnal ornaments in an advanced state of decomposition!! Debris of all and every description was in abundance and the deposit sites for the refuse of the yards and stables were the Streets! Pig sties abounded on all sides with the usual nauseous and obnoxious odours emitting from them. The streets were indescribable. In dry weather the fine powdered "sajon" soil lay nearly a foot thick with this, (empty, of course,) broken glass and pieces of wire (Alfalfa wires predominating) profusely scattered about. And in the rainy season. Happy Rivadavians! You could see them struggling along in the mud with two huge lumps of sticky clay where one usually looks for the pedal-extremities of the biped man.

Then there was an election of members for the Municipality, but for some reason or other the Municipal life was short and nothing was heard of it again for some time. The present Municipality seems to have attained the age of manhood, for the streets are being made and gravelled, one's old acquaintances, dead animals debris and insanitary deposits are less frequently seen. Of course the necessary accompanying evil—taxation is in full evidence and force and some people grumble because the taxes are so high! To mention only two, dog-tax five pesos, two-wheel vehicle ten pesos, per annum!

On July 4 there was an election to fill two vacancies and Comodoro Rivadavia came forward and out in its latest by running six candidates on three tickets, Messrs. Barros (the Juez de Paz) and Isaac (Editor of the local newspaper "La Republica"), as the "Rivadavia Ticket" were in favour evidently, for they polled the largest member of votes. Second came Messrs. Maximo Abasolo and Ernesto Grone (of Lahusen and Cia.) and the third ticket consisting of Mr. Fernandez, Jr. and another came a regular election cropper by securing three votes between the two of them.

Then came the excitement. Sr. Barns had not resigned his position as Juez de Paz the required length of time prior to the election, being in default by a few hours only, and on a protest being lodged he was disqualified, and Sr. Abasolo as next on the list was declared elected instead. Sr. Barros is now in the happy position of having resigned as Juez de Paz and being disqualified as candidate for the Municipality. "New brooms sweep clean" they say, let us hope the two new members will help to clean the "Augean stables."

News in Brief.

We are getting on in the newspaper line too. The paper "La Republica" has now an opponent or rather a contemporary in the new paper just published "El Rivadavia." May they both prosper for we are badly in need of public information.

On June 23 and 24 we had a heavy fall of snow, and immediately on it a heavy rain, so that our winter is not an entirely dry one and with the slightly warm weather following it is surprising to see the camp improving, though it is mid-winter.

On the 25 of last month the marriage was celebrated of Mr. Joseph Hanning, of the establishment of Mr. M. M. Venter, to Miss Felicia Doreen Conradie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Conradie of this Colony. The ceremony was a very quiet one, attended only by the staff of Mr.

Venter and a few friends. After the legal formalities were concluded by the Juez de Paz, the Rev. Sonneveldt conducted the marriage rites of the Protestant Church and delivered a very impressive address on Psalm 127, after which congratulations and God speed were received by the bride and bridegroom.

A Hun a-Hunting.

It is strange how the spirit of aggression permeates the subjects of his August Majesty Kaiser William, even in foreign countries. Not long ago a very good example was given not a hundred miles from Comodoro Rivadavia on a certain private fenced in property where the local Germans were accustomed to hunt partridges on Sundays. They used to come in batches of from two up to seven all with shot guns shooting indiscriminately indifferent to the presence and proximity of the owners livestock, and always without permission.

Here is a case in point for the accuracy of which the writer can absolutely vouch. A certain gentleman occupied a portion of this private property with the dwelling house and an enclosure not a hundred metres from the dwelling house.

These Germans used to come out on horseback, or by cart, waggon and motor cars and blaze away with their guns at the birds, (which were to be found in abundance quite close to the dwelling-house, even mixing with the resident's fowls) sometimes as near as twenty and thirty yards to the house, irrespective of the presence of fowls, animals or persons.

On a certain Sunday about seven of these aggressive gentry were again in evidence and passing the house two jumped from their carts, entered the enclosure and commenced a rapid fire at the partridges, firing in a direct line at some horses and other animals in the enclosed area. The resident gentleman walked to them, and met one of them just coming through the fence when the following conversation took place, the residing person asking, "Do you know this is a private property. Where is your permission to shoot here?"

"Yo Aleman, I do not speak English."

"Oh! Yes, you speak enough English to understand me. Who gave you permission to shoot here?"

"La Ley de Argentina" came the reply.

"Well, I do not believe it, and I tell you now that you are trespassing, and you are warned not to repeat the offence."

Then came "The Hun Spirit" Tapping his chest with his finger, he replied: "Yo Aleman, Ud. no es en Inglaterra!" Then the fat was in the fire!

"Oh! Because Germany is fighting the whole of Europe you imagine you can do as you please here? If you fire one shot again in this enclosure I will make it confoundedly hot for you, notwithstanding "La Ley de Argentina." I will stand no more of your impudence!"

The Hun then got into his cart his eyes blazing and his moustaches pointing still higher. He did not return again. He was a Prussian! This recalls to my mind a little incident that occurred not long ago at a private dance in the district here, when a couple of young men, some whose names still bear traces of German origin, the others purely English, wearing as a badge small German-flags in their button holes, and only one present wearing a "Union Jack" badge. These young men were all South African Boers. A very close relative of some of these young men once made the remark in one of the shops in Com. Rivadavia, to another gentleman, while denouncing General Botha and his adherents as traitors and rogues: "I have every reason to hope and I trust my hope will soon be realized when all these blank fellows will have to take off their hats to the Kaiser and sing 'Wacht am Rhine'!" Comment is unnecessary! Vale at quantum valere potest!

Sale of a Coasting Vessel.

The coasting boat, the Neuquen, which has for some time past been employed in bringing sheep from the south to Bahia Blanca, is to be put up for auction at the southern wharf on August 8. Her tonnage is 1,390. She is of modern construction, and of the class known as Ultramar, having installations now up for the loading of a large number of sheep. She is under the national flag and being sold by order of the Federal Judge, the reserve price being $41,333.

Exportation of Cereals.

From January 1 to July 31 the firm of Bunge and Born have shipped 339,701 tons of wheat, 140,680 tons of oats, 17,857 tons of barley and 2,612 tons of bran in all 500,850 tons; that of Dreyfus and Co. 115,429 tons of wheat, 84,423 tons of oats, 506 tons of barley, making a total of 230,370 tons. Since the beginning of the year the shipment from here of wheat has been 867,032, oats 403,523 tons, barley 19,048 tons and bran 2,612, making a total of 1,292,216 tons.

Items in Brief.

The station master at Ingeniero White has reported to the police that on the night of the 29 last some person or persons unknown broke open a waggon near to the station of Grunbein and took out fifty tins of coffee.

The Custom House returns here have altered considerably during the last 25 years. In the year 1890 when discharging was done at the Puerto Viejo, which is situated about a mile and a half away from Ingeniero White on the Port Militar side, the returns were $126,341. In 1913 they were $3,190,489. A considerable drop was noticed last year when only the total of $1,627,011 was recorded, and this year they will also be considerably lower on account of the war.

There has not been much movement in the wheat market this last week, and the demand has been mostly for good wheat, clean and dry, with a base of 80 kilos the hectolitre, for which $12.30 f.o.b. is being paid. For barley with a base of 60 kilos $6.30 to $6.50 f.o.b. is offered. Oats still remain at $6.20 and maize $4.30 to $4.50, alfalfa seed from $6 to $7.

District Notes.

Investigations are now being made into the recent strikes at the San Luis quarry at Tandil and a police guard has been established there for the time being.

The residents of Grunbein and Mayor Buratovich are asking that the schools formerly working there may be re-opened. A census of the children in those two places has been taken and the matter has now been put before the school council by their inspector for their consideration.

On August 4 a sale of 4000 sheep and 1000 head of cattle is to be held in the yards of the Rural Society at Villa Borden.

The seventeenth show at Rio Colorado is to be held on the days of September 26, 27, and 28. Applications for stalls should be made to the Secretary in Rio Colorado before September 20.

From to-day the station on the Pacific line to Toay which is at Kilometre 53 will be known as Choique.

In the season 1912 3,469,110 hectares were sown and 1,757,949 tons of cereals exported from the Port of Bahia Blanca. In 1913 3,443,030 hectares were sown and the exportation was 1,426,348 tons; in 1914, 3,765,600 of hectares sown, 484,495 tons were exported; and for the first six months of the present year when the amount sown covered 3,283,410 hectares, the exportation has now reached 1,292,215 tons.

A banquet was given last week in Patagonia to the reservists there, over a hundred of whom are leaving here to-day for Buenos Aires in order to return to Italy.

Although there are not many ships in port, large quantities of grain continue to come in to both ports, and at Ingeniero White there are now three large piles of wheat outside of the elevators, covered with tarpaulins.

In the year 1890 124 ships came to the ports here with a gross tonnage of 95,818 tons; in 1912 there were 547 ships with 1,230,401 tons; in 1913, 487 ships with 1,029,823 tons; and in 1914 288 ships with 746,124 tons registered.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor)

Judging at Rosario Agricultural Show, commences this morning. Mr. W. B. Whigham, of San Cristobal fame, will make the principal awards, in the Shorthorn cattle classes, and Mr. George D. Hughes, will make the selection amongst the Herefords. Heavy horse judging will be done by Messrs. Marston, Blunt, and Estanguit, whilst light breeds will occupy the attention of Sr. Meyer Pellegrini. Messrs. Hall, Soto and Plot have been entrusted with making the awards in the Poultry classes.

According to a private telegram received from Montevideo last evening, the third annual joint sale of imported Hereford and Shorthorn cattle was quite a success.

Amongst the principal visitors from this Province to the Rosario Show are Messrs. George Gordon Davis, E. Meyer Pellegrini, Dr. Angel Velez, E. Cayetano, C. Alfred Brown, John E. Stent, Guillermo St. J. Peters, Enrique Gath, G. D. Hughes, Pedro S. Pages, Juan Spinola, Thomas Watson and Bernardo Wirsh.

If Dame Rumour is to be believed, the Shorthorn cattle classes at Palermo this year will be keenly contested. As was the case at Palermo the last two years, a big struggle is anticipated, for premier honours, in the female classes; while no less than four different Cabañas, are said to have produced the Champion Shorthorn bull.

The recent hard, dry weather, despite its prejudicial effect on the camps, has been very favourable for lambing; and reports from several districts give a very high percentage already lambed.

There are at present on exhibition in one of the sale yards here a considerable number of Lincoln ewes which do not appear to be as free from scab, as they ought to be. A glaring poster announced their "Procedencia," which is one of the most accredited establishments in the country, and the few months that have intervened since they were acquired by their present owner, do not appear to have been beneficial to the sheep or to the reputation for carefulness of the party who was responsible for their charge. Their wool is all badly dyed, and partially destroyed by the use of too strong a solution of disinfectant for curing the parts of the animals most affected with scab. It is a pity to see a good class of ewes, for such they are, presented in the public sale yards in the disreputable condition in which they are shown.

VETERINARY INSPECTION.

Dissatisfaction is very often expressed by judges of horse classes regarding the inefficient manner in which animals are inspected by the Society's Veterinary officers, previous to their being allowed admission into the ring. The judge is supposed to be judging sound horses when his practised eye not infrequently detects some glaring defect, which has apparently been overlooked by the inspecting Vets. These shortcomings of the Veterinary surgeons, place a judge in a very awkward position, as his own practical knowledge tells him that the animal's defects are such as should have excluded him from competing as a sound horse. Should the judge on his own responsibility, decide to discard this animal it is very difficult for interested breeders to understand why the animal was overlooked, after being allowed into the ring as a sound horse. If such a horse gets a

LA PLATA POULTRY SHOW

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—In reading the detailed report of the above-mentioned Show by your Agricultural Editor, in your much esteemed paper of July 24, I feel that I cannot refrain from expressing an opinion that from a breeder's point of view, although in some points I agree with your editor; the majority of his comments are of a misleading character, and tinged with more than an average share of partiality.

It is not wise in this country to assume that the exhibitor is always the breeder, in fact, in many cases this proves the exception to the rule.

It is undeniable that the hall in which the Show was held was most inappropriate, this being in marked contrast to that of last year, which was spacious and well arranged; this year numbers of birds were placed in the cellar almost in complete darkness, others in a back-yard, while even those more favourably placed in a prominent position were too cramped to be shown to advantage. The passages were too narrow for the comfort of the visitors, who desired to view the birds. This, added to the presence of numbers of street boys who practically took possession of the place to their entire satisfaction was a great drawback.

Praise no doubt is due to the gentlemen who superintended and organised the Show gratuitously, but criticism also, and we must remember that the "Asociacion de Avicultores" numbers many associates, who pay their quota annually, raises the help given by the Provincial Government, so that funds for a proper hall, etc., should be forthcoming.

It is impossible for an intelligent person to deny that there is a considerable falling off in "class" of exhibits, which is no doubt due to the fact that prices rule so low at this Show that few breeders care to take the trouble and risk of sending "good" birds, especially as it is certain that they must be returned to the Criadero for private sale; also an absence of 12 or 15 days from the criadero at this time of year is not conducive to their well-being.

As regards class, an inspection of the White Wyandotte showed the effects of the pruning knife on some of the cock's combs, amongst others, the 1st prize winner. This, I consider a serious defect, as was also the wry tail of the male bird in the 2nd prize trio of White Leghorns, and the cut, jagged tail of the cock of the honorary mentioned trio of the same breed, and several other glaring defects too numerous to mention.

The Buff Orpingtons could not be considered as of Exhibition type by any stretch of imagination, even by their owners. The same may be said of the majority of exhibits in other classes, and it is to be deplored that the limited space available should be lumbered by such types. The 1st prize trio of Leghorns probably gained the award on its merits, but it would have been more complete had not the male bird shown a tendency to squirrel tail and had the hens been younger birds instead of old stagers. Of course, it is extremely difficult to judge six-months' old cockerels, as they are invariably undeveloped.

I must also differ from your Editor's opinion of the beauty of the Black Orpingtons, the females of the 1st prize trio are undeniably good leading award then the judge is severely criticised for awarding a prize to an unsound animal. The solution appears to me to be that the Veterinary Inspectors should be more thorough in their examination or leave the question of unsoundness to the Judge's own discretion.

birds, but the cock is a narrow-bodied bird, which only received notice owing to his special preparation, and will make a poor breeder. The Plymouth Rock "Champion" undoubtedly deserved his award, and is now a familiar feature at Shows. The White Orpingtons are sadly lacking in shape and colour. The White Rock alluded to is a very good bird, but the hens are not of equal merit.

I wish to draw your readers' attention to the prevalent type of judging that has been made patent at the two shows I have attended this year. Defects, however glaring in some cases, are passed over without the slightest remark, vide your Editor regarding black spots on legs and beaks of Plymouth Rocks, brassiness of white birds, loss of colour of Buffs, etc. In other cases the smallest defect is judged so severely that no good points are allowed, for this, I imagine, was the reason that my White Leghorns were passed over without notice by the judges; as being of pure North American type, the ear lobes have a creamy tinge instead of the dead white which is in vogue. It is a difficult thing to obtain explanations from a poultry judge as to why awards are given, and yet more difficult to discover why they are withheld.

Perhaps it may be of interest to your readers to learn that with a view of re-arrangement of the "Standard of Perfection," the majority of the White Leghorn breeders in the States when consulted, gave it as their opinion that a creamy white or lemon tinge was not only admissible but natural in a yellow legged, yellow-skinned bird, and that dead white ear-lobes could only be obtained by crossing with white skinned birds. I must not encroach more upon your valuable space, but as a subscriber to your paper, and a breeder, I must say that it does but little good to the poultry industry to praise what does not deserve to be praised. A much more dignified attitude was observed by two other leading papers, one of which abstained from all comment, beyond announcing the fact of the Show having taken place, and the other fittingly remarked that the Exposition made up in quantity what it lacked in quality.—Yours, etc.,

P. A. LAMBE.

GOVERNMENT SEED

3,100,000 KILOS DISTRIBUTED IN ENTRE RIOS.

The Government expert, Sr. Baldassarre, who is charged with the distribution of Government seed throughout the Province of Entre Rios has forwarded his report to Dr. Calderon, the Minister of Agriculture, stating that he has completed his task. The total amount distributed is 3,500,000 kilos of which 2,550,000 are wheat and 600,000 flax.

Before returning Sr. Baldassarre is giving a lecture on Sunday next on "Wheat and the sowing of it" at Concepción del Uruguay.

POULTRY SHOWS AND EXHIBITS

LA PLATA CRITICISED.

With reference to "The Herald" report of the Poultry Show at La Plata, we publish on this page a letter received from an esteemed subscriber, whose opinions do not exactly coincide with those expressed in these columns. Our desire is not to enter into a controversy on the subject, but as a certain amount of publicity will prove beneficial to the poultry industry, we may give a little information on points where our correspondent admits ignorance.

We will pass over his remarks as to "partiality" because he makes no mention as to how the report was partial. Even if he had given some cases of apparent partiality, they would be quite erroneous, as the notes on the exhibits were made before the exhibitor's name was noted. His remark as to the breeder and the exhibitor not being necessarily the same person is obviously correct, but quite irrelevant.

The hall in which the Show was held was sufficiently spacious to contain the exhibits, and it was not the simple "galpon" that had been utilised in former shows. This last Show was held in the busiest thoroughfare in La Plata, and the building that temporarily housed poultry had previously "housed" millions of dollars. The underground floor, or cellar, with added lighting, could comfortably have taken three times the number of animals actually shown.

We must now note our correspondent's remark as to the Association's members, and their annual payments, otherwise we should have passed over a failing shown by too many breeders. To say that the subscriptions should pay for a better Exhibition Hall is simply to demonstrate a lack of knowledge of the Association's finances. It is unfortunately a fact that the membership of the Association is nothing near what some people imagine it to be. The evident cause of this is primarily the lack of interest on the part of breeders generally. We may state without the slightest hesitation that had the Association been conducted on strictly business lines, and the officials rewarded in cash for their labours, the Association would long since have ceased to exist. So far as the Government's aid is concerned, our correspondent will be enlightened by the news that it is much more a moral than a material support. It may be distasteful to make the statement, but it is nevertheless true that on more than one occasion the Association has been compelled to purchase a prize, ostensibly awarded by the Government, in order to avoid any disappointment on the part of exhibitors. Our correspondent must admit that with the funds at their disposal, the Show officials could not have done better. We cannot have the Crystal Palace at one stroke, but we are slowly improving our exhibitions.

It is quite true that the result of the sales was deplorable, due in great measure to the general scarcity of money, but there are other objects besides selling that an exhibitor should have in view. It is not quite correct to say that "few breeders care to take the trouble and risk of sending good birds, etc.," as the principal exhibitors at the Palermo Show had also entered at La Plata.

Regarding our correspondent's criticism of some of the prize-winners, it is scarcely good form for an exhibitor to make disparaging remarks on the quality of another exhibitor's prize winners, especially if the former has never acted in the capacity of poultry judge. The comb of the first-prize Wyandotte cock appeared quite natural, and not the slightest trace of "the pruning-knife" was visible. It is certainly no defect in a cock if he does not possess the too bushy comb of some inferior specimens. The exhibitor of the first-prize Leghorns will undoubtedly be pleased to know our correspondent's opinion of them, but it will probably have given him greater pleasure to have exhibited birds capable of beating those exhibited by the latter. The fact that our correspondent specialises in Leghorns, yet was unable to win the first prize, should not annoy him, nor should he be dissuaded from participating in future Shows, at which we wish him better luck.

His remark on the first-prize White Plymouth Rock meets with our approval, but he is quite at sea as regards the Black Orpington, and the exhibitor of the first-prize Barred Plymouth Rock will scarcely feel gratified considering that this bird is only about one year old, and has only been exhibited at one Show previous to La Plata. The Black Orpington Cock was not defective in width, as he is such a young bird, and is capable of further development. The breeder will know the exact age of this cock, but if our surmise is correct (that he is a young bird of 8—9 months), our correspondent will acknowledge that this information would have modified his views.

We have heard something of the dissatisfaction among breeders of Leghorns in the United States, as regards the "standard" for this breed, but there is a movement on foot in this country for the adoption of a British "standard" for breeds originated or perfected in England.

It is a matter for regret that our correspondent did not appreciate "The Herald" report, which was the most complete published, but doubtless the majority of our poultry readers found it interesting and informative. No one should be afraid of healthy criticism, but as has been repeatedly stated in these columns, breeders should do everything possible to sink their differences and become more united so that aviculture may be placed on a sound footing, and more extensively practised. This can only be successfully accomplished by close application to the improvement of poultry-keeping in general; a case, in fact, of pushing "eggs" instead of "ego."

RIO SAN JUAN FLOODS

On July 29th, the Minister of Home Affairs, of Public Works, and Dr. Rojas, the Governor of San Juan, sat in conference. The object of the meeting was the consideration of erecting defensive works against the overflowing of the river San Juan, which was rendering useless the system of canals in this province.

Dr. Angel Rojas has laid his case before the Ministers and has pointed out that the situation could not be more serious and that ruin to the province would follow, if the matter did not receive attention. Latterly, on three different occasions has the Rio San Juan overflowed and destroyed the dock gates. The Governor in view of the approaching thaws in the hills fears a similar catastrophe and requests immediate preventative assistance. The two Ministers have promised this.

The Governor of San Juan also visited the Government Engineer, Sr. Ortis, and explained the situation, and has also obtained his support. The cost of the work is estimated at $2,500,000, and this amount has already been set aside.

AUSTRALIA AND ARGENTINA

A COLONIAL'S COMPARISON.

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—As a "stranger" from Australia, I would like to express an opinion on several matters relative to Buenos Aires. In the first place I beg to specially mention the wonderfully good temper and politeness which seems to be inherent in all classes of the community. I have looked in vain for the least possible sign of displeasure from passing pedestrians with whom I have somewhat carelessly "jostled" in the streets, when similar rushing through crowded thoroughfares in Australia would certainly eventuate in unseemly brawls, if not actual hostilities. As I am not conversant with the language in vogue (am doing my utmost to repair this defect) it is a source of wonder to me to notice with what a vast amount of patience and goodwill the citizens take, in trying to elucidate my attempts to make myself understood in their natural tongue. What strikes a new arrival, after two months' survey of the city, is the magnificent statues, and general external decorations, whilst the internal artistic effects are worthy of sincere approval, and a source of pleasure to the onlooker.

Although in Australia the majority of the streets are laid down with wooden blocks on concrete foundations, there is no comparison with them and the work done locally, in the former the blocks are laid all one way, and the crevices filled up with hot tar, topped with a layer of fine sand, whilst locally the blocks are laid "geometrically," and cemented, which better course of procedure I shall have much pleasure in bringing under the notice of the municipal authorities when I return home. It might be imagined that Australians look with envy on the gigantic strides made by the Argentine in matters relating to railway construction, export of beef, grain, etc., but such is quite contrary to facts. The average Australian looks with pride on the advancement and energy of this great republic, and cuttings from your local papers continually appear in the principal "dailies" and "weeklies" urging their readers to emulate the actions of "up-to-date" people. They particularly require grain elevators, in Australia, and an immense field of enterprise waits a competent firm of erectors of same. Regarding the relative merits of the harbours of Sydney, N.S.W., and Buenos Aires, my opinion may not carry sufficient weight to decide the controversy at issue, but from a casual inspection I am under the impression that for scenic effects Sydney takes undoubted precedence, but for the amount of capital expended in substantial improvements, coupled to the vast extent of "harbourage," the Argentine wins easily. Having passed through all stages of "colonial experience" on sheep and cattle stations, I am extremely pleased with the quality of the stock which I have inspected, especially the horses and cattle, the sheep, whilst being of "large carcasses," do not come up to my ideal standard as producers of a "fine" wool, such as our "merino" flocks bear in Australia, notably those of Messrs. Peppin, of "Wanganella," Riverina, New South Wales, and Messrs. Gibson, of "Belle View," Tasmania, formerly the pure Spanish Vermont rams were greatly in evidence, but recently a re-action has taken place in favour of a "merino" type, having no "wrinkles" on the body. I have no doubt that, given the required population, Australia will eventually overtake the Argentine in railway construction; it may interest your numerous readers to know that a shipment of Argentine wheat saved a flour famine in Western Australia in June last, and Premier Scadden was unstinted in his praise of this country's fertility. In Australia great damage has been done to stock breeding by killing too many females, but, having thoroughly awakened to the

HOW TO INVEST $3,000

AN AUSTRALIAN'S ADVICE

(To the Editor.)

Sir.—In to-day's "Herald" I read the inquiry of "An Interested Subscriber" on how to invest $3000, whether in chacra or otherwise.

Well Sir, to begin with, I will not give you my full pedigree. Suffice it to say that I am an Australian. Having farmed in Australia for 20 odd years and two years in this country, I think I can claim that I should know a little about the farming business. Of course the slipshod way of working here, would never do, I might say in any country. It would break a tidy farmer's heart to see his grain kicked about and wasted as it is here in Argentina. I have been here now close on 9 years, every year of which I have been in the camp for two or three months at harvest time, going from one chacra to another, looking after the Australian stripper and harvester. In all my travels I have not yet come across a man who I could call a farmer.

"Farming does not pay," they will say, but they seem to be in a fog why it does not pay. Look around their places and the reason is fairly plain. If they happen to have any pigs the chances are that they are running wild through the crops. Their machinery is where they finished with it last year, and they themselves are sucking maté and generally bemoaning their fate and cursing every body but the right party (themselves).

If farming will, and does, pay in other countries for the life of me I cannot see why it will not pay here. I should like to see some of the chacareros dropped down on some of what we call the Mallee country, in Victoria. Why they would simply collapse with fright. My opinion is that a man with, say a couple of hundred hectares of camp here, within reasonable distance of Buenos Aires could make a very nice comfortable living. But he would not have to depend entirely on wheat and oats. He would have to go in for mixed farming. Of course that is out of the question for "Interested Subscriber" with the capital of $3000. Now with your $3000, I will give you my opinion as to what I think would pay you for your investment. You no doubt see the papers, just look over some of the prices that are going here in Buenos Aires for produce. To-day I could get $1 a dozen for all the eggs that I could sell, or I could get a standing price all the year round of 80 cents for fresh eggs.

It is hard to believe it in a country like this, but to-day we are buying potatoes imported from Spain at from 25 to 30 cents the kilo. If you want a bit of decent ham you have to buy the imported at the small figure of $5 the kilo. Bacon which they call smoked, but I would like to bet never saw one whiff of smoke, for I know a little about curing, they are charging $1.40 the kilo, and nearly all fat at that. Butter I am not quite sure of but I know it is well over $2 per kilo. I know that cream is $1 a litre.

Well to make a long story short I give you as my candid opinion that you could rent a small place within 1½ or 2 hours of Buenos Aires and go in for fowls, pigs and two or three milk cows or more, for my idea is that if you have pigs there is nothing like a drop of milk for them, even direful effects of this pernicious practice, a law has been enacted which will curtail this method of procedure in future. In conclusion I beg to congratulate the citizens on the erection of the new magnificent railway station which is indeed a "masterpiece" of architectural and engineering skill. Wishing the Argentine and its virile population increased prosperity.—Yours, etc.,

EXPORTATION OF HIDES

A STRONGER DEMAND.

There is considerable activity being evinced at the present time in the sale of hides. The demand is firm and well sustained. For clean, flawless, well dried skins a price of $15.80 is being paid for some special lots.

Since the first of the year 1,355,197 dried hides have been exported from the country with the following principal destinations, United States of America 922,081; Italy 140,376, and the United Kingdom 33,038. In these countries, the demand remains firm, especially in the first named, and has been most active during the present month. The number of dried hides exported compares favourably with the numbers in previous years. In 1911 1,271,061; 1912, 1,495,540; 1913, 987,479; 1914, 878,268.

The export in cured hides has equalled 1,395,707, of which number 1,019,722 have gone to North America; 202,964 to the United Kingdom, and 100,171 to Sweden. With the exception of the year 1912, when 1,559,887 cured hides were exported, this shows an appreciable increase. Last year the number was 1,246,028. Young horse hides to the number of 46,628 were exported, all of which except some 300, went to U.S.A.

The export of sheepskins has improved. There is a better and stronger demand and higher prices reign. Internal consumption is on the increase, but almost solely for "half bred" hides, and prices for these are in advance of export prices and for the best skins, some houses are paying $1 and $1.04.

During the past six months, 19,552 bales of sheepskins have been shipped. France demanding 16,159, the United States 1766, and the United Kingdom 1025. There is a slight increase in exportation over the years 1913 and 1914.

NO FLAGS

BERLIN'S ORDER TO AMERICAN SUBJECTS

Amsterdam, July 29.

Despatches from Berlin state that since the arrival of the last Note from President Wilson a guard has been kept at the United States Embassy.

In order to avoid popular disturbances the Berlin authorities have requested the Americans not to wear or make a display of their national emblems or flags.

if it is skimmed. Re the fowl business I will quote you an instance that I know. Down at Cañuelas which is about 1½ hours from Buenos Aires I know a man who told me last summer that he averages $300 a month, with his fowls. And I know that they do not take any pains with them for I have seen them just running about the camp. Of course he is a cattle man and does not bother with small fry like fowls. Now Mr. Subscriber probably you are an older hand than I am in the country and know more about the good and the bad of it than I do but when it comes to talking about farming it is what I like. No doubt you will ask why I left Australia? You have no doubt read or heard of the droughts that come round over there. Well any one who has been through a bad drought or two with stock, knows a little of the joys of farming. I have heard them crying about a drought here, but they know nothing about it for they can always get water for their stock. A drought in Australia means no food or water. Of course that is not all over Australia, I am only speaking of where I came from the north of Victoria.

I will conclude wishing you all sorts of luck in whatever you venture.

Yours, etc.,

G. W. STEWART.

THE ROSARIO SHOW

Opened by Minister of Agriculture

Full List of Awards and Criticism of Exhibits

(By Our Special Representative).

Rosario, Saturday, July 31.

Judging commenced this morning with Mr. Guillermo B. Whigham parading the animals in the old class for Shorthorn bulls, while Messrs. Alfredo Marsion, M.R.C.V.S., and Mr. H. Blunt began work with the Shires and Clydesdales. Mr. Pedro Estanguet placed the competitors in the Percheron and Bouillonnais classes. Work proceeded throughout the day before a fairly large attendance of interested spectators. Mr. George D. Hughes made the awards in the Hereford classes, and Mr. Santo J. Joveras performed a similar duty among the sheep, while the judges in the fat stock, poultry, pigs, and dogs sections also selected the prize-winners.

Entries, generally speaking, are not up to expectations, and the first four classes for Shorthorn bulls produced few competitors, though the remaining classes were better filled. The awards in Shorthorn cows and heifers were made from small groups, while Aberdeen Angus, Hereford and milch classes were poor. The fat stock prizes were also poorly contested. Competitors were few in the various horse classes, and sheep had fewer nominations than in previous years. The sections that had most entries and which were most strongly contested were those devoted to pigs and sheep.

Opening Ceremony

Shortly after two o'clock on Sunday afternoon Dr. Calderon the Minister of Agriculture, formally declared the fifteenth exhibition of the Rosario Rural Society open. Being a holiday there was a large attendance of the general public, who very warmly applauded the various speakers.

Dr. Mario Casas, in the name of the Society extended a hearty welcome to Dr. Calderon and thanked him for honouring the exhibition in the way he had done. Congratulatory speeches of considerable length having been delivered by various prominent members of the Government, the principal prize winners were paraded in the ring, and the Champion Bull was specially drawn out for the inspection of the distinguished visitors.

SHORTHORNS.

The display of Shorthorns taken together failed to come up to the quality of former years, though competition in some classes was very keen. Shortly after 9 o'clock on Saturday morning, Mr. William B. Wigham, commenced to place the winners in the class for older bulls. Only five paraded and by no means were they richly endowed with true type. First prize went to Normando, a bull bred by Sres. D. P. and A. Olivera and shown by Sr. Bernardo Wirsch; second prize going to Wandering Jew belonging to Sr. Pablo Spinola. The latter was also a second prize winner at last year's show. In the following class only three out of the five bulls entered were paraded, the winner being found in Molles Dairyman, a nice roan shown by Mr. H. F. Henwick, while second honours fell to the exhibit of Sr. José M. Ezcurra. The following class comprised eight entries, and the placing of the winners occupied some time, finally resulting in Polar Summit 2nd heading the line. This is a good blocky type of bull, though somewhat rough about the tail head but which did not detract from his great merits nor prejudice him from winning the Championship on the following day. The runner up in this class was Twin Roan bred by the late Don Manuel Cobo, and shown in splendid bloom. Matehniaker from the Suc. of Narciso Vivot was an immensely big bull and had lots of admirers. The fourth class was far and away the strongest so far, and the winner was found in a big good coloured roan with a grand coat the property of Sr. José M. Imaz, and which was afterwards awarded the reserve championship. This bull when walked had many admirers and has the makings of a great sire. The sire and dam of this splendid specimen of the Shorthorn breed, were both imported by Mr. James Taylor, and sold to their present owner. The runner up was a bull bred by the late Don Manuel J. Cobo, and was a very level smooth neat bull, but did not show as well on parade. Boers Conferer was awarded the third ticket and he is a big massive bull, but with a commoner head. The fifth class, in point of quality was only fair and Pride of Strength was an outstanding winner. The second was an exhibit from the Suc. Narciso Vivot, and was a sweet little bull and a very good handler, while the third ticket went to a somewhat plainer bull shown by Sr. Bernardo Wirsch. The sixth class brought out a superior lot of bulls but with an easy winner in Hampton King 11th bred and shown by the Estancias Cecilio Lopez Limitada. Though seen to greater advantage when standing, this bull may easily be said to possess less faults than any other specimen of the breed paraded at this year's show. With a good fore-end supporting a grand head and neck boasting ideal Shorthorn character, and standing well on to the ground. He is unfortunately rather inclined to drop at tail end when marching. To touch and handle he is hard to beat and colour coat and age are also big points in his favour. He had a host of admirers who were entirely at a loss to know why the judge forgot him, when making the championship awards. Second ticket in this class went to Favourite Prince a red and white, son of Garbity Favourite and Rran Princess, and hailing from the celebrated "Marion" establishment, the property of Don Carlos A. Brown. Third and fourth places were filled by nominations of Sr. Emilio Meyer Pellegrini and Don Julio Peña.

Class No. 7 was very numerous and strongly represented, and Cherry Ripe, belonging to Messrs. P. and G. Hughes, well deserved his place. He is a very nice young bull, with splendid coat, and shows well on parade. The runner up, was Facando Quiroga, a very nice quality bull, but owing to the long journey, appeared to be rather drawn up in belly, and does not show to advantage. King Hee 36th was the 3rd winner while Vulcan Last Stand, the property of Sr. Pedro T. Pages, was awarded the fourth ticket. The next lot according to their ages having been paraded, the judge was some considerable time before being able to classify these animals according to their merits. They were a very good class, comprising a large percentage of exceptionally good young bulls. Red Knight, the property of the Suc. Vivot, was a popular winner. This is a big, thick deep bull full of flesh, and shown in splendid bloom. The runner up was a bull bred in the famous La Belen and Las Barrancas Cabaña and now the property of Sr. Julio Peña, and was a short, thick neat little bull. The third award fell to the exhibit of Sr. Carlos A. Brown, and has the makings of a good bull. The judging of class 9, occupied the judges attention on the Sunday morning, and this was a fairly strong class, though the representative of Sr. Pages, appeared to be a probable winner, when viewed on parade. Briton Grand Vulcan, is a very good specimen of the breed and his popular owner was enthusiastically congratulated by his large circle of friends, on his well deserved triumph. The second and third winners in this class, both hailed from Estancia Cecilio Lopez Limitada, whose exhibits this year have been most favourably commented on by visiting experts. The second winner was a bull of a good type and a good handler. The third winner was a very sweet white bull full of quality. The fourth award in this class fell to Iner's Pennant, exhibited by the Messrs. Hughes.

FAT STOCK.

The entries of fat cattle were neither numerous, nor was any animal of conspicuous merit, with the exception of the Champion. The presence of rings in the animal's noses, combined with their heavy full necks, gave one the impression that several of the competitors in this section had been originally intended for bulls, though castrated at a later date, but not soon enough to get rid of a "staggy" appearance. The high prices ruling for fat stock, and the possibility of still higher prices in the future ought to stimulate breeders in this country to give more attention to the artificial feeding of their steers, and the marketing of them at an earlier age than would be possible, with only grass feeding, to say nothing of the increased value of the carcass and the manurial value of the feeding stuffs, consumed on the property. In the older class for Hereford steers there were only two entries, the first prize being awarded to Mr. Charles A. Brown, for a good big steer, while Mr. John E. Stent was second with an animal bred by Messrs. Duggan Bros. In the younger class, the same two competitors again met, when Mr. Charles A. Brown secured the leading award, with a deep, fleshy, good handling kind of steer, which was an outstanding winner, and was afterwards awarded the Championship. In the younger class, Mr. Brown was the only exhibitor, and showed three useful young steers. The only exhibitor in the Aberdeen Angus classes, was Mr. John E. Stent, who showed some animals that are likely to be heard of at future shows. The class for animals of any cross was annexed by Mr. Stent, for a very good class of butcher's steer, which from a butcher's point of view, would be worth more per pound than any other exhibit. Though somewhat leggy, this was a very good type of butcher's beast. In the younger class the veteran exhibitor, Mr. Stent again secured the first prize.

HEAVY DRAUGHT HORSES.

The classes for heavy draught horses were rather disappointing, in numbers, and quality was not equal to the standard of former years, in any of the breeds.

SHIRES.

Though a considerable number of animals appeared in the catalogue, very few were considered worthy of being presented for the judge's verdict. Among the few animals paraded, "Drabble Cashier," appeared to be an easy winner and in keeping with the previous reputation of this establishment, was shown in splendid bloom, and is likely to be keenly competed for at auction, as really good quality draught horses will be in demand. This was a blocky thick stamp of a horse and likely to breed well.

CLYDESDALES.

These were very poorly represented, only three exhibits coming out in the ring. There was no doubt about the winner which was the property of Sr. José M. Imaz, and was probably the only animal prepared for exhibition. It is a pity so little interest appears to be taken in this, Scotland's breed of draught horse, and which undeniably has become a great favourite in many parts of the world.

FRENCH DRAUGHT BREEDS

The classes at former shows were always well contested by Cabañas in Santa Fé and Cordoba, while representatives were generally found from the leading breeders in the Province of Buenos Aires. This year many notable breeders have sold off, while the strong demand for good quality heavy draught animals, may have deviated not a few of the ordinary kind to Europe, while the better quality animals will only be shown at Buenos Aires. Boulonnais were far and away ahead of anything shown in the French heavy breeds. The horses coming from "El Placer," the property of Dr. Angel Velaz, were a credit to the owner, and the person responsible for their preparation. The first prize winner in his class "Danton" was an exceptional specimen of the breed, and was an easy Champion over his Percheron class winner. He however had to stand down to the Drabble horse in the Championship for best draught horse.

LIGHT LEGGED BREEDS

HACKNEYS.

The Hackney classes were not numerically represented, though what was lacking in numbers was made up for in quality. In the class for 4 year olds, "San Miguel," was shown in tip-top form, and was a very popular winner. This horse has already won many leading honours in the Show yard. As a 2 year-old he was first in his class at Palermo, while the following year, competing as a 3 year-old, he not only won first in his class; but also the Championship of the breed. Astrada Bros. were the owners of the runner up, which was also a well bred horse, and a good mover. In the 3-yr.-old class the winner, "Lochie Jubilee," has also previously annexed honours at Palermo, and has lately improved very much. He gave a fine show, and won well from "Irving," which was the runner up. The 2 year-old class comprised that stylishly bred horse, "Shooting Star," a grandson of Hopewood Viceroy. This is a beautiful turned horse, and was a grand goer, and is likely to improve in time, and add further triumphs to his credit.

MARES.

The class for mares was won by "Jolly Joy," owned by the Samuel B. Hale Company, Tatay. This is a good going bay mare and she made a fine show, her action no doubt being inherited from her sire. "Lochiel Firefly" was placed second, and when it is considered that she was giving away a year to "Jolly Joy," her place is the more creditable. This mare won at Palermo in May. She is very fashionably bred, being related to Waldrón Squire John, on the dam side, which was also a former winner at Palermo. The winner in the Hackney pony class was "Camillas Sportsman," a very grand going pony and sired by Rampant, a successful breeding sire, imported by Mr. James Garlick. The Championship was awarded to "San Miguel," by "San Benito," out of Aytan Sweet Briar, a big winner in England. This horse's breeding contains all the most fashionable English blood, and was splendidly shown by that popular Hackney exponent Mr. James Gaslick, who thoroughly deserved the enthusiastic applause, accorded him on his well earned victory. The reserve Champion was Lochie Jubilee, who made a splendid show, and was unfortunate in meeting such a good horse as the Champion.

PIGS.

The show of pigs may be considered as being well up to previous exhibitions, and some of the Berkshire classes were specially well represented, though the former popular Large Blacks, were not visible. In the class for Middle White Yorkshire boars, the two winners were both the property of Sr. Emilio Meyer Pellegrini. In the following, an older class, all the exhibits were the property of Mr. John E. Stent, whose winner was a big boar of great quality, sired by Dalmeny Royalist. In the younger sow class for the same breed all exhibits were the property of Sr. Emilio Meyer Pellegrini, and the winner was a nice quality sow. In the older female class Mr. John E. Stent showed the two leading winners, while Sr. Emilio Meyer Pellegrini was the owner of the 3rd exhibit.

BERKSHIRES.

In a very numerous and strong class of young boars, the first ticket went to Sres. Benvenuto Bros., as also did the second, while third honours fell to Sr. S. A. Salas. In the older boar class the same firm also annexed the leading award, with a nice short headed, good coated pig. The runner up in this class was Sr. Fermin Lejarza nomination. In the older board class Sr. Fermin Lejarza led with a pig somewhat too long in his snout, the runner up the property of Mr. Stent, being a more typical type of the breed. In the class for young sows, Sr. S. A. Salas was awarded first honours with a very nice quality breed looking sow, next to her was another good sort belonging to the same exhibitor. In the class for older sows, first prize was awarded to Sres. Benvenuto Bros. for a most meritorious animal, a perfect model of the breed. Second award fell to Mr. Stent, while the 3rd winner was the property of Sres. Benvenuto Bros., a plainer big sow, but milking seven beautiful young pigs. In the class for Poland Chinas, Sr. Guillermo A. Benitz; La California, won the leading honours.

The classes for fat pigs were also well contested, and some exceptionally good animals were the winners.

THE BUDGET

FURTHER ECONOMIES DEMANDED.

Notwithstanding much consideration, the Budget has not yet assumed the final complexion under which it is to go to Congress. It is said that the Minister of Finance is inexorably bent, and with too good reason, on further economies. Further reductions have been urged on several departments, and in some cases, warmly disputed. It is pointed out that the National Health Department has swelled its expenditure by over a million pesos within two years; that many of its duties might be profitably handed over to that excellent service the Asistencia Publica; that the Sub-Prefecture might cut down its gastos by closer cooperation with the Guardos de Aduana, and that the Departamento Nacional de Trabajo scarcely justifies its existence during the crisis by producing voluminous statistics and harmless statements at a cost of $300,000. It is said that Dr. de la Plaza is going to look personally into these points before the Budget goes through.

ROSARIO RURAL SHOW

SALES OF STOCK.

Rosario, Aug. 3.
The sales of stock exhibited at the Rosario Show were continued to-day. The bidding for the heavy stud horses and Durham bulls was flat, only one being made for the championship, "Polar Summit 2nd," and he was retired from sale, as was also the reserved champion "Rosales" offered on a base of $14,000. Poultry brought fairly good prices.

The following sales were effected:

HORSES.

"Drabble Cashier," for $2,000 to Guillermo Bennett.
"Drabble 141," for $600 to R. E. Botling.
"Drabble 146," for $900 to W. Fisher.
"Drabble 144," for $700 to R. E. Botling.

SANTA FE STATISTICS

JUNE RETURNS.

The official statistics for the month of June, concerning the city of Santa Fé have just been published and shew that during the month births numbered 157 and deaths 90. The number of persons arriving by boat was 1,364 and departures equalled 1,231. Railway traffic is increasing and the returns give 17,378 persons as having entered and 14,748 as having left the city. Tramway returns shew 240,428 passengers carried and there is an increase of $28,988 of customs business done during the month.

Santa Fé has an area of 14,017,686 square metres and a population of 65,858. During the first three months of the year exports equalled, wheat valued at $1,345,114, flax at $1,198,788 and quebracho at $318,851. The survey department shews that there are 75 streets built of wood, 374 of granite and 23 of macadam.

U.S. GRAIN MARKETS

NERVOUSNESS IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, July 31.
Extraordinary feverishness and unsettlement are the conspicuous features of the domestic wheat markets. Early in the week it was plainly evident that all traders were decidedly nervous, being influenced to a great extent by further unexpected rains in the Mississippi valley, where harvesting has long been delayed by heavy rainfall and high winds, which prostrated much grain. Hence the receipts have been small, especially of contract grades, which has caused apprehension among short sellers for

THE YEAR'S TURN-OVER

FROM A COLONIST'S POINT OF VIEW

THE PLIGHT OF MAIZE GROWERS

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—A lot has been written lately about colonists, and their being the backbone of the country's welfare. Being such they should receive more encouragement from the Government in the furnishing of facilities for selling the crop in Europe, as is done

THE ROSARIO CHAMPIONS.

Mr. Charles A. Brown's champion Shorthorn Bull, "Polar Summit," 2nd Champion.

July, also among millers and dealers who had contracted to deliver goods in July.

In addition receipts are also light in the Northwest, where the stocks were meagre. Hence July in Minneapolis jumped up about 5 cents a bushel with striking rapidity.

The Russian official report covering July 20 says that in fifty-four governments the spring wheat has yielded 463 million bushels, oats 472 millions, barley 1101 million, and maize 78 million. The acreage under wheat and oats increased as compared with last year. A comparison of yields between this year and last shows an increase in wheat of 29.3 per cent., barley 30.9 per cent., and oats 32.7 per cent. In maize there has been a decrease of 3.2 per cent.

in Canada. The following is more or less the situation this year in this department, and probably in most parts of the country, the percentage for rent being two to four per cent. higher, the crop heavier in the province of Buenos Aires, and also the ground has to be better cultivated, meaning more expense in animals and work, thus counterbalancing the better crop.

The following is the average for three colonists, each with 50 squares:

1750 Quintales harvested, or at the rate of 35Q per square less 26 per cent. in Troja for rent of land (455 Q). There remains 1295 Quintales at present price in Rosario $4.65 . $5921.00

To sell which the colonist has to go to the local buyer, who offers him $1.50 below Pizarra, also the cost of harvesting at $0.82 per Quintal, or at the rate of $0.50 per bag of maize in espiga, with maintenance for harvesters, so that from the above has to be deducted $2.33 per Quintal. 1295 Quintals at $2.33 . 3017.35 leaving a balance of $2904.40

From this again one must deduct maintenance of the average family, say, two men, one woman and three children. Calculating the "grown-ups" at $1 per day, the children at $0.40 per day, the maintenance would be for the year $1512.00

The capital works out at $2900, 20 per cent. of which for depreciation is very economical 580.00

This leaves the colonist for the coming agricultural year in cash $812.40

The capital items in the above are 12 horses at $100 each; 2 ploughs, sulkys $290; harrow $60, sower $250, Chata espigadora $300; chapas, tirantes, etc., for house and 2 Trojas, $600; seed and various, $200.

On a 50 square chacra there is always work for two men. In the expenses you will note that clothing, fencing for three squares for pasturage, and a number of other items are not put in. If the colonist sells his maize in Rosario, he has to pay freight to the station, 10 cents the bag, and sometimes more, also loans for drying the maize, then freight by railway costing from those parts 38 cents per Quintal in darsena; these expenses running out at $1.10 to $1.20 per Quintal plus expenses of threshing at 45 to 50 cents per Quintal.

As in most enterprises in this country, the middlemen clean up the profits. In this particular branch especially you might almost say that the colonist works for the middle men. Not only that, but he takes all the risks in a bad year and in a good one, on an average hands over a half to the middlemen without their having risked frosts, drought, locusts, hail, etc.

The maize at present passes through three people on this side of the ocean, viz., the local buyer, the broker, and finally the big exporting house, each taking a profit, without much risk to the local buyer and broker.

Verily the way of the colonist is stony this year, with present prices of maize, and until a paternal Government sees fit to favour the small men in place of the capitalist, is liable to become more so even yet.

Perhaps you would kindly publish this in your paper when you have space, so that other readers interested in cereals may give their experiences, say in wheat, linseed, etc. Thanking you in advance.—Yours etc.,

LIEBIG'S MEAT EXTRACT

20 PER CENT DIVIDEND

Liebig's Meat Extract Company held their Annual Meeting in London on July 21. Owing to the scarcity of fat cattle in South America, it was mentioned that, prices ruled high. Favourable results, were reported from the Company's estancias and the formation of another Company to work the ether products produced by the Company in the British Empire and the United States, was announced. By reason of the war and to consolidate the Company's position, the programme in regard to Rhodesia had been curtailed. A very favourable state of affairs was shown and a dividend of 20 per cent on ordinary shares, was declared.

THE TRAGEDY OF HAITI

(La Prensa—July 29.)

The cables again bring information of the distressful state of affairs in Haiti, where, as "La Prensa" remarks, the principal occupation of its inhabitants for many years past has been that of mutual destruction. More than once the independence of Haiti has been threatened owing to her internal dissensions, and as a matter of fact her sovereignty has been infringed on more than one occasion owing to the landing of foreign troops charged with the duty of protecting the lives and interests of foreign residents. A glance over Haitian history for the last five years is sufficient to give one an idea of the anarchy there prevailing. Fifteen years back, General Hipolito died, and a revolution set in, finally dominated by General Simon Sam, who was succeeded by another revolutionary, General Cincinnatus Laconte. He perished in the flames of his own residence, the Government House having been set alight in order to get rid of him. Sudden illness carried off his successor, after he had held office for scarce a year.

The next on turn was a mere Senaor, one Michael Oreste. His term was brief and as usual ended in a revolution. Oreste took refuge on the German cruiser "Vinta," whilst troops from the French, British and American warships landed to protect foreign residents. From the same refuge of the German gunboat, Oreste resigned, without returning to shore, whilst the struggle for Haitian supremacy went on anew. Generals Zamor and Theodore took the field, the latter being killed and the former elected by the Haitian Congress, only to be routed anew by a General Gailleume, who imprisoned him, and eventually, the day before yesterday, ran him out in company with a hundred and sixty other friends and had him shot by the intermediation of the Governor of Port-au-Prince, Oscar, this latter gentleman being at once torn to pieces by the mob. Meanwhile, Guilleume, evidently unpopular, has been defeated by another revolution, and took refuge in the French Legation, whence, however, he has been hauled out and shot. As "La Prensa" says, this brutal violation of the sacred rights of diplomacy may have very serious consequences, and what the end of it will be nobody can foresee, least of all the Haitians, who in their blind obsession forget that they are not only destroying each other, but are also likely to compromise their existence as an autonomous people.

COMMERCIAL RELATIONS WITH THE STATES

(La Nación—July 30.)

Sundry causes said to militate against the commercial development of relations between Argentina and the United States were recently discussed by the Camara Sindical de Comercio, and after some interchange of ideas it was decided that if North American traders wished to capture these markets they would have to alter their methods of manufacture, export, and sale. Emphasis was laid on the fact that the European manufacturers gave local retailers anything from three to eighteen months credit; that the style of manufacture is both careful and well suited to the needs of the country; and, last but not least, that the orders are carried out exactly in accordance with instructions. Until the American trader

CONGRESS AND THE ECONOMIC SITUATION

(La Prensa—July 30.)

Unfortunately, says La Prensa, the pessimistic prophecies as to the labours of Congress for 1915 have been fulfilled. It was roundly said that little or nothing was to be looked for of the present session, save political manoeuvring, and the nature of the debates has proved the truth of the assertion. It is incomprehensible that Parliament should pass over the urgent needs of the Republic at a time such as the present, and imagine that the country will rest content with the politico-electoral debates that occupy its legislators who ought to be busy with practical affairs. La Prensa again reminds them that the crisis still exists, and that although it may have yielded a little in certain branches of trade, in other departments its influence is felt even more strongly than before. The investigations suggested by Dr. Zeballos strike a contrasting note in the general inaction, it is true, and ought to be of some effect, since the theme of his interpellation deals with matters of the most vital interest to the country, matters on which it is desirable to know the mind of the Government.

The country has not even so much as a vague knowledge of the actual financial state of the nation, and the Government has not as yet seen fit to enlighten it. The Budget Estimates for 1916 ought to throw some light on the subject, but as yet these have not been presented, despite the fact that we are at the end of July. A general decrease in public revenues has led the Government to take sundry steps with a view to balancing income and administrative expenditure, but the public does not know whether these measures will be sufficient or no. It is not idle curiosity on the part of the public which is re-echoed by La Prensa, nor do its observations spring from a spirit of recrimination. The preparation of the Budget presupposes the consolidation of the national finances. The solvency of the State is the first essential for any combination destined to liquidate the crisis, and put the nation's economic affairs on a proper basis. La Prensa denies the impossibility of so doing, and points out that if ever there was a time when it was not permissible to talk of fiscal insolvency, or irreparable disaster, that time is not in the present, seeing that there are many means available to the country and to its responsible powers. In conclusion La Prensa trusts that the Chamber of Deputies will see where its elemental duties lie, and give a truce to its purely political activities in favour of the actual and urgent demands of the present time.

realises that he will have to conform to similar methods, there is not much likelihood of serious business resulting from his strenuous propaganda.

According to the aforesaid Chamber it is not correct to say that American methods are on a par with those of European producers, and that other reasons than those involved in the question of credit must be looked for to explain the backwardness of American trade, there being many other factors to be taken into consideration. Various commissions have visited this country from the States to study the whole question, and all the information possible has been afforded them, special attention being paid to the best method of developing mutually advantageous trade.

THE BUDGET FOR 1916

(La Nación—July 29.)

In accordance, says "La Nación," with the scheme of economy recommended by the Minister of Finance with a view of counterbalancing the deficit of $24,500,000 which exists, according to the estimates for next year, the Minister of Agriculture has effected modifications in that department which reduce the estimated expenditure to $10,875,218.20, thus economising $1,421,172.50. The savings introduced by Dr. Calderon consist in a reduction of 10 per cent. on all salaries of over $150 per month and 5 per cent. on those which do not exceed that sum, plus a further economy of 10 per cent. on the general working expenses. Notwithstanding these reductions, the estimates for this department include a sum of $168,000 for the carrying on of the Agricultural School recently established at Tandil, and $58,000 for the experimental farm at Trelow.

The Minister of Public Works has introduced economies amounting to $8,000,000, and in the Departments of Justice and Public Instruction reductions to the extent of seven millions have been notified. It is expected, says "La Nación," that the study of the economies and reductions to be effected in the other Departments of the Government service will be completed next week.

JUDICIAL LIQUIDATIONS

(La Nación—July 31.)

When Justice declares that a person has reached the stage wherein he is forced to make a suspension of payments, speedy liquidation is desirable in order to minimise the consequences of bankruptcy, and thus, says "La Nación," do the laws imply, making every possible arrangement for an early settlement. The efficacy of the system depends on the activity of the appointed syndic and of the judge by whom he is controlled. Now if the law recommends to the judges the task of appointing liquidators, then these latter are responsible for errors or delay. Unfortunately in practice the judges do not insist on despatch, hence the multiple delays that militate against a speedy liquidation of the estates concerned. If the appointment of liquidators were not so much a matter of favour, things might be handled in a different fashion. As matters stand to-day many cases go on for ever, piling up costs at the expense of legitimate creditors.

The abandonment of all rights which is frequently seen on the part of creditors in commercial actions, owing to the certainty that they will get nothing in the long run, and only lose time and money in fruitless law suits, shows clearly the need that exists for a sweeping reform. The present epoch has been notable for the extraordinary number of judicial liquidations, and, as "La Nación" rightly observes, had all these actions been properly handled and carefully liquidated, the result would have done something towards minimising the general condition of trade. It ought to be possible to feel more confidence in the outcome of judicial liquidations than is felt to-day. The notorious deficiencies ought to be corrected. All hangs on a strict control of the liquidators and the reduction of fees and expenses to the minimum. These simple measures are sufficient, concludes "La Nación," to do away with the abuses that judicial liquidations reveal. Let the courts proceed with energy, and they will at once perceive the result.

PRIVATE LETHARGY

(La Prensa—July 31.)

The country, says "La Prensa," is fighting a stiff fight against heavy odds, not because it lacks arms, but because of its many deficiencies of organisation and lack of discipline. Worldwide though the effects of the battles now being waged in Europe undoubtedly are, Argentina, "La Prensa" continues, is the South American republic that suffers least from the repercussion of the war, and yet it is unable to shake off the influence of the actual crisis, owing to the fact that whilst in other countries private action makes itself felt, here such action is practically non-existent. Given the state of things to-day the upper classes who are possessed of means ought to take effective action. As a matter of fact nobody does anything; the trading groups remain silent and inactive, the banking interest maintains a policy of expectancy and does nothing to influence the market; in short there is a general atrophy which is most disconcerting.

The Argentine nation has many virtues, but as "La Prensa" remarks, it has also some very serious defects, among them being the tendency to expect all initiative to come from the government, an attitude that has very serious results. Among other things it leads to an enervation of character that is already clearly noticeable in the younger generation, apt rather to look for some post under government than to strike out on their own initiative. This, continues "La Prensa," is not empty theorising, but actual fact, and it is advisable at times to make public confession of national defects, if only to serve as a call to the national virtues. The country aspires to economic independence, but does very little whereby to gain it. In fact one may say that the modest farmer is the only individual who takes practical steps to that end, since it is thanks to his effort that Argentina has her trade and her national credit. Now, when circumstances force this country to provide for herself, the spirit of enterprise should be present. Yet never was its presence less visible than it is to-day. It is no exaggeration to say that Argentine affairs do not lead to the movement of 50 o/o. of the circulating medium now issued, or in other words, there are $500,000,000 immobilised. What are these millions doing, asks "La Prensa"? How are they employed? What interest do they bring to their owners? Here is to be found the clearest proof of the lack of all private action. No property will tempt to buy, however, low may be its price, as the records of the various auction sales in town and camp clearly show. Yet the war in Europe opens a wide field for industry, for cattle, and for agriculture, and were but these unemployed funds made use of the crisis would diminish and the general lack of confidence would disappear.

BEHAVIOUR ON THE FOOTBALL FIELD

(La Prensa—August 2.)

The frequency with which disagreeable scenes, and even cowardly assaults, have taken place on the football field of late, impels "La Prensa" to point out that the responsible authorities ought to do something to stop this sort of thing, if only for the good of the sport, a sport which in itself is particularly commendable, and one that is very rightly fomented by all athletic institutions. For these are not isolated incidents, but arise among the spectators, who take upon themselves to express an opinion on the course of the game, and "La Prensa" rightly remarks that this "barracking" will have to be stopped, even if it comes to playing with closed doors in so far as the public is concerned. Admittedly the evil is new to this country, and now or never is the time to eradicate it. In the first place the admission of spectators ought to be limited to the actual capacity of the area allotted to them in the various fields. Police intervention ought also to be more plentiful and at the same time much stricter, the very first symptoms of collective disorder being checked, and all irruptions on to the field or into the quarters of the players should be punished.

The immediate cause of these comments is, says "La Prensa," the shameful conduct that attended a match played on Sunday between two First Division teams on the River Plate ground in the South Darsena. Some ten thousand people were present, including about five hundred ladies. As a matter of fact there were plenty of police about, though owing to the over-crowding and defective arrangements generally, they were not of much use, as at least two thousand people were on the course, inside the railings. When the game was over a group of some three hundred people rushed the players, and a couple of members of the Racing Club's team, the winners, were stabbed, and their shirts torn. Owing to the crowd it was impossible to find out the actual authors of the outrage.

THE EXPORT TRADE

(La Nación.—August 2).

For some days past there has been a cessation in the deposit of gold in the legations abroad, says "La Nación," without there being any apparent cause for the stoppage, seeing that the demand for cereals is incessant and the supply well supported by ample stocks. Hence a certain surprise at the paralization of international operations, a paralization that is put down to a combine formed by the various Allies in order to beat down competition by buying in common all food stuffs and military stores, a course of action that is tantamount to exercising a control on the normal demand and maintaining prices at a lower level than they would attain were each country free to compete for the various articles it requires. It will be necessary to wait until this plan is in full operation ere one can judge of its effects on Argentine trade, remarks "La Nación," but at first sight the tendency is not promising for this market, since the unification of operations is evidently meant to force the sellers to realize their produce at figures that bear no relation to the actual supply and demand.

If this objective is actually consummated, than the producers will be forced to take up the defensive, victory eventually going to the side that was most in need of the goods, and "La Nación" implies that those who have the cereals and other merchandise would triumph, since such articles are just as necessary as warlike stores. Hence, it continues, if the present paralization is only a trick, it defeats its object, and will in the long run only force prices higher, since producers will hang back and await the results of the manoeuvre. Meanwhile the suspension of business denoted by the cessation of deposits in the legations, is making producers uneasy. If the international commission for supplies has as its sole object the unification of dealing without extortion, then it will not meet with resistance. If, on the other hand, it is a stratagem of a speculative nature, seeking to reduce prices by withdrawing from the market, measures must be devised to meet the danger. In any event, concludes "La Nación," forewarned is forearmed, and it is to be hoped that ere long the commission aforesaid will resume its purchases and thus give some indication of its intentions, whence the defence of the national interests may, if necessary, be duly calculated.

PARLIAMENTARY RIGHTS AND DUTIES

(La Prensa.—August 3).

It has been said, and with perfect propriety, that the parliamentary tribune is the highest dignity to which a free people can aspire, but, says "La Prensa," it is not always remembered that these dignities carry with them not only rights but also obligations on a par with the nobility of the institution. In the golden days of the Argentine Congress scenes were the exception. Not that exciting and even impassioned debates were lacking; on the contrary the legislative annals of the country record certain discussions which will go down to history as being among the most memorable ever held. Combat in those days was with the arms of wit and of reason, and the fiercest fires of those debates may be read by students as models of character and culture. To the present age corresponds the doubtful honour of a reaction against such worthy precedent. With alarming frequency are recorded incidents that tend to lower parliamentary dignity, and disparage the political progress of the nation.

His rights as a representative of the people are defensible by a deputy at all costs against any pressure that may appear to weigh upon his independence, but the irresponsibility that is personally his for such opinions as he may choose to utter does not, says "La Prensa," give him carte blanche to make personal allusions. The same criterion applies to the relations existing between the various departments of the state. Here as elsewhere, observes "La Prensa," courtesy does not necessarily imply weakness. In recent records of the sessions of Congress there have been mentioned various suspicions and insinuations, functionaries of high rank, and even Ministers, having been referred to by name; a method of procedure that does no good and may even do harm abroad, where the names mentioned are unknown. If there are grounds for definite charges, let them be stated, and either proved or disproved publicly, but this method of hitting at malpractices with evasive phrases for which no one in the last resort is actually responsible, is a lowering of parliamentary privileges which might well cease.

RICHES AND CRISIS

(La Nación.—August 3).

The increase in the bank deposits as shown by the statistics covering the first half of the year show, says "La Nación," a steady increase in deposits, from 1,200 million to 1,342 million round, whilst discounts remain more or less steady at 1,164 million. It is to the Banco de la Nación that one must look for the major portion of this abnormal movement; its deposits absorb 60 per cent. of the total, hence the anomaly of this situation presses hardest upon its shoulders, and means the loss of many millions to its exchequer owing to its inability to lay out the funds upon which it is paying interest. From the foregoing data it becomes clear that it is not lack of ready money that is at the bottom of the crisis, nor can the blame be laid at the doors of the banks, since there are no people so interested in the due circulation of their funds. The clients of the banks have money in abundance, and, lacking other investments, leave it there, however small may be the return they receive.

All of which goes to show, "La Nación" continues, that there is a superabundance of money in the country in the shape of idle capital, owing to the lack of ability on the part of the country to finance its own affairs in the same manner as is done by imported capital. There being no local concerns formed, the money naturally drifts into the banks and weighs on them not merely as an embarrassing charge, but also as an actual loss.

THE WHITE SCOURGE

(La Prensa.—August 4).

At a time when anything not immediately concerned with politics has small chance of attention it has been thought advisable to bring up the important question of a national campaign against consumption in the Chamber of Deputies. To describe the theme as of importance does not mean to say that it is beyond solution, as many distinguished hygienists would have us believe, remarks "La Prensa," since it has been known for many years now that tuberculosis is curable, indeed, one might almost say, readily curable, provided that the invalid is master of the means whereby health may be regained. Inasmuch, however, as it is a stubborn ailment, one that as a rule escapes the ordinary precautions taken in defence of public health, it is logical to suppose that action must be taken against the disease rather than against its incubation. Not that this too cannot be checked, as the example of England and Germany shows. In the latter country the systematic organisation which is its leading characteristic makes the task relatively easy, whilst in England efforts are directed rather towards reducing the mortality returns in general. Germany, in other words, wars against the germ, whilst England seeks to improve general conditions and thus strengthen the body to resist attack by measures such as the "Housing of the Working Classes Act."

As a matter of fact Germany has gone further by creating mutual societies to which workers and their employers both contribute, and these societies have heavy balances which are used in the construction and maintenance of sanatoria for working folk who are in a curable stage of the disease. Thanks to this system there is a chance for those who are thus threatened, whilst for the pronounced cases other measures are taken in order to limit the risk of infection. "La Prensa," however, lays stress on the fact that this is not directly a State work, but is based on mutuality, and when this country is in a position to affront the problem in a similar manner, the time will come for the serious study of a subject that calls for both scientific and economic knowledge of vast proportions.

DISTURBANCES IN BRAZIL

POLICE PRECAUTIONS AND ARRESTS.

The recent rumours of preparations for disturbances in Brazil appear to have had a substantial foundation. Rio Grande is as usual the storm centre. It is alleged that the chief conspirator is Sr. Felix Bocayuva, but the police have already laid hands on Ingeniero Souza y Silva who is accused of having manufactured and stored dynamite bombs. The accused maintains that the dynamite was intended only for blasting in the diamond mines of the State of Bahia. Among the prisoners arrested on suspicion is also the Brazilian aviator Magalhaes Costa. Sr. Felix Bocayuva was formerly Secretary to the Brazilian Legation in Buenos Aires and also in Paris. The candidature of Marshal Hermes da Fonseca for the Senate has materially augmented the prevailing unrest.

"La Nación" declares for bold measures. Drive the money out of the banks, it exclaims. Suppress the interest on deposits, and charge a rate for the retention of funds. Then the money will seek other employment. This drastic remedy is called for by the plethora situation of the country, and, concludes "La Nación," the present state of affairs cannot go on for ever and the banks must find means to drive these unwanted funds into other and more generally productive channels.

IN THE OFFICE CHAIR

Dinners and Politics.

Dinners have always been intimately connected with politics, and many eminent Statesmen have been wont to pull off big things at Political Dinners. In Italy, Pope Alexander VI. and his son Cesare Borgia got rid of quite a number of inconvenient people by inviting them to dinner, where they usually had a fatal attack of indigestion. The custom, however, was well understood and general, and spread to France, and also to England. In the barbarous northern lands things were managed in rougher fashion, and in Scotland "a blak denner" signified, in plain terms, the luring of an enemy, under safe conduct, a treacherous surprise at table, and his immediate destruction. One no longer disposes of political opponents in this manner, which appeals only to German ideals in these days, but if one may believe the cables, a most sensational banquet has taken place at Constantinople.

Yes, Indeed!

At the feast referred to a contemporary of high standing has asserted that Marshal French was present, and that the fact "gave the affair a character favourable to a change of politics in Turkey." Well, rather! The real fact, however, seems to be that it was Marshal Fuad Pasha, French being a misprint. None of the Hun commanders seem to have been bidden to the feast, however, and it is said that for some time Enver and Liman von Sanders have been on less than friendly terms. There may be times when the Fork is mightier than the Sword. It may be that the Sons of the Crescent are wearying of wurst and sauerkraut, or find that the excessive addiction of the Huns to the flesh of swine (Bismillah!) especially in a raw state, is an outrage they can no longer endure.

A Melée of all the Faiths.

Whatever may be the real attitude of the Vatican, of the burning patriotic zeal of the Italian as of the French and Belgian clergy, there can be no doubt. There is no clear religious issue in this war, for the Catholic Emperor of Austria is leagued with a (nominally) Lutheran Kaiser (who is a sort of chameleon) to destroy Catholic Belgium, at the same time professing the most ardent zeal for the cause of the Caliph. Protestant Britain, France of mixed opinions, Catholic Belgium and Italy, and Orthodox Russia and Serbia are leagued against the enemy whose real principle of cohesion is not religion, but desire for plunder, power and outrage. Hence comes it that we see Cardinal Mercier on one side, and the Hun Cardinal Hartmann on the other, while the Black Pope is a German. All the religious houses are divided against themselves, and speak with a various voice, for in this case Satan, through his principal agent on earth, William Hohenzollern, has secured official recognition in the Church of God. The present war may effect great religious changes indirectly, but it has in itself no distinctive inter-religious character.

The False Prophet and the Beast.

Pomposity and Prophecy have been two besetting mistakes of the Kaiser, and he is improving the occasion by committing both again. His penetration into Poland has rattled the Imperial brain once more, so that once again a time-table is being announced which, following the capture of Warsaw, is to include the invasion (and, of course) crushing of Italy, followed by the destruction of France and Britain. This is to happen "soon," and to be achieved by "my destroying sword." Let William remember that the Scythians are wont to fight in retreat; Russia is a country that has been peculiarly fatal to invaders, and the Imperial time-table has about as much chance of being realised this time as it had before.

BRITON.

Mainly About People

Mr. Morton Eden, of "La Matilda," Concarán, will leave for England on August 28.

News has been received of the death of A. G. E. Fisher, 2nd King Edward's Horse. Killed in action.

During the absence of Rev. Archdeacon Hodges, of St. John's Pro-Cathedral, in England, the Rev. F. H. Somerville will be in charge.

Mr. George H. Clark, of Estancia "Les Corrales," Felicia, (Prov. Santa Fé), and late of the Second Dragoon Guards, "Queens Bays," is leaving by the Remuera to rejoin.

Central and South American Telegraph Company have messages for Casamigano, Irigoyen 1220, from Barcelona, and from Lima to Gandolfo, Buenos Aires.

Mrs. McKerrow and family, Miss Campbell, Mrs. Warden, Mr. C. D. Rogg, Mr. John Ferguson have arrived at the Phoenix Hotel. Departures were Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Dashwood and family for the camp.

Commencing from August 1, General Out-Patients will be treated at the British Hospital on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, instead of Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays as heretofore. The hours will be the same as previously.

The University of Cambridge examinations at this centre will commence on December 13 next. Forms of entry may now be obtained from the Local Secretary, Mr. James A. Oldham, Calle San Martin 333, and they must be returned to him on or before August 31. Entrance fees—Preliminary $12 m/n, Junior and Senior $15, Higher Local $25. The Syllabus for 1916 is also now available.

It has been arranged that as the British Patriotic Committee is the unified source through which all remittances for special War Funds should be made, donations, results of bridges drives, concerts, lectures, raffles or any other form of obtaining money for the War Fund of the British Red Cross Society, can also be sent direct to the Honorary Treasurer of the B.P.C. advice being kindly given in each case to the Hon. Sec. of the British Red Cross Society, Mr. F. H. Chevallier Bontell.

Mr. Richard A. Norton, of Hurlingham, was the victim of a nasty accident on Monday morning, which has resulted in his becoming an inmate of the British Hospital for some days. Mr. Norton was crossing the street at the corner of Reconquista and Cangallo on Monday, when he was knocked down by an automobile. The owner of the car promptly stopped and helped Mr. Norton, who appeared to be badly shaken and hurt, and then drove him to the hospital, where it was found he had sustained a fracture of a bone in the right leg. Mr. Norton is under the care of Dr. O'Connor, and is progressing satisfactorily, though it will be some time before he is able to get about as usual.

A letter from the eloquent Bishop Homer Stuntz, D.D., of the American Methodist Church, has just arrived from New York—from which city he will sail for Argentina in October. He says: "I have just read with great interest the sermon of Dr. McLaughlin on the sinking of the Lusitania. I imagine that there was no large German demand for the document. Nevertheless I agree with everything he said." Incidentally there is a most terrific arraignment of this deed, just arrived from New York, by the Rev. Dr. Day, Chancellor of the Methodist University of Syracuse, New York. Dr. Day is one of the most eloquent and powerful orators on the American Continent. At the last General Assembly of the Church he was elected Bishop, but declined the honour preferring to remain at the head of his university.

DAY BY DAY IN CORDOBA

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

July 27.

Mr. Talbot Wright is absent from town on a trip to Rosario.

Miss Nellie Mayne is visiting Mr. and Mrs. V. R. Sadler, of San Vicente. Mrs. Mayne spent a few days here, but left for Buenos Aires last week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Dunbar are being congratulated on the birth of a son.

Mr. Harry Clarke, the representative of the Great Raymond company, has made arrangements with the Electric Tramway Company for the use of one of their tram cars, which has been equipped with large posters and with a band playing some of Sousa's marches inside the car. Several rounds of the city are made daily.

The Masons' Lodge of this city held a meeting at their rooms on Saturday last, several of the Buenos Aires members of the Lodge coming up for the ceremony.

Miss Dorothy Master Jack Lewis and Master Jack Davis are preparing to return to school in Buenos Aires the coming week.

The many friends of Mr. Jack Perkin will be pleased to learn that he is returning to Cordoba once more for the F. C. Central Argentino.

Mr. A. Guppy has returned to town from a visit to the Capital.

The Athletic Club expects to hold a mixed team match at the club's courts on the third Sunday of August, when a full day's play will take place, a cold luncheon being served at the Club Pavilion at mid-day.

The ladies of the Athletic Club were pleased with the improvements which had been made for their comfort at the club pavilion.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

August 1.

On Wednesday next at 8.15 p.m. divine service is to be held in the parlour of Ingeniero White, the circular seat around by the Chaplain, the Rev. J. Sanderson, states that this will be for the commemoration and intercession of those who have fallen, or are falling, in their country's defence.

Mr. Trounson, secretary to Mr. Davies, of the Pacific Railway, is shortly leaving here for England, where he will volunteer.

Mr. Sheriden Russel is down here again for a few days on business with the Pacific Railway.

Mr. Tindil, who has recently got married and is now stationed at Olavarria as the resident engineer of the Southern Railway there, is leaving for home on August 18 in order to volunteer.

Mr. Woolley, formerly of the Union Telephone Company here, after being in training at home for some time, has now left for the Dardanelles.

Visitors during the week have been Messrs. Stuart, Trannock, Colgan, Roscoe, Grey, and Captain Moore.

The birth of a son took place last Friday night to Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Osborne.

AUSTRALIANS' LOSSES

2610 KILLED ; 10,222 WOUNDED

Sydney, Aug. 3.

It is officially announced that the casualties suffered by the Australian forces up to the present have amounted to 2610 killed and 10,222 wounded.

IRISH-ARGENTINE DANCE AT JUNIN

The Irish-Argentine community of Junin gave an enjoyable dance in the Salón "Italia Unita," Belgrano 84, on Saturday, July 31; the occasion being the anniversary of the birth of St. Ignacio Loyola, the Patron Saint of the district.

There was a very good attendance of lovers of the Terpsichorean art, and their friends, upwards of 50 couples taking the floor, many people being present from such distant centres as Pergamino and Chacabuco.

The gentlemen of the organising committee worked hard to ensure the success of the entertainment, and are deserving of every thanks for their untiring efforts.

The splendid spacious Salón was carefully prepared for the occasion, being brilliantly lighted and artistically decorated, the floor being in splendid condition. The Argentine white and blue standard was gracefully draped on the walls, its folds being intermingled with the gree flag of Erin with the harp and shamrocks.

Sr. Celestino Accvedo's orchestra provided the music during the night.

Dancing commenced about 10 p.m., the programme consisting of some 30 items, all of which were gone through with the utmost enjoyment, while due to the courteous attentions of the M.C.'s the ladies were kept well supplied with partners.

The following composed the gentlemen of the Committee:—Hon. Presidents, J. L. Mackinson and J. Reil; Active President, Joseph Kelly; Vice-President, William Dolan; Vocals, J. P. Maguire, P. Caserly, J. Rogers, J. Meehan, B. Gallagher, J. O'Connor, P. Lynch, Leonard, L. Plante, R. Sheil and E. Killian; Treasurer, P. Fallon; Secretary, F. J. MacLoughlin.

NEW TRANSANDINE RAILWAY

NEARING COMPLETION.

So far back as the year 1903 the Chilean Government passed a law giving permission for the construction of a railway from Cabrero "going east along the valley of river Laja up to the frontier of the Argentine Republic."

The law granted the raising of the sum of £200,000 for the purpose of which £120,000 was to be allocated to construction, at the estimated figure of £1,000 per kilometre and the remaining £80,000 for other purposes.

The scheme once put forward was discussed in detail and the decision as to "the necessity and convenience of constructing a railway for the more easy and rapid communication with the Atlantic" led to the selection of a route by way of Antuco.

It was shewn that at no place was the level more than 1600 metres above the sea and that construction would not require engineering works of great magnitude. Further it was estimated to be the shortest route and one that would tap the best southern lands of Chili.

The present line from Uspallata reaches a height of 3,188 metres above sea level and is subject to many interruptions, which will not in expert opinion be the case with the Antuco line.

Already 76 kilometres of the 120 have been constructed and material is to hand for further building the line up to Kilometre 92. The most difficult part of this construction has been completed and in spite of the severe weather lately experienced is reported to be in perfect state.

It is suggested that this railway shall later be carried forward into the Argentine Republic as far as Chosmalal and if necessary to link up with one of the National railways.

On completion of this new railway, it is hoped that many of the richer Chilean regions will be opened up.

THE INCAS OF PERU

MR. McNAIRN'S LECTURE AT THE AMERICAN CHURCH.

"Thou shalt not steal, thou shalt not be idle." Into these words Mr. Stuart McNairn translated the three words which stood for the three main principals of the ancient religion of the Incas of Peru, on whom he gave a lecture of the highest interest at the American Church Hall, Corrientes, last evening. "The Incas of Peru." The very title of the lecture, a subject of mysticism of the many, was sufficient to fill the hall with a representative audience. Mr. McNairn has spent seven years in Cuzco, the ancient Inca city, and not only was he familiar with his subject, but his freedom of delivery without a note, his genuine enthusiasm in his subject held his audience from beginning to end. He spoke of the people from the day of their founder, Manco Capac until the "thirteen" under Pizarro crossed the border and brought ruin and massacre on the nation, which from an estimated population of 40,000,000, dwindled to some 800,000. The lecturer touched upon their wealth and how the Inca chief filled a room with gold to purchase his liberty from the Spaniards, who ultimately did him to death. Their marvellous system of postal runners, who travelled in relays fast enough to bring fresh fish from the Pacific shores to Cuzco some hundreds of miles inland. He told how the penalty for immorality was death, and how such a thing was unknown amongst the people. He spoke of the marvels of their temples, which were built so that even to-day a pinpoint could not be inserted in the joints of the stonework laid without the aid of mortar, and how the union of the stones, all shapes and surfaces, could not be seen a yard or two away.

The Incas worshipped the Sun, the Moon, and the Stars and the Rainbow, but only as symbols or expressions of a higher Being, and as an example Mr. McNairn read translations showing their beauty and purity of thought towards their Almighty Uiracocha.

In conclusion the lecturer spoke of the beginnings of a Christian work amongst them, and mentioned the wonderful aptitude of the children, who, in 3 or 4 months' teaching, were able to read and write. The lecture was immensely appreciated, as was the short musical programme.

Mrs. Pepper, "Who'll buy my lavender?"; Miss Knight, Marguerite's Song from Gounod's Faust; Madame Edgard, "Love's Coronation," and as an encore, "Idle Words," were the artistes, with Mr. Huppler at the piano. Mr. E. J. Hercus was in the chair.

BANFIELD'S AMBITION

A NEW STATION.

Banfield is said to be desirous of a new station, one larger and more comfortable than it has at present. That is the worst of works like New Retiro; they make people envious. On August 15, at 2 p.m., a meeting is to be held to voice this recently discovered aspiration, at which the Sociedad Fomento de Banfield (Este), Villas Barco, Albertina, Necreo, Benque, and Correa are to be represented.

Doctor J. I. Brown, Dr. C. Ponce, Commandante Padilla, and other gentlemen will address the meeting on the subject.

Much satisfaction has been caused in Germany by an instance, reported in the London press, of the spread of German culture in England. At one of our Police Courts, last week, a woman was charged with spitting at a police-constable. This method of signifying strong disapproval is, of course, practised by the best people in Germany.—"Punch."

LA PLATA CEREAL SHIPMENTS

NO DEMAND DURING PAST WEEK

There are matters of interest concerning the export of cereals from La Plata, during the course of the past week. The official figures published shew an increase over the year 1914, which however, may be somewhat misleading, on account of the fact that the past year was not a particularly good one. One other fact must be taking into consideration and that is, that during the past few week's European purchases, have been small and the cause of this is stated to be the new "allied purchasing committee." This body has not yet begun operations, but has been formed between Britain, France, Belgium and Italy, for the purchase of army necessities both in rations and other materials.

During the past week, as the following figures will shew, there were no shipments of wheat from La Plata to European countries.

Wheat shipments were as follows:—To European countries, nil; to Brazil 4802 tons. Maize exports, of a total of 117,797 tons, 19,103 were shipped to the United States, and the rest to Europe, or to supply orders. Only 505 tons of oats were exported, all for London. The total shipments for the current year in wheat, shew, 2,335,279 tons against 894,693 of the previous year. In maize 2,062,698 tons against 1,601,671 of 1914, and oats equal 492,122 tons as against 340,098.

The total of La Plata's shipment of cereals during the past week is only 23,000 tons.

LEGATION DESPATCHES

TURKISH TRENCHES TAKEN BY COLONIALS.

The following telegram has been received by His Britannic Majesty's Minister at Buenos Aires from the Foreign Office London:—

August 3rd. (1.0 p.m.)

Sir Ian Hamilton reports 2nd August that on right of position held by Australian and New Zealand Corps successful attack was carried out against network of Turkish trenches which were beginning to threaten safety of advanced post called Tasmania Post. Attack consisted of bombardment of neighbouring works and explosion of three mines under sections of trench. These sections were occupied at once; another section was rushed with bayonet. Turks did not counter-attack. At least 70 Turks were killed in and around work. Result has been gain of crest of ridge and has materially improved position in that section of line.

AMERICA'S IMMEDIATE PROBLEM

THE VIEWS OF THE GERMAN-AMERICAN.

Thinking people realise that President Wilson and his various aides have a difficult and delicate problem before them in view of Germany's attitude. But few Englishmen realise how much the problem is complicated by frankly pro-German utterances in the United States. The following leaderette, taken bodily from the "Evening Post," of New York, may therefore prove instructive, and may also help to calm the fervent zeal of those British patriots who would see America throw all discretion to the winds and gaily plunge into the world-war of war, to our detriment as much as to their own. It runs thus:—

For a truly patriotic view of the Fourth of July, commend us to the "Staats-Zeitung." If a nation is degenerate and contemptible, the best service that can be done to it is to tell it so, and that is what is done to the American nation in an article prominently printed in the issue of Sunday. "For the Fourth of July. A sermon for the times, by Dr. G. C. Berkemeier"—such is the heading. And its chief point is that the American people are held in subjection to their "hereditary enemy," their "arch-enemy," England, through the influence of a servile and venal press. "The greater part of our press is subsidized, inspired, edited, from London," exclaims this German-American patriot. It requires a little thought to appreciate fully the courage required to make this assertion. Most Americans will be inclined simply to smile at it as an absurdity; but it is something more than that. For it is an assertion the like of which could not conceivably be made concerning the press of any other great nation by its bitterest enemy or its most shameless calumniator. If "the greater part of the American press"—and the man might well have gone farther, while he was about it, for substantially the whole American press is anti-German—if practically the whole American press is "subsidized, inspired, edited, from London," this country is not merely in a condition of degradation, but in a condition of unparalleled degradation. The man Holt was doubtless crazy; but what is the word to apply to the condition of mind of this writer, or of the editor who sees fit to publish his rubbish as one of the conspicuous contributions to the celebration of the Fourth of July?

THE MANOEUVRES

POSSIBLE SUPPRESSION.

In spite of the short time intervening between the present and the date fixed for the military manoeuvres, it is said that these will be greatly curtailed if not entirely suspended. The reason is supposed to be the very cogent one of want of means. It is quite likely that merely battalion exercises will take place. Quite recently General Ramon Jones of First Military Region, stopped his intended manoeuvres at Tornquist as it was found that initial expenses alone would cost $50,000.

CONFIDENCE IN OKUMA

ELDER STATESMEN'S ADVICE TO THE MIKADO.

Tokio, Aug. 3.

The Elder Statesmen have advised the Emperor to ratify his unconditional confidence in Count Okuma as Prime Minister.

The Count has begun to hold interviews with his colleagues of the Cabinet with a view to inducing them to withdraw their resignations.

BECKER EXECUTED

ECHO OF A TWO YEAR OLD MURDER.

New York, July 30.

Ex-lieutenant Becker, of the New York police force, who was condemned to death for the murder some two years since of the gambling house keeper Rosenthal, was electrocuted to-day.

THREE CURRENTS AT TWO MINUTE INTERVALS.

New York, July 30.

Ex-Lieutenant Becker was placed in the electric chair at 5.45 this morning, and was officially pronounced dead at 5.55 a.m. Three currents were given, viz, at 5.45, 5.47 and 5.49. The first, which was of higher voltage than usual, was fatal, the others being given as precautionary measures.

To the last the condemned man displayed perfect self possession.

"In Hoc Vince," a story of a Red Cross flag, is a thrilling incident narrated by Mrs. Florence L. Barclay, the authoress of "The Rosary" and other well-known books. Originally written for "King Albert's Book," the sketch is now reprinted and published by G. P. Putnam's, Sons, London and New York.

SINKING OF THE "FELICE M"

An occurrence which should open the eyes of the authorities who control the Mercantile Marine of this republic, has just happened in the sinking of a vessel carrying a cargo of oats across the river from La Colonia.

It is hardly to be expected that a really seaworthy vessel perfectly manned, should run the danger of being sunk in the river owing to the violence of a storm, and it would be reasonable to presume that the navigators of the River Plate have sufficient knowledge and experience of a "pampero" to have learned what risks they run.

Two vessels the "Citta di Spezia" and the "Felice M." set sail from Colonia on July 24, each with a cargo of 250 tons of oats, each also with a crew of seven men. A storm came on and the latter vessel now lies a sunken wreck some six miles S.E. of La Plata, the port for which their cargo was consigned. Owing, however, to the shallowness of the river, the crew of the "Felice M." were able to escape, aided by the hands of the "Citta di Spezia," who came to their rescue.

The mercantile marine authorities are stated to be highly indignant with the owners of the vessels for allowing them to set sail, undermanned and in such weather that promised to be rough, on the other hand the question is asked what are the mercantile marine authorities of this country for, and what are their duties?

The crew of the "Felice M." are safe, the cargo, ruined, but it is stated, the vessel herself can be salvaged.

POLICING THE SEAS

JAPANESE NAVAL ACTIVITY IN THE PACIFIC.

New York, July 31.

The arrival is announced of a strong Japanese naval division at American ports on the Pacific. The squadron is co-operating with the British warships in policing those waters.

It is stated that some of the chief officers of the Japanese squadron, among whom will be one who greatly distinguished himself in the war with Russia, will come to Washington to pay a visit of courtesy to the President.

NORWEGIAN STEAMER'S ESCAPE

ATTACKED BY A GERMAN SUBMARINE.

London, Aug. 3.

A telegram from Stockholm reports that a German submarine tried to torpedo a Norwegian steamer, but the latter escaped by her superior speed. The submarine fired several shots without succeeding in hitting the mark.

ANOTHER GERMAN DASH FOR CALAIS

Efforts to Avoid Rigours of Winter Campaign

NAVAL COMBAT IN BRITISH WATERS

Zeppelins Again Steering for the East Coast

London, Aug. 11.

Fighting of extraordinary violence is proceeding round Ypres. Cannonading is incessant along the whole front, and it is believed that heavy losses have been inflicted on the enemy's positions. Arrivals of fresh troops have strengthened and consolidated the British positions.

YET ANOTHER DASH FOR CALAIS?

New York, Aug. 11.

A despatch from Rotterdam says that in Belgium at the present moment there is an important movement of troops in progress, which it is supposed is being conducted in order to hasten the result of the German operations. Experts believe that the Germans are availing themselves of the good weather in order to open up the way to Calais. The arrival of winter will have serious consequences for the German army, which occupies the floodable land in the neighbourhood of the Yser, and will expose them to hardships similar to those experienced last winter. For this reason, it is believed, that the German staff is commencing a concentration in order to dislodge the British from the positions they occupy.

BRUSSELS GARRISON ORDERED TO REINFORCE GERMAN FIRING LINE.

Amsterdam, Aug. 11.

Reports from Belgium are to the effect that a continuous heavy fire of great guns is going on in the lines of Ypres. Supreme efforts are being made by both British and Germans to maintain their positions which are incessantly bombarded. It is said that several trains full of German wounded have arrived at Bruges and that the Brussels garrison has been ordered to march to reinforce the fighting line.

GERMANS DRIVEN BACK IN LA PRETRE WOODS.

Paris, Aug. 11.

A despatch from French sources states that the French have beaten back all German counter-attacks in the woods of Ailly and Le Pretre. The French troops are strongly holding their positions and have inflicted very heavy losses on the enemy.

GERMANS ATTACKED NEAR SOUCHEZ.

Paris, August 11.

Official reports from Artois state that all last night heavy cannonading took place. Near Souchez, a German bombing attack was repulsed with heavy slaughter. From the Argonne a very severe bombardment of our positions from Vierine le Chateau. Binarville to East Road occurred. On the rest of the front, the night passed quietly.

FRENCH CONTINUE ON THE OFFENSIVE.

Paris, Aug. 11.

It is communicated that in the woods of Ailly and Le Pretre that the French after having repulsed the German attack, took the offensive and drove the Germans out of the positions they occupied. In their flight the Germans abandoned a number of guns and rifles. The French have consolidated their positions, and are continuing the offensive.

OUTPOST WARFARE

FRENCH PROGRESS IN THE KAMERUNS.

Paris, Aug. 9.

The Ministry of the Colonies announces that the encircling operations which are being carried out by the French forces in the south and east of the Kameruns are proceeding successfully.

On July 17 the columns from the south took Bitan which the enemy evacuated during the night, thus completing the conquest of that part of the Congo which France ceded to Germany in 1911.

On July 23 the columns operating in the east stormed the military post of Moopa forcing the enemy to retire to Mombi, which in turn was captured four days later. Reconnaissances were immediately despatched against Nganele and Nyassi.

The French troops are displaying great activity on the Gaboideri-Bimba front. The town of Gadji, after a violent combat, was evacuated by the Germans.

Another Zeppelin Raid

FLEET HEADING FOR NORTH EAST COAST.

London, August 11.

Another Zeppelin attack is believed to be projected against the English and Scottish coasts. To-day five Zeppelins were counted off Vlieland, near the entrance to the Zuyder Zee, proceeding N.E., and apparently bound for some point on the Yorkshire, Northumbrian or Lothian coasts. Owing to the extreme severity of the censorship, only official information is available regarding these raids.

Rammed and Sunk

LOSS OF THE METEOR FOLLOWED BY THAT OF HER DESTROYER.

London, August 11.

A British war vessel rammed and sunk in the North Sea by a German warship was to-night officially announced to be the destroyer Meteor. The German being chased by British warships was blown up by her commander.

Trading With the Enemy

FRENCHMAN SENTENCED TO PERPETUAL DEPORTATION.

Marseilles, August 11.

The permanent Court Martial has tried and convicted Henri Racine, a wealthy perfume distiller of Mentone, to perpetual deportation and to pay costs of trial for having supplied neroli essence as well as 500 tons of olive oil indirectly to a German perfume manufacturer of Cologne, through the agency of a Lausanne business house.

Germany in War Time

GROWING ECONOMIC CRISIS.

London, Aug. 11.

Advices from Berne give the report of a Swiss commercial traveller who succeeded in passing through Germany for four weeks, till he reached Freiburg where he was arrested on mere suspicion and all his samples confiscated. He made many observations of conditions in the Empire and said that what struck him with most painful force was the appalling number of wounded, blind, maimed, paralysed and incapacitated men in all the small towns and villages. It is an error, he says, to judge Germany by what is said in the Press. He calculated that at Frankfurt a family who, in July 1914, spent in food 25.12 marks weekly, must now expend 36.49. As to observance of Swiss neutrality as far back as May, he heard a German merchant say "Oh, we will make Switzerland German; it will become one of our Provinces, we will put it on a level with Luxemburg."

Food Riots in Germany

MARKETS REPORTED SACKED.

Amsterdam, August 11.

Violent food riots, incited and led by women are reported from Germany. The market at Schweinfurt was attacked and practically sacked, the stalls being swept of the provisions placed for sale. Throughout the country the scarcity and dearness of food supplies is causing discontent and unrest.

Evasive Sea Huns

ABSURD REPLY TO NORWEGIAN CHARGES.

New York, August 11.

The German Government, in reply to the angry accusation of the Norwegian Press that German submarines in attacking neutral vessels showed neither flag nor number, says that the Admiralty has ordered the erasure of numbers for imilitary reasons but that the flag has been displayed on all occasions.

BRITAIN'S INCREASING TRADE

UNAFFECTED BY THE "BLUFF" BLOCKADE.

London, Aug. 10.

To-day's "Morning Post" says that the increase in the commerce of the United Kingdom with America compensates for the falling off of trade elsewhere through the war. This increase commenced in January last, at the very time that Germany decreed the so-called "blockade" of the United Kingdom.

The situation of British trade was never more flourishing than at present, and all the threats of the enemy to destroy it have been sterile.

GIBRALTAR FOR SPAIN

GENEROUS OFFER BY GERMANY.

New York, Aug. 10.

A telegram from Madrid says that the Press calls attention to the activity of German agents in the peninsula. Recently leaflets have been circulated in public saying that Germany would compel England to return Gibraltar to Spain as soon as the war is over—provided the Central Empires prove victors.

BOYS FOR THE ARMY

GERMANY TO CALL UP THE 1917 CLASS.

Paris, Aug. 9.

A despatch from Amsterdam reports that before long the German War Office will call to the colours the 1917 class.

GERMAN ARMIES REPULSED IN BALTIC PROVINCES.

Russian Forces Now in Stronger Positions

WARSAW COSTS TEUTONS A MILLION MEN

Polish Capital to be Strongest Fortress in the World

Petrograd, Aug. 11.

In the Baltic provinces, the Russians have repelled several attacks and forced the enemy to retire. Russian reinforcements have enabled them to contain the German advance in this region at present, and the Germans have had the worst of the latest encounters, suffering enormous losses.

RUSSIAN ARMY'S SKILFUL RETREAT.

New York, Aug. 11.

A despatch from Petrograd states that the Russians have retired to the east of Warsaw, in accordance with the plans of the General Staff, and now occupy stronger positions. The retreat has been made in perfect order and without loss of war stores.

VIENNA CLAIMS FURTHER SUCCESSES FOR VON MACKENSEN.

New York, Aug. 11.

A despatch from Amsterdam says that, according to information received from Vienna, the Austro-German armies are following up the pursuit of the retreating Russians in the regions of the Wieprz and the Bug, and have gained important successes during the last few hours.

Von Mackensen has taken hundreds of prisoners.

RUSSIAN LINES OF COMMUNICATION IN DANGER.

New York, Aug. 11.

A radiogram from Berlin says that the Germans are developing their strategic movements with great rapidity. The advance on the railway junction to the south of Ostrow is considered to be of great importance as threatening the lines of communication of the Russian army and preventing their northward retreat. In the fortresses of Ossowetz and Grodno the Russians are resisting, but it is remarked that their efforts are growing weaker.

SERIOUS DAMAGE CAUSED BY 42-CM. HOWITZERS.

New York, Aug. 11.

Radiograms from Berlin assert that the Germans have succeeded in placing 42-cm. howitzers in front of Ossowetz and Grodno. The first discharges caused the most frightful destruction, the outer forts being reduced to ruins and heavy loss inflicted on the garrison.

WITH U. S. PASSPORTS

SUSPECTED SPIES ARRESTED IN LONDON.

New York, Aug. 10.

A telegram from London reports the arrest of several individuals in the City on a charge of espionage. Each of them has a passport which is stated to be American, but which are believed to be forgeries. The cases will be tried forthwith by court martial.

The Cost of Warsaw

ONE MILLION AUSTRO-GERMAN LOSSES.

London, August 11.

A despatch from Petrograd published in "The Times," estimates the total cost in effectives to the German forces in their three attempts to reach Warsaw since the beginning of the war, at not less than one million men.

It is added that the Russian retirement was made with the most orderly precision and, only after everything and anything which might have been of military value to the enemy had been either removed or destroyed.

NAVAL ACTION IMMINENT

GERMAN FLEET STEAMING FOR GULF OF RIGA.

New York, August 11.

A despatch from Stockholm states that various units of the German Navy are steaming in the direction of the Gulf of Riga and that a great naval action is imminent. The Russians, according to despatches from Petrograd have sent the major portion of their fleet to intercept the Germans and to prevent them from bombarding the coast towns in the Baltic Provinces, and furthermore to prevent the landing of troops to assist Von Bulow.

Ammunition Shortage

NOT SUFFICIENTLY GREAT TO MILITATE AGAINST RUSSIAN DEFENSIVE.

New York, August 11.

A despatch from Petrograd states that the provisioning of the Russian army behind the lines of the Vistula leaves nothing to be desired. The services have been organized in a most complete manner and the Russian troops are in need of nothing. It is clear that the supply of munitions is not so abundant as might be desired, but the Russians reckon that with the supply they possess that they will be able to maintain a satisfactory defensive until the arrival of large supply which is at present on the way.

Russian Army Changes

MANY OFFICERS TO BE PLACED ON RETIRED LIST.

Petrograd, Aug. 11.

It is believed that in a short while there will be important changes in the personnel of the army. Several officers at present in command will retire to the reserve, while in the actual army other officers will be incorporated.

Warsaw's New Role

STRONGEST FORTRESS IN THE WORLD.

New York, Aug. 11.

Despatches from Berlin via Amsterdam, assert that the Germans are pursuing their attacks in Poland with the greatest energy. Engineer corps are laying down railways to facilitate the provisioning of the advance. All the Russian fortifications which have fallen to the Germans are being put in a state of defence, and new forts, designed by the General Staff, are being constructed at strategic points. German experts consider the Warsaw fortifications defective, and the German engineers are planning a series of forts to make the Polish capital one of the greatest fortresses in the world. No other entrenched camp will compare with it, when the works are completed.

Murdered by Zeppelin

WOUNDED KILLED ON WRECKED HOSPITAL TRAIN.

London, Aug. 11.

Reuter's correspondent at Petrograd wires that on Saturday in the Province of Minsk, a Zeppelin deliberately bombed an hospital train, killing three wounded men and injuring again many others. Two wagons were wrecked. Two hours previously another Zeppelin at Siedlce attacked another hospital train killing several patients.

Poland's Future

ANOTHER GERMAN NOMINEE FOR THE THRONE.

Turin, August 11.

Another report current as to the German nominee for the future vassal Kingdom of Poland is that the Archduke Carl Stefan will be placed on the throne.

"INDEPENDENT" POLAND

KAISER'S PRETTY PLOT.

Amsterdam, August 9.

It is reported that the Kaiser, on organizing Poland into an independent State, intends to make his youngest son, Joachim, King, and will institute a Government on the same lines as that of Prussia.

AMMUNITION SWINDLE

IRON REFUSE FOR BULLETS IN RUSSIA.

London, Aug. 9.

The "Daily Mail" publishes a communication from Petrograd wherein it is stated that by secret devices of German agents in Russia, thousands of caissons on arriving at the front proved, when opened, to contain, instead of ammunition, nothing but iron refuse from the foundries.

The communication says that despite to severe reverses sustained by the Russian forces the people are full of confidence, as the financial downfall of Germany seems to be near at hand.

EX-PRESIDENT OF THE DUMA TO ACT AS COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN.

Petrograd, Aug. 3.

The general committee appointed to supervise and organize militant industries has elected M. Guchoff Lipezad, formerly President of the Duma, as Chairman.

The committee meetings are being attended by representatives of all parts of the Russian Empire.

Lomza Not a Fortress

AMERICAN DENIAL OF GERMAN STATEMENT.

New York, Aug. 11.

The Director of the "Chicago Tribune," says that in reference to German rejoicing over the capture of Lomza the statement from Berlin that the place is a fortress is a most extraordinary one. He says "I spent two weeks at Lomza and can affirm that there is no fort there whatever. There is an old Fête du pont which was kept in repair to prevent the bridge head being rushed by sudden attack but since the war began, it has been abandoned. Four miles from the city there is an ancient Polish fortress which has been occupied and somewhat renovated. The report appears to be an attempt to mislead public opinion about Lomza. The city is a commercial place and on important highways. There are at least 100,000 people here who know the situation to be as I have stated it."

RUSSIA'S NEW RECRUITS

600,000 MEN EN ROUTE FOR THE FRONT.

Paris, Aug. 7.

A despatch from Petrograd says that 600,000 new recruits are en route for the front. The Russian army has retained all its cohesion, strength and energy.

FOR THE FREEDOM OF THE SEAS

GERMANY'S PURPOSE IN WAGING WAR

New York, August 10.

On the occasion of the capture of Warsaw the United Press Agency here asked the Kaiser by wireless for an expression of opinion as to the historic significance of the victory, and a statement as to the basis which Germany considers necessary to secure the peace of Europe and the advance of civilisation. The following message was received in reply signed by the Imperial Chancellor, von Bethmann-Hollweg:—

"His Majesty regrets not being able, for reasons of principle, to comply with the request of the United Press for a personal expression of opinion regarding the triumph of the allied German and Austro-Hungarian armies in Poland.

"In having the honour to inform you thereof, I beg to add my own explanation of what Germany connects with these victories.

"Above all, she hopes that the end of the war may be hastened by the successful termination of the campaign in Poland. I beg to remind you at the same time that the Emperor, in all his public utterances of recent date up to July 31, has laid emphasis on the statement that Germany is fighting for a peace which will obtain, for her and the Powers on her side in this great struggle, such absolute securities as they require for a lasting peace, and for the assurance of a national future beyond the frontiers of Germany. The peace which we strive to obtain will secure to all peoples the freedom of the seas. It will open to all nations the possibility of aiding in the work of progress of civilisation in free competition."

STEEL HELMETS FOR FRENCH TROOPS

300,000 DESPATCHED TO THE FRONT.

Paris, Aug. 10.

The War Office has sent to the front 300,000 steel helmets for the use of the troops as constituting an efficient protection against fragments of shells or shrapnel bullets. More will be sent at the rate of 2500 per diem.

ENVER PASHA IN BOASTFUL MOOD

No Possibility of Fall of Dardanelles!

GERMANY STRIVES FOR BALKAN NEUTRALITY

Probability of Conference of Kings

New York, Aug. 11.

From Constantinople via Berlin and Sayville wireless station an interview with Enver Pasha is reported by the Associated Press. The Turkish War Minister says he is quite confident that they can keep the Allies out even if they receive large reinforcements.

"We knew," he said, "that they would have reinforcements in action two days ago, and we prepared for it. We were not caught napping. I believe they landed three divisions, about 50,000 men. No doubt a considerable number no longer count, as their losses were very heavy. I have just had a conference with our Chief of Staff and received final reports of the Gallipoli operations."

Enver seemed in the best of spirits and said that a Turkish aeroplane had destroyed an Allied submarine near Bulair. He said the Allies had experienced severe resistance. In their attempt on a position near Seddul Bahr two regiments attacking the Turkish centre were annihilated except sixty men who were taken prisoners. Attacks on the right were also futile. Outside the trenches there are 2000 English dead. The British for a short time held one trench, but were expelled.

He reviewed the situation and described the terrain of the fighting:—"We are convinced we can meet every situation the Allies can create. Of course, we regret the loss of the Farbarossa, but two-thirds of her crew were saved and we are able to get along without her."

Turkish Army's New Commander

GRAND DUKE OF MECKLENBURG APPOINTED

London, August 11.

A telegram to "The Star" states that the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Turkish Forces operating at the Dardanelles. He replaces General Liman von Sanders, who was recently reported wounded.

Attitude of the Balkans

London, Aug. 11.

The diplomatic position in the Balkans becomes more obscure daily. It is known that Germany is making the most desperate efforts to prevent Bulgaria joining the Allies against the Central Empires, and Teutonic diplomacy spares no promises and will even make sacrifices to assure neutrality.

RUMOURED CONFERENCE OF KINGS.

Athens, Aug. 11.

Once again it is stated that the sovereigns of the Balkan States will meet to consider the international situation.

BALKAN STATES WILL REMAIN NEUTRAL!

New York, Aug. 11.

Advices from Bucharest state that the Press holds that undoubtedly the Balkan States will remain neutral. Bulgaria will not enter the war on the side of the Turks, but neither will she assist the Allies. The Rumanian Government has made clear its intentions, and every day it is increasingly evident that it intends at all costs to remain neutral.

Serbian Army in Action

RENEWED OFFENSIVE AGAINST THE AUSTRIANS

London, August 11.

Advices from Nisch state that the reorganisation of the Serbian forces is now complete, and that they have resumed operations against the Austrians on the Danube. In this region the latter have weakened their lines to send troops to other sectors. Successful bombardments and infantry assaults have taken place. It is believed that, more or less the Serbian army now consists of about 150,000 men hardened by campaigning. To these must be added a number of volunteers from Greece and from Montenegro. Their action is fully expected by military experts to cause serious derangements to the Austrian plans, obliging them to maintain a strong force on the constantly threatened frontier.

600 FLOATING MINES

DISCOVERED IN THE ADRIATIC.

Rome, August 10.

An officer in the Italian Navy serving in the Adriatic asserts that nearly 600 floating mines have been picked up in those waters since the opening of hostilities.

He estimates that fifty Austrian submarines are hidden away in the rocks and corners of the archipelago off the coast of Dalmatia.

CONTRABAND AND ESPIONAGE

PRECAUTIONARY MEASURES BY SWISS AND ITALIAN GOVERNMENTS.

Rome, August 10.

The Governments of Italy and Switzerland have adopted strict measures on the frontier for the prevention of contraband traffic. The police are to endeavour to put an end to the espionage which has been going on under the guise of journalistic service between the two countries.

ITALIAN RAIDERS CAPTURED

DIRIGIBLE FALLS INTO THE SEA.

Rome August 6.

It is announced that an Italian dirigible returning from the bombardment of Pola fell into the Adriatic, and that the Austrians captured six of the crew.

FIFTEEN HOURS BATTLE

In Vicinity of Gorizia

REPORTED VICTORY OF ITALIANS

London, Aug. 10.

The effect of the Russian retreat in Poland and Galicia is beginning to make itself felt on the Austro-Italian front. An Austrian army corps of 30,000 men with sufficient artillery for two army corps on campaign attacked the Italian forces besieging Gorizia.

The latter offered a resolute resistance, and a battle which raged for fifteen hours resulted in the Austrians being compelled to retire precipitately.

The enemy left 2,000 dead on the field of battle, while the Italians captured about 800 prisoners and much booty. The victory was to a large extent owing to the superiority of the Italian forces in counter-attack as well as to the power of their guns, the precision of the gunners and the excellent positions held by them.

GORIZIA'S HOPELESS FLIGHT.

Rome, August 10.

Despatches from the front describing what is evidently the final stage of the siege of Gorizia say that the Austrian defence is growing more feeble, the efficient fire of the Italian artillerymen preventing ammunition and supplies from being taken into the fortress.

The buildings in all parts of the city have been battered into heaps of ruins and the streets are full of debris. What is left of the population is living in cellars. All the remaining forts and redoubts have been smashed by the steady fire of the Italian mortars.

The civic and religious authorities having fled, lawlessness is rampant. The mobs have attacked the residences of the wealthy, the municipal stores, houses and markets in the fight for bread, but none was to be had and meat is unobtainable. The roads leading to the city from the east being also under the fire of the Italian guns, supplies cannot be obtained.

SUBMARINES IN CONFLICT

RUMOURED LOSS OF ITALIAN VESSEL.

New York, August 7.

A telegram from Paris to the "Evening Sun" says that there is a rumour in circulation that the Italian submarine Neride has been sunk by another belonging to Austria. A combat is stated to have taken place between the two boats in the waters of Pelagosa island, which the Italians occupied recently in order to be able to keep a watch on the movements of the Austrian warships in the channels along the southern coast of Dalmatia.

No German Loan for Greece

GOVERNMENT DENIAL ISSUED.

Athens, Aug. 10.

The Greek Government has authorised the publication of a denial of a report that Greece had negotiated a loan of £8,000,000 from Germany.

Shot for Advocating Peace

London, August 11.

The Central News reports from Amsterdam that several persons have been shot in Germany for advocating peace or making a propaganda in favour of it.

Italy's Losses

GROSS EXAGGERATION ALLEGED

Rome, August 11.

It is officially denied that Italian losses are anything like 200,000. In addition to the continual Italian advance and successes near Gorizia, the Peninsular armies are quickly sealing the Alpini passes by which Austrian flank attacks might be possible. After occupying the Austrian entrenched positions near Lazora, the Italian troops pushed on strongly towards Parljevo on the wooden slopes of Monte Knk which had already been partly occupied by the Alpini rifles. The Camelleo region mentioned in despatches is of great military importance. The highest summits of the region are situated there. So precipitous are the slopes that it could be easily fortified so as to be as impregnable as Gibraltar. The Alpini infantry have already advanced north of this point into the Burgstall region and these points which give the Italians command over a large valley area, secure them from Austrian invasions.

BRITISH ADVANCE NEAR KRITHIA

MORE TURKISH TRENCHES TAKEN.

London, Aug. 10.

It is reported from Tenedos that the British forces on Gallipoli have advanced another two hundred yards, capturing trenches along a front of 300 yards. Fierce fighting is stated to be raging to the east of Krithia.

COUNTER ATTACKS REPULSED.

London, Aug. 10.

It is officially announced that General Sir Ian Hamilton reports that fighting at several points on Gallipoli peninsula has taken place during the last few days and substantial progress made.

In the southern zone 200 yards were gained. East of Krithia the road was held in spite of determined counter-attacks which were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. Repeated attacks delivered by the Turks elsewhere in this zone have been beaten off.

In several attacks the French corps joined forces with the British, and their wholehearted co-operation proved of the greatest assistance.

In the Ansac zone a footing was gained on Chunuk Bair and on a portion of Sari Bair, the crest of the latter being occupied after fierce fighting and the successful storming of strongly held positions. Here, too, the enemy's losses were considerable.

ADVANCE UNDER COVER OF A SEARCHLIGHT.

The advance commenced at night under cover of a searchlight from a destroyer, while elsewhere a fresh landing of troops was successfully effected.

Considerable progress has been made, and 630 prisoners, one Nordenfeldt, two bomb mortars, nine machine guns and a large number of bombs were taken. Scattered about were quantities of the enemy's rifles, ammunition and equipment.

RAID ON TRIESTE

ACTIVITY BY ITALIAN AIRMEN.

Rome, August 11.

A telegram from Udine says that two Italian aeroplanes have made a flight over Trieste, and after observing the enemy's position dropped eight bombs on the railway line between Opsina and Sesena. The results were satisfactory. The aeroplanes returned safely to the Italian lines.

HANDS OFF MEXICO!

Carranza's Plain Warning to America

"LET THE REVOLUTION TAKE ITS COURSE"

Sensation Created in New York

New York, Aug. 11.

General Carranza's Washington Agent has written to Mr. Secretary Lansing expressing surprise at the Pan-American Conference for the Pacification of Mexico which he considers has caused just alarm to the "Constitutional Government." Carranza has ordered him to inform the State Department in that sense. Carranza adds that if the U. S. Government could properly understand the true situation, they would perceive the only proper solution to be, to let the revolution follow its natural course until the complete victory of the party representing Constitutional Government. He abstains from commenting on the Conferences being held, as he is ignorant of their character, but informs the United States of the displeasure with which the Mexican Government and people would view any act tending to frustrate the success practically accomplished, against the reactionary factions, by the Constitutional arms. Identical notes have been given out addressed by Carranza's Agent, to Argentina and Chile protesting against their participation.

SENSATION IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 11.

Considerable sensation was caused in New York by Carranza's Note warning the United States and the A. B. C. to keep their hands off Mexico. Several diplomats who were lunching at the Ritz Carlton received the news, just before leaving for the opening conference, and held a secret informal meeting to consider the situation, and their future attitude. Mr. Lansing, Secretary of State, declines to discuss the effect of American warships sailing for Mexican waters, and said that the matter could not be referred to till after the session.

ARGENTINA AND MEXICO

CARRANZA PROTESTS AGAINST INTERVENTION.

Conferences are taking place at present in Washington to deal with the Mexican question, but do not, apparently, meet with the approval of the self-appointed ruler of that unruly Republic. So keen is General Carranza's indignation that he has seen fit to address a telegram to President De la Plaza on the subject, in which he expresses surprise that Argentina, of all countries, should be a party to interfere in the private concerns of another country. Dr. Murature, answering on behalf of the Argentine Government, points out that no armed intervention is proposed or would be consented to by this country, but makes it clear that something must be done to bring to an end the anarchy at present reigning in Mexico. The opinions given by the native Press are varied, but the majority hint that the A.B.C. is in this case only acting in the capacity of cat-paw for the States, and advise non-interference in what is, after all, only a family quarrel.

Mental Atrophy?

KULTUR PROFESSORS CALL FOR WHOLESALE CESSION OF TERRITORY AS ONLY PEACE TERMS.

Berne, August 11.

A group of German professors have published a manifesto setting forth the only acceptable terms which in their opinion could be made a basis of peace. These must ensure a free expansion of German culture, industry and commerce; Belgium most for military and commercial purposes; France must cede to Germany all territory north of a line from Belfort to the mouth of the Somme, including much which they do not occupy, and pay a heavy indemnity; Russia must yield Poland and the greater part of the Baltic provinces in lieu of the indemnity which she cannot pay. The manifesto bears the signatures of Professors Menicke, Selberg, and Schaifer of Berlin University, Oncken of Heidelberg, Schumacher, Richenan, Director Kindolin, Gelsenkichen, the Imperial Minister of Mines, and Von Schwerin, Mayor of Frankfurt on Oder.

POPE'S EFFORTS FOR PEACE

AID SOUGHT FROM NEUTRAL STATES.

New York, Aug. 11.

A despatch from Rome states that the Pope Benedict XV is making fresh efforts towards peace. It is already known that the Pope has held several conferences with persons holding the highest positions in certain neutral nations.

A SUGGESTED CONFERENCE

New York, Aug. 11.

Communications from Amsterdam states that in that city the efforts which are being made by some of the neutral nations in favour of peace are still being continued. The idea is to convoke a conference of neutral nations to open up the way, and it is considered that the realisation of this project is not far off.

SUNK BY A BOMB

TURKS ALLEGE LOSS OF ALLIES' SUBMARINE.

New York, Aug. 10.

An official despatch from Constantinople reports that a Turkish aeroplane to-day dropped a bomb upon and sank a submarine belonging to the Allied naval forces in the Dardanelles. The crew of the boat went down with her.

HUN MISSIONARIES IN INDIA

MUST BE REMOVED OR INTERNED

London, Aug. 6.

The "Morning Post" says that the British Government has decided that the German missionaries in India must be interned or removed from the country on account of their persistent efforts to cause dissatisfaction with the British Raj.

MARITZ SEIZED

Capture of South African Rebel

ACTION BY PORTUGUESE AUTHORITIES

London, Aug. 11.

Advices from Pretoria have been received stating that the traitor and rebel ex-Colonel Maritz, who deserted from the Union forces to the Germans has been arrested in Angola.

THE NEWS CONFIRMED.

London, August 11.

The report is confirmed from Pretoria that the Portuguese authorities of Angola have seized ex-Colonel Maritz, one of the chief instigators of the South African Rebellion.

FIGHTING IN SERBIA

AUSTRIAN BATTERIES SILENCED.

Nish, Aug. 6.

The Serbian General Staff has issued the following official report:

"Our artillery on Tuesday dispersed hostile troops entrenched near the Ochain railway. A short artillery duel occurred in the evening near Tekia, and the enemy's batteries were silenced.

"On Tuesday and Wednesday the enemy opened fire at several points on the Save with the object of entrenching; but our fire prevented this."

Commerce and Agriculture.—Hironaka Kono.

Education.—Sutakata.

Interior.—Kitokuro Ichiki.

RUSSO-JAPANESE ALLIANCE

QUESTION DEFERRED UNTIL AFTER THE WAR.

Tokio, August 7.

It is understood that the proposal that Japan shall celebrate a treaty of alliance with Russia will be allowed to lapse for the present, with the possibility that the question may be taken up again after the conclusion of the war.

The Press says that the Foreign Ministers of both countries agree that at present it would be inopportune to press the matter.

72 HOURS IN OPEN BOATS

TRYING EXPERIENCE OF PIRATES' VICTIMS

London, Aug. 6.

A telegram from Queenstown reports that the steamer Midland Queen, 1993 tons, belonging to the Midland Navigation Company, which was on her way from Sydney to Glasgow, was sunk by a German submarine last Tuesday. The crew of 22 hands, with the chief officer's wife and child, were rescued after having been 72 hours in open boats.

British Medical Muddle

ALLEGED TO HAVE OCCURRED AT THE FRONT.

London, Aug. 10.

Sir Watson Cheyne, whose discovery of the value of cresol or carbolic paste in delaying infection of wounds was recently hailed as England's most important contribution to the war, says that the doctors at the front in France have made a fearful bungle in experiments with his paste.

The Surgeon-General of the Royal Navy said:—"I believe I have expressed my opinion on various occasions as to the utility of the paste, but they have evidently not been grasped by the authorities in France, hence the extraordinary muddle they have made of the whole matter."

SUNK BY THE SEA HUNS

LOSS OF THE STEAMER COSTELLO.

London, August 5.

The British steamer Costello has been sunk by a German submarine, one man losing his life.

LOSS OF BRITISH FISHING SMACKS.

London, August 7.

The fishing smacks Hesperus, Ivan, Fisherman, Heliotrope and Challenger have been torpedoed and sunk. The crews landed to-day.

The Danish steamer Hansemil has been burned by the Germans, the crew having been rescued.

SWEDISH STEAMER'S CREW MISSING.

Copenhagen, Aug. 9.

A German submarine has sunk the Swedish steamer Mai. One boat carrying a woman and seven men has landed here, but another with the captain and nine men is missing.

A German submarine has sunk the cutter Lowestoft. The crew were picked up by the Dutch vessel Dirksland.

RUMOURED LOSS OF BRITISH AUXILIARY CRUISER.

London, Aug. 10.

The following results of the German submarine campaign have been reported to-day:—

Trawler Harford sunk, crew saved. Trawler Boyenardo sunk, two men drowned, eight saved.

Christiania reports the sinking of the sailing ship Normand, crew picked up and landed to-day.

Amsterdam says that the trawler Westminster was sunk in the North Sea, crew saved.

Berlin claims that the British auxiliary cruiser India has been sunk off the Swedish coast, eighty of the crew escaping.

ATTACK ON A DANISH STEAMER

London, August 11.

A Havas telegram states that the Danish steamer Fasen has been overhauled and burned by a German submarine.

RUSSIAN BARQUE'S CREW SAVED.

London, August 11.

The British steamer Rosalie was attacked to-day by a German submarine and beached to prevent sinking. The crew of the Russian barque Baltzer, which was sunk, have landed in safety.

BRITISH TRAWLERS SUNK.

London, Aug. 11.

Yesterday German submarines sank the trawlers George C. Riddle and Young Admiral, and the steam trawler Utopia. The American petroleum tank steamer Petrolite has been carried into a British port.

FOURTEEN MILLION CASUALTIES

ONE YEAR OF WAR IN EUROPE

Paris, Aug. 5.

The War Office has published the casualties suffered by the various belligerent nations up to the end of June last. The figures are as follows:—

	Killed	Wounded	Prisoners
France .	460,000	660,000	180,000
Britain .	181,000	200,000	90,000
Belgium .	49,000	49,000	15,000
Russia .	1,250,000	1,680,000	850,000
Germany	1,630,000	1,880,000	490,000
Austria .	1,610,000	1,865,000	910,000
Turkey .	110,000	144,000	95,000

Total. 5,290,000 6,478,000 2,630,000

Total casualties, 14,398,000.

LOST BRITISH OFFICERS

13,600 CASUALTIES REPORTED.

London, August 10.

The list of casualties to British officers at the front which have occurred between July 19 and 30 gives 115 as killed, 236 wounded and 14 missing. This brings the aggregate since the beginning of the war up to 4,176 killed, 8,305 wounded and 1,175 missing.

During the ten days covered by the above list the regiments serving in the Dardanelles were again by far the greatest sufferers, the casualties among the officers there being as follows:—

Australians: 9 killed, 25 wounded; King's Own Scottish Borderers: 9 killed, 4 wounded, 10 missing; Highland Light Infantry, 19 killed, 14 wounded; Cameronians, 2 killed, 6 wounded; Royal Scots, 9 killed, 7 wounded; Indian Contingent, 16 killed, 19 wounded.

AN IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT

COLONIES TO ASSIST IN GOVERNING THE EMPIRE.

London, August 6.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Bonar Law, declares that one of the results of the war will be that very soon the time will come when the whole of the self-governing Dominions of the British Empire, in proportion to their population and resources, would take part in the duties of governing the Empire.

It was already understood that when the time came for opening negotiations for peace the Dominions would have their say in the matter.

TROOPS FROM TURK'S ISLAND

SPECIAL CONTINGENT FOR ENGLAND.

London, August 6.

A cable message from Kingston, Jamaica, reports that the inhabitants of the Turk's Islands, West Indies, have decided to imitate Jamaica by sending a contingent of troops to England. Subscription lists have been opened in order to raise the funds for their training and passage.

CANADIANS IN EUROPE

80,000 ARRIVALS TO BE FOLLOWED BY ANOTHER 65,000.

New York, Aug. 10.

It is stated in a telegram from Ottawa that at the present moment there are 80,000 Canadian soldiers in the encampments of the Allies in Europe, and the Canadian Government is shortly about to despatch another 65,000 fully equipped troops. Volunteers continue coming in to offer their services at the rate of hundreds daily.

MUNITIONS PROBLEM SOLVED

London, August 6.

Mr. Lloyd George announces that the United Kingdom now has sufficient ammunition and other elements of war to be able to carry on the longest campaign with the memory of man, and that no effort will be spared to obtain a successful outcome thereof.

All the despatches from the Oversea Dominions show that the reports of the reverses sustained by the Russians have produced a tremendous outburst of warlike enthusiasm, and the necessity is clearly seen for proceeding with the utmost rapidity to the organisation of the most powerful army history has known.

MUNITIONS FROM IRELAND

MANUFACTURE ON A LARGE SCALE.

London, August 6.

The Minister of Munitions has decided to undertake the manufacture of munitions in Ireland on a large scale.

A representative of the Ministry will reside in Dublin and will be responsible for the organisation of Ireland as a munition-production area.

MUNITIONS FOR RUSSIA

SUPPLIES FROM GREAT BRITAIN.

New York, August 9.

A despatch from London says that the British Minister of Munitions is considering the possibility of sending supplies of war material from England to Russia. No supplies are available from Japan, and those from the United States will not be delivered for some months yet.

MUNITIONS FROM FINLAND

MANUFACTURE TO BE ORGANISED BY RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT.

Petrograd, August 7.

It is announced that the Russian Government intends to transform all the industrial establishments in Finland suitable for the purpose into munitions factories.

MUNITIONS FOR THE ALLIES

ENORMOUS ORDERS PLACED IN THE STATES.

New York, August 5.

Of late the munitions factories in the United States have been receiving requisitions for enormous quantities of supplies, many of the firms having been obliged to decline the orders owing to their plant not being capable of fulfilling them.

Besides this there is a reluctance to spend money in extensions when there is a possibility that the President may at any moment suspend the exportation of munitions of war, as would be done if war were to break out between Germany and the United States. In such a case the States would require all the warlike resources of the country for their own use.

Although the possibility of such an event is remote it is not considered an absolute impossibility.

BELGIUM'S BOY PRINCE

TO BE EDUCATED AT ETON.

London, Aug. 9.

It is reported that the younger son of King Albert, Prince Charles, a boy of under 13 years of age, will go to Eton College. He will live in the same boarding house as Prince Henry.

THE TRAITOR CASEMENT

NARROWLY ESCAPES ASSAULT AT HANDS OF IRISH PRISONERS.

London, August 6.

The "Morning Post" publishes a telegram from Berne which reports an incident which is related by an American who has recently arrived there from Germany.

The story is that the Irish traitor, Sir Roger Casement, visited a prisoners' concentration camp where the Irish prisoners have been placed, his intention being to endeavour to persuade them to throw over England and take part with Germany.

When the Irish soldiers grasped his meaning they surrounded him and the guard had to interfere in order to rescue Sir Roger Casement from a very severe handling.

SMALLER NEWSPAPERS

WHITE PAPER SHORTAGE IN LONDON.

London, August 6.

It is announced that there is a diminution in the stocks of white paper owing to the scarcity of the necessary chemicals.

In consequence of this the proprietors of the daily papers have come to an agreement to reduce the number of pages in their papers. The "Morning Post" is therefore appearing now as a ten-sheet paper, while the "Times," "Telegraph," "Standard" and other leading papers are restricted to twelve sheets each.

INDIA FOR THE EMPIRE

PATRIOTIC WAR ANNIVERSARY DEMONSTRATIONS.

London, August 6.

A telegram from Simla reports that the anniversary of the declaration of war was celebrated in India by religious services in all the churches, mosques and other places of worship throughout the country, prayers being offered up for the triumph of the British arms.

Numerous patriotic assemblies and meetings were held at which British and Indians were intermingled.

The subscriptions to the war loan which are being collected at Bombay and Calcutta have amounted to about £80,000.

DEPRESSION IN JOURNALISM

200 NEWSPAPERS CEASE PUBLICATION IN GERMANY.

New York, August 5.

According to a telegram from Berlin, the Socialist paper, "Vorwaerts," announces that over two hundred German newspapers ceased publication on the 1st instant.

1200 PUBLICATIONS IN THE EMPIRE.

Amsterdam, Aug. 5.

The German Socialist paper "Vorwaerts" says that with over 200 daily papers and reviews closing down on the first of this month, the total number of publications now being printed in the whole of the German Empire has been reduced to less than 1200 since the commencement of the war.

BRITAIN'S TRADE

LITTLE AFFECTED BY WAR.

London, August 9.

Official statistics issued by the Board of Trade show that British importations for July last amounted to £75,548,147 in value, and exportations to £34,721,511.

BRITISH AIRMEN VISIT BRUSSELS

DIRIGIBLE DAMAGED; TWO MAGAZINES BLOWN UP.

London, August 7.

A number of British airmen paid a visit to-day to the German encampment near Brussels and dropped a large number of bombs there.

A dirigible is believed to have been seriously damaged and two ammunition magazines blew up. The airmen returned to their base without mishap.

VON BISSING, TOO HUMANE

STERNER METHODS TO BE ADOPTED IN BELGIUM.

New York, August 5.

A despatch from Amsterdam reports that Von Bissing, the German Governor of Belgium, is to retire.

The rumour is that the Government of Berlin is dissatisfied with the manner in which Von Bissing has exercised his power in Belgium, showing too much complacency with the inhabitants and thereby seriously endangering the German army in Flanders.

The name of Von Bissing's successor has not been mentioned.

BY ORDER OF THE KAISER.

Amsterdam, Aug. 5.

The Belgian paper, the "Echo," says that the recall of Von Bissing from Belgium was decided upon by the Kaiser. The Governor of Brussels pardoned Cardinal Mercier's secretary, Canon Francken, who had been sentenced to a month's imprisonment for disobedience to orders when the German soldiers dispersed the Belgian demonstrators at the gates of Malines on the occasion of the Cardinal's visit to Havre.

The paper also estimates that over 2000 German soldiers deserted and passed into Holland in June last. At one place a whole company crossed the frontier and surrendered to the Dutch soldiers.

ANNEX BELGIUM!

GERMAN LIBERAL LEADERS DEMAND.

New York, August 5.

A despatch from Cologne says that Herr Basseimann, leader of the National Liberal Party in the Reichstag, was the first member of the German Parliament to demand the annexation of Belgium, Luxembourg and the north of France.

In a speech which he pronounced in Cologne he said: "We shall carry on the war by land and sea until we have completely destroyed the arrogant hegemony of England. We want a more powerful Germany. The necessity of the moment is a German world-policy."

TROUBLE IN BELGIUM

REPORTED MUTINY OF GERMAN TROOPS.

Paris, August 7.

It is reported that the anti-German demonstrations at Liege, Ghent and Bruges are increasing.

It is also stated that the troops quartered in those cities received orders to go to the Yser front and refused to do so, the ringleaders of the mutiny being shot.

BELGIAN MISSIONARY IMPRISONED

FOUR YEARS FOR A PATRIOTIC SERMON.

Paris, August 5.

Information has been received from Havre that the Belgian missionary and explorer, Father Gambier, has been condemned by the Germans in Brussels to imprisonment for four years for having preached a sermon on "Belgium, martyr of the social war."

AUSTRO GERMAN SEA-BORNE TRADE DESTROYED

Paris, Aug. 7.

The French Press reviews the naval position after a year of war, showing that the seagoing commerce of Germany and Austria is completely destroyed.

At the time war was declared the merchant marine of the two Germanic nations comprised 3984 vessels with a total displacement of 6,700,960 tons. To-day the whole of these ships are either captured, destroyed, interned in the ports of neutral countries or lying idle in the German or Austrian harbours.

The loss affects not only the shipping owners, companies and others directly connected with the trade, but is a tremendous calamity for the whole country.

THE TRANSPORT TAX.

The cost of transport by sea may be regarded as a tax on the goods transported. If the goods are transported to the nation to which the vessel belongs, that nation recovers the tax in question but if the transportation of the goods is effected by a foreign vessel, the tax is paid by the receiving nation to that to which the vessel belongs.

The explanation of England's principal source of wealth lies in the fact that 45 per cent of the maritime traffic is carried in British bottoms.

LOST PROFITS AND EXPENDITURE ON FREIGHTS

The proportion of maritime transport which Germany had succeeded in appropriating was 12 per cent. of the world's traffic. With the elimination of her merchant fleet she has not only lost this but has to pay tribute to third parties on such goods as she can obtain through them. In other words, in addition to the loss of profits out of her sea trade she has to pay freights.

Since February 18 when Germany declared British waters a war zone her submarines have destroyed merchant shipping the total displacement of which comes to 300,000 tons. Now the British shipbuilding yards construct in a single year vessels the total tonnage of which amounts to about 1,500,000 tons. From these figures it is evident that the German submarine warfare can have no effect on British maritime trade.

THE SUBMARINE FARCE

The action of the German submarine is valueless also as a moral influence, as it has no perceptible effect on the movement of shipping in British ports, which receive and despatch regularly every week from 1300 to 1400 large steamers.

While this submarine warfare is being carried on by Germany her merchant ships are lying idle while those of France and Britain are doing a brisk trade.

It has become a question of "amour propre" with Germany to continue the submarine blockade, for which she is having to pay dearly.

SERBIA NEXT!

AUSTRO GERMAN HOPES IN THE NEAR EAST.

London, August 9.

Advices received to-day cause the belief that Serbia will be the next objective of the Austro-German campaign.

It is becoming increasingly plain that Germany is looking to the East for the settlement of the war. By over-running Serbia she would occupy a favourable position from which to invoke the aid of Bulgaria in reaching Constantinople.

All the indications point to the development of the war along this line, with Germany striving to re-establish communications with Turkey and thus hamper the Allies in their scheme for the spring campaign.

SPIES FOR THE KAISER

FORCED OCCUPATION OF WARSAW'S INHABITANTS.

New York, Aug. 10.

The Overseas News Agency here has received information from Berlin that Prince Leopold of Bavaria has taken the heads of the civil administration in Warsaw and prominent Russian citizens of the city into custody as hostages by informing the German military authorities of all hostile schemes which might endanger the troops.

The Prince's proclamation reads as follows:—

"Inhabitants of Warsaw! Your city is in German hands, but we wage war only against hostile troops, not peaceful citizens. Peace and order shall be preserved and rights protected, unless the citizens of Warsaw undertake hostile action. Trust the German sense of justice and obey the instructions of the German commanders.

"It has however come to the knowledge of the German military commanders that the enemy has prepared attacks against the safety of our troops in Warsaw. I therefore am compelled to take as hostages the leaders and most prominent citizens of the town, who will be pledged for the security of our troops. With you it rests to protect the lives of these fellow citizens of yours.

"It is therefore your duty, and that of anyone who has any knowledge of a design to make attacks of any kind, to promptly notify the German authorities in the interests of his fellow citizens, as well as of the peace and safety of Warsaw. Whoever is guilty of negligence in this respect, or gives assistance to the enemy to attack must expect to pay the death penalty."

BEWARE OF EXCESSIVE OPTIMISM

GERMAN PRESS ADVICE TO THE PEOPLE.

Paris, August 10.

A telegram from Amsterdam quoting some German Press utterances regarding the German campaign in Poland, says that the "Vossische Zeitung" points out that the Russians are maintaining their hold upon the right bank of the Vistula, and warns the public not to over-estimate the importance of the capture of Warsaw as the Russian armies are again rallying.

The review "Schaubühne" accuses the patriotic Press as being responsible for the war, saying: "Our victories have cost us too dear. We could have obtained as much without going to war. The Press has been working on behalf of the ammunition factories, not in the interests of Germany."

SWEDEN AND THE WAR

GROWING HOSTILITY TO RUSSIA.

London, August 7.

The "Morning Post" says that the attitude of Sweden in regard to Russia and her Allies has for some time revealed a disquieting character.

Emboldened by recent German successes the latent hostility of Sweden, who has never forgiven the loss of Finland, has become strongly developed. Considerable preparations for warlike contingencies have been made in the north of Sweden, and the army is fully mobilised.

The paper says that if Sweden persists in her unfriendly attitude towards Russia she may rapidly drift into a war which would inevitably be a great obstacle to her future progress.

The "Standard," analysing at considerable length the situation as regards Sweden, says that the pro-war party in that country has lost importance. The people in general accept neutrality as the wisest course to pursue.

"GREYLAND"

GERMAN SOCIALISTS' FEAR OF GERMANY'S AFTER-WAR FATE.

New York, Aug. 7.

According to a despatch from Berlin, a serious split in the ranks of the German Socialists is indicated by a manifestation published in the "Chemnitzer Volkszeitung," part of which runs as follows:—

"Either victory or surrender, no other alternative is left to us. England would certainly treat us with consideration if you were to turn yourselves into Englishmen. Then Germany would become Greyland (an allusion to the British Foreign Secretary), and you would be left in the possession of all your household goods for yourselves.

"However, Germany is Germany, and we will defend her against every foe. We are no longer under obligation to consider the susceptibilities of any party whatsoever. We desire to live by our own right, not by the grace of foreigners, and be Bothland or Greyland.

"There is but one thing to do with the foreigner—our fist upon his eyes, our knees upon his chest. Let those who will offer up prayers for peace. As for us, we are off to join von Hindenburg."

CALLING UP THE AGED

MEN OF 50 TO ENTER GERMAN ARMY.

Paris, Aug. 7.

The Socialist organ "L'Humanité" says that it has information on the best authority that Germany is preparing to call to the ranks all men capable of bearing arms up to the age of fifty. The German Chancellor is preparing a Bill for the Reichstag authorising the measure, but there are fears as to the effect it will have on public opinion, and the meeting of the Reichstag may possibly be postponed.

"L'Humanité" adds:—"Doubtless the proposal will be accepted if von Bethmann-Hollweg declares it to be absolutely necessary."

CHOLERA IN HUNGARY

160 NEW CASES REPORTED.

Paris, August 10.

Despatches via Switzerland report that the latest official figures published in Austria show that there were 160 fresh cases up to August 3. Between July 25 and 31 there were 378 cases of typhoid.

According to information obtained from Trieste 123 Parliamentary delegates to the Austrian Reichsrath and Landtage have been imprisoned. These consists of 28 Czech Deputies, 16 Croats, 20 Italians, 30 Rumanians, 8 Dalmatians, 22 Serbians and 4 Jews.

ANOTHER IRON CROSS

DECORATION FOR HERR HEINEKEN.

New York, Aug. 10.

A radiogram from Berlin announces that the Iron Cross has been conferred upon Herr Philip Heineken, director of German Lloyd's.

WORK FOR GERMAN PRISONERS

RUSSIA EMPLOYS ARMY OF 208,000.

New York, Aug. 10.

Official reports from Petrograd show that upwards of 208,000 German prisoners were employed recently by various Russian Ministries on railways, agriculture and in other ways.

THE SPY M.P.

LINCOLN TO BE EXTRADITED FROM THE STATES

New York, Aug. 5.

It is announced that Ignatius Lincoln, formerly M.P. for Darlington, whose revelations in recent numbers of the "New York World" showed that he acted as a German spy while a member of Parliament, and caused a sensation in England, has been arrested in New York on charges of fraud and forgery, not for political offences. Each charge concerns large sums.

His extradition from America will be applied for by Scotland Yard, and an official will leave almost immediately.

It is understood here that the prosecution of the accused man will be a private one.

[The remarkable confession by Lincoln of how he acted as a German spy was published in a recent issue of "The Herald."]

AUSTRIAN VANDALISM

DANTE'S HOME WILFULLY DESTROYED BY GUN FIRE.

New York, August 6.

An act of vandalism on the part of the Austrians is reported by the correspondent of the "Evening Sun" who telegraphed from Rome that the Austrian artillery has destroyed the famous old castle of Lizzana near Roveretto, which place the Austrians are apparently preparing to evacuate.

The castle was the residence of the Count and Countess of Castel Barco in the fourteenth century, and of their descendants. Subsequently the poet Dante Alighieri, when banished from Italy, made it his temporary home. There was no military necessity whatever for the destruction of the building.

MURDERING CIVILIANS

HOW GERMANY RULES OCCUPIED TERRITORY

London, Aug. 6.

It is reported from Havre that the miners in the district of Mons have struck work, and have come into collision with the German soldiers. As a result seven miners and two Germans were killed.

It is also stated that at Charleroi the Germans charged on the peasantry killing ten men and wounding forty others.

NO HUN TOYS FOR U.S. CHILDREN

CARGOES VALUED AT THREE MILLIONS STERLING SEIZED.

London, Aug. 7.

German Christmas toys to the value of £3,000,000 which had already been shipped on board neutral steamers have been intercepted by British warships and the vessels are now being held at various ports.

DYNAMITE ON WHITE STAR LINER

TIMELY DISCOVERY ON THE ARABIC.

New York, Aug. 7.

Information has been furnished by the police that two tubes of dynamite were found on board the 16,000 ton White Star liner Arabic on July 28, before the vessel sailed from New York.

Experts who examined the tubes declared that they would have exploded with the slightest shock.

There appears to be no clue as to who were the persons guilty of the attempt to blow up the vessel.

BRITAIN AND ARGENTINA

Anniversary of the Reconquest

A GENEROUS TRIBUTE TO BRITAIN

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—In "La Nación" of the 2nd inst., can be read a notice under the title:—

"ANIVERSARIO DE LA RECONQUISTA. FESTEJOS POPULARES."

which says:—

"The commission presided over by Dr. Augusto Ibarra Pedernera works with great boldness to the end to obtain the greatest splendour possible in the feast arranged on the occasion of the Anniversary of the Reconquest to be commemorated on the 12th inst. To that effect the congregation of the army, the police band, the Security Squadron, the Cadet School, and one company of firemen has been requested.

The Minister of Public Instruction has also been requested to close the schools on that day, so that the children may go to the manifestation prepared by the pupils of the National College, Normal Schools, etc., etc.

Whether that event may or may not be worth while to celebrate is a question of personal opinion, and in that way anyone may think what he likes, but as to the purpose and significance of those celebrations there cannot nor must not be two ways of thinking.

In fact, if we—I refer to the Argentines—commemorate that army action, it only should be with one purpose, to rejoice about the event which showed us the value of liberty, the existence of which we had no idea in those days, being altogether, natives and country, mere property and patrimony of the reigning family in Spain.

Let us see what History, that equitable judge of past facts, says:—

"It had long been a favourite project of Mr. Pitt to aid the emancipation of S. America and to open a trade with that country. He had frequent conferences with the ex-Jesuit Juan Pablo Viscardí Guzman, a native of Peru, and an enthusiast in favour of the independence of America, who represented the country to be impatient under the Spanish yoke and ripe for revolt. He also published in London an appeal to his countrymen, using all the powers of his eloquence in attempting to bring them to a sense of their degraded condition. The British Ministry encouraged General Miranda in his designs to revolutionise Venezuela, and aided the premature expedition which he fitted out in 1801; and furnished the funds for that which he afterwards fitted out from the United States in 1806, though it was done without the assistance or sanction of Congress. This expedition failed without accomplishing anything, and a number of young men from the United States, falling into the hands of the Spaniards, became victims of their own credulity, and the cruelty of tyrannical power. It is said that during Mr. Adam's administration the British Ministry made proposals to the American Government to assist in the emancipation of the Spanish colonies which did not meet with a favourable reception.

The failure of Miranda's expedition did not discourage the British Government, for in 1806 Spain then being in alliance with France in the war which prevailed in Europe, they fitted out a squadron under Sir Home Popham which entered the Plata on the 25th of June, and anchored about twelve miles below Buenos Aires, where the troops disembarked without opposition.

The inhabitants and the Viceroy Sobremonte were filled with consternation. After experiencing a feeble opposition at Rio Chivaco, three miles from the city, General Beresford entered the Capital and took possession of the citadel. Don J. N. Pueyrredon, afterwards director, at the head of a company of hussars, was the only officer who did anything to oppose the advance of the English. The Spaniards, on learning the small number of their enemies, determined to expel them. The Viceroy had escaped to Montevideo, and Liniers, a French emigrant, but an officer in the Spanish service, passed over to the eastern shore of the river, exciting the people to arms. The Viceroy collected one thousand regulars which he joined with those of Liniers, to whom the command of the united forces was given. With these troops Liniers immediately recrossed the river, when the inhabitants flocking around his standard, soon enabled him to attack the British with great effect, compelling them, after they had sustained a heavy loss, to surrender on the 12th of August, 1806."

It was during those two months that the natives of Buenos Aires knew what was freedom of religious opinion, liberty of the press, and political and civil rights, and also knew that their port was opened to the world trade. What did they obtain later on by the reconquest?

To return to the oppressed regimen to which they were accustomed, but which they would not support after they knew the good use of liberty, which they would lose if the heavy Spanish yoke could not be shaken off in the colony. Does he who knows the history of this land ignore the British action in the independence of Argentina? Have the Argentines forgotten the history of General San Martín, his action in Cuyo, and the support of the numerous English and Scotch communities there established?

Let us see what General Mitre says about it in his history of San Martín, I. Volume, IX. Chapter, relating the preparations for his expedition to Chile: "He stimulated the neutral foreigners to enrol, and the English residents were the first to respond to his call, requesting permission to form a company at their own expense with the privilege of appointing their own officers, declaring that 'Grateful for the great hospitality and full of enthusiasm for the rights of men, they could not look indifferently upon the risks which menaced the country and were disposed to take arms and shed their last drop of blood if necessary in its defence.'"

Fifty-six British subjects signed that declaration. The officers appointed on January 24, 1815, were:—Captain John Young, 1st Lieutenant Thomas Appleby, 2nd Lieutenant James Lindsay, Ensign John Hefferson.

It is really painful to see those today who should follow the steps marked by those who surrendered their lives and property in giving us home and liberty, united now with those which our National Hymn calls ferocious oppressors of the home, entertaining the repulse of a detachment of troops of the nation whose help we always asked for and whose friendship was our protecting shield not long ago to preserve the peace as precious as necessary for our country. It is really time to think that the commemoration of each of the martial actions occurred in our country is not the best way to honour the memory of the founders of our nationality.

The illustrious Argentine, Don Juan Bantista Alberdi, in his book about the life and industrial works of William Wheelwright in S. America says that it is a fact that every time one tries to write the history of a South American country the first thing left aside and forgotten is the history of its commerce, its industries, its conditions and economical advance. Undoubtedly its revolutions constitute the most interesting and useful part of their political history, but if in the United States of North America, the colonial history is one of its old liberties and antique civilisation, in South America instead the colonial epoch only records the Rattling Rabshakehs.

Cold feeters, shouters of accusations against everybody in authority, and tattling mischief makers generally are, we are told, more feared than the Germans by the soldiers at the Front. To be told, even on the authority of the Godlike "Times," and "Daily Mail" (of Tsien Tsin Massacre celebrity) that the National Leaders are incompetent in every way, and that the Secretary of War is manifestly inferior to their own military critic, is not a pleasant experience for soldiers into whose hands these and other papers fall, nor in any way heartening to them. The Germans, on the contrary, crow for joy, and well they may, at the spectacle of the New Praetorians who are to set up and pull down Governments. Among the large number of men who have never done anything, but are anxious to do it now, there remains a residuum, the dross, which prompted the remark, attributed to an officer who had evidently been home on short leave that he never knew before that abject darkness in which it was kept by the disgraceful government of the Metropolis.

But the real, the fertile revolution, the most worthy to recall, as a government school, does not consist in the substitution of an incapable Spanish Government by another one, likewise incapable though American, but in the substitution of an economical state of things which kept the colony in a state of backwardness and poverty by a new regimen of life, characterised by free trade with the whole civilised world, to which it owed in a very short time the augmentation of its population, of capital, industries, commerce, light and welfare, the Spanish America, than to its three centuries of colonial government.

Who brought this revolution to an end in our country? From where proceeded all the capital invested in our railways? What are our loans? Can anyone who meditates calmly and gives to God what belongs to God, and to Caesar what is Caesar's, believe that an Argentine could associate with those who up to 1810 were our masters, or commemorate the victory obtained by Liniers in the name of the Spanish Sovereign, over the hosts who with or without intentions helped our cause?

I would be very much obliged if I could get hospitality for these few lines in your esteemed paper.—Yours, etc.,

there were so many men with brains like hens in the country. There are some in Parliament, the Byles Party, the Masons and Outhwaites, in fact, those who even now can only think of their dirty little Party squabbles or their own miserable personal profit. If those up to the age of 50 are ultimately swept into the military net, they may at last learn reason Whom Gideon schooled with briars," though in their cases, fists and wholesome camp discipline will replace the briars.

The "Teufelszeitung" says:—

"Another glorious achievement has been scored by our German Hell-sausages, their latest flight resulting in the killing of one man, eight women, and four children on the East Coast of Perfidious England. 'Splendid, my Pre-eminent Prussians! Magnificent, my brave Bavarians! Iron crosses all round.' Against this truly noble feat is, alas, to be set the loss of one of our Valorous Gasbags and the heroes carried by it, all of whom were unfortunately immolated by the Hellish British foe, who violated all usages of war by dropping bombs upon it till the envelope exploded. The Empire mourns their loss, and will try to avoid British aeroplanes more than ever, although hitherto we have done our best to get away from them. Owing to the hasty departure of our dirigibles they had not time to squirt liquid fire and poison gas on two orphanages and a Blind Asylum selected for the purpose. This is to be done next time, for our noble heroes fear nothing, when there is nobody about."

"Oh, won't the pork be high,
When the pigs begin to fly."

The aforementioned fact is no doubt the reason why "La Union" has been annoying everybody within ten squares by bomb practice, with the benevolent neutrality of the Intendente. It is evident that British aeroplanes have behaved in the most brutal, inconsiderate, and ungentlemanly manner toward the German "flyers" (away). Inasmuch as Sir John French's despatch mentions over 60 aerial combats in which not one British avion was lost, while five Germans were destroyed, and many others chased, badly injured, and forced to descend, while one was captured. In every case therefore the magnanimous Teutons succeeded in scoring a defeat at least, and in at least 10 per cent. of the cases had the satisfaction of being "outed" as well.

"Fiat Justitia aut ruat"—(?)

Justice is currently supposed to be blind. Her ways are sometimes like unto those of "the four-handed mole," but in Argentina they may be compared at times to the small beasts which bury themselves in books and papers without achieving anything particular. Provincial Justice is of the Pede Claudio type; doing nothing rashly, and giving the suspects fair warning that if they do not clear they may be jailed, which means putting the authorities to charges for a month or two; most inconvenient. Señor Pérez, Correspondent of "La Nación," was murdered on the streets of Arrecifes weeks ago. Justice hobbled up about three days after, laid by her crutch, wiped her glasses, removed the bandage from the "other eye," not used for winking purposes, and called for paper, lots of it; for ink, gallons of it, and for 7 gross of best pens. Having completed these vengeful preparations, the Good Lady sailed in and compiled 1200 folios of closely written matter, depositions, expositions, impositions, comments, opinions, small talk, politics, politics, more politics. The ends of Justice are now vindicated, and criminals are assured that they can no longer remain within ten minutes' walk of the scene of their "indiscretion." Perhaps some day they may get captured accidentally for something else, so to save trouble they had better go up North and engage in the Cuatrero industry till the unpleasantness blows over.

BRITON.

GERMAN OR ARGENTINE?

Pointed Question to Chairman of British Society

MR. A. G. PRUDEN'S FRANK REPLY

Wednesday, Aug. 11

Apart from the record of a year's excellent work by the committee, last evening's annual general meeting of the British Society was chiefly interesting for an incident which occurred in its closing stages. The agenda had been gone through, and the closure was about to be moved when an interruption occurred in the form of a query to the Chairman (Mr. A. G. Pruden). The incident happened as follows:

Mr. L. Elliot: I am not a member, but can I ask Mr. Pruden to state why he has a German in his employ, and why at Rosario he represented him at the show?

Mr. J. Monteith Drysdale: Might I ask if this is included in the business of which notice has been given?

The Chairman: I may say it has not been included. However, I am delighted to have an opportunity of stating the case, and particularly of stating it to British people. In 1893 a man presented himself and asked me for employment. He came from Belgium, and I thought he was a Belgian. That man has been a most excellent mechanic from 1893 to 1915—22 years' service—and I do not think it would be just for me to throw him upon the street. When war broke out, I said to him, "Is it a fact that you are a German?" He said "Yes," but added, "I have papers of Argentine citizenship." I replied, "Recently taken out?" He then said "No, sir; in 1894, one year after arrival in this country." He added that he had left his own country because they forced him into conscription when he returned there from the United States. I have made money out of him for twenty-two years, and I do not see that now I should throw him on to the street. (Applause.)

Mr. Elliot: I thank you, Mr. Chairman; but don't you think that "once a German, always a German?"

The Chairman: He has married a Polish girl and has thirteen or fourteen children—all Argentine born. (Laughter and applause.)

The incident then terminated, and, after a vote of thanks to the Chairman and committee, moved by Mr. J. Monteith Drysdale and seconded by Mr. Vivian, the meeting ended.

Earlier in the evening, the Chairman announced that an undertaking to attend a Red Cross function at the Colon Theatre had prevented Sir Reginald Tower and Mr. H. G. Mackie from being present. Letters of regret were read from both gentlemen. The annual report and balance sheet were taken as read and formally adopted; the seven retiring members of the Committee were re-elected; it was agreed that life members should be admitted on payment of a single sum of $50; and authority was given to the Committee to form, at any future date, a Grand Council whose office should be for the purposes of consultation. It was believed that this latter venture would allow of co-operation between the Society and many members of the Patriotic Committee when the war ended. Finally, it was agreed that members living in camp—beyond a radius of 50 miles from the Capital—should be enabled to vote by proxy. Each of these suggestions was carried without opposition, while a warm tribute by Mr. J. A. Aird to "The Herald," "Review of the River Plate," and "Standard" was endorsed by those present. The Chairman delivered a lengthy address which is given below.

The Chairman, in declaring the meeting open said that the past year had been a memorable one, probably more so than any period recorded in history. When the Committee was elected the war had already been in progress some twenty days; a meeting of British residents had been called by H.M.'s Chargé d'Affaires, Mr. Norman, and they elected a special patriotic committee to deal with affairs arising from the war. Directly the Committee came into office they considered it of the first importance to support that committee by every means in their power and that would be their policy to the end. (Applause.)

Although the objects of the British Society were those of peace they could not remain inactive as regards the war. Their policy had been to hold high the flag of patriotism, and to foment in every possible way the supply of men and money and they were proud to believe that something had been achieved.

And they were now going to take the offensive. At the suggestion of one of their members they had decided to appeal for funds necessary to present an up-to-date aeroplane with machine gun to the British Government and he was glad to be able to inform them that the appeal was being responded to magnificently. (Applause). They had quite a large number of subscriptions and it afforded them a special pleasure to announce the recent arrival of one donation from Mr. Charles W. Drabble of $3000. (Applause). He anticipated several important donations during the next few days. (Applause).

British subjects everywhere were straining to do their utmost and useful presents such as those were being subscribed from all parts of the world and he was sure the British residents in Argentina would not be behind those of other countries. It was proposed that the aeroplane should be called the "River Plate" and it was just possible that an Anglo-Argentine aviator may be found to man it. (Applause). They hoped all Societies and Clubs would assist them to get the subscription completed as quickly as possible.

Another appeal they had to make and that was to the ladies. Last year they had been able to send large quantities of socks and other comforts to the soldiers at the front and as a winter campaign seemed to be inevitable it would be as well to again take up this work.

Perhaps owing to the fact of this gigantic war, the British Society in the Argentine Republic had not been to forward as much as it would have desired those objects for which it was especially established, which were the fomenting of Great Britain's interests in the country and the interests and well-being of British residents there. Nevertheless, as the Report would tell them the Committee had not been idle.

The Chairman stated that when he came to the country some 28 years ago he found the interests of Great Britain and the interests of British residents being most excellently looked after by such men as Mr. John Drysdale, Mr. Charles Krabbé, Mr. Henry Gibson Anderson, Mr. Charles W. Drabble, Mr. Andrew Mackintosh, Mr. Robert Inglis Runciman, Mr. Thomas Bell, Mr. Edward Mulhall and a number of other gentlemen many of whom were now no longer with them. Owing to the good work of these gentlemen, when a British subject arrived here he found things fairly easy and comfortable for him. Since those days, however, conditions had changed. Men from other countries had come out in large numbers and were contesting keenly with them for influence and trade. He believed to-day they were still "top-dogs" but they must always remember that "Unity is Strength" and if they would combine and assist the Committee, he was certain that the British Society could do a very great deal towards promoting the well-being of British people in the country. (Applause).

When he said combine he was not asking for British Societies or Clubs to amalgamate. On the contrary, he thought they had seen that amalgamation was impossible. Each club or society had its own sphere of utility and they thought it was better that each should persevere with its own programme. But that policy should not prevent all the members of such societies joining the British Society which would be ready and willing to extend a helping hand to every British institution in the country. (Applause).

It was not indispensable that the British Society should be a wealthy institution in order to achieve its aims but, naturally, as their wealth increased their influence would necessarily become greater. Judging from the support that had been accorded to them during the past twelve months he felt sure they might calculate on a very much increased revenue in future years, as also upon a large increase in their membership. After all it was the number of members that swayed the machine. The subscription was kept low for that purpose and he saw no reason why they might not confidently look forward to the time when the British Society in the Argentine Republic should have a total of not less than 10,000 members. (Applause).

British interests were spread all over the country and it was the intention of the Committee of the British Society to follow those interests, and at the present time they were engaged in fixing up organising centres where there was a reasonable number of British subjects. The world had seen recently what organisation could do and when the British Society was completely organised he thought they would be able to carry out efficiently the duties that lay before them.

Those present would notice by the Report that the Committee proposed to appropriate for the Building Fund $1,500 of the present cash balance. If the report were adopted it would mean that the amount would be transferred to the Building Fund and this would bring that Fund up to a total of $1,959.10. That was no doubt a very modest sum but everything must have a beginning and he hoped it would go along snow-ball fashion until it arrived at such a figure as would enable the British Society ultimately to have their own building as other nationalities had.

Upon the agenda they would see a proposition for the formation of Life Membership. To incorporate that rule into the Statutes of the Society it needed to be passed by three-fourths of the members present and he hoped when the proposition came along, that the majority would be obtained.

The fourth item on the agenda referred to the formation of a British Society Grand Council. That the Committee considered of very great importance. They did not wish to form the Grand Council that night. They asked for the consent of the General Meeting to its formation at an opportune moment. It was rather difficult to say when that moment would arrive. They believed that the Grand Council, composed of men representing wealth and influence in the British community, would prove to be a great acquisition to the British Society and to British interests in this country. It was not proposed that the Grand Council should take part in the day by day work done by the ordinary Committee, but that it should meet the Committee on certain special occasions, such as for instance, the celebration of peace, or the wedding of the Prince of Wales, or any other national event of importance, thus perfecting in that way the organisation of the British Society and making it fully representative of all classes. (Applause).

He wished to take the opportunity of publicly thanking His Britannic Majesty's Minister, Sir Reginald Tower, for the valuable assistance and support he had at all times extended to them. He had always listened to them with a sympathetic ear and had

August 10 (7.40 p.m.)

August 10.—Sir Ian Hamilton reports that fighting at several points on Gallipoli Peninsula has taken place during last few days. Substantial progress has been made in southern zone. 200 yards on front of 300 yards has been gained east of Krithia Road and has been held in spite of determined counter-attacks which have been repulsed with heavy loss to enemy. Repeated attacks by Turks elsewhere in this zone have been beaten off. Several attacks by French Corps have been made and their whole-hearted co-operation has proved of greatest assistance in Anzac zone. A footing on Chunuk Bair portion of Sari Bair has also been gained and crest occupied after fierce fighting and successful storming of strongly held positions. Here too enemy's losses have been considerable. Advance was commenced at night under cover of searchlight from destroyer. Elsewhere fresh landing was successfully effected and considerable progress made. 630 prisoners have been taken, together with 1 Nordenfeldt gun, 2 bomb mortars, 9 machine guns and large number of bombs. Scattered about are quantities of enemy's rifles, ammunition and equipment.

ZEPPELIN RAID ON BRITAIN.

August 10, (7.55 p.m.)

August 10.—Admiralty makes following announcement:—"A squadron of hostile airships visited East Coast last night and this morning between the hours of 8.30 p.m. and 12.30 a.m. Some fires were caused by dropping of incendiary bombs but these were quickly extinguished and only immaterial damage done. Following casualties have been reported: 1 man, 8 women and 4 children killed; 4 men, 6 women and 2 children wounded. One Zeppelin was seriously damaged by gun fire of land defences and was reported this morning being towed into Ostend. She has since been subjected to continual attacks by aircraft from Dunkirk under heavy fire and is now reported, after having had her back broken and rear compartments damaged, completely destroyed by explosion. Night was extremely dark accompanied by thick fog in places which rendered night flying by aeroplanes very difficult. It is regretted that Flight Sub-Lieutenant R. Lord, one of pilots sent up to engage enemy, was killed on landing in dark."

WITHDRAWAL TO NEW LINE AT HOOGE.

August 11 (2.5 p.m.)

Sir John French reports that north-west of Hooge and in ruins of village itself we have consolidated the ground gained yesterday, repulsing one weak infantry attack in night.

August 9.—There was no infantry fighting, but violent artillery engagement, as result of which all trenches in open ground south of Hooge became untenable by either side and we have slightly withdrawn the position of our line which lay to the south of village. This makes no material difference to our position. Total number of German prisoners captured yesterday was 150.

He also desired to thank all those members of the British community who had assisted them in carrying out the past year's work. The support they had received had been most encouraging and had enabled them to be of the utility that they had been. Also his own thanks were due to all the gentlemen of the Committee who had so ably supported him on all occasions and especially he would mention that Giant of work, their Hon. Treasurer, Mr. W. Watson. (Applause). His services had been given on all and every occasion in the most thorough and unstinted manner. (Applause).

In conclusion, Mr. Pruden thanked his audience for their kind attention and asked that the Report and Balance Sheet be adopted.

WASTED OPPORTUNITIES

ARGENTINA'S APATHETIC ATTITUDE

PREACHING VERSUS PRACTICE

To any newcomer to this Republic the lengthy discourse uttered by a well-known Deputy in the lower house of the Argentine legislative assembly, dealing with the general situation of the Republic, would convey the impression that at long last there was some hope of an immediate realisation of the great opportunities that have lain at the door of Argentina for over a twelve month, and that have been systematically neglected. In the final sections of Dr. Zeballos' great oratorical effort one finds various proposals covering measures calculated to remove sundry pressing disabilities, ranging from the faults of the present monetary system to the lack of an Argentine mercantile marine. Roads; mortgages; finance in general and in particular; national manufactures and national production; all are blended into one harmonious whole that at the first reading, and to anyone unacquainted with the financial history of the past decade, would appear to offer the magic panacea that Argentina has sought ever since the flood tide of prosperity began to ebb; a phenomenon that for practical purposes may be placed in the latter half of the Centenary year, 1910.

The Illusory Hope.

Unfortunately the whole fabric is to all intents and purposes on a par with the well-known fable of the serving wench and her basket of eggs, or pail of milk, according to which version of the story be taken. The duplication of the initial capital of which the damsel was undoubtedly possessed formed the base of her imaginative riches. Down came basket or pail, and with it went all hope of riches until such time as the initial capital was replaced. Now each and every project that has been brought forward by gentlemen who in the British Parliament would be termed "private members," contains somewhere or other within its multitudinous clauses an authority for the raising of the necessary funds by means of a loan. Sometimes the loan is to be sought abroad, frequently it is suggested that the Argentine investor may be induced to put up the money, and then again it is the Banco de la Nación that is to be asked to finance the particular business that its promoter firmly believes will set the wheels of trade humming once more. What none of these sanguine gentlemen will ever take into consideration is the fact that whilst foreign borrowing is almost impossible at the present time, save at rates that are prohibitive to any self-respecting state, the Argentine capitalist, who as a rule has made his money in local trade, is too shrewd to put up hard cash against visionary prospects emanating from the mind of well-intentioned legislators whose practical knowledge of trade is a blank.

Theory and Practice.

The almost universal belief in legislative circles that a doctor's degree and a seat in Congress fits any man to handle any problem connected with the commercial development of the country, is not confined to Argentina. It exists in the United States, and is not unknown in the French Chamber. But in both those countries the legislators are almost invariably willing to be guided by the permanent functionaries whose duty it is to know what they are talking about, and to examine each commercial measure on its commercial merits, having due regard naturally to its moral and material consequences to the state as a whole. Here, as far as may be judged from the official Diary of Sessions, the duty of the permanent official is to say "Aye, Aye!" to the conclusions arrived at by his temporary superiors. This may seem a harsh criticism, yet on what other grounds can one explain the dense ignorance that weighs upon the legislators when hard facts are in question?

Argentine Shipping and Argentine Laws.

The case of the local mercantile marine is very much to the point. Again and again it is asserted that if Argentina could but put up the money and buy the ships she would not only be independent of foreign transportation facilities but would make huge profits for the lucky ones who put their money into the proposition. Facts show that save in the case of one concern which has virtually a monopoly of a special trade, the Argentine mercantile marine has gone from bad to worse, and that during the war, when it looked as though there was some chance of the tonnage under the blue and white banner at last earning a fair profit, the Argentine shipowner has been hit both ways, with the result that much tonnage is laid up that in any other country would be earning its cost twice over. Space prevents a recapitulation of the many clauses that cover the duties of the Argentine shipowner; chief among them is the duty of employing a large percentage of Argentine seamen, and an Argentine captain, even for deep sea voyages. The former is a rare and shy bird. He can occasionally be kept aboard as far as Montevideo, and then allowed to desert, but the commander is a different matter. Few and far between, knowing their own worth, if uncertain of their abilities, they are ready to ship for a smart consideration, the while their work is done by a Deputy, who also draws captain's wages.

All through the state the same conflict of official views and everyday commonsense is visible in matters commercial, and the object lessons of the past twelve months appear to have been utterly wasted in so far as Argentine officialdom is concerned. The impracticable and above all costly restrictions that have hampered the Argentine shipping trade are only one case in point among many. Nevertheless the legislators go serenely on their way, suggesting, amending their suggestions, criticising, and doing absolutely nothing towards freeing private enterprise from the myriad tentacles of bureaucratic nepotism that are the real stumbling blocks to rapid economic progress throughout the length and breadth of the Republic.

LIFE IN THE CAPITAL

JUNE STATISTICS.

The monthly bulletin of municipal statistics which has just been issued for the City of Buenos Aires, covering a period from the first to the end of June, shows 1020 marriages, 2776 births and 2023 deaths.

Passenger traffic on the tramways amounted to 28,154,573 persons, which equalled a gross turnover of $2,697,310.65. The "tube" carried 2,681,463 passengers, and turned over $268,146.30.

Traffic returns state that there are 970 private carriages on the streets, 1850 public carriages, 2188 private motor-cars, and 2,870 taxi-cabs.

The Post Office have received for dispatch 125,496,610 packages and letters. Entrances to the Zoological Gardens number 56,218, which equals $5,621.80.

POACHING DANGERS

Poaching at Chacabuco, is supported vi et armis, and the ground proprietor interferes at his proper peril. Sr. Domingo Fourcade who owns camp there observed two men, Julio and Pablo Benvenuto hunting over it. He approached them to warn them off and was received with charges of shot, and slightly wounded. Sr. Fourcade drew his revolver and wounded Pablo Benvenuto. All concerned are under detention but none of the wounds are serious.

GRAIN FOR THE ENEMY

Argentine Shipments to Neutral Ports

THE QUESTION OF RE-EXPORTS

It is common knowledge in business circles that a very large amount of the cereal shipments from Argentina to neutral countries contiguous or adjacent to the Central Empires is evidently going to reach the enemy. Governmental restrictions cannot be enforced in many cases owing to various circumstances which need not be detailed here, and without in any way hinting at an official infraction of the laws of strict neutrality it stands to reason that the enormous increase in imports on the part of the smaller European nations is bound to excite suspicion. The case of cotton shipments to Denmark, sixty-five times more than her accustomed import, may be taken as fairly conclusive evidence that the increase is due to resales, not to any increase in the output of her cotton mills; as a matter of fact her spinning and weaving of cotton is normally infinitesimal, and mills do not grow up in a night.

Now there are equally suspicious circumstances surrounding the shipment of cereals from Argentina, and our esteemed contemporary "The Times of Argentina," in contending that the Scandinavian countries will do well to follow the policy of Holland and Sweden by placing all grain purchases in the hands of an association that shall be beyond suspicion as regards re-exports, hits a nail on the head that needs be driven home. The fact that cargoes are offered for Scandinavian ports at a freightage that of itself makes the merchandise shipped unsaleable save at an enormous figure above normal quotations, may not be proof positive that those very goods are bound to Germany, but it is strong circumstantial evidence to the effect that they are to replace earlier shipments. Denmark is particularly favoured by the dealers in this semi-contraband, and though it is true that Denmark — quite legitimately — early in the war sold everything she had to Germany, including her whole stock of leather boots and most of her edibles it cannot be maintained that she has not yet been able to re-stock her shop. In last week's issue the "Times" puts some very pertinent questions, and though its Editor has been described as unpatriotic and as acting counter to Argentina's interests in seeking to reduce the price of maize, no answer has as yet been made to the following requests for information. "Why," says the "Times of Argentina," "are the Scandinavians offering higher grain prices than other countries? Why, also, are only neutral steamers engaged in the trade? Why, also, are only neutral shippers able to carry out the business?"

The main point of the argument lies in the fact that reputable French and British firms refuse to touch the business, and, as the "Times" concludes: — "Under the circumstances we contend that our suggestion would be for the benefit of Scandinavian (as an example) consumers and ship-owners, and we really cannot see why certain of our friends have taken exception to what we have written on the subject. Honest trade can by no manner of means lose by a measure tending to throw the limelight on what may be called dishonest trade."

This is straight speaking and sound logic, and deserves support from all who really profess to be heart and soul with the Allies in their determination to bring this war to a successful close as soon as may be legitimately possible.

STUDENTS' RIOT IN CORDOBA

Skirmish With the Police

IVELY SCENES AND SEVERAL ARRESTS

The Juventud Estudiantil of Cordoba, has been indulging in what, among less educated and refined persons, might be termed brawling and riot. The law regulating the Profession of Engineers had raised their ire and a peripatetic manifestation through the streets naturally followed. The manifestants numbered some three hundred and carried the Bandera Nacional. They perambulated the principal streets, "dando gritos hostiles" also, howling, yelling and giving catcalls after the light hearted manner of student folk. When opposite the Social Club, the police suggested an indefinite adjournment, which being refused they proceeded to enforce it. A Holy Row ensued, hats were bashed in when hard, pulled over noses when soft. Blood, from the nose, flowed freely. Several policemen sustained severe bruises and black eyes, and there was great diversion entirely. At this point the Escuadron of Mounted Police charged and the heroic estudiantes were forcibly broken up and scattered. Being however highly pleased with the afternoon's "fun" they promised some more last night and the police occupied the angles of the University and National College. Local politicians had the customary happy inspiration, and put it about that the wicked "Rads" had let loose the young lions of the University. Deputies Tecera and Soaje therefore visited the Governor to solemnly protest against the calumny and state that "the Radical party condemn these disorders as most improper to our culture."

DRAINAGE NEEDS

PROVINCIAL ROADS DESTROYED BY FLOODS.

Indignant protests are again published on account of the total inactivity and almost contempt shown towards the importunate flooded districts of the Republic. Villages and small towns have been for months entirely cut off by the waters and their miserable situation is perfectly well known to the authorities who however appear to think that their only duty in the matter is to collect taxes and to spend them on matters remote from the places of collection.

Possibly the Government is of opinion that to endeavour to improve the roads of one section might cause jealousy and that it is best to neglect all. This policy has been carried out with exemplary thoroughness. Everyone knows the disastrous manner in which the road gangs were arranged (when they were any). In spite of all the enormous injuries inflicted by the rains, the Municipalities do nothing either. At Bragado for instance, vast quantities of water swept down from the Northern floods and formed a great sheet of water, cutting off communication to the North. Bridges were swept away and swift currents pouring through 25 de Mayo and 9 de Julio, played utter havoc with the roads of those unlucky districts now converted into scoured out channels of infathomable and slimy mud.

For three years Bragado has enjoyed these conditions but the official immobility is as complete as ever. Whether the people are expected to organise an air service or how their crops are to be got to market, are questions on the knees of the Gods and apparently likely to remain there.

"UNITED CLUB BULLETIN"

The United Club Bulletin for August has just been issued, slightly altered in format. It is full of excellent matter. With the records of the events concerning the Club are:—Correspondence, Instructor's Notes, Trumpet Calls, Some Interesting Letters from the Front, and several articles which strike a high note of patriotism, are well written, and exceedingly unpalatable for all Huns. Demi-Semi Huns, their cousins from First to Forty-Second, and their sympathisers.

THE BRITISH SOCIETY

GIFTS FOR H.M.S. "GLASGOW."

The British Society forwarded six cases of comforts, books, magazines, etc., for H.M.S. Glasgow to Montevideo by the R.M.S.P. Amazon yesterday. In addition to the reading matter the cases contained 20 pairs of socks, 4 pairs of mittens, 2 pairs of wristlets, 3 cholera belts, 8 shirts, 8 mufflers, 4 pairs of pants, 1 pair of gloves, a sweater, and cigarettes.

Among those who contributed to the above and to whom the best thanks of the Society are due, were:—J. Anidjah, C. G. Bulman, Mrs. Bayne, the British Hospital, John B. Buchan, the Bahia Blanca Ladies' Patriotic Committee, F. H. Chevallier Boutell, G. H. Billson, Mrs. H. G. Bennett, Mrs. A. Auld, Miss F. S. Baker, Mrs. E. Broach, Mrs. C. A. S. de Bell, C. Wentworth Cumming, A. A. Cameron, D. and W. Cuff, A. H. Davis, F. A. M. Engelken, R. J. Farran, Mrs. Guppy, A. F. Hollins, Mr. Hunter, Mrs. Herbert K. James, Frank Kinch, Mr. Kimber, C. A. Mason, the Rev. W. C. Morris, Mrs. W. Matthews, Frank Pollard, Mrs. Percy, Mrs. Runciman, A. Rolfe-Rogers, E. B. W. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Wilson, Mrs. F. A. Williams, Mrs. K. I. Runciman, Miss D. M. Williams and Mrs. W. Widdowson.

PRESENTS FOR THE RED CROSS.

Through the kindness of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company the British Society forwarded by the Amazon, free of freight, a box containing two dozen sheets and a dozen and a half pillow cases made by Miss Yeomans, of estancia "La Norumbega," 9 de Julio (F.C.O.), for the Aston Branch of the British Red Cross Society. The material for one dozen sheets was kindly given by Messrs. Roberts and Co., of 31 Esmeralda, Buenos Aires, and the material for the other dozen by Messrs. Lorente Hnos., 9 de Julio.

TOBACCO FOR THE SOLDIERS.

The British Society forwarded by the last mail an order for 144 packets of tobacco and cigarettes to be distributed among the British soldiers in France.

TOBACCO FOR THE TROOPS

ACTION BY BRITISH SEAMEN IN B.A.

FORMATION OF A UNIQUE FUND

"What are Britain's seamen doing for the troops at the front?" This is a question that is being answered, locally, before it is asked. Probably the first man to whom it occurred was Mr. James Downey of the s.s. Skipton Castle. Within a few days he had asked it of many fellow seafarers, and, after an informal discussion on Monday, it was last night decided at a meeting at the Alexandra Tea Rooms to form a Buenos Aires British Seafarers' Tobacco Fund. Those present at the original discussion included:—Messrs. J. Downey, E. P. Molley, N. L. Williams, A. F. Macaulay, J. Cropper, R. L. Miller, C. A. Ward, G. Thompson and N. F. Keady.

Last evening's gathering was one of those functions out of which grow greater things. Mr. A. G. Pruden, Chairman of the British Society, attended by request and occupied the chair. He was accompanied by the Rev. H. Westby Brady. After the proposal had been duly explained, it was decided that the Fund be controlled by a committee consisting of both sea-going and shore members. The following were then elected: Sea-going: Capt. Kelly (s.s. Skipton Castle), Mr. Macaulay (a neutral vessel), Capt. Penwright (s.s. Verdi), Mr. L. F. Keady (s.s. Hesperides), Mr. G. L. Hunt (s.s. Socrates), and Mr. J. S. Edge (s.s. Verdi); Shore: Capt. Lewin, Mr. J. Gaul (Shore Superintendent, Nelson Line), Rev. H. Westby Brady, Mr. F. E. Beatty, and Mr. Neilsen.

As the sea-going members only stay in port for a limited time, it was decided that each should arrange for a successor before departure. This step ensures the committee maintaining its original strength.

Officers were elected as follows:—President, Mr. A. G. Pruden; Treasurer, Rev. W. Westby Brady; Secretary, Mr. F. E. Beatty; Assistant Secretary, Mr. H. Parry.

The committee are preparing subscription lists which will be available for distribution in the course of a few days. Meanwhile, the Rev. H. Westby Brady, Missions to Seamen, will be glad to receive donations. Even thus early—while the fund is still in the embryo stage—$120 have been handed to the treasurer, and there can be little doubt that during the progress of the war the total receipts should amount to many thousands. The fund is one that should appeal to seamen. It enables them to show their practical sympathy with the men who are fighting for Britain; moreover, it relieves them of the difficulty usually experienced in the transmission of donations to the funds at home. Mr. Pruden, on behalf of the British Society, has undertaken to see that the sums collected are forwarded to England for the purchase of tobacco and cigarettes through channels already arranged. All that remains now is for the men on the vessels now in port to make the commencement of the venture a creditable one. They can do it—and they will.

The next meeting will be held in the Officers' Room at the Missions to Seamen Institute, Calle 25 de Mayo, at 8 p.m. on Saturday.

ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE'S APPEAL.

The Local Committee of the Royal Colonial Institute desire to call the attention of Fellows to the appeal.

They state that the object is one well worthy of the support of Fellows, and they hope that interest in the proposal will be shown by the forwarding of contributions to the Hon. Treasurer, W. Watson, British Society, 536 Calle Cangallo, Buenos Aires.

ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE

ARGENTINE CIGARETTE FUND.

It having been suggested that the volunteers from this country would appreciate gifts of Argentine cigarettes, the local committee of the Royal Colonial Institute have pleasure in announcing that arrangements have been made through the kindness of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company and Messrs. Houlder Brothers and Company, to convey by their steamers, free of freight, such quantities of cigarettes that may be available; and the latter Company, in England, will deal with the forwarding of same to intended recipients.

The Local Committee of the Royal Colonial Institute will arrange to ship the cigarettes in rotation, to all volunteers at the front and in training camps whose names and addresses are available, but any subscriber desirous of sending a gift of 10 packets to any special individual can do so provided address of volunteer is sent in writing with the subscription.

Subscription (open to the general public) for the R.C.I. Cigarette Fund from $3 min upwards can be sent to Mr. B. Gwyn, Escritorio No. 200, Calle Balcarce No. 278.

The following is a further list of subscriptions: — Already acknowledged $703.30, T. B. Morley 5.00, P. A. Grassick 5.00, Mrs. M. A. Clark 3.00, S. Williams 10.00, A. S. Turner 10.00, H. W. 2.00, C. P. J. 2.00, L. Morlock 10.00, W. E. Seward 10.00; total $1155.80.

The second shipment of 2,000 pkts. in boxes of 10 each, will be forwarded next week, and a list of volunteers to whom they are addressed will be duly published.

KILLED IN ACTION

DEATH OF AN ANGLO-
ARGENTINE

The death is announced of Lieut. A. F. Halstead, who was killed in action on June 28.

With a brilliant career before him in the profession of analytical chemist in the renowned firm of Messrs. Beyer, Peacock and Co., Gorton Foundry, Manchester, young Mr. A. F. Halstead shortly after the outbreak of war announced to his father, the present manager and secretary of Messrs. Beyer, Peacock and Co., Ltd. his desire to assist his country's cause. Idolised by his colleagues, his example electrified his fellow workmen many of whom left the foundry with him to enrol themselves at the same time.

Mr. A. F. Halstead was born in Rosario de Santa Fé, when his father was Locomotive Superintendent of the Cordoba and Rosario Railway. Prior to that the latter was Locomotive Superintendent of the Midland Railway of Uruguay, and now holds the responsible position of Manager and Secretary to Messrs. Beyer, Peacock and Co., Ltd.

Mr. A. F. Halstead almost immediately obtained a commission as Lieut. in the 15th Rifle Brigade, his aptitude and military intelligence being at once noticed by his superior officers, and he was drafted to the Dardanelles with the British Expeditionary Force, being attached to the 1st Royal Dublin Fusiliers, 29th Division. He met his untimely death in that memorable storming of the heights of the Gallipoli peninsula in which his regiment distinguished itself with extraordinary gallantry, but paid such a heavy death toll in effecting that almost humanly insuperable but nevertheless brilliantly successful operation.

Lieut. A. F. Halstead was 22 years of age—the only and dearly loved son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Halstead, Huntly Lodge, Sale, Cheshire. He is a nephew of Mr. J. H. Halstead, Assistant Locomotive Superintendent of the Central Uruguay Railway Company.

VOLUNTEERS FROM URUGUAY

LETTER FROM THE FRONT

The following letter has been received by Mr. C. W. Bayne, of the British Patriotic Committee, Montevideo:

"Last year I wrote to inform you that I had enlisted in the Royal Army Medical Corps. Since then I have been transferred to the Royal Field Artillery. My address now is: Driver R. E. Byrne No. 41812, "B" Battery, 46th Brigade, R.F.A., 14th Division, British Expeditionary Force, France. Would further inform you that J. W. Masters has also transferred to the Artillery, so that Masters, Callender and myself are still together, though in different batteries we often meet out here and talk about the old days in S. A.

We have all been here on active service for upwards of two months. We are getting more or less inured to the hardships of rough work and weather at the front.

We are all interested to know of doings in Montevideo, and I should be very pleased if you could send me an occasional Spanish paper to keep in touch against the time when I hope to return.

Yours faithfully,

(Signed) R. E. BYRNE.

RED CROSS WORK

Address by Mr. F. H.
Chevallier Boutell

CONCERT AT AMERICAN CHURCH

A Choral and Instrumental Concert was given last night in the American Church Hall in aid of the British Red Cross Fund, and of the Benevolent Fund of the Church. With the generosity which characterises the Rev. Dr. McLaughlin and his congregation, the latter item was waived with the result that the entire benefit went to the Red Cross Fund. Mr. F. Chevallier Boutell, Agent for the British Red Cross Fund, was present, and spoke on behalf of that noble institution. The programme was as follows:

Pianoforte duet. Overture, "Ruy Blas" (composed 1839), Mendelssohn. Miss M. Millar and Prof. H. G. Wellby.

Part-song, "Old Tubal Cain," (C. A. E. Harris), choir.

Violin solo, "Hungarian Rhapsody," (Hauser), Mrs. A. H. Davis (accompanist, Miss McKinnon.)

Cantata, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," (T. Anderton), choir. Soloists: Mrs. J. B. Munks, Messrs. A. T. Nickson, Stanley Parker, and W. J. Burton. (Accomp. Miss M. Millar).

Part-song, "A Spring Choir," (Ciro Pinsuti), choir.

A short address by F. H. Chevallier Boutell, Esq., Agent for the British Red Cross Fund.

Collection in aid of British Red Cross.

Cello solo, "Romance," (J. B. Deane), Miss M. Wilkinson.

Part song, "Stay prythee, stay," (Sir H. R. Bishop), choir (accompanist, Miss M. Millar).

Violin solo, "Elfenfantz," (David Popper), Mrs. A. H. Davis (accompanist, Miss McKinnon).

Part-song, "Newquay Fisherman's Song," (D. McKenzie), choir.

Cello solo, "Mazurka," (Bosworth), Miss M. Wilkinson.

Part-song "Comrades of Glory," (T. Mee Pattison), a song of Anglo-Saxon unity, choir.

It was a feature that the vocal music consisted of part songs, vigorously rendered by the Choir, who had been carefully prepared by Professor H. G. Wellby. "The Wreck of the Hesperus," Anderton's Cantata, is Longfellow's well-known sea tragedy, set to music, and was very effective. Mrs. Munks and Messrs. Nickson, Stanley Parker and Burton doing justice to the solos, and Miss M. Millar accompanying this and the other choral music. Mrs. Davis displayed her marked ability as a violinist in the Hungarian Rhapsody with its wild measure, and "Elfenfantz" following the latter with St. Saens' exquisite "Mort de Cygne." Two delightful Cello solos, "Romance" and "Mazurka" were contributed by Miss N. Wilkinson, with a fine breadth and richness of tone.

Professor Wellby introduced Mr. F. Chevallier Boutell, who said that the greatest or one of the greatest Societies in the world, and which was doing the noblest work was the British Red Cross Society, first founded in 1870 by Lord Wantage, V. C. of the Alma. It did great work in the war of that year. In 1898 it was strengthened by the National Commission of the British Red Cross, and up till 1905, had collected two and a half million dollars gold, and spent it on the care of the sick and wounded. In that year Queen Alexandra

LOHENGRIN

Sunday night's performance of "Lohengrin" at the Coliseo, was on the whole, excellent. Señor P. Ballo Marin as the Knight of the Swan, was vocally competent and the malign figure of Frederick of Telramund was most efficiently filled by Sr. Marcolini. As the Emperor, Sr. Melocchi was most impressive both vocally and in person. The Herald of Sr. Alfieri was also excellent. Sra. Viscardi in Elsa, while she sang well was a trifle wooden, a difficulty perhaps belonging partly to the character. Sra. Garibaldi was a dramatic and rich voiced Ortruda. The scenery was good and the orchestration capital throughout, their attack and tempo being beyond cavi.

The Department of War has announced another landslide in the Culebra cut of the Panama Canal, preventing the passage of shipping. It is expected that traffic will be resumed in three days.

convened a great meeting at Buckingham Palace, and in addressing it, said that ever since the South African war, it had been on her mind that more ought to be done. It was then further strengthened by the National Aid Society, and it was arranged that while in peace, it worked independently, it came in war under the authority of the War Office and the Admiralty. She appealed at that time to all the women of the Empire to assist, as it was preeminently women's work. The Patrons of the Society, are the King and Queen of Britain, and its scope is to provide those comforts which are beyond the ordinary provision of the War Department services. There are now at the war fronts, not less than 80,000 men and women engaged in this work and 1300 ambulances, motors, and motor kitchens are scouring the roads picking up and succouring the wounded, and conveying them to the Hospitals. In this unparalleled war, the percentage of deaths is the lowest known. Why? Because of the activities of the Red Cross Society. It was difficult at this distance to realise the horrors of the war, but if those who heard him had been at London Termini, and had seen the trains discharging their loads of wounded, many were remnants of men, they would understand. Mr. Boutell related the moving scene (referred to in a previous report) he had witnessed among the blind soldiers when visiting them with Mr. Pearson, President of the Blind Institute. He appealed to the meeting to give what they could to the Red Cross, not only then but whenever they could. Every day a great work was being done. A dollar might save a man's life, and this was a chance to do one's duty and to help with the greatest work now being done in the world, that of the British Red Cross.

The collection was taken up by four young ladies attractively garbed as Red Cross nurses, and so efficacious was their bearing of the plate, that the sum of $166.40 was announced as a result. Of this only $15 was to be deducted for printing, the net $151 remaining for the Fund, which was considered satisfactory. After the conclusion of the programme, the Rev. Dr. McLaughlin proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Boutell and to Professor Wellby, the artistes and Choir who had given them such a pleasant evening. The result was thus successful financially and otherwise.

"WE SHALL WIN!"

Britain's Part in the War

INSPIRING MESSAGES BY B. A. BRITONS

THE VIEWS OF A NEUTRAL

(EXCLUSIVE TO "THE HERALD")

After twelve months of war the British people are even more optimistic than they were on the outbreak of hostilities.

This spirit of optimism prevails with equal warmth among the British community of the Capital.

To-day we are enabled to publish a series of messages to HERALD readers from prominent local Britons; together with a masterly expression of a neutral's opinion from the pen of the Rev. Dr. McLaughlin, Pastor of the American Church.

The statements in question appear below.

MR. F. H. CHEVALLIER BOUTELL

(BRITISH RED CROSS DELEGATE IN ARGENTINA).

"I believe what every Britisher believes, that we shall win, but I believe with Mr. Lloyd George that it will not be leaden bullets, but silver ones which will gain the victory.

"We know what we have done in holding the German army and their fleet. We know all about capturing their colonies and about the setting of our foot in the Dardanelles, but we must remember that even if we have done nothing, we have lost nothing. The Germans were 15 years in advance of us. Their generals and their officers were always up to concert pitch, whereas we had only arrangements for an army of some 150,000; we did not have thousands of officers, to command the vast army we soon shall have, but now we have the machine to do it and I believe we shall do it, but not yet. The war will go through another winter, another 18 months.

KITCHENER INTENDED TO VISIT B.A.

"To show how little we expected war, I may say that it was only on April 24, 1914, that I was dining with General French at the Automobile Club and a few days later with Lord Kitchener who promised to pay me a visit out here because he had nothing to do. General French also had ideas of a South American tour for the same reason.

"As for Russia, I believe very shortly, perhaps within two and three weeks, we shall have news of great developments. It is hard work following an unbeaten army and it cannot be followed for ever, we must have a change soon."

MR. A. G. PRUDEN

(CHAIRMAN OF THE BRITISH SOCIETY).

"I think that the Germans by their organisation have shewn their criminal intent and I believe that the British Government have earned a debt of gratitude from the whole world by their capacity in protecting shipping. England had an army of some 260,000 to 270,000 men. To-day it has an army of 3,000,000. This only shews what the British nation is made of."

MR. W. WATSON

(HON. TREASURER, THE BRITISH SOCIETY.)

We now realise that Britain must win this war. Six months ago it was "Business as usual." To-day this has completely changed "It is war first and business afterwards."

REV. DR. MC LAUGHLIN

(PASTOR, AMERICAN CHURCH.)

"I am impressed first of all with the spiritual and moral bankruptcy of Germany. From my childhood days I have known its people, its language, its literature and religion, and only a little before the war my admiration for all these led me to travel through the length and breadth of its Empire. The most painful disillusion of my life has been the death and disappearance of the old Germany and the unspeakable brutality and lack of conscience of the New. With the Editor of the North American Review I believe that England, with her allies, is fighting for Righteousness, Democracy and Liberty.

GERMANY BRANDED WITH ETERNAL INFAMY.

"It is hard for non-Americans to understand how the history and very existence of the United States are rooted in the tradition of non-interference in European wars. Still I should have rejoiced had my country officially protested against awful cruelties—the diabolical atrocities perpetrated against unarmed civilians, including helpless women and children, as shown in the Lord Bryce Report. The sinking of the Lusitania will brand the German Empire with eternal infamy. For President Wilson and his course I have confidence and admiration without limit. Christian America unanimously endorses him and should it come to the worst will stand behind him to the last man and the last drop of blood.

REV. DR. FLEMING

(ST. ANDREW'S SCOTCH CHURCH)

"Being so far away it is difficult to realise the immensity of the conflict. We must remember, that whenever a European war has occurred it has lasted some years and we must not, therefore, be surprised if the present war lasts longer than was originally thought."

REV. W. M. LAING

(ST. ANDREW'S SCOTCH CHURCH)

"I think much of the German news is as reliable as our own and that it will yet be a long time before the war is over."

REV. H. WESTBY RRADY

(CHAPLAIN, MISSIONS TO SEAMEN.)

"Twelve months of war have found the country stronger by far than it was in the beginning. We are more fully convinced of the justice of our aims and more ready to go on to the end in freedom's cause 'who lives if England dies, who dies if England lives'?"

We have seen what the strongest and best organised army in the world can do against Britain and her Allies. We have seen the wonderful resistance of an army of willing soldiers against an army made by compulsion. Germany has called up her reserves, Britain's new first line has yet to be given trial.

Her navy has by quiet wonderful work gained control of the seven seas.

Her merchant service carries on her work as though there were no war. This we see each day. Her methods are honourable and as far as war makes it possible, humane.

ENGLISH GOLD

AN INCREASED DEMAND

The demand for English sovereigns is on the increase, with the result that the exchange value of the sovereign is advancing. On the Argentine market the cause is unknown, but yesterday morning, there was a complete absence of gold circulation and none was offered for sale. Good purchasers had to pay increased prices, and gold now remains firm at a premium of 3 per cent.

FIFTEEN MEN ASPHYXIAIED

CAPITAL'S UNWHOLESOME DRAINS

On August 5th several workmen engaged in underground sanitary works were asphyxiated. The bodies of two of them have already been recovered, while several others are stated to be in a grave condition.

A gang of workmen under a foreman were despatched to the corner of Venezuela and General Uruquiza for the purpose of cleaning up the main drain, which has been neglected of late and the main descent into which is situated at the corner of these streets. Five workmen descended into the drain, the foreman remaining above. All were furnished with lamps and cleaning instruments and were instructed to make the "round" of the drain, up to Belgrano, Rioja, Rivadavia, and back to the point of entry. After a considerable time the foreman, remarking the non-return of the peons, descended the drain and shouted to them. There was no answering call and the foreman noticing the fumes of gas, began to suspect a catastrophe. He went for assistance and ventured with a body of firemen. A preliminary search brought to light the body of a workman named Pedro Infantin. The fumes of gas forced them back to the surface for some time, but on again descending they came across two more bodies, those of Carmelo Scallievi and Nicolas Scato, both of whom were unconscious. Doctors were on the scene and immediately rendered first aid and artificial respiration. In the operation of continuing the search for the other two workmen, the head of Comisaria No. 10 Florentino Dominguez, the chief of the firemen Ambrosio Jara, and three other helpers Francisco Suarez, Antonio Romero and Juen Funes were also asphyxiated.

Later, steps were taken to ventilate the drain and after a period of two more hours, the bodies of the two missing workmen Pablo Brighato and Nicolas Pelossi were recovered. They were immediately taken to the Ramos Mejia Hospital where oxygen was administered. Pelossi has recovered. A police official (name unknown) and the firemen Manuel Paz, Augustin Aguirre, Silva Gonzalez and Fernando Vitullo are all of them in a more or less grave condition.

The affair has created no small sensation. It is a well known fact that the drainage of the city is none too carefully supervised and on many occasion the smell arising from some of them can be actually "felt." Although it is to be regretted that the

POLICE OFFICIALS IN COMBAT

TWO MEN WOUNDED.

An affair between two police officials, which has ended in the wounding of both of them, is reported from Rosario.

An inspector named Tomas Munez was on his rounds and discovered a vigilante, who was on duty at the corner of Avenida Pellegrini in a state of drunkenness and in such a condition that he could not fulfil his duties. The inspector arrested the man and was proceeding to the station when the latter drew his revolver and fired two shots at his superior. One of these was blank and the other took effect. In return Munez fired on his assailant and hit him in the chest.

More police and the ambulance was soon on the scene, and the two injured officials taken to the Asistencia Publica. The vigilante Segundo Lobos is in a dangerous condition and the inspector is considered to blame for not having disarmed him on arrest.

affair of yesterday afternoon was one of such a serious nature, it should have a most salutary effect upon the authorities controlling the sanitation of the city. The matter demands the closest investigation and the promptest of measures for the public safety.

Later information received states that an enormous gathering of people surrounded the place of the occurrence. Ten firemen were first on the scene, followed an hour later by 15 more, a body of police agents, 16 peons from the Municipality, 30 boys from the Coronel Ram6n Falc6n Asylum, eight ambulances, five doctors and 10 medical assistants. In all 15 persons are under treatment at the Ramos Mejia Hospital. Captain Blanco, although under treatment is stated to be out of danger, but Lieutenant Vinas is stated to be in a grave condition.

The affair has resulted in the death of Infantin, an Italian, 35 years of age, who was found dead and the others have been identified as Scarbagliatri and Giacatto, both Italians, 26 and 29 years of age respectively. They have since died.

A BRITON'S POINT OF VIEW

Facts and Fiction in the Argentine

By Addison Steele

Note.—The following is written without malice or evil intention. The characters drawn are purely imaginary.

PART II.

Speaking of pantomimes, when I perform in my modest way, I must have sole interest of my audience. Not long ago I was at a wedding reception, and afterwards there was an informal concert amongst the guests, and I was asked to recite a pathetic ballad, though of course I said "No, I really couldn't," and all that insincere rot. I had got well into the second verse, and had got my audience down with intense drama, when the door opened suddenly, and a manservant announced Mr. and Mrs. Montajutigg. There are times when swearing is the most appropriate, and the only thing to do, but when you are on the stage in the middle of a passionate monologue, the chances seem against you. I believe there were some people who were sorry for me, for they said, "Hush! Don't make a noise, etc.," but there were others who seemed delighted to see Mr. and Mrs. Montajutigg, and he had to explain the reason why he was so late. He even went into a long story of how his wife missed the train, and how and what he had for dinner in town. Of course, I couldn't stand there looking like a fool, so I said "Ladies and gentlemen, I will now give you an imitation of how Mr. Montajutigg lost his train." I felt greatly satisfied after this, and I am sure it pleased the bride. But in regard to the fiddlers and the noise of glasses and laughter, it seems a little sad upon the composers and upon the players, although even they see the humour of the thing when they count the paper dollars at the end of the month. Timber wanted to know how much the lady musicians in cafés got, and was going to ask the waiter. I am glad he didn't, because the waiter would have thought he wanted to borrow. Everybody borrows more or less in Argentina, and credit has been brought to a fine art. It is quite easy to live from month to month without paying anything. Naturally some are cleverer than others in this way, but now that the crisis has bitten them rather severely, they look for your money in advance. I personally dislike paying in advance for anything, because I never seem to get my money's worth. At a flat in which I once lived outside the city the landlady spoke of long courses and excellent variety of food, until I thought I had struck a Paradise, but after the first few days I found that the spinach and chopped sausage were separate dishes and there was no joint nor wine, very little fruit, no coffee, because she didn't think I liked it, and absolutely no comfort whatever, so the next night I got my meals served in the bedroom. This was really too much. I don't hold with meals by the bedside, so I carefully distributed the macaroni over the highly polished floor, and packing my bags, called the good lady in. Her screams must have been heard for miles, for I could hear many windows being opened. She barred the door with both hands. I was not to pass until I had cleaned it up, but I evaded her and darted down the three flights of stone stairs at top speed. I have never paid in advance since then, and I hope my words will be a warning. It is better to pay weekly, and I am sure the nation would be better off if it paid on that principle.

The dice box is a wonderful institution. South America without dice would be like a balloon without gas. There are many forms of gambling in this rollicking old world, but there are none that hold such a complete satisfaction as the simple dice. To speak about this kind of gamble to the uninitiated is impossible, so to those who have never handled the shaker I trust that the day they may have the opportunity, then and only then will they understand the charm of their old fashioned sport.

The theatrical show that Timber affected was a production by the amateurs in the city. It was a farce got up to benefit and cheer the lives of the English residents, only the theatrical supporters had not been over enthusiastic lately, and it was up to me to pull them through, as I had acted before, in many theatres in London.

We said good-night to Timber and Perkins at their flat, and Smithers and I waited for the tram to take us to the station. Every tram in Buenos Aires has a number on the top in big figures, so you only have to learn your numbers to get all over the city. It is the greatest tramway service in the world, I should imagine, for there are over a hundred different routes running for miles out into the country and connecting up small villages on its way. Sometimes the only road is the tram track, where you splash along over the sleepers and tiny bridges, muddy paths and slippery banks. It is the only cheap thing in Buenos Aires, and in this, you get too much for your money. The great advantage is that they run all night. No sooner are you seated in the car than in comes a paper boy who shouts the late editions down your neck—a most hideous noise. I swore quietly under my breath.

The short railway trip to our suburb accomplished, we shake hands and go divers ways, and the policeman at the corner blows his whistle. It is not for our benefit; he is simply calling to his comrade; it is for the public safety, and this system of calling is good, for there are no side turnings in Buenos Aires, no little alleys, and courts in which the burglar can make his escape, so they guard the squares, and you can rest in peace unless the whistle wakes you up, and the sweeping carts are still, also. There is not a high average of burglaries to the amount of people, and the only robberies one suffers is from the local tradesmen, whose great desire is to rob you of ten cents or more, it may be.

The next day, Sunday, we decided to go up the river. Early morn found us down by the beautiful stream. The Lujan has a splendid charm of its own; it flows out of the River Plate at San Fernando, leaving the Tigre on the left. For boating parties and within easy rowing distance are Recreos—or houses of refreshment in which you can wander round amongst the peaches and oranges. Also you can amuse yourself by cooking your own sheep, or joint, in the prepared stone fireplace built for the purpose. The whole place is more or less wild. There are no signboards marked "Private," or "Trespassers will be prosecuted." There are no iron railings, which tell you to keep off the grass. Here the undergrowth is thick, and with a sharp knife you have heaps of material for your fire. For a picnic it is ideal. You may be miles away from any living soul, yet within a stone's throw behind the trees, you are in touch with civilisation. All the recreos are not the same. Some are more advanced, even than those I've been speaking of; places more or less like hotels where you can spend the night in a decent bed, and get a very good dinner with every drink under the sun. On the other hand there are some old-fashioned places that you feel you are in the backwoods. I had just put a quantity of brushwood on the fire to get ready for lunch. As Timber and Perkins had gone to the Recreo to bring up the little things we had left behind, such as salt, mustard, etc., etc., Smithers was reading the newspaper, a Buenos Aires edition of news especially salted for their readers and which came out every morning except days after holidays, when they felt it their duty to give their employees a rest. When you read the "S——," said Smithers, "you never know exactly where you are. Look at this advertisement; it's upside down. I expect the man who 'set this up' is an Argentine; no one else would see the humour: here also are some words spelt wrongly. I wonder who the reader is? I once called on the "S——" and—"You are burning the meat!" This remark was addressed to me, for the fire had caught some of the fat and was fast devouring our mid-day meal. Timber and Perkins came up with the supplies, and seeing the situation, helped me to cut away the affected parts.

We thoroughly enjoyed our merry lunch, under the blazing sun. Who cares whether the flies eat your butter or the mosquitoes bite your ankles? Who cares whether you have a fork or plate to eat the fruit? No one bothers; everyone is happy. A meal with no ceremony, under the trees, up the Tigre, has its own blessing, and there's nothing like forgetting your troubles and thereby receiving the full flavour of the simple life.

We sculled about five miles, wending our way round the pretty channels that connect these rivers, and arrived back at the Tigre Boat Club to change and have tea. The Tigre Boat Club is splendidly situated, its lawn and landing stage runs down to the Lujan and makes an excellent spot to finish your day's labour. The boatman takes your skiff and you hie to your dressing room to bath and change. The active rowing men have good quarters in the galpón the last few years. When we got back the eight were about to take the water for a spin, a better set up crew one wouldn't wish to meet. I like the rowing man he is generally straight, and a good hearted cheerful individual, one who will make a good friend. Smithers can't stand them at any price, can't see any humour he says, in 8 strong men trying to pull their hearts out, "where's the sense?" "besides they never win anything." The Club house has a veranda on which tea is served and very well too.

For people like ourselves that don't tea, there's a bar in which, a complete assortment of bottles are shown to advantage. We ferried across to the station and soon steamed away to town. The carriage was full of holiday makers and lively girls and I watched Smithers giving the glad eye to the girl opposite she passed it on to her friend and soon the whole compartment was giving glad eyes to me and another, the whole atmosphere was one of concealed merriment, making the journey seem delightfully short. The conductor takes your ticket, he sways from one side to another as he passes through the corridor he slams the intervening doors, which make you jump out of your skin, the stations come and go, he keeps on doing it and so on and so on until you wonder if the rolling stock of any railway can ever stand the strain.

After some difficulty I got my three companions to come and live with me at Belgrano in a boarding house a few squares from the station. Timber wasn't over enthusiastic over boarding houses, for he found they were only places in which the landlady was out for blood, or else they had some evil design of getting one of their daughters off their hands. Smithers agreed with me, he said there was nothing like casas de pensión for humour. Perkins also had objections, but this was on account of dress, but when I informed them, there was no daughters eligible for marriage and that dress didn't matter except a collar for dinner, they seemed satisfied. They came in at the end of the month.

It was a big house and there were many boarders all of whom were pleased to see us. Round the festive board, starting from the right, were first, the bank clerk in his Club blazer and dancing pumps. I could feel he was wearing fancy socks to match by the way he stuck his feet out. He seemed to have had a busy day in B. Mitre, for every now and then, his eyes would half close, and a frown would come over his face. He never spoke, unless someone asked him a direct question. Next came another banker, a man who looked like a soldier, a merry fellow he also had had a busy day in the centre, for he was going to put his fish in his lap instead of his serviette. Opposite to him was a camp man up for the Palermo Horse Show, a most wonderful specimen and one of the greatest liars I have ever had the pleasure of hearing. I felt pleased Smithers sat next to him, he may by chance keep him under. Then came a thin fellow who looked like Wellington, only he was a jewellers assistant. Then there was a man called Bluebird, a round little thing who never eat sweets and who only drank water, in fact he had it for breakfast, with dry bread. Its remarkable how a habit clings to men after many years. But this man was intellectual, he could talk on any subject from a sparking plug to road making, and it was very interesting to hear his opinion, even on the simple diet. He told me in a quiet moment after dinner, that he had walked from Retiro station to Belgrano on the railway line with his coat off purely for exercise. Smithers who was close by, asked if they put the signals down for him to pass? I don't think he liked Smithers after that. Timber got into conversation with the camp man and I could hear bits such as.

A PROMISE OF SPRING

"Everybody comes for a short time, but they stay forever" said a cheerful friend when I said I was only in Argentina for as short a time as I could make it.

"For-ever!" Surely not and if so why?" I asked.

"Well" said my friend.

"I don't know but you never get money enough to get away first as you would like to get away, and so wait the little longer and a little longer still, and presently you find you are here to stay."

Full of dislike of the place and its conditions, and full of the longing for one's own country, one feels sure that the cheerful friend must be wrong; but presently you meet another friend, who says he has been here nine years, although he came only for one; and yet another who has been going every year for six years, and now he is waiting until "the war is over."

And then you begin to ponder, and that far-away "home sweet home" looks farther away still, and then you decide to put the longing aside anyway until after the war. I read a story about Labrador recently, and remember that there is a class of people living on that uninviting coast called "livyerers," the word being a contraction of "live-heres," those who gave the name evidently finding that those people who could settle on such inhospitable shores, should be distinguished by a name of their own.

The "livyerers" were once enthusiastic young men who had gone to Labrador full of ambition and hope: but who postponing the fulfilment of their desires, also postponed their return; until the country got them in its grip; and they found themselves fast bound to the cold rocks of Labrador, never getting either enough energy or money to leave the place. So possibly the lure of impossible fortunes to be made in Argentina keeps us all chained here, waiting for the "good times" which never come, or for the end of the war, or any old excuse will serve to wear out the time which should be devoted to the effort of quitting; unless indeed the country has got its grip on us, and the desire to get away is a habit and nothing more. And, indeed, when one gets outside the city, and sees the many beauty spots to be enjoyed, the intensity of the longing to leave Argentina in the haze of distance becomes lost in the pleasure of sensuous delight. One of the many beauty spots is Vicente Lopez. A ramble through the pleasant grounds to the hotel is invigorating and tea on the patio where a fine view of Buenos Aires and districts is obtainable is still more so. One forgets the crowded streets the ever "chaotic" pavements, the endless noise, the smoke and the stir of the city when with elbow room and to spare, one is taking in deep draughts of eucalyptus-scented air, or drinking deep of oxygen purified by the sweet mimosa-blossom and the honey-laden pitosperum. One sees the promise of spring everywhere. The "broom" brushes are in bud, and the rose-beds, show the little green shoots on the thorny stems which will soon mean sweet-smelling bouquets of the queen of flowers. And the "livyerers" are not slow to take advantage of what offers beyond the city discomforts.

The tennis courts at Belgrano are well patronised, "Golf" station is a busy one, all the Sunday pastimes are much sought after for it is the day when the country gets its fastest grip on the stranger within its gates. The coming of spring is always a most happy time anywhere. In England after the dreary, leaden winter it is glorious—it is as if a heavy pall of gloom were suddenly lifted, and the WOMEN TO THE FRONT!

At a recent meeting in London the significance of the change which war needs have wrought in the activities of militant leaders was emphasised by Mrs. Pankhurst's retort to a lonely interrupter in the gallery, who (after an apparent protest against well-to-do women volunteering "while other women are starving"), cried, "We want the vote first."

"Well, I am glad to think she is in a very small minority," said Mrs. Pankhurst, and the meeting cheered heartily. "The majority of the women who are suffragists wanted the vote in order that they might serve their country by using it and when their country is in peril the women suffragists of this country, who knew why they wanted the vote, are ready to work night and day—if need be, to die—in order to win this war, so that we may win new victories for liberty and civilisation in the future."

Those who spoke about the women's movement as an anti-war movement," she declared, "were greatly mistaken. They failed to understand that women were carrying on an agitation against anti-womanism. The women's movement never was anti-man, never has been, and never will be."

We were fighting, in Germany, a nation fully organised for war, and in that organisation, from the very beginning, the services of women had been taken into account. She gave the following figures to show the proportion of German women engaged in war work:

	Per cent.
Munitions	40
Harness making and leather goods	15
Tent-making	50
Drugs	33
Surgical appliances	15
Field-glasses	20
Tinned provisions	75
Textile goods	75
Tobacco	70

"If," she said, "we had the same number of women engaged there would be released for war service an overwhelming number of men who are now engaged in doing that kind of work for this country. We hope the National Register is going to accomplish that great work."

Mrs. Pankhurst spoke very effectively of what she saw in France, thanks to the kindness of the Minister of Munitions, M. Thomas, with whom she had an interview. She visited a large motor-car works which has been converted into a munition factory. "In that works," said Mrs. Pankhurst, "I saw women who, before the war, had had no training whatever, now making shells and fuses. I brought back with me some specimens of their work, and I was told, while I was there, that there restrained things of Nature were given freedom, and bounding life had taken the place of suspended animation. In Argentina, the coming of spring is hailed with mixed feelings. It unfortunately, means that nasty things are to follow. The days when the clear, blue sky is almost white with the intensity of heat, when the mild breezes blow hot, and when the bichos that cease not their buzzing and their stinging are emerging from their winter fastnesses, to change their "fasts" into "feasts"; and we provide the feasts. But in the early days, when the trees and shrubs are in bud and blossom, when the dainty green of the fields is young; and the birds are twittering their love songs, nothing can be fairer than the suburbs of the Argentine Capital. And this may be one of the secrets why the "livyerers" live here!

are women making shells so heavy that it takes two women to lift them. They are making fine and delicate portions of mechanism which, it seemed to me, was work infinitely more suitable for women than men."

"These things are known to Mr. Lloyd George," she continued. "And so we may augur the very best from the fact that Mr. Lloyd George has appointed a day on which to receive our deputation."

Madame Clara Butt (speaking as Mrs. Kennerley Rumford) followed with a neat and effective speech. "Courage," she said, "is sexless. The days for men to work and women to weep are over."

Another statement made at a meeting of the Board of Agriculture in London recently was "Women must keep the farm going!"

The President, Lord Selbourne, made an appeal to the women of every class to assist the farmer with their labour.

Many are the lessons learned in Flanders. "When I was," he said, in France and Flanders a short time ago nothing struck me more than the complete manner in which agricultural operations had been carried out by the French and Belgian farmers right up to the British lines, and even within the zone of German shell fire, and yet there were no able-bodied men to be seen in the fields. The work had been entirely done by men incapable of fighting and by women and children. I am sure that in such a national crisis as the present the farmers of England and Wales will not fall behind those of France and Belgium in meeting war conditions, and that they will not only maintain, but actually increase, their output of agricultural produce.

"The appeal I would make to the women is not to go and work because they want the money which they would earn, but because it is the special contribution they can make to the success of our arms in the present war. The women who helps to keep the farm going by milking or hoeing will be contributing to the defeat of Germany as surely as her husband or son who is guarding the North Sea or fighting in the trenches.

"My appeal is not addressed alone to the wives and daughters of agricultural labourers, but to the women of every class, and the less a woman needs to earn money for the support of herself and family the more insistent would be my appeal to her patriotism—by organisation, by practical example, by counsel, and by influence to see to it that the women in the agricultural districts of England and Wales make their contribution to victory.

"To the farmers I would say: "Do not reject a form of labour to which you are unaccustomed because you have not proved its value." If your need is not urgent now it may very well become so next year, and the earlier the organisation of women's labour in each county is completed the sooner will that labour become efficient."

Miss Julia C Lathrop had the distinction of being appointed chief of a federal bureau. When it was decided to make the Children's Bureau a part of the Department of Commerce and Labour, Miss Lathrop, who had done excellent work in Chicago, was invited to come to Washington and organise the work for child welfare throughout the country. It had been estimated that at least 200,000 babies, half of whom might have been saved, died every year, and Miss Lathrop at once set to work to discover the reasons of this great mortality and to diffuse information, provide service and instruction, and otherwise set machinery to work to save the lives of babies and of older children, too.

Women have fairly established themselves as lawyers in America. Arkansas, Georgia and Virginia are the only States where women are not allowed to practice law.

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

A little time ago the whole of the front row of stalls at the London Alhambra was allotted to Tommies—blind Tommies blinded in that hell over in Flanders says Mr. Gossip in the Daily Sketch. They were led along, fumbling feeling their way, in single file. When, guided by kindly hands, they were settled in their seats, one called out, "Where are yer Bill?" "Ere I am, wot abaht it?" "Got yer opera-glasses with yer?" Spirit like this baffles comment.

Despite some years of strenuous platform work in two hemispheres, Mrs. Philip Snowden preserves her youthful appearance. Some years ago (says a writer in the Manchester Guardian), when Mrs. Snowden's name was less known in public work, she was lecturing in a small Lancashire town. The chairman was anxious to assure the audience that, though Mrs. Snowden might look youthful, her intellect was mature, and this is how he did it. "She may look a bit young," said the kindly man; "but looks is not everything, and I can tell you as Mrs. Snowden is no spring chicken!"

Lady Granard, whose husband has been appointed Vice-Admiral of the Province of Connaught, is one of the many charming American peeresses, being before her marriage Miss Ogden Mills, of Staatsburg. She takes a very keen interest in her Irish home, Castle Forbes, which she has greatly improved and beautified since her marriage six years ago. She has two very charming little girls.

Queen Elizabeth of Belgium has written and published books on a variety of subjects. She is very fond of household pets, and one of her books contains a series of animal anecdotes founded on her own experiences. She is a keen motorist, and she and King Albert have often mended a punctured motor tyre on the road when they have been driving alone in the country near Brussels.

Lady Carnarvon's hospital for officers at Highclere Castle is an ideal abode for convalescents. This stately Berkshire seat is a big, handsome mansion, with lofty central tower, standing nearly 600ft above sea-level in a grand park. In normal times there is usually a big party at Highclere for Newbury races, and shooting parties are entertained in the winter, for Lady Carnarvon figures largely in social life. She has also serious tastes, one being Egyptology, which she shares with Lord Carnarvon, an experienced and learned archaeologist, as well as a fine all-round sportsman.

Miss Betty Manners, elder daughter of Lord and Lady Manners, accompanied her twin sister, Miss Angela Manners, when the latter went to Dinard to resume nursing work. Miss Angela Manners, with Mr. Winston Churchill's sister-in-law, Miss Nellie Hozier, a doctor and five nurses, took an ambulance to Belgium in the early days of the war, and remained until the beginning of December, when the German authorities broke up the merciful little enterprise. The party suffered imprisonment, insult, and a considerable amount of hardship before it was permitted to travel home by way of Germany, Denmark, and Norway to Newcastle-on-Tyne. Lord and Lady Manners, who thus heroically lend their daughters, lost their elder son in France on September 1.

In conferring the vote unreservedly on women, as now held by men, Denmark has beaten her cautious dependency, Iceland, which gave the vote only to women of forty-five and upwards. But this discrepancy is automatically removed in leaps of five years until twenty-five, which is the male Icelandic's coming of age as a voter.

LAND OF LILLIPUT

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians,

I have just returned from an afternoon at the Parque Lezama and I am wondering whether you all know of this beautiful place; because I have spoken of it to so many Lilliputians' mothers, and they say they have never heard of the gardens.

Some time ago I wrote about them and of the museum there; this has been closed for repairs for a very long time, and I did not enquire to-day, if it were open or not, because outside was so much nicer than inside, the air was so balmy, there was a breath of Spring in the trees, and the sun shone so brightly in the early afternoon that one could be satisfied to wander through the avenues, or to sit on one of the many seats under the trees, and just live. It seems such a pity to see such a large public garden and so few Lilliputians in them, to get the benefits it offers. There is so much to amuse and educate the young mind, the gardeners are busy turning over the soil for the young plants, all the winter flowers are in bloom, the camellia trees are crimson with their wax-like blossoms, and the red japonica flowers make gay many trellis works and fences. Then there are the many coloured irises, also the white, or as we used to call them when I lived in Lilliput—flags—and the golden marigolds, and even the pretty little heartsease, which cannot wait for the coming of Spring, before putting on their best velvet clothing, and showing their bright little pansy faces. The lawns are green as the fresh young grass knows how to be, and the trees are beginning to get their summer clothing ready. Everything is delightful in the shady walks, the birds sing gaily among the evergreens, and the goldfish in the fountain ponds on the lower terrace are busily darting hither and thither in the shallow waters, half hidden by banks of sweet clover and other green growth pleasant to the sight. Here and there are little groups of Lilliputians playing while the nurses and guardians or maybe the parents keep watchful eyes lest they stray on parterres marked "Es prohibido pasar." On one seat is an elderly lady busily knitting—maybe her thoughts fly more quickly than her needles, to the war-zone perhaps, where she may have relations or friends, for her knitting is—socks.

There are men sitting, some convalescing (do you know that word means getting strength after illness?) for their faces are pale and thin, they are wrapped up warmly despite the hot day, and as one passes one gets a whiff of that "hospital" odour, which there is no mistaking; others are reading, some the pages where the advertisements appear in the "Diarios"—this tells its own story. And there are old men smoking serenely in the balmy breeze, as if they had finished with the toil and toils of the busy world, to be seen on every side from the terraces of the Parque Lezama, and were content to pass their thoughts with the rest of their lives away in smoke! Then at the little tables there are a few couples, refreshing themselves with drinks and chat while the "music" of the merry-go-round entices the young folk to take a 10 centavos worth of ride. And which Lilliputian can visit this Parque and not notice two big white geese, which usually keep guard with the keeper at the entrance gates? They are part of the Parque, they are, I am sure, quite wise and know all about their little friends who pay them so many visits, they are as dignified as any human— whoever first called the goose silly? He or she should pay a call to Parque Lezama, and make the acquaintance of this snowy pair, and correct his or her judgment. On the playground portion of the Parque there were several boys sailing their boats. The pond is a miniature of that in Kensington Gardens certainly; but the boys here seem to get quite as much fun as those in far-away London. They were sailing their boats and the little white wings responded to the breeze and simply flew their boats from one side to the other of the pond where their owners would start them on a fresh voyage across the waters. And the onlookers were interested, so interested, in what some wiseacres would term simply nothing! They were enjoying, truly, what the Italians would call "dolce far niente," which means the pleasure of doing nothing, which is not at all the same thing as that meant by the wiseacres. Then at the "sand" garden, there is quite another group of Lilliputians working hard for their living, as we are told Saturday's children must do. They are building castles, making tunnels and labouring at other architecture which also will result in nothing, for it will be all levelled down again, that "sand garden," for "mañana" and mañanas for many to come. But who shall say the work is nothing? It is everything to those Lilliputians who undertake it. It is work, it is play, it is health, it is the breath of life. And when Lilliputians cannot have gardens, real gardens of their own to dig in, and plant in, and grow in, the make-believe "sand gardens" where houses, castles, bridges, and tunnels of a day spring up with regularity is a good substitute. Where is one of you who does not enjoy his or her "sand-garden"? Now the sun is clouded over, the breeze has changed from its balminess to chilliness, and there is an exodus setting in; and we, with our Lilliputians, go too, saying not "Adios," but "Hasta la vista" to those beautiful things which are for all those who wish in the Parque Lezama. I wish it could be "Hasta mañana."

And now I will give you a story written by a little New Zealander called Violet Curtis, aged 13 only, which is all about a little bird—a native of New Zealand—called the tui. The story is called

"A TUI'S GRIEF."

I am a tui: the king of all the small birds. I have a beautiful voice. I am the songster of the forest. People stop and listen in wonder when they hear me sing for the first time. My loud piano-like peals ring through the forest and can be heard a mile away on a beautiful day.

Some people say that I am very pretty, while others say I am not. Presently I shall tell you how I came to know that I am pretty. Now you shall know what my colour is like. My back is a black greenish colour (very shiny), my tail is dark, and on my breast is the same colour as my tail, while under my throat are two tufts of pure white fibery-looking feathers. Around my neck the feathers are smaller than elsewhere, and more fibery.

I love to perch on the topmost twig, on the highest tree I can find, and puff out my chest, drag my wings, and dance a jig on the twig as I peal forth my beautiful notes.

But a tui's life is not always so gay as it seems to be—our worst enemy is a man with a gun. It is not always a man though, it is generally boys, and girls too take part in the cruel sport of killing tuis. I shall tell you a very sad story, which perhaps will teach you who read this, to be kind and leave us birds our happy life. I used to have many tui friends and the ones I liked best were a family of three, whom I visited every day.

This family was the father and mother tui, and baby tui; the latter had just finished his task of learning to fly.

One day I visited them, as I had always done, and the father bird suggested: "Say we take a trip to Blackberry Valley. The ink-berry and flax flowers are lovely at this time?" (This feast plentifully on ink-berry and the honey in the flax flowers).

"Yes, yes. It will be lovely!" exclaimed we, and off we flew in high glee.

Such a feast we had, but before we had finished along came two men and a boy, with those horrid things, guns. But we silly birds went on greedily eating the nice berries, and presently I heard the boy exclaim: "Look, uncle, there are some tuis. They're fine an' fat, let's practise on them!"

"Yes!" answered the uncle, "we got no pigs or goats, so we will revenge ourselves on these fine birds!" And ere another word was spoken two shots rang out and the two oldest birds fell dead. I cried a warning to the sad young tui, and we flew a few chains off to rest in a green puriri tree. "Oh!" said I, for as we looked another man appeared who turned out to be a policeman, and right glad was I to see one come and find out what the men had done. "Where is your license?" asked he as he perceived the two parent birds.

"Why—er—well, we've got none," confessed the dejected looking men, whereupon the policeman blew a whistle and another man appeared.

"We arrest you for shooting protected birds! Do you know the fine for shooting a parson bird?" said the policemen as they led away the shooters.

Now you shall hear my own story—how I became the pet of a little girl only ten years old.

On a topmost twig one beautiful day I was peeling forth my notes of "Kong! Kong!" the woods echoing and re-echoing my song, when a party of hunters came under the tree, and I, silly bird, thinking to attract their admiration, I swooped downwards to get closer, but before I reached my lower perch a bullet from one of the shameless party passed through my foot and wing and I dropped helpless to the ground. I tried to hop to a shelter, a few inches away, but the pain was dreadful, and I lay cowering from the touch of the man. "Perhaps Mary would like to see it alive; I'll keep it to show her," he said. "Here they are now," he added, glancing up to see two big girls and a little one running down to them. The little girl, seeing me half dead in her brother's hand, cried: "Harold, how can you be so cruel!" and bursting into tears the kind little girl added, "Give the poor bird to me?"

"Why, Jessie, I thought you'd like a tui for a pet; now you have one you will not be contented!" answered her brother.

"Oh! Mary, isn't he cruel? He knew I would rather go without one than have it hurt like this. I hate you!" She looked fiercely at her cruel brother. She took me home and tended my wing and leg till they were quite well. In the mornings, too, I would watch from my cage in the kitchen and she would come to teach me words. It was she who taught me to say "Good morning, good day." Then one beautiful sunny day she opened my prison door and I flew out, but Jessie was delighted when she found out I would not leave so kind a friend. Soon I would leave her late in the mornings and go to the forest, coming always to dear little Jessie in the afternoon, to stay till the next morning. Now I have no more time to tell you more—I think I have told you all—for I must go to the bush as usual, Good morning!"

With love, from

"Egeria."

FROM THE DARDANELLES TO LONDON

STOWAWAY BUGLER WHO GOT TO THE FRONT.

A string of motor-buses loaded with soldiers in the blue coats of convalescents attracted general attention as they passed through London to St. Paul's recently.

They were part of a contingent of Australian and New Zealand troops who, wounded in the early fighting in the Dardanelles, were sufficiently recovered to visit London for the memorial service to their comrades. Singing snatches of song, their spirits appeared to be unaffected by the terrible experiences they had undergone.

A party were entertained by the Victoria League Club in Regent Street, and although most of them were limping, and not a few were on crutches, or still had Turkish shrapnel bullets in their bodies, they were the very reverse of depressed.

Among them was a lad, Bugler Cumming, who claims to be the youngest member of the Australian Expeditionary Force. He was wounded in the leg and in the lungs. The first shot caught him as he was half-way up the cliffs in the heroic landing, and he rolled to the foot and began climbing again, when he was bowled over by a lung wound, the bullet of which has not yet been extracted.

A Melbourne lad, he stated that he was refused by the authorities both there and at Sydney. "So I stowed away aboard a transport, and they were glad to have me when they found me and learned that I knew the bugle," he added. "I shall be eighteen in October," he said, and, with a touch of pride, "I am two stones heavier than when I left Australia."

A New Zealand infantryman exhibited as a curiosity a bullet dented by part of a Turkish bullet which had penetrated the muzzle of his rifle. "I had laid the rifle on the top of the trench," he explained, "and the Turkish bullet hit it, a portion flying off and wounding a comrade and the remainder entering the muzzle and striking this bullet inside."

Most of the men are filled with a vague wonder that they should have survived the appalling Turkish fire poured upon them in the course of the landing, but they assert that as soon as the enemy saw the British troops advancing they broke and fled from their positions. "Otherwise," said one man, "we might still be trying to land there."

POLITEAMA THEATRE

"FREGOLI."

Fregoli has re-appeared before the Buenos Aires public, after an absence of many years, and the only fault that can be found with him is his age. He has returned as fresh and merry as ever, but he is not quite the same idol of the public as formerly, perhaps because the sensation of surprise and novelty which were experienced the first time he was here has worn off. His programme, however, is attractive and draws full houses since the opening night. The famous sketch "Article 338"; the parody of Faust, "Crispino," in which Fregoli fills six characters; the comical scene called "La Honradez," and the variety turn, are all performed with the irresistible deftness which has made this artist famous. His ubiquity and quickness are as remarkable as ever. His voice still retains its faculty of fitting the character he represents, though age has robbed it of freshness. What Fregoli will never lose—his personality—is apparent in the interested attention of the audience.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

The appalling figure on our front page of illustrations this week is a German soldier arrayed for "protection against English gas-bombs," vide the official German description of his appearance. The "Illustrated London News" labels the picture "Colossal Impudence." Long before the British public knew that their men were being poisoned in the trenches, the Germans spread the report that the British were employing asphyxiating gases. The real explanation of the accoutrements of the gentleman in the picture is that frequently the Germans themselves are overcome by their own poisons, and the oxygen pump and other apparatus is kept handy. Great interest in the Dardanelles campaign has been aroused by the publication this week dealing with various phases of the fighting for the Straits. Despite the vigorous bombardment of the new and the ancient forts at the entrance, some of the old structures were not badly damaged. We give a picture of one of these old forts, with a collection of shells and fragments arrayed in front of it. The Turks are apparently as keen curio hunters as other people, but after some months British shells should be a glut in the curio market. Other pictures of the fighting at the Dardanelles deal with two exploits of British submarines. "E-15" was stranded in the Straits. To prevent her falling into the hands of the enemy she was torpedoed by her own fleet and rendered useless. The picture shows her in the hands of the Turks, with a German naval officer taking notes of her construction. The loss of "E-15" was avenged by "E-11," commanded by Lieut.-Commander Naismith, who won his V.C. for entering the harbour of Constantinople and blowing up the Turkish transport "Stamboul," and damaging the docks. By the surrender of the Governor of German South West Africa to General Botha, the brilliant campaign came to an end, and Britain took possession of a new territory larger than the whole of Germany. We give a picture of General Botha receiving the surrender of Windhuk from the burgo-master. In machine guns the German forces have had a decided advantage over the Allies. The type of gun used by them is shown in the picture, "A German Machine Gun and its Crew."

THE WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC

ADDRESS AT Y.W.C.A. BY MRS. LIGHTON ROBINSON.

At the Y.W.C.A. yesterday afternoon Mrs. Lighton Robinson, the Buenos Aires Lady Worker and Agent for the National Vigilance Association, addressed a meeting of ladies, about forty of whom were present, interested in the work of the Association. Speaking of the sympathy, and the attitude of the Home Government, and the strong interest and encouragement manifested by His Majesty, Mrs. Robinson also acknowledged the valuable aid and tactful sympathy rendered by the Government of Argentina, and by the Police. Mrs. Robinson is an enthusiast in her mission, and a prodigiously energetic and successful worker. During the last year 71 cases have been assisted and 78 ships have been met, from which 40 girls were aided. Of these 25 were British. The yearly report is full of detailed interesting cases, some of which Mrs. Robinson related. The need would seem to be for some method of inflicting due punishment on the unscrupulous fiends of both sexes who make a trade of trapping girls and who are in some cases supported financially, veritable fortresses of iniquity. The speaker acknowledged the valuable assistance given also by the shipping companies and various local gentlemen. The meeting was concluded by prayers led by Mrs. Turner. Credit and expenditure accounts for the year show an output of $2,710.82.

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

The concert at the Sailors' Home on Aug. 7 was so much appreciated that encores stretched it out beyond eleven. The programme arranged by Miss Kathleen Knight, as given, was as follows: Pianoforte duet, "March," Miss Duxton and Mr. W. K. Griffiths; song, "Until," and "The Flight of Ages"; quartette, "Gipsy Girls," by the Misses N. Thomas, G. Robinson, R. Burton and M. Johnson; comic song, "Woolloomooloo," by Mr. P. G. Scott, followed by recital of the horrid happenings "When Father Pappered the Parlour." Songs, "Humpty Dumpty" and "Meet me to-night" at an indefinite place in Dreamland, by Mrs. Bowditch; "How we saved the barge," a heroic monologue by Mr. F. G. Lovett; and "Evins dawg Orspital," a pathetic tale. Violin solo, "Cavatina," by Mrs. Woodwell, and "Melody of Love." Song, "Up from Somerset," Miss Knight, and "My dear soul." After the refreshment interval Miss Burton and Mr. Griffiths gave a pianoforte duet, "Qui Vive." Mrs. Bowditch sang very charmingly, "The Silver Ring" and "Rose in Bud." An anonymous couple of young ladies rendered a coon duet, "Chloe and Sambo" with great applause. Mr. V. Reid sang, and Mr. F. W. Lovett gave another musical monologue, "The Street Watchman's Story." Then followed "Arabasken," a violin solo, by Mrs. Woodwell. Mr. P. G. Scott closed with another weird illuminated song, "I can't come out to-day," which is as well, for his habit of becoming sectionally lighted up, is much more becoming to a glow worm and the night. A most successful concert finished with "God Save the King." It is announced that a service will be held to-night at the Home at 7.30, conducted by Mr. Tom Laurie.

BRITISH AGED AND INFIRM FUND

A meeting of the British Aged and Infirm Fund Committee was held on August 3rd, at which Messrs. James Begg (Chairman), Hope Gibson, C. Manifold, F. P. Simpson, W. H. Logan, Somerville and N. F. Tribe were present.

Apologies for unavoidable non-attendance from Sir Reginald Tower and Mr. John Bramwell were received.

Various matters relating to the work of the Fund were discussed.

The Ladies' Sub-Committee reported everything to be in good order at Sunset House, which gives a comfortable home to several aged British women.

It was decided to hold the annual general meeting during the month of September.

ARGENTINE RAILWAYS

INDICATION OF IMPROVED CONDITIONS.

London, August 6.

Dealing with the subject of the traffic reports of the various Argentine railways, the "Westminster Gazette" says that there certainly are indications that an improvement is taking place in the earnings of these undertakings. The improvement however is at a very slow rate and the feeling is not one of great confidence. There have been so many disappointments. The expected recovery has been so long delayed, and so many fresh low records have been established that those who might otherwise take an active interest in the stocks are holding aloof pending further developments in regard to the immediate future. All that can safely be said is that the receipts are small in comparison with those of last year.

BRITISH CLUB, ALIANZA

DANCE IN AID OF PATRIOTIC FUNDS.

Hearty congratulations are to be accorded to the British Club, Alianza, on the success of the dance held on Aug. 7 at Santos Lugares. When one bears in mind the considerable number of members who have left for the front, it is all the more creditable that the Committee should be able to keep the Club's popularity to such a pitch as was evidenced at last evening's function. Augmenting the Patriotic Fund was the Committee's aim on this occasion, and success was fully attained. A splendid orchestra, who gave their services gratis, played delightful dance music throughout, tasteful programmes were presented, the printing of which was also done gratis, and the Club was, therefore, able to hand over the receipts without any deduction for expenses.

Thanks to the efforts of Mr. McGough, who is a member of the Committee, the rooms had been elaborately decorated with the Argentine and British colours, and presented a pleasing and animated spectacle. During the evening a slight diversion to dancing was made by a well rendered song by Mr. Kennedy, who was warmly applauded for his efforts.

The Committee responsible for the success of the evening was composed of the following gentlemen: Mr. Milne (President), Messrs. Prosser, Anderson, McGough, Kennedy, Stewart, Brown, and Dixon.

Among the ladies and gentlemen present were the following: Messrs. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Fare, Mr. J. McGough, Mr. G. Flowers, Mr. W. G. Kennedy, Mr. R. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. A. McLewin, Messrs. G. White, W. Gray, E. Henstead, P. Quinn, Picollo, R. Faulkes and J. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cox, Messrs. J. Moffatt, L. M. and I. Negretti, Freg. Mahlin, Meir, Costa, H. Browning, W. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. C. Brown, Mr. C. E. Dixon, Messrs. A. Fargon, C. Sebero, J. McClew, T. Barke, H. Crebbin, J. Smith, J. McLewin, J. Mulhall, T. Parke, G. McCarthy, J. Suarez, R. Proud, C. A. Prosser, C. Fagan, H. Opwell, Mr. and Mrs. Invernizzi, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Atkinson and Mr. J. Atkinson, the Misses K. Quinn, Cox, Moffatt, Mr. and Mrs. Vint, Mrs. R. Peroli, Mrs. Copeland, Mrs. McClew, Mrs. Coleman, the Misses Rosa, Teresa, Adela and Virginia Peroli, Miss Mortimer, Mrs. Negretti, Miss Fonthrop, Miss McDonnell, Miss Gaynee and Miss Colbourn.

The orchestra was composed of Messrs. A. Lavers, Fronthop, and J. Oporto.

PRESUPUESTO FOR 1916

REDUCTIONS OF OVER FORTY MILLIONS.

On Aug. 6th the Budget for 1916 was sent in for the consideration of Congress. As previously stated, the President is anxious that the Presupuesto shall be got through as speedily as may be. The amount of expenditure to be provided for reaches the figure of $341,267,692.38; in the following detail: Administration Expenses $297,418,900.28; Public Works $31,538,254.54; Subsidies $12,250,537.56. In comparison with the previous Budget this shows a total reduction of $40,113,052.61.

To meet these gastos, the following resources are available $300,807,318.60 and in this amount are included as new inspection and weighing $12,000,000; sugar $1,800,000. There are also: Importation (petroleum tariff) $2,258,000; wines (1 cent per litre) $2,267,000; beer (1 cent), telegraph tariffs $1,500,000; property register $800,000; lighthouses $130,000; the lottery yields $10,044,676; alcoholic drinks $1,000,000; perfumers $822,016.86; and other items $383,845. The various reductions made in the public services from time to time have been previously noted and the Budget results were largely based on the reports of the Special Presupuesto Committee.

GRIEG ILLUSTRATED

REV. W. M. LAING'S LECTURE AT THE SCOTCH CHURCH HALL.

To anyone who is acquainted with the beauty, the creative ability and the weird ruggedness of Grieg's music, the illustrated and illustrative lecture given on Monday at St. Andrew's Hall under the chairmanship of Mr. Monteith Drysdale, by the Rev. W. M. Laing must have been a delight.

Mr. Laing was brief in his talk on Grieg, allowing the composer's music to say what he had left unsaid, but he treated his subject with charm and wrapt around it a truly Griegian or fjordian atmosphere, and his choice of expression could hardly have been more suited to his subject. He told how the composer's great grandfather was an Aberdonian; he told of the Norwegian mother, whose artistic taste descended to her son. He explained the solitary character of the man, as a composer.

The story of his impressive burial, in a cave in a rocky jutting, into the fjord he loved, and pointed out how closely this was in keeping with the man's character. Short but highly interesting, especially in its construction, was the lecture. The remainder of the evening was occupied with a musical representation of the composer's character, and the pianoforte playing of Mr. B. Treavett was magnificent. Whether it was possible for all his audience to agree with the form of his interpretation cannot be said; perhaps occasionally it was possible to differ, but Mr. Treavett's technique and general interpretation was of a high order, and was especially noticeable in his rendering of the last two illustrated pieces played before the Peer Gynt Suite.

Miss Mildred Cowes made her first public appearance by singing three of the composer's most representative songs. Miss Cowes possesses a voice of exceptional purity and has been excellently taught. Her rendering of "Hope" was especially pleasing and left nothing to be desired.

Mrs. Mohr Bell sang "Madgaret's Cradle Song" perfectly and shewed the fullest appreciation of its quaintness. Mr. G. W. B. Pott further illustrated the composer on the violin by the well-known Allegretto and the introduction to "Sigurd Jorsalfar."

The Peer Gynt Suite concluded the programme.

It would not be possible to speak too highly of the evening's music nor of the method in which it was produced, and, as Mr. Monteith Drysdale said when offering his congratulations to lecturer and artists alike, it can only be hoped that the opportunity would soon be forthcoming when another such evening would be offered. From beginning to end of the programme to a lover of music the entertainment was a treat.

The programme was as follows:—

Sonata in B Minor, Opus 7, Mr. B. Treavett, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.

Songs, "I love thee," "Hope," Miss Mildred Cowes.

Song, "A Swan," Miss Mildred Cowes.

Violin, Allegretto, Opus. 8, Mr. C. W. B. Pott (of Conservatorio de Buenos Aires).

Violin, Introduction to Sigurd Jorsalfar (Play by Bjornson), Mr. C. W. B. Pott.

Piano, "To the Spring," "Butterfly," Mr. B. Treavett.

Songs, "Margaret's Cradle Song" (Ibsen's words), "The Old Song" (Heine), Mrs. Albert Mohr-Bell.

Piano, Peer Gynt Suite, 1 "Morning Mood," 2 "Aase's Death," 3 "Anitra's Dance," 4 "In the Hall of the Mountain King," Mr. B. Treavett.

"Cheesemakers are in high spirits. They are finding a keen demand for newly made cheese at prices well over 80s. per cwt. and indeed the cheese is moving off as fast as it is made."

A YEAR OF NAVAL WARFARE

THE GAINS AND LOSSES

BY OUR NAVAL CORRESPONDENT

After a year of naval and land war which for the fury of the fighting has never been surpassed, and in the appalling destructiveness of the engines of war employed has never been approached, it is instructive to consider the naval situation and make a rough summary of events. When Britain declared war, on August 4, 1914, the British Navy was fortunately in a state of the highest efficiency and preparation, and advantageously disposed to hold the enemy at almost all points. The German navy, although well prepared, was almost entirely concentrated at its base, whence it has never been able to escape since, except to make raids by squadrons, attended by disaster on two occasions. A number of fast light cruisers were in the North and South Atlantic or Pacific. They were nearly all of the City class, armed with ten to twelve 4.1 guns, and of high speed, 25 to 27 knots. The Pacific squadron had, however, the formidable support of the large and very heavily armed armoured cruisers Gneisenau and Scharnhorst. In the Mediterranean were the Goeben, battle cruiser, and the Breslau, of the City class. These, after attacking Bona and Philippeville, fled to the Dardanelles, from which they have never again issued. Then followed a period full of alarms and excursions. In the month of August the Emden began her depredations, the Amphion was sunk by a mine, the Glasgow was looking for the Bremen in these waters, the Gloucester pursued the Goeben and Breslau, Dar-es-Salaam was attacked by the Astron and Pegasus, H.M.S. Birmingham sank U.15, the Dresden took the Hyades; other German cruisers began to operate, and the Highflyer sank the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, while the Magdeburg perished in the Baltic; a strenuous first month. From thence up to Christmas, the fighting pace became furious. The Speedy and Pathfinder perished by mines, the Oceanic auxiliary was lost. Three armoured cruisers were sunk by submarines, and the successful Heligoland fight occurred. H.M.S. Pegasus was surprised and destroyed by the Konigsberg at Zanzibar; the Cumberland captured many German ships off the West African coast; the Hawke was sunk; the Badger sank a German submarine; a brilliant destroyer action took place off the Belgian coast; the Emden sank the Mousquet and Jemchug; the Hermes was sunk; the Minerva shelled Akaba; the first German raid was made on Yarmouth; the Yorck ran on one of the German mines and sank; the Sydney sank the Emden; the Konigsberg was disabled and afterwards destroyed; Admiral Craddock with the Good Hope and Monmouth perished off Coronel; the Garry rammed U.18. The Falklands battle, the East Coast raids, the bloody repulse of the last of these and sinking of the Blucher; the Carmania—Cap Trafalgar duel; explosions and torpedoings; the submarine campaign with its murderous attacks and sinkings of unarmed ships; the incessant fighting since March in the Dardanelles, where five battleships, none new but all useful, have been sunk by mine or torpedo, all these things are fresh in our minds. Nevertheless, while crediting the enemy with audacity and skill, apart from the abominable submarine murder policy, the fact remains unaltered that his fleet is still held fast in Kiel and can only operate freely in the Baltic, and even there is beginning to lose ships to Russian or British submarines. The Navy has well fulfilled its duty in most trying circumstances, and will do so. While cock-a-hoop shouting is out of place, there is every ground for resolute confidence.

British losses include: Battleships; Bulwark, Formidable, Goliath,

Irresistible, Majestic, Ocean and Triumph, seven in all; armoured cruisers: Aboukir, Cressy, Hogue, Good Hope, and Monmouth, five, or a total of 12 armoured ships, nearly all of similar classes. In cruisers we have lost from all causes, chiefly mines and torpedoes, the Amphion, Hawke, Hermes, Pathfinder and Pegasus, again five ships, of which only the Amphion and Pathfinder were recently built or of high speed. The gunboats Niger and Speedy, the destroyers Recruit and Maori have also been lost. What the submarine casualties are we do not know, but they are certainly much less than the ten alleged in a contemporary. Coming next to our friends and allies, the French Navy has lost, the battleship Bouvet the armoured cruiser Leon Gambetta, and the gun vessel Zélée. The destroyers Dague and Mousquet are also lost. Russian losses include the armoured cruiser Pallada and the light cruiser Jemchug, also the gunboats Donetz and Kubanetz.

German losses as far as definitely known are: the battle cruiser Goeben, which is so much damaged and in so hopeless a position for offence that she may be counted out; the armoured cruisers Blucher, Friedrich Karl, Gneisenau, Scharnhorst, and Yorck; in cruisers the Ariadne, Dresden, Augsburg, Emden, Karlsruhe, Koln, Konigsberg, Leipzig, Magdeburg, Mainz and Nurnberg, the auxiliary cruisers Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse and Cap Trafalgar, the Breslau holed and useless in the Dardanelles, the Iltis and Jaguar gunboats; of destroyers G187, S116, S115, S117, S118, S119, S90, S124, and several others are known to have been destroyed. Among submarines U8, U12, U15, U18, U28, and a number of others, the names of which are either unknown or not announced, have been sunk. The battleship Pommern and a battleship of the Kaiser class have also been reported torpedoed recently.

Austria Hungary has lost the cruisers Kaiserin Elizabeth and Zenta. Some destroyers are believed to have been sunk in the Adriatic.

In the materiel side of the war, the big-gun ships have justified themselves. Swift, heavily armed battle cruisers, able to overhaul and maul the enemy and dodge his "untersee bootes" are the future capital ships. Destroyers get bigger and more powerful and should be strong at the bows to permit of ramming submarines (which mortally fear them) without injury. Another remarkable circumstance has been the rediscovery of the monitor, so useful on the Belgian coast for shallow water operations and apparently immune from submarine attack. The day of our own underwater swarms will come when, if ever, the Huns try an invasion and their crowded transports put to sea, or when the Great Imperial Fleet pulls its anchors out of the Kiel mud in which they are embedded. Then we shall see and hear of things. The enemy is ferociously cruel, but he is neither fool nor coward, except in the sense of being a murderer; but our seamen have established their ascendancy and will continue to hold it.

PROHIBITION OF COAL EXPORTATION

MONTEVIDEO'S PLIGHT.

Something like consternation was caused at Montevideo by the report that the British Government has forbidden the export of coal. Since the outbreak of war many ships have coaled at the port, taking away, it is computed, a total of 154,290 tons. The present stock available in the city is about 44,000 tons, and cargoes amounting to 20,000 tons are known to be en route. It is not stated whether the above figures include the cargo of the stranded steamer Boldwell, which has now been successfully floated by the efforts of the Russian fleet of salvage vessels.

MORE PEACE PROPOSALS

GERMANOPHILES IN HOLLAND

THEIR UNDERHAND DIPLOMACY

According to the cables, there is every likelihood of a re-occurrence of the peace talk that was so conspicuous a feature of the cables some three months ago. And without imagining for one moment that Germany is beaten, for she is not, one would do well to realise and provide for the fact that it is to her interest to call a truce, even though it may be but for a brief breathing space. Grant if you will that the great Consistory to be convened by His Holiness in favour of peace arises from a purely humanitarian motive that is in accordance with Christian charity, there is still the lurking fear that such influence as this gathering may have will be exerted on the side of the Central Empires. This danger is, however, as nothing when compared to the diligent efforts of the German emissaries in Holland, Denmark, Sweden, and, to a lesser extent, the United States.

Now Holland, as has been said on many occasions in these columns, is determined to avoid being drawn into this war if by any means she can keep out of it. Hence whilst the country is divided into two groups, pro-Ally and Germanophile respectively, both parties are against intervention in the strife, an early peace being equally acceptable to either side. Amsterdam and Rotterdam may be said to be the two centres of Dutch opinion in this matter, the professional and aristocratic party of the north and west being in complete accord with the aspirations of the Allies, whilst the commercial interests of Rotterdam, permeated with German ideas as they are at the best of times, are now almost openly proclaiming that if they are to survive and flourish, Germany must triumph. It is true, as was mentioned in yesterday's "Herald," that the formation of the Netherlands Overseas Trust will help to check a certain amount of contraband trade, and it is equally true that the Government of the Netherlands has shown strict justice in the matter of re-exports. But the control of trade bristles with difficulties, as even local experience shows, and with the ever-present temptation of high prices before them, the short-sighted attitude of the Rotterdam traders is at least explicable. Their interests are all for peace, peace at any price. Directly the guns stop, the great "Rijnaars," barges carrying anything from two to three thousand tons, will be despatched in long files away up stream to Germany. Can it be doubted that Germany would be only too glad to call for a cessation of hostilities under the guise of discussing peace terms? Has not her almost ineradicable success in drawing out the American discussion shown that in one branch of diplomacy at any rate she is unrivalled?

The world has been caught napping once, and if Germany succeeds in hoodwinking humanity a second time under the plea of peace talk, it may prove to be the turning point of the war in her favour. Again and again one must bear in mind the fact that Germany is not beaten, that she has still a vast reserve of energy, of superfluous energy, one might almost say, and that this fact is very clearly appreciated by the neutral countries in her immediate vicinity. In Holland, the chief fear is that Belgium will be formally annexed. If that is done, then Holland will certainly draw her sword. Belgium without Holland is useless to Germany, unless Holland cares to come into the German Zollverein, and it is certainly safe to assume that Germany has not dared to announce the annexation of Belgium owing to her certain knowledge that it would

RIO DYNAMITE PLOT

SUPPOSED ANARCHIST OUTRAGE

Contradictory reports continue regarding the character of the plot in Brazil. Ingeniero Souza Silva insists that the dynamite bombs found by the police were intended merely and solely for use in diamond mining. He expresses surprise at the number of bombs found, declaring that he had only had three or four charged. Senhor Magalhaes Costa however asserts that he had ordered the preparation of a great quantity of explosives. The detonation of any one of these bombs, he says would have sufficed to kill 200 persons and injure 500 more.

A man, arrested by the Police, named Abelardo Tavares, has stated that the explosives seized had relation to a plot and that the conspirators were accustomed to meet at the house of Dr. Felix Boayuva. He says that the committee directing operations employed him to find an expert maker of bombs and that in Magalhaes Costa an old Portuguese revolutionary, he discovered a suitable man.

Dr. Carlos Maximiliano, Minister of Interior, has stated in an interview that he considers the plot to have been less political than anarchical. The persons implicated will be expelled from the country when foreigners but if Brazilian citizens, will be tried for their crime. The servants at Ingeniero Souza Silva's house have been set at liberty as not having any guilty knowledge of the affair.

FROM PADRE TO PROFESSOR

A JUNIN SENSATION.

From Junin it is stated that Don Elitio Rosacruz Fernandez, Priest in charge, has given notice that he abandons his sacerdotal character habit and profession. The event which is much commented upon, is said to be due to disagreements with his parochial superior. Being a musician of exceptional ability, the ex-clergyman intends to open an academy of music in the city.

mean a fresh and by no means despicable foe on her flank.

The position as regards Denmark is somewhat different. As far as one can gather, the Danes are aware of the futility of any effort on their part to run counter to German scheming, whilst the commercial community is wholly given over to the advantages of trade. And it must not be forgotten that although the Allies fight in the cause of Humanity, all are not altruists, and the Danish traders, honeycombed with German influences at the best of times, certainly do not give a thought to the moral aspect of the situation when it is a question of lining their own pockets. Indeed, all cast aside, one very much doubts whether British traders would behave differently, were the positions reversed. It is the duty of the Allies to check this trade, and they may be relied upon to do it; but checking the insistent pro-German propaganda, especially when it takes the specious form of a call for "peace" is almost beyond them. Calling for peace at the present juncture reminds one of the unfortunate local habit of calling for the remission of the death sentence on convicted murderers. The more barbarous and far-reaching the crime, the more probabilities are there that a group of so-called sympathetic ladies will be found to wait upon the President and ask for a reprieve, which is never refused. Absit omen. To Germany's call for a cessation of the war, the best reply is surely that attributed to Voltaire: "Que MM. les assassins commentent."

Sports and Pastimes

THE TURF

PALERMO

The classic event on Sunday's programme at Palermo resulted in one of the most wonderful races, as a race that has been seen at Palermo for many a long day. Twelve horses went to the tapes and after one of the most severe tussles that could possibly be witnessed, Picacero gained a head victory over Gontran, who was half a head in front of Melik with Packoy fourth an equal distance away.

The course was on the heavy side, and a strong wind blew up the straight, so that throughout the meeting times were very slow. It was all the more remarkable then that the winner of the great event should occupy only 1.37 2/5, while all other events were seconds outside of average times.

At the start of the race Sin Humo took the lead from Packoy, Melik, Gontran and Capullo, with Floripar last. The start was none too good. Entering the straight Melik and Gontran took the lead, with Packoy next, and a truly tremendous race was seen, in which the whips of the leading jockeys were going for all they were worth. Slowly but surely the strongest finisher crept up, although shrinking under his effort and running away from the whip in a diagonal course across the track. Picacero only just gained the verdict. As a race it was wonderful, but was not free from unpleasantness. Bastroqui had his license taken away for interference with Estribor, and it is rumoured that it is not impossible that the winner's jockey may have to answer a few pertinent questions. However be this as it may, the best colt won, and we can say definitely that none but Torterolo would have gained a place with Melik, and that a better and stronger jockey than Ardouin, would have had Picacero a winner by at least half a length.

There has been no finer race at Palermo this year, and in all probability it will be many months before another such is seen.

The first race was won by Tejuela, a length and a quarter from Broncina, and the winner's price $5.30, was the smallest of the day's meeting. Novedad the favourite, ran a very poor race and could only get fourth place. The others might as well have been out of the event.

The surprise of the second event was the failure of Carmucha, who ran last but one. The event was won very easily by a handsome debutante, a daughter of Druid. Arene cantered home well in front of that poor filly, Inquisicion, who was ridden hard under the whip. Cabiria created a surprise by securing third place, while Guayabita, the favourite, and most unreasonable favourite, ran fourth. Her previous two outings had brought her nowhere, and it only shews what Torterolo can do when it comes to the betting. As before remarked, Guayabita is a fine filly with excellent action and will win, she is much better than Inquisicion, but still needs a little time or an easy course. The wind was enough to take the energies out of any horse but the very best, on Sunday.

Lefevre, Tamandar, and Dosel fought it out for premier honours in the third event, and finished in this order, with the winner half a length in front, due no doubt to the 'prentice allowance. Lefevre is improving, but was certainly not the best colt in the race. Juez de Raya will need watching, he will very soon be in winning form. Winer makes but little progress, and will not win, until there is nothing to beat or until he has a jockey on his back.

The combination of Zanguango and Aprile was a complete failure. The time of the race was painfully slow, although the efforts of the first three were energetic enough. The course and the wind accounted for this, as is proved by the fact that all races were the same, and that even Chilca occupied 1.45 1/5 when she has run the race in much better time.

Weight told the expected tale in the fourth event for Petit Duc, the best 'in' at the handicap romped home a winner from Bolin and Bargain and paid $26.49. Campichuelo, a scorching favourite ran hopelessly. It is hard to know why he carried all the tickets he did, because although undoubtedly better class than the others, he was not at all up to the mark and has done nothing whatever so far this year. It is one of the peculiarities of the game, but none too satisfactory for any others than the backers of the winner.

The surprise of the sixth event was the running of Chaica, who candidly did not try an inch, but we are quite prepared to admit that after the grueling Rivero got in the classic he could not be at his best.

The first three were logical enough, if we omit Chaica. Chilca only just won, a head from Perjura and Mingo is to be congratulated on riding another fine finish so soon after his run on Melik. Cosquilla and Simancas, quite possible, were sadly out of the race and there can be no doubt, that they were both poorly ridden.

With the scratching of Wotan in the seventh event, there was nothing else to it but Siete y Medio who ran a fine race and won by a length and a half from Mustafa. Troyano was clean out of the race and could reasonably have been reckoned an enemy to the winner. The race shews what a fine colt the winner is and how horribly mistaken have been the tactics of his owners.

When one thinks of it, it can hardly be wondered at that Inspector came nowhere in the last race. Torterolo must have had a very tiring time on Melik, then on Perjura and again on Mustafa and he can hardly be blamed for not feeling up to riding a horse like Inspector to victory, because he notoriously needs driving hard at the finish.

This last race resulted in a grand finish between Mojinete and Royal Drop. The latter just winning in the poor time of 3'12 1/5. Again Hidrato put up a fine finishing show, coming in third after being a long way in the rear on entering the straight. Podesta, as expected could do nothing at the weights and Inspector, although we knew he can, refused to budge from last all the way round.

This race finished the finest programme of the year and perhaps for a meeting or two some persons will need to rest, after the excitement occasioned.

LA PLATA

Although the major interest in the week-end racing programmes was naturally claimed by Palermo, the La Plata meeting was a fairly interesting one, although almost every race held some sort of surprise. In general, it was not a good day for the talent, who suffered in consequence. The results were as follows:—

Premio Mendigo, distance 1500 metres.—1st Fable, 49, J. Arlandini; 2nd Apiz 49; 3rd Glou Glou 54.

Also ran:—Didur, Bolvedere (4th) Mariposita, Coquin, San Gabino, Licinio, Saqueador, Pichuleta, Figurata, Heresy.

Dividends:—14.30 and 4.90, 13.70, 5.70.

Won by 2 lengths.

Time: 1'35 3/5.

Premio Micifús, distance 1300 mts.—1st Gorjion 51, A. Lhuillier; 2nd Saltarin 47; 3rd Effusion 52; 4th Sigfride 49.

Also ran:—Periwinkle, Pionono, El Triunfo, Quevedo II., Yankee II.

Dividends:—8.30 and 3, 5.50, 6.20.

Won by half a length.

Time: 1'21 4/5.

Premio Mitre, distance 1200 mts.—1st Rivadavia 53, J. Arlandini; 2nd Primauté 51; 3rd Galleguita 52.

Also ran:—Mal Palo, Prepay (4th), E. Rey, Seguidor, Dontcry, Iberia, La Suzana, Pitina II. ex Dictea.

Dividends:—12.90 and 4, 9.60, 5.30.

Won by a neck.

Time: 1'16 1/5.

Premio Macabeo, distance 1600 metres.—1st Perlino 52, J. P. Dufour; 2nd Fine Mouche; 3rd Juanuco 55.

Also ran: Guitry, Tower, V. Chief, Irenita, Cebada, Ehontée (4th).

Dividends:—10.60 and 3.90, 6.60, 4.10.

Time: 1'42 1/5.

Premio Mustafá, distance 2000 metres.—1st Normando, A. Lhuillier; 2nd Liberty 47, 3rd Renla 43.

Also ran:—Fox (4th), Paul Pons, Hirondele, Horniga Negra II., Guarapó.

Dividends:—4.40 and 3.20, 3.60, 7.80.

Won by three-quarters of a length.

Time: 2'7 1/5.

Premio Mistela, distance 1400 mts.—1st Herd, 51, A. Lhuillier; 2nd Torterola 53.

Also ran:—Mabille (4th), Farrista (3rd), Pilleria, Moredita, Duquesita, Driada.

Dividends:—19.30 and 5.40, 4.30, 7.80.

Won by a head.

Time: 1'27 4/5.

Premio Monigote, distance 1300 metres.—1st Puro 54, O. Callejas; 2nd Floweret 51; 3rd Villemil 53.

Also ran:—Manito de Oro, Montreal, Peugeot, Ica, Fécida, Cecilette, Finette (4th), Ténobra.

Dividends:—9.60 and 7.80, 10.10, 4.6.

Won by one and a half lengths.

Time: 1'21 1/2.

Premio Mérito, distance 1500 mts.—1st Gallego, 49 kilos, M. Vignatti; 2nd Electro 54.

Also ran:—Bamboche 53 (3rd), Menianto, Chambery (4th), Octavio.

Dividends:—21.60 and 9.10, 7.40, 7.40.

Won by half a neck.

Time: 1'35.

ROSARIO

The race meeting at the Hippodrome Independencia Rosario on Sunday was a most excellent one, was free from any unpleasant incident, and except in one race, "The Herald's" best horse selection came in every time, when a runner. The following were the results:—

Premio BABY, 1200 metres.

1 Ormilla 54, 2 Verdi 56. Won by a length. Time 1.15 1/5. Also ran, Gala Day 3rd, Monona and Scala. The winner paid $7.75.

Premio LA PETITE, 1600 metres.

1 Afufa 48, 2 Tripailao 54, 3 Charny. Won by 2 lengths. Time 1.41 2/5. Also ran: Gallineta 4th, Kaid, Industrial, and Culata. The winner paid $5.20 and $2.35, the second $2.25, and the third $2.20.

Premio FLORENCIA III., 1400 metres.

1 Sandstorm 56, 2 Barcaldine 54, 3 Narvaez 56. Won by 2 lengths. Time 1.28 1/5. Also ran: Papagayo, Olazabal, Paraguay, Blondin, Tango, Profana, and Caminata. The winner paid $6.70 and $3.20, the second $3.60, the third $3.55.

Premio LA BULLICIOSA, 1200 metres.

1 Mi Nene 53, 2 The Libel 50. Won by 1 1/2 lengths. Time 1.13. Also ran: Suzana, American Boy, Ladkin, Leutress and Flashlight. The winner paid $3.10 and $2.80, the second $3.70.

Premio VENTURA BRIGUARDELLO, 1600 metres.

1 La Bulliciosa 51, 2 Button Hole 51, 3 Gallana 48. Won by 4 lengths. Time 1.40. Also ran: Tric Trac, Eastwind, Cocairera, Socavona, and Sotte Voce. The winner paid $4.95 and $3, the second $15.45, the third $8.95.

Premio LA FLECHA, 1600 metres.

1 Everest 49, 2 Soldado III. 53. Won by a length. Time 1.41 4/5. Also ran: Don Gabriel, Vinicio II., Betrayer and La Giordetti. The winner paid $3.65 and $2.60, the second $3.90.

Premio DEFENSA, 2500 metres.

1 Royal Nose 55, 2 Pan Duro 49, 3 Lucifer II. 44, 4 Opulento II. 59. Won by a length. Time 2.41 1/2. The winner paid $3.80.

THE SEASON'S COLTS

A BRIEF SURVEY

Last Sunday we took a brief survey of this season's best fillies and now that the Gran Polla de Potrillos is so imminent, it might be of equal, if not of greater interest, to survey the colts. Amongst the fillies there are few that are worthy of attention. The very marked superiority of Ocurrancia has led to some of them which have been excellent performers, being kept in the background, as not daring to try conclusions with the "Pretty Polly of the South American Turf," but this is not the case with the colts.

On the whole they are a fair lot of animals but even on the morn of the Gran Polla, which is the exact equivalent to the Poule d'Essai des Poulains in Paris, but which has no equivalent on the English Turf, it is not possible to say which is the best animal. Bombazo has undoubtedly great claims. He has won five out of his seven races as a two year old, and came second in the others, and incidentally has netted the sum of $39,300, which puts him a long way ahead of other colts. He has, however, not appeared in public since May 30, and there are several others which have come on since then, and which were not in condition so early in the season as he was, and furthermore have been successful over a mile, which Bombazo has not. Amongst these latter which call for special mention are Siete y Medio, Packoy, Picacero, Floripar, Melik, Don Federico, Sin Humo and company, including Espartillar and Rey de Leon.

The first four of these latter have without question the greatest claims to consideration. It can only be deplored that the owners, trainers, and jockey of Siete y Medio have played the fool with this colt, whom we believe has claims to be considered the best of this season's products. Under whose advice this colt was run against 3 year olds in ordinary common or garden handicaps, we cannot say, but whoever gave that advice had better go sharp back to school to learn the very elements of the business of horse racing, and it is impossible to too greatly deplore the fact that a colt which we can consider second to none has got into the hands of people who do not understand the A. B. C. of horse racing or the reasonable treatment of 2 year olds.

It is, therefore, with something akin to disappointment that we cannot compare Siete y Medio with the others, except in remarking that a 2 year old who can race against 3 year olds, carrying 51 kilos and win in a common canter from such animals as the record breaking Debutante, Rance and Red Jacket, at equal weights with the first, and giving pounds and pounds away to all except the latter, can be no poor beast.

Why he was not reserved for races in his own class, for classic events and the like, instead of ordinary handicaps, against older horses, is a question which we have no patience to answer, in any other way than we have already done.

In considering which comes next we find ourselves confronted with a host of difficulties, and perhaps it would be better to leave the question from a racing point of view to the Gran Polla de Potrillos to settle and regard the matter from a point of view of horse flesh. Packoy and Picacero have claims to be considered more than the others. Packoy a really exceptionally fine colt, but is given to in and out running. Were he always to run up to his best form he would take an immensity of beating, and in fact would be unbeatable, if he could always produce the class of race he ran against Ocurrancia, when he did the mile in 1.36 2/5 approximately. Daily Packoy improves but he has this one fault of uncertain running. It is a very close thing between him and Picacero, but our preference lies with the latter and we believe that when it comes to the races over a distance, that this son of Bridge of Canny will always be able to more than hold his own—if wanted. The whole essence of the matter is contained in these two last words. We do not believe that the somewhat in and out form displayed by Picacero has been due to the colt's temperament, as has probably been the case with Packoy. We recollect races in which Picacero has not been all out to win and we firmly believe that he has never yet put up an exhibition of what he really can do. It will be interesting to see him when he makes the attempt, but the point is can he do his best when ridden by Ardoun? Melik and Floripar are hardly anyway behind these others, but they remain to be proved. The latter is a most consistent performer and a good stylish colt, but has shewn no properties for weight carrying or for distance running, whereas the others have already proved themselves. A point to be remarked is this, that Picacero and Floripar can travel well in heavy going and this is not always due to the particular action or build of a horse, but is very often due to stamina. It may perhaps be that in this last quality Melik is lacking, but the problem is none too easy to answer at the present stage. We have only seen Packoy and Picacero well tested, that is if we leave out Siete y Medio, the best of them all. Don Federico crumpled up under a severe test, and yet he has done the mile in 1.37. A colt that properly handled, well ridden and carefully treated must prove himself good, is Sin Humo. He has a peculiar temperament, and needs a "sympathetic jockey," but Sin Humo is very good, and up to date has not received the "nursing" treatment that a horse of his temperament requires. If such a colt had been under the direction of a Danny Maher or a Frank Wooton, we believe he would never have developed a temperament, but be that as it may, it is this that detracts from the racing value of Sin Humo to-day.

A colt that will prove himself of value to his owner is Gontran, clean limbed, strong, capable of carrying weight, and fast, Gontran has not yet been seen at his best.

Expressly left out of the above notes are two colts which deserve special mention, as being in the front rank of this season's produce and worthy of being included in the first six. These are Faucheur and Andrade, two of the finest upstanding colts in training. The former well over 17 hands, is a son of Greenan, and the latter a Lord Melton. For a colt of Faucheur's type it takes time for full development, and he will not be at his best until well on in his third year, although he may be reckoned with as a winner of races. Andrade, one of the very best, can win races that he will not win, and will be expected to win races that he loses, and then, when least expected, will prove himself a first class animal by running away with a race against the cracks. This has nothing to do with the colt or his temperament, it has only to do with the £ s. and d. side of the "royal game," and is a matter apart from these notes. This survey is written before many of the colts have been tested, before many of them have even been over a mile, but we would place Siete y Medio well ahead of this season's produce with Picacero, Packoy, Bombazo, and Andrade next, and Melik, Faucheur, Gontran, Sin Humo, Floripar and Don Ramiro well to the fore. Other useful colts will prove to be Espartillar, Proteo and Rey de Leon. Generally the season's colts are but an average lot. There is no Occurrence, no, nor even a Palanta amongst them, but the first six are a sound, healthy, strong, well boned, and well bred lot, and of only one are we doubtful, and that one is Bombazo—and his legs.

To-day commences another chapter, but we shall see as the book unfolds, that there is but little wrong with this summary of the 1915 produce

LADIES' AMERICAN TOURNAMENT

The Ladies' American Tournament, arranged to be played at San Isidro on Sunday only brought a few entries. Although the weather interfered with play to some extent, the afternoon was an enjoyable one. Miss E. E. Hoevel took the first prize with a score of 35, which with her handicap of 9 gave her 44 points against Miss Heale's 42.

The results of the day's play was as follows:—

	Won	Hp.	Nt.
Miss E. E. Hoevel	35	9	44
Miss I. Heale	35	7	42
Miss A. Escalada	32	9	41
Miss C. Escalada	37	0	37
Mrs. O. G. Babington	13	18	31
Miss J. Neill	19	11	30
Miss S. Salas	29	0	29
Miss M. G. Keenan	11	17	28
Miss B. A. O'Connell	15	9	24

BUENOS AIRES L.T. CLUB.

During Saturday and Sunday afternoon play was reserved for a men's doubles American Tournament. The entries were on the small side. The winners proved to be Mr. L. Capdepon and Mr. A. R. Dodds, who finished up with the advantage gained by their handicap 3 points ahead of Messrs. Norman and Cassels. They were thus the winners of the silver cups and buttons given for the respective prize winners.

	Won	Hp.	Nt.

QUILMES v. GASCON.

Played on the courts of the former club on Sunday, the first teams of their respective clubs met, while at Banfield the two club's second string encountered each other. The results at Quilmes were reversed by those of Banfield, for in each case the visiting team fared very badly. At Quilmes the last match had to be abandoned owing to bad light. The play throughout was enjoyable, and had the following results:

At Quilmes:

QUILMES.

H. E. Hetley and B. Hoare beat W. H. and G. C. Crispin, 6—4, 6—2; J. Edwards and E. den Hoed, 6—2, 6—3; J. Murray and J. L. Henderson, 6—0, 6—3.

S. U. Leonard and C. J. Bell beat W. H. and G. C. Crispin, 6—4, 6—5; J. Edwards and E. den Hoed, 6—4, 6—4.

A. M. Mackill and H. E. Marrs beat W. H. and G. C. Crispin, 2—6, 6—5, 6—4; J. Edwards and E. den Hoed, 6—2, 6—3; J. Murray and J. L. Henderson 6—5, 5—6, 6—5.

GASCON.

J. Murray and J. L. Henderson beat S. U. Leonard and C. J. Bell, 6—5, 6—1.

At Banfield:

A. D. Bell and C. E. Lovett beat H. Farnes and C. L. Makers, 6—0, 6—1.

B. G. Moverley and A. W. Woodhouse beat D. L. Chalk and D. T. Herold, 6—0, 4—6, 6—3.

A. D. Bell and C. E. Lovett beat D. A. D'Aguilar and R. Farren, 6—5, 6—1.

H. Farnes and C. L. Makers beat B. G. Moverley and A. W. Woodhouse, 1—6, 6—4, 8—6.

FOOTBALL

FLORESTA (1) v. BELGRANO (0).

The match between the above teams was marred by an unpleasant incident. The referee, early in the second half ordered Maller, a Belgrano player, off the field for disputing one of his decisions. The player refused to go, in spite of the order and the suggestion of his Captain, George Brown.

The result was that the Belgrano Captain withdrew his team. There is no object in discussing the matter, but it is as well to remember that the referee's decision is final and who ever denies it lays himself open to the charge of unsportsmanship.

At the time the Belgrano team withdrew, Floresta through Repetto were leading by one goal to none.

The teams were as follows:—

Belgrano.—T. Reddel, J. G. Brown, C. Morgan, J. Peña, A. Maller, H. Cox, F. N. Boyd, C. Oliva, J. Martin, A. L. Morgan and C. Palmer.

Floresta.—A. Cuomo, C. Frascoli, A. Chiappi, J. Boffi, M. Lopez, G. Spano, P. Pombo, Martinez, F. Flesias, C. Viora and A. Repetto.

Mr. F. Bastos was the referee.

ARGENTINO DE QUILMES (1) v. ESTUDIANTES DE LA PLATA (0).

This match was played on the ground of the former and resulted in a most exciting game. The best of it went to the winners, who for a period had two of their men unable to play. The referee exercised his right in ordering two of the spectators off the ground. The goal scorer was Cabana. Sr. G. Guasoni referred for the following teams:—

Arg. de Quilmes.—B. Martinez, A. Rotondo, J. Ortega, V. Cincotta, R. Posse, J. R. Pozzo, D. Arillaga, F. Cabana, and M. Ginebra.

Est. de La Plata.—A. Girotta, S. Pastor, Galup Lanús, A. Barcos, A. Lopez, J. Aranguren, O. Duarte, R. Leonardi, D. Lascano, R. Tolosa and P. Valenciani.

ARGENTINE ASSOCIATION v. THE ROSARIO LEAGUE.

This annual event was played on Sunday last, for the "Copa Reyna" on the ground of the Gimnasia y Esgrima Club, before a large number of spectators. It was an excellent game from start to finish and resulted in a victory for the Argentine Association by three goals to two. The game up to within the last few moments was evenly contested and was fast through. The goal scorers were E. Hayes, Airdi, Badalini, Rofrano and Marcovecchio. Mr. Daniel Green was the referee for the following selected teams:—

Argentine Association.—Rithner; Chiappe and Brown; Olivari, Garcia and Badaraeco; Fernandez, Ohaco, Marcovecchio, Roffrano and Perinetti. Roberts; Johnston. Revilla and Ve-

Rosario League.—Airdi; Diaz and

R. W. Croker and R. Veitch beat H. Farnes and E. L. Makers, 6—2, 6—1.

A. D. Bell and C. E. Lovett beat D. L. Chalk and D. T. Herold, 6—3, 6—3.

D'Aguilar and R. Farren beat R. H. Croker and R. Veitch, 6—5, 6—4.

B. G. Moverley and A. W. Woodhouse beat D. A. A. Aguilar and R. Farren 6—5, 6—1.

R. H. Croker and R. Veitch beat D. L. Chalk and D. T. Herold, 6—3, 6—3. rolin; Gonzalez, Badalini, H. Hayes, E. Hayes and Viale.

SOUTH (1) v. NORTH (0).

The official opening of the new Porteño Athletic Club ground took place on Sunday at Palermo when the North met the South in a close and interesting encounter. There were a large number of spectators present when the following teams faced each other:—

North.—Wilson, J. A. Rossi, J. Idiarte, J. Ayala, O. Bacigalupi, N. Aladia, J. Rstano, C. Izaguirre, S. Sayanes, M. Garat and J. Alzua.

South.—S. Arduino, S. Ochoa, A. Reyes, A. Betular, L. Lanatta, A. Peruzzi, Z. Canaveri, A. Risso, A. Ameal, C. Comaschi and H. Rivas.

Referee: G. A. Jordan.

The result of the hard fought and level game was that the South managed to win by one goal to nil and they were lucky to do so for the North generally had the best of the game. Bad shooting lost them the match and indeed it can be said that both teams were at fault in this respect. The goal scorer was Comaschi.

The following shows the position of the teams in the First Division:—

LOMAS (8 PTS.) v. GIMNASIA Y ESGRIMA (0)

Played at Lomas on Sunday afternoon. The game was somewhat loose and scrappy, and "scrums" were numerous. Mr. Williams lined up the following teams:—

Lomas.—Adamson; Morris, Auld, Cribbes and G. H. Whyte; R. S. Whyte and Banham; Balme, Griffith, Hunter, McGaul, Flacquer, Clydesdale, Tausley and Rasmussen.

Gimnasia y Esgrima.—Rumbo; Islueta, Crespo, Ortuño, and Santamarina; Riobos and Garré; Henderson, Coulin, Berisso, Necol, E. Buzzo, R. Buzzo, I. Buzzo, and Casado.

Bob Whyte played a good game, as did Hunter, who was perhaps the best on the field. Both Harry and Bob Whyte scored, the latter's try being converted by Hunter. Generally the game was not a particularly good one.

BELGRANO v. BUENOS AIRES.

Belgrano in a friendly game on their own ground on Sunday proved victorious over Buenos Aires by a goal and 3 tries (14 points) to a try (3 points). For Belgrano the scorers were Desurro, Charlton twice (one converted by Fenwick), and Fenwick. For Buenos Aires Mold. The teams were as follows:

Belgrano.—Darch; Fenwick, Charlton, Sinclair and Bush; Van Deurs and Desurro; Scott, Bourne, Whittington, De Meyier, Troucaso, Delawain, MacCallum and Culierna.

Buenos Aires.—MacVern; Trillia, Beardware, Walker and Martin; Mold and Crawford; Wigg, Heriot, McCall, Macadam, Broome, Hunter, Bagueriza, and Icarne.

SAN ISIDRO v. LOMAS I.

For the third week in succession San Isidro had to admit defeat in the inter-Club Golf Championship. On Sunday last they entertained Lomas and came out with only 2 matches against 13. Mr. S. O. Marshall was the only successful player for San Isidro. The course was in good condition, although a strong wind prevailed which at times made play difficult. The scores were as follows:—

QUILMES GOLF CLUB.

TREASURER'S PRIZE.

On Sunday afternoon the Quilmes golf course was animated by a number of players turning out to compete for the Treasurer's prize.

This was won by Mr. W. J. Shilton, who returned a card of 3 up on the "Colonel." Mr. Baenonger was the runner-up with a card "all square."

On August 15 the day will be devoted to mixed foursomes.

BOXING

MURRAY BEATS PRIANO

Jack Murray and Priano have met in a boxing contest at the Casino Theatre in Mendoza. Murray, who claims the Championship of South America at his weight, succeeded in knocking Priano out in the fifth round. The bout, which attracted a considerable amount of attention, was judged by Señores R. R. Brizuela, M. B. Gonzalez, and Ricardo Encinas and refereed by Mr. J. Williams. Priano put up a good fight, and shewed plenty of pluck, but from the first round to the last the match was generally in favour of Murray.

THE UNWRITTEN LAW

LOVE TRAGEDY IN CONCORDIA.

From the quiet, industrious and peaceful town of Concordia, Entre Rios, comes information of a tragedy, which has considerably excited the population thereabouts, on account of the fact that such like dramas are practically unknown in the locality. The details furnished state that for some time past an Argentine named Rodolfo Lauzani, 28 years of age, and Salustiana Zapata, a young girl, had been lovers. Lately Lauzani tired of the girl and abandoned her, leaving her in the unhappy condition that she was unable to obtain work and assist herself. She is the daughter of poor parents, who were unable to support her. On several occasions she went to see Lauzani and begged him to fulfil his promise of marriage, but this he refused to do. The girl then asked him to take care of her for two months more, until she regained her liberty of action and was able to work. This request was also refused. The girl in desperation returned home and took her father's revolver and again returned to plead with her lover. This was, however, again without effect, and in his impatience the man struck her, telling her to go away, as he was shortly to be married to another girl. This was too much for Salustiana, who drew the revolver and fired. The bullet struck Lauzani in the forehead, and he died shortly afterwards. The girl then returned home, told her father what she had done, and together they went and gave information to the police. The girl was detained under the orders of the Criminal Judge. It is believed that on the completion of all inquiries, the girl will be given her liberty.

SHOTS AT A JOURNALIST

ATTEMPTED MURDER OF "LA RAZON" CORRESPONDENT IN CASILDA.

On Thursday evening, Aug. 5, the special correspondent of "La Razon" in Casilda was the victim of an attempt against his life, which fortunately was without consequence. On leaving the Café Canosa in that town, Señor Lac Prigeant, "La Razon" correspondent, was accosted by a chauffeur, one of the leaders of a political party in the town. Without warning the latter drew a revolver and fired it at the journalist, without, however, hitting him. The miscreant then threw the weapon away and bolted. He has not been arrested. The attempted crime is regarded as a political one, and a protest has been lodged with the Minister of the Interior.

FAMILY EXTERMINATED

ITALIAN'S GHASTLY CRIME

A sad tragedy has taken place in the South of the Province of Mendoza, in which according to information from San Rafael, an Italian named Mateo Delpoi, owing to want and misery, took the life of his wife, his three children and then committed suicide.

The details of the tragedy are painful in the extreme. Delpoi had for some time been out of work and despite all his efforts to obtain it, was unsuccessful. Slowly his savings dwindled away and unable to face the sufferings and hunger of his three little sons and his wife, he applied to various persons for assistance. He was, however, regarded as a professional beggar, of which there are so many scores in the country, and all assistance was refused him. Unable to support the strain any longer, his mind must have given way, for one night when his wife and family were asleep, he armed himself with a large and heavy knife, and proceeding to his wife's bedroom, he cut off her head with one blow of the weapon, and then proceeded in a like manner to kill his children. Lastly he plunged the knife into his own heart.

The affair has created an intense impression in this district.

PALERMO LAKE MURDERER

SENTENCED TO "INDETERMINATE IMPRISONMENT."

The criminal judge Dr. Jaime Llavallol, who has had in hand the Palermo lake murder, yesterday passed sentence of "indeterminate imprisonment" on the murderer Miguel Ernst. His summing up went carefully over the grounds, and all the details of the gruesome business and, in it he expressed the conclusion that Ernst did not commit the crime in self-defence, as he claimed to have done.

THE RIVADAVIA

NOW AT PUERTO MILITAR

Rear-Admiral Domecq Garcia, who is in command of the "Moreno," has forwarded to the Minister of Marine the information that yesterday morning the "Rivadavia" entered the basin at Puerto Militar.

The fact is regarded as being of importance, because it is the first time that a vessel of the tonnage of the "Rivadavia" has ever entered that naval station.

The work, began some time ago, of deepening the channel to the port, is not yet completed, but the "Rivadavia's" arrival has shown that there is a sufficient depth of water for large vessels. Her arrival has caused much jubilation.

THE PARAGUAYAN CHACO

An Ideal Pastoral Country

COMMENTS ON AN UNKNOWN LAND

The current issue of Paraguay says:—

We note that the American Press is making a great propaganda for Paraguay. We are naturally very pleased that Paraguay with its numerous opportunities and vast possibilities is made known, but we are at the same time anxious that the information which is published, should be exact and not give people a wrong impression of the country and we regret to say that some of the United States papers have not done this country any great service by its "recent and sensational discovery of Paraguay."

We have had a number of inquiries of late, mostly from parties interested in the "Chaco Paraguay" and its possibilities for cattle and agriculture, and we have endeavoured to give a little information about this country, in an article in the present issue.

One must remember that Chaco Paraguay is as yet practically unexplored, only the vicinities of the rivers and a few arms inland is all that is known.

The article in question reads as follows:—

The Western Paraguay or "El Chaco Paraguayo" is a flat, low lying land situated between the rivers Paraguay and Pilcomayo and with an approximate area of 20,000 square miles.

The Chaco is par excellence a pastoral country and millions of cattle could be bred on its vast grazing area, but in spite of this most of the land is lying idle. The few establishments on the Paraguay river carry an inadequate number of cattle, and are with a few exceptions run in a most primitive manner.

The pasture is as a rule of excellent quality, and in many districts, at least 1600 head of cattle can be carried per league, (4633 acres). Cattle pests are very rare, only in later years some herds have suffered from a mild form of foot-and-mouth disease. This, however, appears at long intervals, and only when the grass is very scarce do they suffer any ill effects. Garrapatas or ticks are not as common as in the Eastern Paraguay which may largely be accounted for by the salty nature of most of the interior streams.

The Chaco is also well timbered, and in the forests is found the quebracho colorado which is the most important commercial variety of timber produced in the country. This is a dense hard wood of dark red colour well known in Europe and the United States as a tanning agent, and considerable quantities of logs are shipped annually. To economise freights, several factories have been established in Paraguay itself for the purpose of extracting the tannin which is then bagged and shipped direct to the overseas market. Of other woods worthy of note to be found in the Chaco, may be mentioned Algarrobo, Guayacan and Palo Santo (Lignum Vita). The latter wood is of dark green colour, is very resinous and scented and is used in place of bronze bearings for shafts, etc. From the Chaco is also exported a considerable number of palms of which the only species of any commercial value is the "Caranday" or black palm.

Agriculture is still in an experimental stage, but the land ought in many parts to be well adapted for the cultivation of sugar cane, maize, cotton and possibly also for wheat and rice.

Certain difficulties will always be encountered in the Chaco, some parts of it being low and subject to floods, caused by the rising of the Paraguay and Pilcomayo rivers and from interior streams and swamps. A lot of drainage work would have to be done in order to exploit these lands properly and reservoirs would have to

The Palace of Gold

THE CLOSING CHAPTER.

Yesterday afternoon the President of the Republic and the Minister of Public Works signed an important decree concerning the Palace of Justice. In view of the fact that this structure is as yet uncompleted, and that the contracts of certain firms have not yet been fulfilled, the Executive Body feel themselves justified in rescinding certain of these contracts or calling upon the contractors to fulfil their contracts within 30 days.

The history of the "Palace of Gold," a nickname which has been given to one of the most expensive buildings in the world, and one of the finest in the city of Buenos Aires, thus comes to the end of a chapter that has called forth an immensity of criticism. The decree throws much official light upon a building episode that has not edified any other section of the Argentine public other than building contractors.

AMERICAN BANKS FOR B.A.

There appears to be some possibility that the example furnished by the National City Bank of New York in establishing branches in Buenos Aires and other important South American cities will shortly be imitated by the larger banking establishments in Boston, Chicago, and Baltimore. It is rumoured that the possibility has already passed the stage of mere resolution and that before the end of the current year other North American banking houses will be established in the city.

be built at convenient places to provide water for the dry season when most of the interior streams become brackish. Well water is as a rule of an unpleasant salty flavour.

The relatively narrow strip along the two main rivers, which is practically all that is known of the Chaco, is very valuable land and gives one a natural desire to explore the central regions, and find the best ways of communication essential to rational exploit. It is very probable, if not certain that the land is much higher and infinitely superior in quality, as one goes west. This was found to be the case, as regards the region watered by the river Bermejo.

Some of the timber companies which are established along the river Paraguay, thanks mostly to North American capital and enterprise, have built light railroads into the interior, but none reach further than 40 miles inland, and not far beyond that point the country is still unknown, with exception of some districts in the southern portion, due west of Concepción, where the South American Missionary Society, 20 years ago, established a station some 50 miles from the river. The Paraguay Land and Cattle Company owns about 4 million acres of land in the region west of Concepción, some of the larger blocks of their various properties bordering on the Pilcomayo and Paraguay river respectively. Mr. Rickard sent an expedition which went in some considerable distance on the Paraguay Land and Cattle Company's land to the west of the mission station, referred to above, but did not succeed in reaching the Pilcomayo.

In our opinion the only waterway that can be counted upon for traffic is the Rio Paraguay, which forms the eastern boundary of the Chaco zones, as the Pilcomayo presents too many difficulties to navigation to be of any practical use. It is however claimed that the latter river could also be opened up to traffic by an initial expenditure of some 22 million dollars gold, a figure given by Mr. Lange, who was sent by some Argentine capitalists to explore the Pilcomayo and report on the possibilities it offered for navigation. Mr. Lange, is the only explorer who has succeeded in surmounting the entire course of the river, passing the Patiño swamps where the Pilcomayo for a considerable distance loses itself in underground channels.

An Intendente Suspended

TENDER CARE FOR PUBLIC WEAL

It is reported from Colon, that much astonishment has been created there by the suspension of the Municipal Intendente, Sr. Michael Duffy, the reason alleged being that he has not been at his office for four days. In view of the well-known political views of powers that be, it is considered that Sr. Duffy's non attendance had less to do with the matter than the fact that, he has just been lectured President of the Radical Committee, and, is of course on that account anathema.

MERCEDES ORPHANAGE

A meeting of the general committee of the Mercedes Methodist Orphanage was held in the offices of the American Church on Monday afternoon. The President of the Committee, the Rev. Dr. McLaughlin, was in the chair, and the members present were: The Revs. M. L. Wolcott, Daniel Hall, Dr. Craver, C. J. Turner, E. N. Bauman, and Mr. P. B. Massey. Regrets for inability to attend were sent by the Rev. Dr. Thomson, and Mr. Henry Martin.

Reports from the director and visitors showed everything in connection with the orphanage and school to be in a flourishing condition. Several new boys were voted admission. The committee has the money to erect a building on the 26-acre plot in Mercedes, and is only waiting for equipment and working funds, some of which it is expected that Bishop Stuntz will raise in the United States. At present the boys are lodged in the school property, the Nicholas Lowe Institute, belonging to the Mission. Special mention is made by all visitors of the healthy and happy appearance of the boys, for there is nothing of "Dotheboys' Hall" about the institution. Hearty thanks were voted to all concerned in giving the boys such a delightful trip last Saturday where they enjoyed greatly the dinner, lunch and cinema entertainment provided for them. The Orphanage is entirely supported by the Methodist Churches of this region, the American Church being the largest annual contributor.

TRAGEDY IN MIRAFLORES

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

The police in the village of Miraflores in the department of Capayan are engaged in a case which has some exceptional features and in which one man killed another and then committed suicide, after a wild career down the main street on his horse. The details furnished state that the case was one of a $100 debt, but owing to the peculiar behaviour of Julio Martinez who was responsible for the debt, the police believe it to be a case of insanity. Two friends, Luis Centeno Espeche, an ex-police officer and Julio Martinez a Spaniard, were neighbours and close friends, the former, after he left the police force was unable to obtain work, and to assist him Martinez lent him the sum of $100.

Times did not improve and on Monday afternoon Martinez rode into the village and called at his friend's home and asked for the return of the money. Espeche said that it was impossible for him to pay up and a heated argument arose between the two, which ended in Martinez riding away.

Apparently he stopped at an almshouse at the street corner, where he purchased some cartridges for his revolver, a circumstance which attracted no attention whatever. Half an hour later, he again returned to Espeche's dwelling and repeated his request for the money lent. Again Espeche said he was not able to pay. The Spaniard therewith drew his revolver and fired at his friend killing him instantly. He then jumped on his horse and commenced a wild and headlong ride down the main street until he arrived opposite the post office, where he turned the revolver on himself. A few hours later he died.

Britain's Meat Prices

HEAVY INCREASES IN LONDON

London, August 10.

The report of the Superintendent of the Central Market says that the supply of meat of all kinds in July totalled 29,702 tons. Last June it was only 3833 tons.

The price of fresh beef has increased 43 per cent, while that of frozen beef has gone up 74 per cent, fresh mutton 13 per cent and frozen mutton 50 per cent.

"JUAN SALABERRY" HOSPITAL

PETITION FOR THE RE-APPOINTMENT OF DR. RAÑO.

The transference of Dr. Santiago Raño from the "Juan Salaberry" hospital at Nuevo Chicago, has brought forth an earnest and forceful petition from the most influential people in that district to the chief of the Asistencia Publica, begging that the doctor may be re-appointed to the hospital. They point out that during the period of his appointment, he has shewn himself singularly adapted for the position and that he has earned the gratitude of every one by his excellent work. They request his re-appointment on the basis that it would be in the interest of Nueva Chicago, that he should remain.

MENDOZA WINES

RISE IN PRICES.

A rise is reported in the Mendoza wine market which has for some time been very dead, but shows signs of resuscitation. During the past week, some activity has been noted and a sale of 28,000 hectolitres has been made. The price 9½ centavos a litre, buyer to pay carriage and dues is a marked improvement, as lately this class of wine has oscillated between seven and eight cents a litre. Noting this firmness of the Mendoza market and its effect on our own, the Buenos Aires wine merchants feel it due to their own interests to stick another three cents on their prices from Sept. 1, in addition to F.O.B. in Mendoza. Consequently from that date, the price of 25 cents will generally rule on the principal marks of wine in stock.

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY

(To the Editor)

Sir.—If it is prohibited by British Law to do business with our enemies—how is it that nearly every British vessel arriving from England brings large consignments of goods for German houses?

By doing this we are helping them to keep their doors open until such time as they can again (?) import from Germany.

Cannot our local "British Board of Commerce" do something in the matter?

It they will tell us how we can help, I have no doubt ever Britisher will "do his bit."

Yours, etc.

SIR HIRAM MAXIM'S INVENTION.

Paris, August 10.

The London Correspondent of the "Petit Parisien" credits Sir Hiram Maxim with having invented a simple and cheap contrivance for protecting the troops against the effects of noxious gases. The invention makes the clouds of gas rise and pass over the heads of the men.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor.)

The annual show organised by the Santa Fé Rural Society is to be inaugurated on September 26.

The 9th Show organised by the Sociedad Rural de Refaela, is announced to be opened on September 5.

The yearly sale of high-class bulls, imported by Mr. Donald MacLennan is announced by the Messrs. Bullrich to take place on August 15. This important consignment has for many years been recognised as one of the most select lots of bulls coming to this Republic, while the high esteem in which its importer is held contributed to a successful auction. This year, it is understood, Mr. MacLennan will not be with us personally, though he can rest assured there will be nothing left undone that experience and skill can determine, in the preparation and presentation of this consignment, which are, as in former years, under the charge of Mr. James Scott.

A consignment of imported bulls, from that well-known Aberdeen-shire expert, Mr. Robert Duncan, are also announced to be put up for auction by the Messrs. Bullrich, on August 15. Mr. Duncan's extensive connection in the North of Scotland enables him to secure a really good class of bulls, which in previous years have been very favourably spoken of by their buyers.

The weather of the week has been milder than has lately been experienced, and the grass so ready to grow, appears already to bear a fresher green, after its blackening by the recent severe frosts.

The week's trade at Mataderos has been very firm for all classes of best quality steers, though cows and secondary quality animals have not been as keenly competed for as in the previous week.

The "Meat Trades Journal" speaks very favourably of the latest shipment of Brazilian beef, received on the Smithfield market. It is considered of superior quality, and bears evidence of having been handled in a manner more acceptable to London buyers.

Several shipments of meat from South Africa have also been favourably received by the trade in London. These shipments are reported as likely to increase very much now that the methods of handling meat, as required by the London trade, are being understood.

The outbreak of some cattle disease is reported from the Pampa Central, and, as is usual in such cases, the Government have been requested to send a Veterinary expert to adopt the necessary measures for its eradication. It is said to be foot-and-mouth disease, though the suddenness of death would not suggest that disease, generally known as "Aftosa" here. "Aftosa" is very rarely responsible for a big death-rate if the animals attacked are in fair condition to enable them to tide over the critical period. The epidemic in the case referred to will no doubt be something more virulent, but is likely to be localised, and its effects prevented by the inoculation of the proper serum.

LARGE DEPOSITS OF MAIZE.

Travelling by the Central Cordoba to Rosario gives one a splendid opportunity of testifying to the fertile zone intersected by this line. Sowing operations were being actively advanced, and the ground was evidently in a very good state for the seed bed, when I made the trip to the Rosario Show. It would be a great advantage to roll the ground after sowing, thereby breaking all "clods," so generally seen, and pulverising the ground at the same time. The action of rolling is also most beneficial in firming the ground and thereby retaining the moisture, so necessary for the young plant. Leaving the ground in a rough "cloddy" state after sowing and harrowing allows the more easy penetration of the drought, and consequent damage to the tender sprout.

The very large deposits of maize at all the stations was a most reassuring sight, regarding the vast quantity of maize existing in the country, and only waiting a favourable opportunity for shipment. All galpones were built full while innumerable huge piles were most carefully stacked, and protected from the weather by suitable waterproof sheeting.

The Cordoba line passes through a very rich and evidently coming district for closer colonisation, where a man can live well and rear a family on a small area properly cultivated and intelligently handled. Large quantities of maize had evidently been retained for local consumption, as evidenced by the deposits invariably noticeable at all homesteads. This was the first occasion I have travelled by this line, and I only selected that route to enable me to study the agricultural resources of the country it traverses. The working of the soil appeared to be more carefully attended to than is noticeable in many parts of this Republic. The numerous settlements gave the country a more home-like and prosperous appearance than is generally to be seen in the Argentine. It is most noticeable that oxen are generally used in drawing the heavy carts of maize to the stations, for in these parts it is possible to pass with a heavy load, as the roads leading to the stations appear to be exceptionally good for this Republic.

THE COMING BREEDING SEASON

CONDITIONS FAVOURABLE.

From the cattle and sheep-breeding districts very satisfactory reports are coming in as to the prospects of the coming season. The harmful conditions lately in evidence through the excessive cold, the frost, and latterly through the want of good pasture, seem to have disappeared, and the majority of the farms are rapidly recovering and coming into condition again, due to the excellent weather conditions prevailing.

The fears that the poor pasturage would seriously affect breeding has been dispersed, and from all quarters comes the information that both cattle and sheep breeding is proceeding under the most favourable conditions.

ARRIVAL OF PEDIGREE STOCK

The s.s. Siddons brought a large consignment of pedigree stock for various consignees. Mr. R. T. Pears consigned 75 Lincoln rams, practically all bred by the Pears family in England, from their world renowned flocks. This lot of rams, have reached here in excellent condition, and will soon be on view at the local yards, where no doubt they will be readily sought after, as rams, so far, have been selling well this season. 75 head of poultry were also shipped by Mr. Pears, comprising many pens of high class birds. This consignment was in charge of Mr. James McCormick, whose reputation for attention to his charges is already favourably known.

A NOTED BREEDER

Mr. J. J. Cridlan, a noted breeder and exhibitor of Aberdeen-Angus stock, writes to "The Herald" as follows, from Malsmore Park, Gloucester, England:—

"I herewith have pleasure in forwarding you photos of my two great Aberdeen-Angus Show winners (champions of the year 1915). Owing to the war the number of shows have been greatly restricted, and our season is now finished so far as breeding shows are concerned. The sire of the Champion of the Royal Agricultural Society's Show last week at Nottingham is in the Argentine, making a record at the El Dorado Sale, 1913, so I trust you will deem it of interest to your agricultural readers and worthy of reproduction. "Tulip of Standen" was champion at the great Bath and West Show in May. There have been only four Shows held this year with Angus classes, Oxfordshire, Northamptonshire, the Bath and West, and the Royal, at all of which I had the honour of the championship awards. I will shortly be sending a valuable consignment of Angus bulls to your country, including prominent prize-winners and champions in this country, which I hope will forward the great interest of cattle breeding and raising for our home markets, the produce of the breed being held in the highest esteem here, where it always makes the top price in market quotations. I am pleased to learn from your valuable journal that agricultural and stock prospects are so good with you. I hope your coming show in Palermo may prove very successful notwithstanding the effects of this terrible war."

The beasts whose pictures are reproduced herewith are:—

"Everard 2nd of Malsmore," calved on April 3, 1911. He won the championship at the Royal Agricultural Society's Show, 1915, and has also carried off five champion gold medals and ten first prizes. His sire was

"Rubelale of Malsmore," which made the record price (at the El Dorado sale) in Argentina. The dam was "Evergreen 13th."

"Tulip of Standen," was calved on February 23, 1909. She has won 14 first prizes; the champion gold medal at the Bath and West Counties Show, 1915, and two champion silver medals in 1914. She was bred by Captain Cookson, and is owned by Mr. Cridlan.

WHEAT MARKET

Contracts for wheat for export are for the present arrested. According to exporters, prices for wheat are excessive, and leave no margin for foreign orders. This state of affairs, they say, is likely to continue until European demands becomes so extraordinary as to upset it. Meanwhile growers will suffer no harm as demand and consumption will keep prices at a firm and satisfactory figure.

LA PLATA POULTRY SHOW

(To the Editor).

Sir.—In reference to my letter regarding the above mentioned Show which you so courteously published on July 31, I have no desire to enter into controversy upon the subject.

I should wish, however, to point out that my remarks were justified, and not the petulantly expressed annoyance of a disappointed breeder. I did not exhibit either Black, White, or Buff Orpingtons, nor Wyandottes or Plymouth Rocks, consequently as "healthy criticism" is undoubtedly of benefit to the poultry industry, my remarks cannot have been actuated by envy, or ill will.

I enclose a letter from a well-known poultryman, with authority to publish it. This gentleman also "dares" to criticise the Show and exhibits adversely, and he was not an exhibitor.

I quite agree that it would be an admirable thing if poultry breeders could be brought to sink their differences and love their neighbours better than themselves, but fear that the old adage of "two of a trade, etc." is just as applicable to poultrymen as to people in other walks of life; neither do I believe that poultry breeders are more or less egoistical than other folks.

We all advertize our birds or eggs, or our special poultry mixtures, for those of our friends if we have sufficiently powerful reasons for doing so, and believe me Mr. Editor, that we do not advertize nor exhibit for the 'benefit of the poultry industry,' whether we breed as a means of gaining a livelihood, or as a so-called "hobby," we all are on the look out for probable purchasers (vide your advertisement pages),—so why so much cant regarding "bien de la avicultura?" What we all wish is to breed better birds and make better sales than the other fellow, be he who he may.

I shall not encroach further upon your valuable space, in order to comment upon your Agricultural Editor's criticism of my letter. To impartial readers it speaks for itself, especially as I am not aware that he either has been, or is, a poultry judge. Apologising for trespassing upon the patience of your readers.

Yours, etc.

P. A. LAMBE.

Maximo Paz, F. C. S.

The letter referred to by Mr. Lambe is as follows:

"Dear Mr. Lambe.—On Saturday last I read your letter in the "Agricultural Section" of the "Herald" in reference to La Plata Show. On many points I agree with you, such as the position of some of the exhibits which could have been avoided; the horrible crowd of "street boys," and above all wretched and poorly exhibited stock.

It is useless remarking on any of the exhibits as the majority of the birds there were only fit for the "pot." As a matter of fact my visit was cut extremely short, being absolutely disgusted with the blessed lot. A few days later I met one of the judges who asked my opinion of the class of birds exhibited. I told him what I have told you, to which he fully agreed, expressing himself in much stronger language.

As regards your exhibits, the trio of White Leghorns did not look so fit as when they won at Palermo, in fact none of the White Leghorns looked in good condition. The class must have been a difficult one for the judges to make a decision upon. Perhaps the judge did not care for your type of bird. You should mark the judge's name and the quality of bird he likes; then attack him with his "fancy." Three years ago, there was an English judge at home who at the beginning of the season continually overlooked my exhibits. Half way through the season I discovered his "wants"—quite a different type of bird to the actual standard—after which I continually won, following him with his "wants" even to the Crystal Palace, where he picked this particular type out.

You must bear in mind that Poultry Shows are in their childhood in the Argentine, and that it will be a long time before exhibitors and judges become educated enough to handle first class stock. Personally I think you have done exceedingly well and should overlook the "errors" or misfortunes of the show; and above all "be satisfied."

Yours, sincerely,

DONALD C. BARGMAN

(To the Editor).

Sir.—Having read in "The Herald" of July 31, a contribution from Mr. P. A. Lambe, which contains a number of false statements to defend his personal interests, I should be obliged if you will publish these lines with the sole object of clearing his mistaken appreciations:

(1) No member of the "Asociación de Avicultores," has complained of the site or hall, nor of the organising committee of the exhibition; on the contrary everyone who visited the Show admired the work so generously realized by the committee, and congratulated the Director, the Secretary, and the Manager on the success achieved and the self denial they demonstrated in their labours.

(2) The funds at the disposal of the Association are very reduced and to enable them to hold the annual exhibitions, members of the committee have sometimes made payments out of their own pockets.

(3) It is absolutely false what that gentleman affirms that the White Wyandotte cock, winner of the first prize, had his comb cut or "pruned."

(4) It is absolutely false that the Champion Barred Plymouth Rock cock is a well known bird at Exhibitions, as he had only been previously shown at the Poultry Exhibition at Palermo, in the month of May.

(5) The Black Orpington cockerel, winner of the first prize is a perfect bird, and not defective as he affirms; considering that he is only eight months old he has all the growth that it is possible to expect from such a bird.

(6) That Mr. P. A. Lambe is not capable of proving any of the things that he affirms in his article.

(7) That I am ready to prove to him what I have written, for which purpose I have at his disposal at my poultry farm, the birds to which I have referred.

Thanking you in anticipation,

Yours, etc.,

ENRIQUE C. HARDOY.

AGRICULTURAL PROSPECTSMORE RAIN WANTED.

The lack of rain was, yesterday morning, making itself seriously felt in certain districts in the Republic. The amount that has fallen in Santa Fé and Entre Rios is small and only a minimum of benefit has been felt.

In the South from Pringles to Patagones and Choele-Choele the want of rain is seriously affecting the sowing, only 50 per cent of the land destined for certain forms of agriculture has been seeded.

Nearly all agricultural land in the Cordoba district has been put under wheat and the conditions there are favourable. Maize sowings have not yet commenced. In the west rain has fallen to the great benefit of the pasture, at the same time more is required. In Entre Rios the wheat sowings have also been completed and flax is now being seeded. A little more rain throughout the Republic will render conditions perfect, for the germination of all seed.

CASTING A HORSE

The usual methods for casting a horse are: by ropes; and by hobbles. The former is the better of the two for castration, removal of scirrhus cord, and operations for hernia; as the hind legs can be kept wider apart by it, than by the latter, which is more convenient for all other operations. I shall also describe a third method of casting which has many advantages. A piece of soft old grass land is in every respect the most suitable place on which to cast a horse. A ploughed field, sandpit, or failing these a bed of straw may be used. With ropes straw should not be generally employed, as it is impossible to tell within a few feet where the horse will fall; but with well managed hobbles he can be made to drop on the very spot on which he had previously stood. The twitch should always be put on before the horse is cast. As horses are liable to fracture their backs in this operation, we should be very careful about casting animals especially old ones which appear stiff in their backs.

(1) The ordinary casting rope is thick, soft, about 20 yards long, and provided with two metal eyes, at its centre, and about 30 inches apart one from the other, so as to form pulleys for the rope. The usual ways for using these ropes is as follows: (a) the first method is performed by knotting the rope, so as to make at its centre, a loop which will fit, when passed over the animal's head, like a collar round the base of the neck. The knot is placed uppermost, in a line with the withers; and each end of the rope is passed backwards between the hind legs, brought round its respective pastern and then passed through the eye of the improvised collar at its own side. The horse's head being steadied by a twitch, an assistant on each side pulls on the ropes and thereby draws his hind legs from under him; when a push is all that is needed to throw him on his side. An extra turn of the rope is taken round the pasterns, so as to prevent the hind legs getting loose. The ropes are tightened and the animal fixed securely, with his hind legs drawn closely to his sides, and well separated, so as to freely expose the testicles and under surface of the belly. If the loop of the rope presses unduly on the wind pipe, it may be pulled away from that part, or the uppermost hind leg may be drawn forward, which will also relieve it.

(b) By the second method, the loop is placed as before, over the neck, but the knot rests on the breast bone. The collar is prevented from slipping forward by a strap, which is attached to the pad of a surcingle, or the rope may be plaited into the mane at the withers. The free ends of the rope are passed between the fore and hind legs, over the hind pasterns, are brought to the front, one on each side of his shoulders, and passed through the eyes of the loop. It is well to put bandages, on the hind pasterns, to prevent them being cut by the rope. The animal is then thrown, and secured as before. Another method is to take a rather thin, though strong and flexible rope, and two iron rings about 2½ inches in diameter, which are included in the knot forming the collar. To prevent the rings getting out of place, it is necessary with the rope to make another knot behind them. The knot of the collar as in the first method, is placed near the withers, and the ropes, instead of going over the hind pasterns, are respectively passed through rings on hobbles, which have previously been put on the hind pasterns. The employment of these hobbles which are lined with felt, allows the ropes to run freely, and obviates all risk of their cutting the animal's hind pasterns. In all cases when on the ground, the horse's head should be kept down, and his muzzle well extended. If, when using the casting rope, we want to operate on one of the forelegs we may after having thrown the animal strap up the other

SOCIEDAD RURAL ARGENTINAPHOTOGRAPHIC COMPETITION.

The Directive Committee of the Sociedad Rural Argentina has decided to institute a competitive exhibition of photographs and posters under the following conditions:—

1.—Each exhibitor shall present two positives 18x24 one on card-board mount, the other on paper of each of the animals which have won first prize in the cattle, horse, sheep and horse classes.

2.—Should there be on each category of the programme two or more exhibitors $10, entrance shall be paid for the prize photograph and $7 for the non prize, provided the Jury accept it.

3.—The negatives remain property of the contestants and the prints of the Society.

4.—Three points will be counted towards the prizes for each of the photographs of cattle and horses and two points in the case of sheep and pigs.

5.—Three prizes will be awarded to the contestants obtaining the largest number of points, namely:—First prize $500 and gold medal; second prize $300 and silver medal, and third prize $200 and bronze medal.

The exhibition of competing photographs will take place on October 10 during the show of non-Pedigree Breeding Beasts and the prizes will be awarded at the same time.

CATTLE EPIDEMIC IN CORRIENTESINCREASING ALARM AMONGST ESTANCIEROS.

The alarm throughout Corrientes occasioned by the outbreak of an epidemic amongst the stock, is increasing. From Alvear information has been received that one large owner, out of 1800 fillies has only some 600 which have not died through the disease, out of 550 ewes only 5 remain and the 50 lambs of 2 months ago are reduced to nine.

The reported symptoms are as follows. The animal becomes dull and listless, he lies down and refuses all food. Later blackish-brown blood cozes from the nose and if he attempts to rise, he staggers and falls. Death occurs on the third day. A post mortem examination of the flesh reveals it full of ecchymosis (purple patches like bruises). The epidemic has been in evidence for some three months but the district is without the services of a veterinary surgeon.

fore leg, by its pastern to a surcingle, which had previously been put on. Care should be taken that the horse is not tied up too tightly, lest, during his endeavours to free himself, he may fracture one of the bones of his back or limbs.

(2) Hobbles in their simplest form are four strong leather straps, which are buckled on to the pasterns. Each of them is provided with an iron D for a rope or chain to pass through. One called the main hobble has a larger D than the others. To cast the horse on his right side, pass a loop of soft rope or webbing over the near fore leg, leaving the free end to hang over the animal's off shoulder. The main hobble is put on the near fore leg (or on the off fore if the horse has to fall on his near side), and the remaining three are put on the other legs, the buckles being on the outside. One end of a rope or chain is made fast to the D of the main hobble, its free end is passed through that of the hind leg on the same side, and so on until it returns through the D of the main hobble again. Two assistants hold this rope or chain, while one seizes that which passes over the shoulder. A steady pull on the hobble rope will bring all four feet together, and one on the shoulder rope, will serve to throw the horse on his side.

THE EVACUATION OF WARSAW

FRIDAY, August 6, 1915.

We see no reason in the evacuation of Warsaw by the Russians, and its occupation by the German forces, to alter the opinions we expressed when discussing the Russian situation on July 22. As a matter of fact the abandonment of Warsaw confirms the accuracy of the forecast we then made, that if the security of the Russian line in any vital part were threatened, there would be a general retirement, and the mistake would not be made of attempting to hold any isolated position. It is quite reasonable to suppose that Warsaw could have been held for a considerable period as a strongly fortified and well-garrisoned position, but modern strategy does not embrace as sound generalship, the locking up of considerable forces, and the sustention of prolonged sieges. The Franco-Prussian war demonstrated the folly of such. By the retirement of large French armies into Sedan and Metz, their doom was sealed, the initiative of the French forces was broken, and France was defeated. Apart from the action of the Austrians in holding Przemyśl, and suffering thereby the loss of an enormous force, the mistake has not been repeated on any scale by any power in this war.

It cannot be denied, of course, the evacuation of Warsaw being compulsory, that the Germans have secured an advantage. That they can compel the Russians to fall back indicates their strength, and the further they can force the retirement, the less danger is there of their own territory being invaded, and the more substantial becomes the task for the Russians when they are able to assume the offensive. These considerations, have, however, been anticipated. The Allies would regard a strong advance of the Russians as a success, and necessarily the advance of the Germans must be considered in the same category, from an impartial point of view as a success on their part. What will give the Allies satisfaction, however, is that failing success, as represented by an advance, the Russians have sustained no defeat. The cablegrams advise us that the evacuation was carried out in good order; that all stores were removed, and that the Russian armies have maintained contact and have retired to well-prepared positions. It would have been a disaster had Warsaw been held, and its garrison, no matter how strong, isolated from the rest of the Czar's forces, or had it been made impossible for the Russians to retire while maintaining an unbroken front.

As we have frequently pointed out, there can be no such thing as "a conquest" of Russia, but there could very easily be a smashing series of defeats if the commanders did not realise the necessity for retiring in unison, when the pressure on any part of the line became too strong. If the Germans could "crumple up" the line in any one part, by driving a wedge into the front, it would be a comparatively simple thing for them to defeat the Russian armies in detail. Such an operation actually occurred earlier in the war when von Hindenberg, advancing rapidly, got between the two main armies which had invaded Eastern Prussia, and throwing all his weight against Rennenkampf inflicted a defeat upon the Russians which was little short of a disaster. In this instance von Hindenberg was enabled to carry out one of Napoleon's favourite manoeuvres, but against the more modern strategy, of which General Joffre gave us the first demonstration, and which the Russians have since followed closely, such a manoeuvre can hardly be successful. Joffre linked up his armies, and retired and advanced them as circumstances dictated, al-

A GROTESQUE "OFFICIAL" STATEMENT

Saturday, Aug. 7.

We do not often burden our readers with figures, as we generally have sufficient opinions of our own to express freely and frankly, without being obliged to hide barrenness of thought in a maze of quoted statistics. Our excuse for dealing with figures to-day is the necessity for exposing what we consider to be about as absurd an "official" statement, as this war has yet produced. We refer to the figures relating to the casualties sustained by the combatant armies since the outbreak of war, and which we are told represent the official computation of the French War Office. We, in common with most papers, have printed this statement as a cablegram, but that does not prevent us pointing out its manifest inaccuracies, and again demonstrating to what foolish conclusions we would be led were we to accept as accurate every statement branded "official."

According to the statement referred to, the total casualties sustained by the various powers, exclusive of Italy, Japan, Serbia and Montenegro, have reached the enormous total of 14,398,000. Of this huge total the Allies have lost 5,664,000, and the Teutonic Alliance, 8,734,000. The figures would be worthless enough in all conscience even if they were smaller, and we were not apprised at the same time, of what proportion they bear to the armies engaged, but when they are worked out on known ratios, and fairly easily calculated estimates of the armies in the field, they are not only worthless, but positively absurd. As a matter of fact, one paper, accepting the figures as accurate, would lead us to believe that the Teutonic Alliance, has only 266,000 men left, unless many hundreds of thousands of its wounded have recovered and gone back to the battlefields. Following such figures to their logical end we would be forced to regard the Germans and their Allies as supermen indeed, if they could do what they are still doing, with such small numbers left ways maintaining his mobility and his freedom of action.

Far more serious than the evacuation of Warsaw, if the news be true, is the capture of Riga by the Germans. It portends a determined thrust at Petrograd, and worse than that, the control of the Baltic coast, where the approach to Petrograd from the North Sea, narrows at Revel. If the Germans are successful here, they will shut Petrograd off from any communication with the outer world, because in a few weeks more Archangel will be ice-bound, and no supplies of munitions will be able to get in except by the long route from Vladivostok across Siberia. We do not wish to pose as military experts, and we are quite aware that the Russian situation in all phases is clearly understood and appreciated by those in whose hands the affairs of the Allies repose. It is, however, permissible to try and elucidate the meaning of the various operations, and in attempting this we do not see that there is any serious ground for believing that the fortunes of war are unduly favouring the enemy. Germany is making haste and seizing all the advantages she can, but those advantages are neither definite nor decisive. The Allies have yet to experience the turning of the tide directly in their favour. Meanwhile, as so often repeated, while they are not gaining they are not losing, and every month that passes witnesses their growing strength and the waning of that of the enemy.

as this precious "official" statement would lead us to believe.

The proportion which casualties bear to given numbers employed is something which can be gauged from military history. Taking a series of campaigns, and the most important battles in them, we can ascertain fairly accurately, what loss may be expected in a given force of men. A loss of 50 per cent in killed, wounded and prisoners, is exceedingly high, even for a desperate battle. For a campaign, that does not end in absolute disaster, 40 per cent is high. Similar percentages can be worked out when casualties are analysed. Roughly speaking, only one man is killed to four wounded, though, of course, in certain engagements the ratio may be seriously altered. At Waterloo the total forces engaged were 182,000 including Blucher's two corps. The total losses in killed and wounded were 62,000, or roughly 33 per cent, and Waterloo was a stubbornly fought battle. At Gettysburg, in the American Civil War, the percentage of losses was very much higher, but the battle lasted three days and was savagely fought. In our South African campaign the losses, out of a maximum force employed—that is of troops who took the field, and saw the campaign through, or were relieved—of 300,000, were approximately 20 per cent. The deaths were less than ten per cent, and enteric fever killed more than the bullets did.

Judging the French official figures by such standards, and striking 40 per cent as the average of losses for a war, we arrive at the astonishing conclusion that there are engaged in this war, 35,746,000 men! Where are they all? Even if we admit the French figures represent casualties as high as 50 per cent, the forces engaged are incredibly large. The absurdity of the figures, is, however, more clearly demonstrated when we look into the proportion of killed to wounded. One palpable fraud is contained in the statement that Belgium has lost 49,000 killed, and exactly the same number wounded. If this be correct, what then becomes of the known fact that more men are wounded than are killed, and why should Belgium alone of all the powers, have sustained an even balance? The figures relating to other powers are just as absurd. Britain for instance, is stated to have lost 181,000 killed, and only 200,000 wounded. It is only the other day that we read that Britain's official casualty lists gave a total of 330,000 odd, and that this "created painful sensation." The French figures make the losses of Britain 471,000 including prisoners!

The absurdity of the figures relating to killed and wounded is further emphasised when it is remembered, that thousands of men recover from wounds, and return to service, sometimes two and three times in the one campaign. This fact only increases the disproportion between killed and wounded. In no instance, so far as we can see do the figures show the right proportions. If it be argued that our ratios are not right, because this war is exceptional, we can quote specifically to demonstrate the accuracy of our hypothesis. The Australians on Gallipoli Peninsula number about 25,000. After terrible fighting, including hand to hand combats in trenches and wire entanglements, they have lost roughly 8,000 men; less than 33 per cent. Of this 8,000, less than 25 per cent have been killed. If we cut the French official total in half, we would probably be near the mark. To be asked to accept it as accurate, is to have our intelligence insulted.

"Sociable young fellow required to go half-shares in season's expenses in fully-equipped river camp, age about 25 to 30, good thing for someone suitable."—Advt. in Daily Mail.

As Punch says there are several other camps ready to welcome sociable young fellows of this age; "good thing for someone suitable."

THE DARDANELLES CAMPAIGN

SUNDAY, August 8, 1915.

The London press, headed by "The Times," has given that prominence to Sir Ian Hamilton's report on the Dardanelles operation, which such a remarkable military dispatch warranted. By a consensus of opinion the report is regarded as the most graphic and important official story of military operations ever published, and until it is remembered that Sir Ian Hamilton is an author and poet, the reader is inclined to question whether the brilliant story came from his pen, though of the authenticity of the data there is no doubt.

The British press has with almost one accord accepted the report as a stern indictment of the muddling methods of the people in charge of the conduct of the war, and this conclusion strikes us forcibly as being correct. Of the part played by Sir Ian Hamilton himself, and by the men under his command there is equal unanimity of opinion. No commander, and no men could have done more, and there is no page in Britain's military history more glorious than that on which is recorded the story of how the Allies got their grip on Gallipoli—and retained it. Only by reading the Commander-in-Chief's story can we realise what a desperate and tremendous task faced the Allies, and the cause for surprise is not that they have so far failed to force the Dardanelles, but that they ever landed. What success they have gained at terrible cost, only serves to emphasize the fact that under proper leaders the men of the Allied armies are invincible. Our own feeling of admiration for Sir Ian Hamilton, for his forces, and for what they have accomplished is so great, that we should consider it as something little less than a crime were we to offer one word of criticism regarding the operations so far as they have progressed under the guidance of this brilliant general.

For what transpired prior to his arrival on the scene we have nothing but criticism to offer. The general's own story is about as severe a condemnation of hopeless muddle and woeful incompetence resulting directly in fearful losses, and absolutely no gains, as anything the whole of the British press might write. Sir Ian Hamilton scorches with scarcely veiled sarcasm and contempt the blundering, theatrical recklessness of the Admiralty under Mr. Churchill's administration, the stupid apathy of the administrative staff at the War Office, and the general lack of control on the part of the Cabinet. Mr. Churchill appears to have had full liberty to do what he liked with the Navy. Apparently he thought he could send the ships through the Dardanelles without any preliminary reconnaissance of the situation. The War Office might have advised him to the contrary, but apparently the Cabinet had not the prescience to seek its opinion. The result was that the naval attack was made. To back up Mr. Churchill the official press bureau kept us primed with stories of great successes; of forts silenced; of panic in Constantinople, and of the Straits being swept for miles.

So circumstantial were these modern fairy tales that there was almost a panic in grain-buying circles which were convinced that Russian grain would soon be pouring into the Mediterranean. Then we had the reverse side of the picture. Several ships were sunk; Admiral Carden was made a scapegoat, and practically "sacked"; the guns ceased to boom, and the Press Bureau was silent. Sir Ian Hamilton takes up the story. He saw at a glance that the naval bombardment was futile and mischievous, and as events have disclosed, it did the Allies more harm than all the military genius of Hamilton and the heroism of his men could undo. He saw that nothing but a desperate land

CRITICISM AND COMMON SENSE

TUESDAY, August 10, 1915.

This morning's cables announce once again that Britain is preparing to provide Russia with munitions of war. No more gratifying news could have been received. Taken in conjunction with Mr. Lloyd George's statement that England now has ammunition supplies sufficiently large for the longest war within the memory of man, the intimation is one of the utmost importance; not only because it suggests that one of the greatest nightmares confronting the Allies has now been dissipated, but because it marks the closing phase of a gigantic newspaper campaign almost without precedent in recent history.

In the days of the Crimea, The Times held a monopoly of the dangerous work of vigorously criticising a Government for its mismanagement of a great war. During the present campaign, that honour has been shared by the Morning Post and the Daily Mail. If Lord Northcliffe were a vainglorious man, he would now be in a position to make unlimited capital out of the administrative changes which he has been able to bring into being. The probability however is that he will be content to remain satisfied with the knowledge that even though his papers have been burned on the Stock Exchange he has achieved no small thing for the good of his country.

We are not blind admirers of the Colossus of Carmelite street. There are many points on which we are in entire disagreement with him; but, at the same time, we deplore the tendency among a section of the public to allow irritation at the mistakes of the Northcliffe press to obscure the importance of the indispensable criticism in which it is occasionally prone to indulge. The fact is that in the present instance Lord Northcliffe has rendered an incalculable service to the nation. Whether or not his motives were disinterested attack, combined with naval action could succeed. He found chaos and muddle everywhere. Transports were improperly loaded; troops were being "gallivanted" back and forth, and nobody had a sane idea of what the task before them was, nor of how to face it. Time, money and ammunition had been squandered, and the enemy had been advised with quite unnecessary ostentation to turn Gallipoli into a Gibraltar.

The story is merely another chapter of the pitiable history of the wicked bungling of the affairs of a grand and glorious nation whose record in peace or war should be nothing but one of orderliness and swift success. What sort of a Government is it that cannot in the first place keep men like Kitchener and Hamilton in the posts for which they are fitted? Where was Hamilton before the war? Like Kitchener he was banished to some obscure post. The man who could restore chaos at the Dardanelles and lead a forlorn hope; the man whose South African reputation was brighter than that of any save Kitchener and French, was Inspector-General of Oversea Forces, a post of no importance, and one generally flung like a bone to a hungry dog, to impecunious Royal relatives. No Briton worth his salt will complain or wince under losses. We have time and again pointed out that losses have to be expected and must be faced, but it goes against the grain to face losses that could have been avoided had common-sense and ordinary capacity been shown in the original conception of a campaign for the Dardanelles. And for the Government to claim that it should be free of criticism is farcical. There could be no graver criticism of the Government than its own action in handing over the Dardanelles contract to the man whom it has banished to obscurity. If there be any graver criticism, then it is found in that same man's brilliant and scathing report.

time alone can prove; but in any case it is desirable that he should be credited with the improvement which he, through the columns of his journal, has brought into being, and we can only admire the tenacity of purpose which enabled him to endanger circulation and advertising revenue in order to emphasise the need for reform in organisations which the public had been led to believe were sacred from attack. The probability is that in his anxiety to arouse the masses to the necessity for change he allowed his policy of aggression to become too sweeping in character. In no other way can we account for the campaign against Lord Kitchener. No man—not even the Secretary of State for War—is the embodiment of perfection; and, as a soldier out of touch for many years with the manners and customs of a nation, Lord Kitchener must of necessity be guilty, if infrequently, of actions which in normal times would call for condemnation. The fault of the Northcliffe Press lay in the fact that it led the attack when it was undesirable in the interests of the nation that anything should be done to tie the hands of a man who has evolved order out of chaos and placed the Empire in a position to meet the powerful Tenton adversary. That is the obvious truth, but it is not the only one. Unfortunately, however, the great mass of the people are invariably oblivious to all facts except the obvious one. Therein lay the germ of the anti-Northcliffe campaign. The recent instances of the banning of the Carmelite street publications from the majority of public institutions and the burning of the "Daily Mail" on the Stock Exchange were the natural outcome of the ordinary public attitude; nevertheless they were fatuous. In its rage against the man who had attacked a great organiser and a popular idol, the public forgot that the basis of the attack was the necessity for reform; they forgot that unless vital changes were effected the war would not last for three years, but might last for thirteen; they forgot that the attack was not a personal one, and that the Northcliffe Press, more than any other institution in the country, had constantly fought for the appointment of Lord Kitchener to the War Office. They even forgot that, had the advice of the same maligned Press been taken years ago, the country might have been saved enormous expenditure, both in money and lives. But that is the public habit; throughout the ages they have been accustomed to move with the passions of the moment and to demand the head of a victim. In the present instance, however, they are divided. One section regards Lord Northcliffe as a traitor who in a less merciful country would be shot. The other section, probably far greater in intellect and numbers, deplores an indiscreet attack on the outstanding organiser in the Empire, but at the same time recognises that it is frequently necessary to apply a sharp knife to the masses of departmental red tape which retard progress. The Empire is fighting for its existence; it is desirable that unnecessary chaos should be avoided; but timely criticism, based on common sense, is sometimes frequently necessary if disaster is to be avoided. Present indications show that healthy criticism of this type is found almost exclusively in the journals controlled by the remarkable figure to whom a humorist once referred as "Baron Comic Cuts."

A travelling menagerie had penetrated to a remote district in the Scotch Highlands, and the gorilla dying, he was left by the roadside, where he was found next day by two natives. "Neither of them had ever seen such a creature before, and were loud in their exclamations of astonishment. At last: 'It's no' a Macintosh, an' it's no' a Cameron," said one; "let's go up an' see if any of the English visitors at the Castle are missing."—Royal Magazine.

ARGENTINA AND HER MERCANTILE MARINE

THURSDAY, August 12, 1915.

Elsewhere in this issue is published a transcription of the new order drawn up by the Prefect of the Port dealing with the use of the Argentine flag by yachtmen. Comment thereon is inadvisable, seeing that every nation has a right to make such laws for the protection and maintenance of the dignity of its flag as it deems proper. It may, however, be said in passing that, whilst on paper these regulations appear exceedingly strict in actual practice the few sailing men who really go beyond the confines of the Lujan River or the outer Roads—and half a hundred would be more than ample to cover their number—always find the authorities with whom they come into contact not only courtesy itself, but also ready at all times to give the utmost help and assistance to the budding Argonauts, even at considerable inconvenience and expense to themselves.

Sailing is in its infancy here, and, for various reasons that do not come within the scope of this article, it is not likely to expand to any great extent for many a year to come. Hence the promulgation of imposing decrees is neither here nor there. What is interesting in the present case is the light that is thrown on the official attitude towards the Argentine mercantile marine in general. There has been of late a great agitation in favour of establishing, on a broad scale and at once, an Argentine mercantile marine embracing oceangoing vessels. "La Razón," foremost as ever in the advocacy of absolutely impractical schemes, cites the case of the gains made by the S.S. Centenario, an exceptional case at that, as a proof of the huge profits awaiting the country if a fleet of similar vessels is immediately put on the run to Europe and the United States, and completely overlooks the question of manning and management.

If Argentina wishes to have the blue-and-white banner flying above her cargoes of wheat and meat, the thing may be done, but only on condition that official interference is reduced to the absolute minimum. Outside the navy boats, the Argentine seaman is as rare as snakes in Ireland. The few naturalised Spaniards and Dalmatians who man the river craft are supplemented by a few, a very few, Correntinos and Entre-Rianes who have served with the fleet, but these latter can never be got to sign on for a deep water voyage. It is the recognised thing for any Argentine vessel bound foreign to sign on sufficient Argentine sailors to pass the requisites of the Port Prefect's office, with the express understanding that they shall be allowed to desert at Montevideo, when by law their places may be filled by foreigners, who are frequently shipped here ad hoc. The Argentine seaman cannot be blamed; he knows his limitations. Seamen, even in these days of steam, are produced by their environment, and it is not fair to expect the man whose only acquaintance with water has been confined to paddling a flat-bottomed canoe about the streams of the Parana to sign on with any enthusiasm for a voyage round the Horn.

Hence it follows that if Argentina wishes to build up a real sea-going mercantile marine she must go back to her policy in the days of Brown and his fellow adventurers. In the early days of Independence this country's ships were manned by seamen from half the nations of Europe, men who in many cases had been through the French, Spanish, and British fleets, and had been thrown out of service after the great peace that followed the downfall of Napoleon. Let Argentina put her multitudinous regulations aside, insist only on Argentine registration, and, if she will, on the employment of one officer as purser, commissary or whatever else he may be called, whose duties will

ORGAN RECITAL AT ST. ANDREW'S

At the invitation of the organist of St. Andrew's Church, Mr. J. Llewellyn Hawes, the Music Master of St. George's College, Quilmes, Mr. B. Treavett, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., will give an Organ Recital at the above church on Tuesday evening next, Aug. 17. A very choice programme has been arranged, Mr. Treavett having selected ten organ solos of a most varied nature. Madame de Mello should be heard to advantage in "Hark, O Israel" from the Elijah, which is admirably suited to her voice. Mrs. A. H. Davies will contribute a violin solo; and Mr. F. F. Bideleux the bass solo, "The Lord is my Light," by Allitson.

The Recital is timed to begin at 8.30 p.m. The programme is as follows:

Organ solo. (a) Tocata from 5th Symphony (Widor); (b) Reverie (Idle), Mr. B. Treavett.

Song, "The Lord is my Light" (Allitson), Mr. F. F. Bideleux.

Organ solo (a) Poet and Peasant (Suppé); (b) Hungarian Dance, (Brahms), Mr. B. Treavett.

Song, "Hark, O Israel" (Elijah), (Mendelssohn), Madame de Mello.

Organ solo, Fantasia Rustique (Wostenholme) Mr. B. Treavett.

Hymn.

Organ solo. (a) Variations on "Hanover," (Wendus); (b) Concert Overture in C Minor (Hollins), Mr. B. Treavett.

Violin solo. Mrs. A. H. Davies.

Organ solo (a) Russian Patrol (Rubenstein); (b) Finlandia (Sibelius), Mr. B. Treavett.

Postlude, Offertoire in F major (Wely), Mr. B. Treavett.

During the singing of the hymn a paper collection will be taken for the music fund of the Church.

HOMAGE TO DR. SAENZ PENA

CEREMONY AT RECOLETA CEMETERY.

Yesterday afternoon a ceremony of merited homage and respect was paid to the memory of Dr. Roque Saenz Peña who died on August 9, 1914. A very large assembly had collected in the Cemetery and were gathered round the mausoleum in which repose the remains of the late President of the Nation as he preferred to be styled. Among those present were delegations from the Unitarian Party, the Federation of Secondary Students, Argentine Scientific Society, Circulo de Armas, Expeditionary Society, the Circulo Italiano, French and Spanish Clubs and other organisations. At 2 p.m. a wreath of flowers was placed on the tomb. Shortly after Dr. Tarnassi spoke and paid a high tribute to the aims and achievements of the deceased statesman. Drs. Sivori, Carlos Petit Murat also spoke in laudatory terms of the late President.

include the handling of all ship's business in Spanish, give the ships special privileges in the shape of freedom from certain dues, and it is quite possible that shipowning in Argentina would pay, and even flourish exceedingly. Norway, to name but one country, has found this policy in every way satisfactory, and it is probable that even the United States, which through its system of nationalising shipping finds itself to-day worse off for shipping than it was fifty years ago, will also liberate its shipowners from the trammels at present attendant upon this investment. That many foreign firms would at once take advantage of any such step is certain, as certain as it is that such "Argentine" ships would be practically run and managed, and, above all, supplied, in Europe. The present generation might not see much immediate profit to the Republic, but the value of the step would lie in the gradual extension of Argentine capital interests to shipping ventures, whence ultimately the country might reasonably hope to have a truly national Argentine mercantile marine.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

MEXICO

(La Prensa—August 5).

Once more there has issued from Washington a call to America, this time to save the destinies of Mexico from complete disaster. The descendants of a political regime that for forty years was supreme have in the short space of two years swept away the greatest material prosperity that was ever known in Latin America in a country governed without respect to constitutional principles. Whilst other nations were involved in strife, poor and discredited during their strivings after democratic principles, Mexico was at peace under the guidance of a strong man whose efforts were devoted to the promotion of material progress, and with such success that Mexico's bond stood very high in the investing markets of the world. "A Century; A People; and a Man;" thus, says "La Prensa," did a biographer style his work, dealing with the history of Mexico under Porfirio Diaz in the Nineteenth Century.

But the downfall of this regime of prosperous materialism was close at hand, surrounded as it was by a triumphant democracy. The concentrated passions that had for long been dominated by one man's will, burst forth volcano-like to take the most horrid reprisals for the forty years suppression. It has often been said, remarks "La Prensa," that recent events in Mexico have justified the rule of Diaz, and that his absence was the cause of the ills that have befallen the country. This belief is however based on superficial knowledge. Whilst refusing to stigmatise the memory of Diaz, "La Prensa" believes him to have been mistaken. Seduced by the vision of material greatness he founded his ideas of civilization on railways, palaces, and monuments, forgetting that civilization consists in political liberties and the rights of man. As yet the political reasons that led to the fall of Diaz are not properly understood in the countries of the Plate, hence it is impossible to say whether, had Diaz remained in power, he would have been able to contain the new forces that were surging beneath him. Following the light of political philosophy "La Prensa" prefers the supposition that the misfortunes of Mexico are due to a fundamental error, namely the substraction of the country's political system from the main principles followed by civilized states. General Diaz did not check the leaders of revolt by educating the people: he preferred to suffocate, to enchain them, standing athwart the path of progress that has been followed by all the Latin American nations who, through bitter experiences, have at last won to the advantages of a democratic republican government.

It is, says "La Prensa," the uneducated Mexican people that have revolted, and to get an idea of what this implies the best means of forming an opinion is to look back some fifty years in the history of Argentina, for that is more or less where Mexico stands to-day. Turning then to the call of the United States "La Prensa" declares that whilst no-one can refuse, in principle, to adhere to this generous initiative, it is necessary to think seriously about the form which diplomatic intervention will take, ere accepting definite and binding propositions. If there was a certainty of success Argentina ought to take part, but "La Prensa" states that it has its doubts. Recently the intermediation of the Argentine, Chilian and Brazilian governments conjured away the perils of war between Mexico and the United States, but their action did not leave the country any nearer a permanent internal peace. Bearing this in mind South American diplomacy, and that of Argentina in particular, ought to sound the Mexican situation ere pledging itself to anything. For it is quite on the cards that outside inter-

THE BUDGET ESTIMATES

(La Prensa—August 8).

The Budget Estimates do not create a satisfactory impression owing to the fact that the official figures and general attitude of the Government shows an economic debility and a vagueness that is inclined, says La Prensa, to treat the national fortune as if it were in decadence. From 1913 onwards there has been an imperative call to reduce public expenditure, and this tendency reaches its apogee in the Estimates for 1916. Diminished revenues correspond to a diminished private income, and logically speaking, the close connection between private and public expenditure, co-related in this manner, would lead one to the conclusion that the sources of production were not sufficient to meet the needs of the country's economic progress. La Prensa declares that it does not wish to cry "stinking fish," its faith in the potentiality of the Republic being unshakeable. But the situation has to be clearly faced, and on this account the Budget Estimates ought to have been franker, more explicit, more incisive; calling on the Argentine people to seek for their latent energy, adopt higher ideals, and prepare to face the crisis boldly, combining frugality and sacrifice with the ever-present idea of a continued progress.

Actually the 1915-16 Estimates are more pessimistic than those of 1914-15. This time last year, says La Prensa, the Government did not consider extra taxation necessary. Now, with a smaller Budget Expenditure in view, extra taxation to the tune of $24,000,000 is thought to be essential, whilst salaries are to be reduced unless the revenue returns enable the Budget to be balanced without having recourse to this Draconian measures. Both items show that the Government was more optimistic in 1914 than it is to-day, and the economic decadence having augmented in the interval is a proof, says La Prensa, that the situation cannot be left to right itself. Undoubtedly the European war has affected Argentina's economic situation very greatly, but that does not excuse us for abandoning the field to the enemy; on the contrary, it ought to stir the country to renewed activity. What is going on, asks La Prensa, in the privacy of national finance, when despite exceptional crops, business is restricted, consumption small, revenues diminished, and the finances of the State in a condition of crisis. Everyone is alike affected: debtors and creditors, rich and poor, landowners and tenants, even the ordinary household budget comes under the general depression. Heroic measures are needed. With the expenditure of the state reduced to the minimum, it naturally follows that this expenditure must be met. Hence the need for increased taxation. But, concludes La Prensa, there have been many important economic and financial projects before Congress which bore on the crisis, projects of equal importance to the Budget Estimates, which merely serves to tell the country that the economic vitality of the Republic is lower than it was last year, which means less revenue and greater frugality coupled with heavier sacrifices on the part of the people. In other words the State is like a cautious navigator who jettisons precious cargo in order to head slowly towards port when by adopting bold measures he might bring all his goods to land.

ference might make matters worse seeing that this is not a party revolution, but a state of chaos. Without prejudice, says "La Prensa," it is inclined to think that the more correct course would be for the United States to act independently as mediator. Then, should any of the combatants suggest Pan-American intervention the way would be clear for the sister states to lend their aid without the risk of complicating still more the horrors of civil war.

NAVAL INSPECTION

(La Prensa—August 6).

On more than one occasion, says La Prensa, it has drawn attention to the need for inspection of the national navy, both as regards men, material, and administration. It is true that there are statements drawn up showing how the various vessels stand, whether they are disarmed, under repairs, or ready for action, the amount of stores aboard, and so forth, but the details therein set down ought to be checked by actual revision. It is well known that in the store-rooms of the ships there are frequently many useless stores, the while necessary things are lacking, and this state of affairs would cease if there was a general inspection, much to the benefit of the public economy. Moreover as regards the actual fighting material of the ship much might be done by responsible inspection. Suppose the case of an incompetent gunnery officer, aboard a vessel which was so unfortunate as to have a commander equally unfit for his post. How is the Minister of Marine to know anything about it?

Nor is this supposition exaggerated, declares La Prensa. Not so many months ago one of the battle-cruisers—the only vessels in fighting trim—broke down in her gunnery trials owing to a series of defects that only came to light when firing practice began, defects so serious that the trials had to be partially annulled, and yet the ordinary daily inspections had been held by the officer in charge, whilst the commander's weekly round had also been duly carried out. Given official inspection, the upkeep of the ships would benefit, small defects being remedied ere they had time to become serious. The present system of so-called "inspection" merely means going over the whole ship in a brief space of time and inspecting nothing in detail. What is needed is an expert revision, not between lunch and dinner, or the arrival and departure of a train, but a thorough investigation that would enable the inspector to form a sound idea as to what measures were needed to correct such defects as might come to light.

THE COMING WOOL CLIP

(La Nación—August 6).

Though two months must elapse, more or less, ere the wool clip begins, there is a general feeling, says La Nación, that prices are to be extraordinarily high, and that certain North American firms have made contracts at abnormal prices. As these rumours lack foundation, La Nación advises breeders to put them aside and study the actual position. The rumour quoted $14 for delivery in October, and hence a spirit of undue optimism is abroad which ought to be checked. Undoubtedly this year's clip will be sold at better prices than that of last year, but it is not possible for them to reach the level talked of: for although the demand is certainly great, there are also other factors to be taken into account.

Last year freights were at a much lower level, and no-one knows what freights will be when this season's wool is ready for shipment, whilst Exchange is another item that must also be taken into account. Moreover, even though it is true that North America has entered this market as a buyer, it must not be forgotten that four of the leading manufacturing nations—France, Belgium, Germany and Austria—are notoriously unable to work on the same scale as before, and this is bound to have an effect on the market. Nor is it certain that the quality of the wool will be up to that of last year, which is another factor that may tend to reduce prices to a certain extent. La Nación concludes by saying that notwithstanding all these bear points, the prices, relatively speaking, will be good. It merely wishes to utter a warning against the dangers of undue optimism, and the inevitable disappointment that any reaction is bound to bring about.

ILLEGAL TAXATION

(La Prensa—Aug. 7.)

Despite the clarity with which the Argentine Constitution lays down the freedom of circulation of Argentine products in national territory, and of merchandise that has passed through the customs, infringements of this principle law have at times occurred, calling for the intervention of the Federal Judges. The lessons of the past have, however, not been sufficient to prevent a repetition of these errors, a case in point being the recent ordinance of the San Martin municipality imposing a tax on cattle brought into the district. As "La Prensa" indicates, if every municipality had the right to tax the passage of cattle, the damages would be so heavy that an immediate reform of the Constitution would be necessary; but, very fortunately, this danger has already been foreseen, and a study of Arts. 9, 10 and 11 of the Constitution leads one to the conclusion that the San Martin ordinance is an open violation of the principles there laid down.

Art. 9 prohibits provincial customs houses, whilst Art. 11 expressly stipulates that all merchandise and cattle shall be free from transit dues when passing from one province to another. Further, Art. 10 declares that in the interior of the Republic the circulation of national goods, or goods that have already paid tax at the customs, is free from all tax. This covers the case of San Martin, but even if this clause did not exist, the spirit of Art. 11 provides for it. It is ridiculous to suppose that the Constitution allows taxation on goods moved from one part of a province to another region of the same province, when interprovincial trade is expressly declared to be free. The ordinance thus violates constitutional precept, and, concludes "La Prensa," must be declared null and void. The pity of it is that at this stage of the national life the inhabitants of the country should be compelled to resist such attempts at extortion, that not only damage private interests, but at the same time are calculated to prejudice national economy.

PORTUGAL'S NEW PRESIDENT

(La Nación—Aug. 7.)

The election of Bernardino Machado to the Presidency of the Portuguese Republic is, says "La Nación," a good augury for that country, since the new First Magistrate is one of the leading members of the Republican party, and his character, combined with his past record of services for the cause, puts him in a better position than any other Republican statesman to bring together the necessary elements wherewith to draw up a stable, solid and generally respected government. Up to some twelve years ago, Bernardino Machado was a Monarchist, believing in all sincerity that reform was impossible under the existing régime, and he carried his beliefs into practice by accepting a portfolio in the Cabinet presided over by Hintze Ribeiro, whereof the notorious Juan Franco was a member.

At that time Machado brought in laws relative to the work of women and children, and proposed the establishment or arbitration courts for labour differences; but ere long he became convinced that the monarchy was unable to mould itself to the new pattern of thought, and joined the ranks of the Republicans, where he soon gained prominence. It may be mentioned that before entering politics he was a professor at the noted University of Coimbra. He devoted himself to the cause with the greatest enthusiasm, and when the moment for action came, in 1910, he was one of the leading promoters of the movement that brought down the incompetent monarchy. Appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs, and later Minister to Brazil, his actions were in accord with his reputation. "La Nación" concludes by saying that his election to the supreme post has only borne out the general anticipation.

ARGENTINE FOREIGN TRADE

(La Prensa.—August 10).

The National Statistical Department has published the returns covering the first six months of Argentina's foreign trade for the current year, from which the salient fact is that the balance of trade shows a sum of $210,782,458 gold in favour of this country, the heaviest trade balance that Argentina has ever experienced. Total foreign trade—reliance is placed on the statistics as published by La Prensa—is $411,035,278, a total some $26,000,000 more than was shown for the corresponding period of 1914. Imports are accountable for $100,127,910 and Exports reach $310,910,368 gold, and again comparing with 1914, the Imports show a drop of some seventy million dollars, whilst the Exports are up ninety seven million dollars. Imports subject to duties account for $62,352,846 gold, or some forty-eight million dollars less than last year. Gold returns likewise show a diminution, there having been some thirteen million less imported and some nineteen million less exported than in the first half of 1914.

Imports generally have shown a diminution, the exceptions being oils, mineral oils, volatile oils, and fats, this section showing a marked increase owing to the heavy imports of crude petroleum and naphtha. Exports, as is to be expected, show an increase in all agricultural sections, even live-stock being a million dollars more than in 1914, owing to the increased shipment of horses, whereof $2,685,000 gold were shipped. Animal products, show a falling off in $6,183,919 gold, spread over the following branches:—Chilled beef, $2,526,795 gold; mutton, $1,068,794; uncleaned wool, $1,333,718. Agricultural products on the other hand show $98,854,290 gold more than in the first half year of 1914. Wheat being responsible for $78,390,516 of this increase, oats for $5,023,366, and maize for $5,050,312 gold. Finally the timber trade also shows improved figures, for which the shipment of quebracho extract to the value of $4,100,572 gold is largely responsible.

USEFUL LECTURES

(La Nación.—August 9).

The Sociedad de Beneficencia and the Patronato Infantil, two charitable organisations with vast ramifications, are setting an admirable example by giving lectures on practical subjects in the hospitals and schools, the topics treated embracing popular medicine, domestic hygiene, and first aid. This new tendency is, as La Nación remarks, of general interest, making the lecture-room something more than a mere intellectual pleasure for the few who go to listen to striking oratory or facts of artistic or literary merit. Widening the sphere of the popular lecture is bound to have an equally repercussive effect on general education in its broadest sense, and nothing is more pleasing than to see how much more practical philanthropy in this country has become of recent years. The old idea of almsgiving, based on sentimentality or simple instinct, now goes much further, and will eventually do away with the horde of rogues and parasites by enabling the unfortunate to make themselves of real utility, which is after all the only way to solve the problem of poverty. Equally practical are the schools of domestic science that are taking the place of the many useless labours to which women formerly applied themselves. After all their true place is in the home, and their true mission consists in knowing how to direct it profitably.

THE AGRICULTURAL BANK

(La Nación.—August 10).

In a lengthy and informative leading article La Nación traces the various plans that have been brought forward from time to time relative to the formation of an Argentine Agricultural Bank, beginning with its inception in 1898 and touching on the various initiatives of Senator Uriburu, Sr. Lahitte, referring to the creation of co-operative societies, the project of Dr. Lobos, then Minister of Finance, the scheme of Dr. Frers, presented in 1913, and lastly the idea of Senator Davila, which has recently been under discussion. There is no more urgent problem before the country than that relative to Agricultural Credit, says La Nación, and this is generally granted. The outstanding feature of Sr. Davila's plan is however the character with which the new institution is to be endowed.

After referring to the method whereby Dr. Frers purposed to raise the necessary capital—$100,000,000 in shares of $50 each, issued in series of $200,000 payable by quotas, half to be taken up by the state—it touches on Sr. Davila's idea, which hinges on official support, but insists on the necessity of separating the new institution from the Banco de la Nación whilst deriving its capital from that very source. An imposing board, a large staff, new offices, and heavy expenses, will all be applied to working the new scheme, whilst as La Nación justly observes, all this new business that is talked of could be more cheaply efficiently handled by the parent institution that has already proved its efficiency. Why then should there be such resistance to the proposal to endue the Banco de la Nación with attributes that would enable it to handle the problem of agricultural credit. If the Agricultural Bank is to be a state bank, then the best method, concludes La Nación, is to turn over its management to the Banco de la Nación.

YACHTSMEN AND THE ARGENTINE FLAG

(La Prensa.—Aug. 11.)

In accordance with a proposal made by the Prefect General of Ports, a decree has been dictated dealing with the use of the Argentine flag by pleasure craft registered in the various recognised clubs, and by their members resident in the Republic, in accordance with Art. 5 of Law 8221. The said decree provides that the various craft inscribed on the national register as belonging to an Argentine club shall fly the ordinary merchant ensign without any additions whatsoever, exception being had of the boats registered in the Argentine Yacht Club. These latter shall hoist the war flag (the ordinary ensign surcharged with a golden sun) in accordance with the faculties already conferred upon the said club by the foregoing law.

No boat shall leave an Argentine port or harbour flying the national flag, war or merchant ensign, unless it has aboard an Argentine citizen as master or owner, whatever may be the club wherein it is registered, and he shall be responsible to the authorities for any infraction of the laws that may be committed by the vessel or her crew. Simultaneously with the national ensign, the boats registered in the various clubs shall hoist at the main topmast head the burgee that has been previously sanctioned as a distinctive mark by the marine authorities, and unless this is done the vessel is not entitled to the rights and privileges which the law concedes to pleasure craft. Three months grace is given to the various clubs to put their vessels within the terms of the new enactment. Members of such clubs who are not Argentine citizens, and who do not desire to take out naturalisation papers, may use the flag of the country in which their boat is legally registered, together with the club's burgee at the mast-

MORTGAGE DEALINGS

(La Nación.—Aug. 11.)

In replying to the recent interpellation addressed to him, the Minister of Finance has stated categorically that, in the opinion of the Government, there is no reason for alarm concerning the state of hypothecary transactions in this country, and that there is no support to be looked for in official circles for the heroic remedies demanded by certain agitators whose arguments are more calculated to impress the public than to elucidate the truth. This, says "La Nación" with much emphasis, is very tranquillising. It shows that there is no call for a moratorium to cover mortgage transactions, and the official figures of the Hypothecary Bank bear this reasoning out, only 10 per cent. of the service being in arrears; a very different thing to the terrifying situation that has been painted as being a justification for tampering with the law. The general conclusions reached by the Executive are final when they assert that any extraordinary measure would run counter to the desired end, which is presumably the uplifting of real estate value and credit based thereon.

Public confidence alone can do that, and confidence is just what would be killed by any special legislation such as has been proposed, the harm reacting even in the case of the National Hypothecary Bank which it is sought to aid, through depressing the value of its Cédulas. In other words, the remedy would be worse than the disease; in order to help a few debtors who are in difficulties, the majority, who are actually in a position to ask for credit based on real estate values, would be made to suffer heavily. The fact of the matter is that these legislative panaceas are all at fault when applied to the state of credit. There's no lack of money, nor does the state of the country inspire fears. The crisis is rather moral and personal. Confidence must be restored to the owners of the capital now hoarded in the banks, and anything in the nature of a moratorium, concludes "La Nación," would have just the opposite effect.

OIL FROM COMODORO RIVADAVIA

INCREASING OUTPUT.

Official figures have been issued concerning the output of oil from the wells at Comodoro Rivadavia, from July 25 to 31, and shew that 2406 cubic metres of the mineral has been produced.

This is some 200 cubic metres more than has been previously extracted, and brings the total for the last month up to 6300 cubic metres, which is the equivalent of 252,000 gallons.

The amounts produced from each working boring is as follows:

Well	Gallons
No. 2	22,660
„ 4	44,220
„ 8	76,340
„ 10	37,400
„ 11	1,320
„ 13	17,380
„ 14	27,280
„ 15	66,000
„ 16	31,680
„ 17	65,780

Total for 11 wells: 252,000 gallons.

head. They will not enjoy the privileges covered by the use of the Argentine ensign. Managing committees of the various clubs are to see to it that these rules are faithfully observed by their members. Any infraction thereof will be punished by the withdrawal of the privilege of the flag.

NOTES FROM PARAGUAY

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 8.

The Weather.

Evidently our winter weather has taken its departure. The past ten days have been exceedingly warm—and still no rain. The river is very low—we hear the large steamers cannot touch the mole—passengers and cargo must be transhipped. Vegetables are scarce and very expensive. Everything green begins to look decidedly queer from the want of water.

Revolutions now Forgotten.

The rumours of revolution are now a string of the past. One thing has been accomplished by the state the state of siege has been prolonged, if that is an advantage—but if it prevents any disturbance, it would be will to have it permanently. Almost anything would be better than these revolutions which constantly throw the country backwards. If it gets these steps ahead, it slips back two, but still gains one—for in spite of all drawbacks—crisis, etc. Asunción is progressing.

Italian Red Cross Concert.

The leaders of the Italian Society are very active. Already they have given a concert with an excellent programme in the theatre in aid of the Red Cross, and it is to be hoped the result was as good as the cause deserved.

Cinema Entertainment for French Red Cross.

On July 14 a cinematograph performance was given in aid of the French Red Cross Society, judging by the crowded house, it must have been a most successful affair.

Tennis Tournament.

Last Sunday a tournament took place at the courts of the Asunción Lawn Tennis Club, a challenge from the Paraguayan "Lawn Tennis Club." Much to the surprise of many the Paraguayans won, easily. Others knew the English speaking club was at a disadvantage, many of its best players being gone to the war, and those remaining being out of practice. Some of the Paraguayan young men have recently returned from Europe, where they have been at school, and play an excellent game, and are in good practice. Next Sunday, we are told, the second tournament will take place.

American Minister's Holiday.

The American Minister, Mr. Daniel Miley, accompanied by the American Consul, Mr. Samuel Wiley, is taking an extensive trip up north, and does not expect to return for another week.

POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANK

A SATISFACTORY COMMENCEMENT.

The National Post Office Savings Bank entered upon the fifth month of its existence on August 5, and the figures published of the business done during the first four months appear satisfactory.

Deposits up to May 5 amounted to $102,000, to June 5 $281,000, to July 5 $509,000, and to August 5 $760,000.

The number of depositors on the latter date were 33,300. In conformation with the law the deposited funds are being invested in the internal loan of 1905, in which, already, some $672,000 have been invested.

At the average rate of increase of these deposits, the savings bank will have some 40,000 depositors holding a million dollars in the bank at the end of the current month. This compared with the deposited amount for savings in the National Bank, which amounted to a million dollars at the end of the second year of working, appears to be highly satisfactory and shews that there was a public demand for such an innovation.

Gift of X-Rays to the Hospital.

Some time ago the well-known hypnotist, Sr. Mapelli, when giving performances down here, promised to present to the local hospital an installation of X rays for the use of the doctors there. It is now reported that this gentleman is shortly coming down here again to make this presentation personally, which event will take place about the middle of this month.

Sale of Livestock.

At the sales held on Wednesday and Thursday last in Villa Borden, a large number of buyers were present and the following prices were obtained:—Half-bred steers from $117 to 146 each, criollo steers fat $83 to 102, fat cows $85 to 100, bullocks $116 to 159, young steers fat $86 to 106, young steers for fattening $66 to 94, criollo cows for fattening $47 to 77, half-bred cows by the mob $63 and 64 calves $49 to 71, imported cows in calf $190 to 275, bulls $200 to 660. Fat wethers were sold at from $9 to 13 each, Rambouillets $8.10 to 8.90, ewes in lamb $7.50 to 9.45, and lambs $5.50 to 7.60. The total amount of the sales was $129,971.

Departure of C.11.

After loading 1700 tons of grain here for the firm of Bunge and Born, this ship left here yesterday for Australia. At present there is not any ship either in Ingeniero White (with the exception of the "Neuquen" which is being put up for auction to-day) or Port Galvan, although several are expected to arrive here before the end of the month to load.

Items in Brief.

The sale of wool is fetching some good prices now. Good cross is selling from $10.50 to 11. Cow hides from Neuquen are fetching $15 each and special lots $15.50; horse hides are selling for $7.60. Wheat for Brazilian export is selling at $12, but there is no demand whatsoever for oats on the market at present. Barley is being sold at $6.50 and 6.60. The demand for alfalfa seed is very good and the price likely to go up, at present this is selling for $7.60.

The term allowed for the payment of the municipal taxes on lighting, cleaning and sweeping of the streets finishes at the end of this month, after which the corresponding fine will be charged.

The National Government have granted the sum of $2,000 for the port works to be constructed at Ushuaia.

The sale of the music hall called the Coliseo is taking place to-day, the reserve price being fixed at $25,000. The buyer will have the option of making use of the present mortgage which was first taken for 33 years, and for which $800 is charged every six months. The property is stated to produce a weekly rent of $500.

There is now a great demand for plants and trees, and "remates" of these are being held every week. Several shops are open for the sale of trees, flowers and seed. In the streets about the centre of the town preparations are being made for the planting of several trees along the sidewalk and around the plaza, and the Intendente has presented the town with 600 trees which have come from his quinta "Santa Blanca," in Méndez.

A library is to be opened here to-morrow for the conductors of carriages, at which celebration the Secretary of the Socialist Federation in Buenos Aires, Sr. J. P. Balño, is to be present.

The Show.

Except for the balance of the sales, there will be little left of the Rural Society's Show by the time these lines reach the reader. This year, of course, the trail of the war is over everything, and entries, attendance and sales have not been up to the average of previous years; among other things this shows that the departure of such numbers of young Britons from the camp to the trenches has proved to what an extent it is that they are responsible for the keeping of interest in cattle breeding up to the mark.

British Chamber of Commerce: Rosario Branch to be Suggested.

On Friday a meeting is to be held at St. Bartholomew's Club, Calle Uruguay 1520, to discuss the desirability of establishing a branch of the British Chamber of Commerce up here. It is time the initial mistake of confining the Chamber of Commerce movement to the Federal Capital was rectified. I understand that Mr. Powell Jones, the Secretary, will be present as representing the existing Chamber.

St. Bartholomew's Church Council.

The annual general meeting of the subscribers to St. Bartholomew's Church took place on Thursday in the schoolroom, and in accordance with Article 14 of the new Statutes was to have proceeded with whatever number made their appearance. As it proved there was quite a large attendance. The churchwardens presented their report, which was accepted and passed. The only discussion was in regard to the continuance of the School, and the meeting agreed that so long as something was contributed to the funds of the Church—or in other words, as long as there was no loss—the School might go on. The election of officers resulted in the appointment of Mr. C. C. Day as Vicar's warden, Mr. A. Murray Hudson as people's warden, Messrs. J. W. Topping and H. H. Spicer as members of Council, and Messrs. A. H. Clarke and H. A. Dale as suplentes. The following are extracts from the Report:—

The new Church Statutes were finally approved by the Provincial Government of the Province of Santa Fé under date of October 28, 1914.

The handsome stained glass Memorial Window subscribed for by the many friends of the late Mr. R. Gore Studdert has been placed in the central light of the West Window. Thanks are due to Messrs. H. S. Ferguson and Co. for kindly arranging with Messrs. Lamport and Holt for bringing out the window free of charge, as also to Mr. A. H. Clarke for despatching same through the Customs free of charge, and to Mr. J. W. Topping for kindly superintending its erection.

Services.—In common with all other English organisations St. Bartholomew's has to record a certain drop in numbers. In so far as this is caused by men having left to serve their country, it is as it should be members of the Church having been called upon to meet the demands of service, but certainly those who are forced to remain ought to do all that they can to support the Church and to cheer, by their presence at the Services, those who, like themselves, must stay behind.

A slight improvement in the numbers attending Evensong has resulted from the time having been changed from 8.45 p.m. to 6 p.m. The attendance at the Intercession Services during the week is most disappointing; they are held with the object of giving to the women members of the Congregation an opportunity of helping the men of their country in a very real way.

Birthday Party at Athletic Club.

Little Marjory Guppy's eighth birthday was celebrated at the lawn of the Cordoba Athletic Club, when a children's party was given in honour of the event. Games were enjoyed and an excellent tea served. Among the youngsters present were the following: Dorothy Lewis, Jack Lewis, Donald Lewis, Violet Dunbar, Elvira and Willie Hughes, Hilda, Gerald and contributions already received for providing a new Altar, complete, in Memory of the late Rev. R. F. Pyman, M.A.

Strangers' Club.

A meeting of this body was held the other evening, when a committee was elected and an auction held of books and periodicals. It was decided to send a quantity of books and periodicals to Montevideo for the men of the "Glasgow," the members bidding keenly for the privilege of contribution to the consignment. A meeting of the new committee is to be held to-morrow night for the purpose of electing officers for the coming year.

The Markets.

The wheat market has been uninteresting, and very small business has been done at more or less previous prices. In maize a moderate business has been done, but the tendency of the market is rather easy. At the beginning of the week prices were $4.70 spot, $4.85 September, and $4.96 October. Business has been done at these prices, but the market closes with further sellers at the same prices. Exporters are not operating actively, as in importing countries generally prices are offering below the parity of these quotations. The chief business doing is by those houses which ship to the Scandinavian group. Freight rates are sparsely offered, and the little business done is at advancing rates. The latest charter reported is the "Wool Leigh" expected ready about the 19th inst., at 65/- U.K. basis.

The Great Raymond.

Thursday night the Great Raymond Company left Cordoba for Tucuman, Salto and Jujuy and Santiago. After an absence of some three weeks the great magician will return to this city for a series of four performances on his way to Buenos Aires via Rosario. The last Sunday performance at the Rivera Indarte theatre was a record breaker, as there were more paid admissions in the house than there had been for more than fifteen years. The popular developer of mystery will no doubt enjoy a successful visit when he comes back.

Suicide in the Park.

At 11.45 a.m. on Monday a shot was heard in Sarmiento Park and one of the guardians of the park hearing the noise rushed to the spot and found a Spaniard named Valentin Mexias, lying on the ground suffering from a revolver wound which he had inflicted himself. A letter was found on the unfortunate man's person in which he wrote that there was no one to blame for his action except himself. Mexias was 35 years of age and poorly dressed.

The construction of the buildings for the "Zoo" at Sarmiento Park is well under way.

The Rev. and Mrs. Sugden will arrive in Buenos Aires on Monday, August 9, from England. The Rev. Mr. Sugden will fill the vacancy at the English Church caused by the Rev. Cyril Moore taking up camp work.

Doctor Indalecio Gomez, ex-Minister of Buenos Aires, is a visitor to this city, with his family, the past few days.

Sr. J. Clement, the first secretary of the Belgian Legation of Buenos Aires has returned to the Capital after a short visit to this city where he has been entertained by the Belgian and French residents.

The Benefit Cine performance given at the Plaza last night in aid of the Swiss Red Cross was a pronounced success, many of our first families being present.

Last week the official inauguration of the new road from La Cumbre to Bosque Alegre took place, the commission making the journey from Cordoba in motor cars.

The Italian Red Cross Benefit held at the Jorge Newbery on August 5, was very well attended and a satisfactory sum realised in aid of the well deserved object.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

(From Our Correspondent.)

August 8.

Mr. H. Williamson is leaving the Pacific Railway here and shortly going to England.

Mrs. P. Simpson left on Friday night for Buenos Aires.

A visit has been paid here by Mr. Brian, the assistant engineer of the Pacific Railway in Buenos Aires.

Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Keenan left here on Friday night on a visit to Paraguay.

Mr. Goudy, of the London and River Plate Bank, has now left here, having been transferred to this Bank in Buenos Aires.

Sr. A. Fortabat has left Olavarría and is now returning to France in order to join the colours there.

Another billiard tournament is being started in the Club Room of the Athletic Club at Inglaterra White, this week.

DAY BY DAY IN ROSARIO.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 3.

Mr. Luis J. Anderson and family travelled up to Entre Rios last Friday.

Mr. Jaime Prats has returned from a short business visit to Buenos Aires.

The engagement is announced of Miss Anastasia Murphy to Mr. Thos. Lynch.

A banquet was given in the Hotel Mayo by a number of friends to Mr. Albert Saccone on the occasion of his approaching marriage.

General regret was felt on Friday last when the news of the death of Mr. Arthur Zinny became known. Mr. Zinny has been resident in this district for the last twenty years and has always taken a leading position in business and social circles. He was a member of the Concejo Deliberante and some years ago acted as Secretary to the Intendente Luis Lammas. He was a member of the Jockey Club and of the Sociedad Rural.

A very successful entertainment was given by the Swiss community in the Savoy Hotel on Saturday night to celebrate the 624th anniversary of the Swiss Independence.

A confirmation service is to be held by Bishop Every at Alberdi tomorrow evening.

Preparations for the Talleres Bazaar to be held on September 10th and 11th on behalf of the British Red Cross Society are proceeding with great rapidity. The attractions are many and numerous. The stalls, under the management of well-known local ladies, assisted by many willing young helpers, are daily receiving contributions towards the good cause. The gentlemen have many side-shows, such as shooting galleries, Aunt Sally, fishing pond, throwing the football, frog-racing, concerts, conjuring, etc., The refreshment room will, in addition to teas and refrescos, etc. provide cold suppers at moderate prices. All gifts, whether in money or kind, will be gratefully received.

The Rev. Canon Pepys left on Saturday for Montevideo en route for England, and the Rev. F. Middleton will act as Chaplain at St. Bartholomew's in his absence.

Mr. Dickson, thanks to the vagaries of steamers and other means of communication, is in a chronic state of being expected at the end of next week. The end of August should really see him amongst us again.

Capt. James Ormond, of the ss. "Aldersgate" who was taken to the Nursing Home suffering from concussion, as the result of an accident, is making favourable progress.

Miss Studdert, who in the absence of Mrs. Marston, is acting as President of Queen Mary's Club, is making a collection of books, comforts, etc., for the men of the "Glasgow," and will be pleased to receive and acknowledge contributions.

The British Patriotic Committee have a similar work in hand, but the nets dip in different waters.

The wedding of Mr. Santiago Orti, of Rosario, to Miss Sara Lucia Miles, daughter of Mr. Enrique E. Miles, of Estancia "La Porteña," El Trebol, took place on Saturday at St. Bartholomew's, the Rev. Canon Pepys officiating. A reception at the Savoy Hotel followed, with a small dance to finish up the evening.

I am indebted to "Artisticus," a correspondent to the Ladies' Column, for the definition of an artist, as "one who has found their soul." Plurality of personality has always interested me, especially when several races contribute to the making of one soul.

BELGRANO DOLLAR CONCERT

A REMARKABLE ENTERTAINMENT.

Wednesday, Aug. 11

There was one, and only one, drawback to the Dollar Concert given in St. Saviour's Church Hall last evening, and that was the size of the hall. It was totally inadequate. There was not even standing room, and it was indeed a wise provision that a marquee had been erected alongside the hall, so that quite a large number of persons who were unable to obtain inside accommodation were able to remain in comparative comfort.

The concert was as exceptional as it was remarkable. No trouble whatever had been spared by Miss Alice or Miss Lily Moss in their arrangements and their decorations, but even if all these matters had been neglected, the concert would have ranked, quite apart from its immense success, as one of the finest musical entertainments of its kind ever heard in South America.

Miss Lily Moss, Miss Gabriela Dreyfuss, Miss Lucy Menzies, Miss Anita Kilberg, each one of them individually could have held their audience the evening through with superb expression of their art. After listening to some of their items it occasioned no surprise to overheard a remark concerning the innumerable diplomas and gold medals that were held by certain of the artistes.

The programme in general was a classical one, differing immensely from the usual concert programmes, and another point was that there were practically no English songs included in it. The highest expression of art was forthcoming from the instrumentalists. Miss Gabriela Dreyfuss and her violin reminded one of the playing of Lady Halle (Madame Norman Nernda). At times she showed the technique of Miss Marie Hall, especially in the mass of difficulties that Vieuxtemps includes in his "Ballade and Polonaise," and only in expression was there a difference noticeable. It was a remarkable performance for a young lady. It was impossible to approach the concert room during the first part of the programme, so that any criticism of the early items must be foregone.

Miss Lily Moss is a pianist that would be in the very front rank, even amongst those professionals who in England have become to be regarded as the leaders in their art. She possesses expression and a touch of a high order, and is an exponent of remarkable ability.

In her singing of "For you alone," with a violin obligato played by Miss Dreyfuss, Miss Anita Kilberg was heard at her very best. Her voice is one of power and sweetness, and her production leaves nothing to be desired. She not only sings her songs, but enters into the exact spirit of the music and the sentimentality or fervour of the words. Her rendering of "The Nightingale" in Swedish was effective, but "For you alone" was magnificently sung.

Madame Bastianini sang in both Italian and French, and her singing was greatly appreciated. Miss Lulu Lumsden's mezzo-soprano was heard to advantage in "Poche," which she sang in Italian, but perhaps her choice of "Until" was the more attractive.

Mr. H. Waldron and Mr. Ellis Griffith were repeatedly recalled for their items which gave great pleasure and which were in delightful contrast to other items on the programme.

Congratulations are due to Miss Lily and Miss Alice Moss, not only on the excellence of their arrangements and the exceptional musical brilliance of the concert given, but also on account of the success with which their efforts met. Not in South America, let alone Belgrano, has an amateur concert of such excellence been heard.

Miss Lily Moss, Mrs. Cowlishaw and Mrs. Perez were the accompanists.

IMPORTANT SALE OF IMPORTED BULLS

Messrs. José M. Iriondo y Cia. announce their first important sale of the season, when a most select lot of bulls imported by the well-known firm of Sidey and Poels will be brought under the hammer. This select lot of 16 young bulls have all been personally selected by Mr. James Sidey in Great Britain and are specially adapted for this Republic. All young bulls, combining some of the most fashionable breeding, they are sure to be keenly competed for at the auction on Saturday. It ought to be mentioned that these bulls have recently been received from the quarantine depot, and no effort has been made to feed them up for sale, as so frequently happens here. They are a specially high lot of high class, active young bulls combining many most exclusive and fashionable strains, and sure to give satisfaction to their purchasers.

CANADIAN-ARGENTINE TRADE

Mr. H. G. White, special Trade Representative for the Province of British Columbia, Canada, arrived here on the "Desna" and expects to stay in Buenos Aires for some weeks.

He will investigate the possibilities for increasing trade between British Columbia and Argentina, in lumber, fish and fruit, and will be pleased to meet any interested inquirers, at his headquarters, the Canadian Trade Commissioner's office, Reconquista 46.

3 MILLION TONS IN HAND.

The total of the current year's exports in maize is computed to be 2,300,000 tons. The officials appointed by the Ministry of Agriculture have estimated that the maize harvest of the Republic has amounted to 5,300,000 tons in all.

The Deputy, Doctor Zeballos, if he brings his proposal, which is now before the Chamber of Deputies, into force, and it becomes law, will therefore have no need to fear that the exportation of maize from the country is being carried on at a rate sufficient to be detrimental to the country's interest. His proposal in general is that one million tons should be held in reserve, so that if the point becomes law, there are still 2 million tons to be exported in the coming five months.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

THE WEEK'S OPERATIONS.

During the past week the produce and fruit markets have shown considerable activity. In some, prices have advanced while in general they have been firm with a rising tendency especially in the woollen market.

Sheep hides have changed hands at prices corresponding to last week, but for those in the best condition an increase in demand is noticed.

The cattle market returns show an entry of 26,004 head of cattle, and 6,152 of pigs, which is less than the previous week. The average prices are for bullocks $205, for heifers $210, half-bred $145, for calves $90.

In the market of Tablada only 24,078 head were registered, which was insufficient to supply the demands of the various frigorificos. The average prices for ewes approximated $22.

CEREALS FROM SANTA FE

CONSIDERABLE DECREASE IN EXPORTATION.

Some exact data has been issued concerning the export of cereals from the port of Santa Fé from December 31 to July 31, and this shows a considerable diminution to previous period. Between these dates 121,628 tons of wheat, 73,742 of flax, 3,956 of rice, making in all a total of 199,278 tons, were exported.

There is nothing to lead to the belief or the hope that, for the remaining months of the current year there will be any increase above the average.

The figures in 1912 were 226,328 tons, and in 1913 466,582 tons of all cereals shipped.

It is difficult to explain the reason for this considerable falling off in shipments. The harvest has been good, in both quantity and quality. One explanation is the war, but this as a cause is hardly a sound one, because other ports do not show decreasing figures. The authorities might well inquire into the matter.

FLOODS IN SAN JUAN

The 25 de Mayo and Cancete districts in the Province of San Juan are seriously threatened by floods. Snow has fallen in great quantities in the Andes and as the thawing season will shortly arrive, great fears are entertained that the dams are not sufficiently strong to resist the flow of water from the mountains. If this danger materialises all the irrigation system will be destroyed with disastrous effect on the grape crop next season. As usual the National Government has been requested to provide funds for the necessary work.

PALERMO SHOW

ARRIVAL OF EXHIBITS.

This great annual show ranks as the most important event of the year for the great number of people engaged in the breeding and preparation of fine stock. Many stockmen also find their way to this exhibition for the purpose of selecting the necessary breeding animals that are put up for public competition after the judging. The breeding of fine stock has not, in many instances, given the financial result anticipated, hence the yearly lessening number of competing "cabañas." The late Don Manuel Cobo, for many years one of the largest exhibitors of Shorthorns and Lincoln sheep, has joined the great majority, while his famous herds and flocks have now passed into other hands. A shortage of imported bulls should be the means of ensuring a firm trade for all good quality animals. The present exceptionally high prices paid for all good quality beef cattle should also tend towards inducing breeders to purchase good quality young active bulls, than run the risk of a lower birth rate by the use of older sires, as not infrequently happens. The sales at Rosario, though by no means animated, were firmer than for some years. The sales by local auctioneers have been well attended and prices firm, while trade for cows and heifers in the local yards has also been satisfactory for all good quality animals.

At the exhibition grounds practically all the competing animals are already in their stalls and boxes, and, from what I did see, many of the classes will be well contested, especially the classes for Shorthorn bulls. Animals generally appear to be shown in remarkably good bloom, and in many classes the competition will be very keen. The heavy draught horse classes appear to contain many good animals of their breed, and the competitions will be well contested. The sheep classes, though entries are evidently not numerous, comprise many pens of outstanding merit. The judging is announced to take place on Friday, when a criticism of all winners will be published on the following day.

"Revs. Kerr and C. T. Bennett, B.A., will exchange pulpits next Sabbath morning. Evening services will be held in their respective churches as usual." "Welland Telegraph," Ont.

For choice we should have attended the morning service, in the hope that it might be more like "a little heaven below."—"Punch."

LONDON MARKETS

IMPROVEMENT IN ARGENTINE RAILS.

London, August 11.
Money rates remained steady to-day. A moderate amount of business was transacted. The Discount Market was weaker and business only trifling; Bills were scarce. Exchange markets have been more cheerful, prices in some cases improving sharply. Dardanelles and Mexican news were liked; the latter may it is thought lead to settlement and there was a burst of activity in Mexican securities. The new war loan is firm; the old loan steady. Rate hardened and Argentine rails are generally better, in spite of some disappointment. Traffics are expected to improve in view of the big harvest expected and larger gains are anticipated. Southern, Central and Westerns finished higher though the last declined towards the close. Foreign bonds were quiet in forenoon except a number of enemy stock transactions which caused prices to harden. In the afternoon enquiry was more general. Oils were listless, rubber firmer, Marconi's dull, shipping shares were active and higher.

ROSARIO RURAL SHOW

SALES $322,000.

Sales at the Rural Show, Rosario, have been very successful in spite of "the Crisis," and the lack of outstanding animals. All the beasts exhibited have been disposed of at prices which, especially in the case of toros a galpon, are satisfactory. A feature of the sales has been the purchases made by the President of the Republic for his estancia, "Los Leones" at estacion Llorca. He purchased three animals for $2500. Total sales have reached the sum of $322,000, or, roughly, about the same as last year. As will be seen by comparison with previous fat years of the "Siglo de Oro," the present, while not too bad, is not exactly the zenith of prosperity.

FALL IN THE RIVER PARAGUAY

A CURIOUS AND SERIOUS PHENOMENON.

During the past few days there has been a marked lowering in the waters of the Rio Paraguay, which during the last 24 hours has been considerably accentuated, with the result that it is beginning to cause interruption to navigation. In order to form some idea of the greatness of the phenomenon, it will suffice to remark that even the Bay of Asuncion, which has always held sufficient water to permit of relatively large vessels entering, is in places almost dry and it is now very difficult if not impossible, to gain access to the port.

In marine circles it is feared that there will be a complete stoppage of all river shipping, and that considerable loss will be incurred thereby. Even now vessels cannot proceed above Villeta, which is only some 20 miles from Asuncion and cargoes are being discharged into small boats.

Latest information states that at midday yesterday there were only five feet of water in the port of Asuncion, and that only the smallest vessels can enter.

THE WEEK'S EXPORTATION

The exportation of cereals for the week ending August 5 shows 12,362 tons of wheat shipped, of which 9,341 tons are from Bahia Blanca. Of the 141,134 tons of maize, 73,101 tons were exported from Rosario, 45,426 from Buenos Aires, 12,545 from San Nicolas, and 7817 from V. Constitution.

Exports of flax amounted to 7891 tons, but there were no shipments of oats recorded. The total for the week reached 161,387 tons as against 164,839 of the previous seven days. Flour to the amount of 1675 tons, and barley to 4,400 tons was exported.

Wool shipments from October 1, 1914, to date, are registered at 291,380 bales, as against 303,392 bales of the Equivocal period of the previous year.

SICKNESS AT CAMPO MAYO

ALLEGED SCANDALOUS CARELESSNESS.

Grave complaints are again made of the sanitary (?) condition of the Campo de Mayo. An excessive number of contagious cases of sickness are reported, and a scarcity of sanitary arrangements and medical necessities are alleged. A virulent form of measles, mumps and bronchial troubles (thrush, whooping cough and nettle rash are not mentioned) with pneumonia are among the diseases mentioned, and it is supposed that cases of typhoid are present. It is alleged that men suffering from these contagious disorders are brought into the city in vehicles used for public conveyance. A scandalous proceeding, especially from a military camp, which ought to be a model of cleanness and fore thought for public health. Of the 25 cases, 10 went to the Hospital Militar, and the rest to the Hospital Muiz, which means that they are bad cases, where one has since died. As the weather has not been recently very wet, and the camp need not be full of pantanos, there is less excuse for this epidemic, and if the Military authorities cannot provide either medical assistance, medicines or hospital accommodation sufficient for the case at the camp, the least they can do, is to take a reasonable amount of care in despatching the sick to the capital in properly disinfected vehicles, proper for the purpose and not in those for public ordinary use.

AT BARTOLOME MITRE AGAIN!

MURDER OF A POLICE AGENT.

"El Radical" states that the murder of St. Perez at Bartolomé Mitre has been followed by the killing of a policeman by a gang which it directly stigmatises as being in official pay. The agent, José Alberto Socalt, had endeavoured to arrest three notorious bad characters, Zenon, Amaro Rivero and J. Rufino Casas, who have previously been guilty of bloodshed. These ruffians had been causing by their drunken violence a reign of absolute terror in the township, which suffers at night from almost total darkness and an almost total lack of police supervision. It is stated that a Subcomisario who was ejected from Capitan Sarmiento by Inspector Condé on account of his violence, immorality and outrageous conduct, remains unmolested at his post.

ZEPPELIN RAID ON LONDON

Hostile Aircraft Bombard the Suburbs

10 PERSONS KILLED ; 37 WOUNDED

Raiders Succeed in Evading British Aeroplanes

London, August 18.

It is officially announced that a number of Zeppelins have made another attack on the English coast towns killing ten persons. One of the Zeppelins is believed to have been hit by the fire of the British guns.

NIGHT RAID ON LONDON.

London, Aug. 18.

On Tuesday night German airships passed over the eastern counties of England and made a raid on the outskirts of London. Ten persons were killed and thirty-six injured. The damage to property was slight.

RAIDERS ESCAPE.

London, Aug. 18.

The latest official statement regarding the German airship raid says that the British air patrols were active in pursuit, but owing to atmospheric difficulties, the Zeppelins were able to escape.

Some houses and other buildings, including a church, were damaged. The ten persons killed consisted of 7 men, 2 women and 1 child, while the wounded included 15 men, 18 women and 3 children. All of them were civilians.

A Central News despatch from Amsterdam says that four Zeppelins were sighted passing the Vlieland and Wieringer islands, travelling from the east in the direction of the English coast; but the hour of the appearance of the airships was not stated.

THE BERLIN VERSION

"COASTGUARDS GREATLY TERRIFIED."

New York, Aug. 18.

It is reported from Berlin that the Zeppelin raid on the English coast previous to the last resulted in much damage to the Harwich post office. A bomb pierced the roof and set fire to part of the building and to the correspondence bags.

Travellers who have arrived at Holland report that there were loud explosions at various points along the coast, but the British authorities are very careful to conceal the damages caused. The coastguards are greatly terrified and abandon their posts.

The result of the raid was 16 injured, but the exact number of killed is unknown.

Cotton as Contraband

BRITISH GOVERNMENT RESPONDS TO PUBLIC DEMAND.

London, August 18.

It is announced that the British Government intends at once to declare cotton absolute contraband of war.

LORD KITCHENER'S REQUEST

London, Aug. 18.

It is announced that to-night the Governments of France and Britain will declare cotton as unconditional contraband of war.

This measure is taken at the request of the British Secretary of State for War who alleges that the Germans are obtaining large quantities of cotton through the Scandinavian countries for the purpose of manufacturing explosives.

Cheers for Britain's Navy

GIVEN BY GERMAN FISHERMEN.

Copenhagen, Aug. 18.

Cheers given by Germans for the men of the British Navy were the subject of a report by the captain and crew of the German trawler Gudrun belonging to Altona, which has just arrived at Esbjerg.

The captain said that the Gudrun was stopped in the North Sea by a British squadron. He promptly got the boats ready and distributed life belts, and when the British seamen reached the trawler he begged for time to take to the boats.

He admits being staggered when he received the brief reply: "You can take the whole ship. We shall not harm you, Captain."

He adds that the British left the trawler amid hearty cheers from the greatly relieved Germans.

FRENCH AERIAL ACTIVITY

GERMAN TOWNS BOMBARDED

New York, Aug. 12.

Advices from Berlin state that French aviators have bombarded the towns of Zweibreecken and Saint Ingbert. Nine persons were killed, but damage done was of little importance.

Straight Talk to Germany

AMERICA'S VIEW OF THE WILLIAM P. FRYE CASE

Washington, Aug. 18.

The gist of the reply of the United States to the last Note from Germany relative to the sinking of the American ship William P. Frye, is as follows:

The Department of State of the Government of the United States notes that the suggestion for arbitration put forward by the Imperial Government is made with the express reservation that payment under this arrangement would not constitute an admission that American treaty rights had been violated, but will be regarded by the Imperial Government merely as fulfilling a duty or policy found on existing treaty stipulations.

A payment made on this understanding would be entirely acceptable to the Government of the United States provided acceptance thereof should likewise be understood to be without prejudice to the contention of this Government that the sinking of the William P. Frye was without legal justification. Provided also that an arrangement can be agreed upon for the immediate submission to arbitration of the question of justification, in so far as it involves the interpretation of existing treaty stipulations.

If this proves acceptable to the Imperial Government it will be necessary also, pending award by the Court of Arbitration, to determine whether that Government shall control its naval operations in accordance with its own interpretation, or with the interpretation maintained by the United States Government, as to the obligation imposed by their treaty stipulations; and the United States Government would be glad to have an expression of views on this point.

"Yser" ex-"Dacia"

CONDEMNED VESSEL SAILS FOR CHERBOURG.

Paris, Aug. 18.

The steamer Dacia which was captured by a French cruiser and subsequently adjudged by the Prize Court to be a good and lawful prize, has been sold to a French shipowner and renamed the Yser. She sailed to-day from Cherbourg for Cardiff to take on board a cargo of coal for Brest.

ITALY'S NATIVE TROOPS

PETITION TO BE ALLOWED TO FIGHT AGAINST AUSTRIA.

Rome, August 13.

The native troops in Erythrea and Somaliland have petitioned to be allowed to come to Europe and fight for Italy, but the Government decided that their participation was unnecessary.

Confidence in the Colonies

FLOURISHING TRADE AND SUFFICIENCY OF MONEY.

New York, August 18.

Communications from London state that the financial situation of the British colonies is most satisfactory, their trade, far from falling off, having increased, and their industries being in a flourishing condition.

Australia, Canada and New Zealand have at their commands the funds necessary to carry on administration in consonance with the aspirations of the people, and everywhere there is perfect confidence in the triumph of the Mother Country.

West African Liner Sunk

SEA HUNS STILL ACTIVE

London, August 18.

The British steamer Bonny, 2702 tons gross register, belonging to the British and African Steamship Company of Liverpool, has been sunk by a German submarine, twenty-one of the crew were saved.

The Spanish steamer Isidoro, of Bilbao, 2044 tons gross, has also been sunk, seven of the crew escaping.

The British sailing ship George was sunk by a submarine, all the crew being safe.

BRITISH FISHING VESSELS LOST

London, August 12.

Three fishing boats were attacked and sunk by Submarines in the North Sea. The crews escaped.

LOSS OF THE STEAMER CAIRO.

London, August 14

To-day a German submarine sank the steamship Cairo. The fate of her crew is unknown. A despatch also states that in the North Sea a submarine sank four fishing smacks. The fate of their crews is also uncertain.

NORWEGIAN VESSEL LOST.

London, August 16.

The Norwegian steamer Albis was sunk to-day by a German submarine. The crew were saved.

At the mouth of the Thames the British fishing smack White City, of Sunderland, has been sunk by a submarine. A Swedish steamer has been beached at Newcomb Sands in a sinking condition from damage caused either by a mine or torpedo. The crews of both ships were saved.

NORWEGIAN CREW SAVED.

London, August 16.

It is announced that the crew of the Norwegian vessel Albis which was sunk by a submarine have been saved.

FISHING BOATS ATTACKED.

London, August 16.

Three fishing boats were attacked and sunk by submarines this afternoon in the North Sea. The crews landed on the English coast.

BRITISH TRANSPORT SUNK IN THE AEGEAN SEA.

Royal Edward a Victim to Austrian Submarine

1,000 OFFICERS AND MEN PERISH

Valuable Cargo of Munitions Lost

London, August 17.

AN OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE REPORTS:—

"On Saturday morning an enemy submarine sank the British transport Royal Edward in the Aegean, carrying 32 officers and 1350 soldiers with a crew of 220 men. About 600 were saved."

LONDON, AUG. 17.

IT IS BELIEVED THAT IT WAS AN AUSTRIAN SUBMARINE THAT SUNK THE BRITISH TRANSPORT ROYAL EDWARD.

THE VESSEL HAD ON BOARD A VALUABLE CARGO OF MUNITIONS.

ALLIES' IMPORTANT ADVANCE IN THE PENINSULA

New York, Aug. 18.

It is reported from Athens that the Allied forces on Gallipoli peninsula renewed the attack this morning and made important advances in the Erithia region. The Turks counter-attacked but were repulsed with heavy losses.

Tenedos reports that more British troops were landed on the peninsula to-day under the protection of the naval guns.

The Turks are offering a heroic resistance, but appear to be short of ammunition.

Dictator of Turkey

ENVER PASHA'S NEW ROLE.

Rome, Aug. 18.

Despatches from Salonica report that the Turkish Minister of War, Enver Pasha, has practically constituted himself Dictator of Turkey and is absolute master in Constantinople where he does not permit the mildest opposition to his will.

Every day his myrmidons present him with lists of the names of those who are his political opponents, and Enver Pasha pronounces upon them sentences of banishment or even heavier punishments. The whole city is under the yoke of the Minister of War.

An army of 60,000 men is encamped at Chataldja; but ammunition is very scarce and the commanders of batteries have orders only to fire a limited number of cartridges daily.

Turkish Collier Sunk

BY A RUSSIAN SUBMARINE.

Petrograd, August 18.

It is officially announced that one of the Russian submarines in the Black Sea sank a Turkish steamship loaded with coal.

Canadians for the Dardanelles

TRANSPORTS PASS GIBRALTAR.

Madrid, August 17.

It is reported from Algeiras that a large number of transports conveying Canadian troops have passed Gibraltar bound for the Dardanelles.

U.S. Protest to the Porte

AMERICAN GUNBOAT ORDERED INTO THE GOLDEN HORN.

London, Aug. 17.

A despatch received by Reuter's Agency from Sofia says that the Turkish authorities at Constantinople have ordered the American gunboat Scorpion, which has been in those waters for some time, to take up her moorings in the inner part of the Golden Horn.

The American Ambassador made a protest against this order, which however was unavailing; but he was able to utilise the occasion in settling some minor questions which had been pending.

MADE MUNITIONS FOR TURKS

GERMAN'S RESIDENCE BOMBARDED AT JAFFA.

Paris, August 14.

Last Thursday a French cruiser steamed to and fro off Jaffa and bombarded the house of a German subject, Wagner, who has manufactured arms and ammunition for the Turks and constructed boats for the attack on the Suez Canal. The place was destroyed, after due notice given to the Governor of the town and to people residing near that they might remove from the dangerous vicinity and avoid personal accidents.

TROUBLE IN TURKEY

OFFICERS REVOLT AGAINST TEUTON ARROGANCE.

Rome, Aug. 16.

A telegram from Athens reports that a few days ago, a serious rebellious movement took place among the Turkish officers on the Gallipoli Peninsula against the Germans. The Ottoman officers protested against the arrogance and despotic attitude of the Germans who have virtually taken the direction of military movements without paying any consideration to the opinions of the Turkish officers.

The subversive movement was almost immediately stifled and 45 officers were arrested and sent in irons to Constantinople, where they were placed for extra security on board the battleship Khayr-ed-din Barbarossa. Almost immediately afterwards, this vessel was attacked and sunk by an English submarine, and the majority of these Turkish officers perished. On board the ship were also the gunners of the Breslau.

20 WARSHIPS REPULSED

Austrian Failure in the Adriatic

ITALIANS PROGRESS SOUTH OF TRENT

Rome, August 18.

The Italian Admiralty announces to-day that twenty Austrian warships and one aeroplane attacked the Italian positions on the island of Pelagosa, but were repulsed by the Italian artillery. The Italians lost four men killed.

ITALIAN SUCCESSES AT TOLMINO.

Rome, August 18.

Official despatches report that at Montenero the Italians dislodged the Austrians from various trenches and repulsed all subsequent counter-attacks to regain them.

At Tolmino the Italians, after artillery preparation of the ground, delivered an attack on the enemy's trenches on the hills of Santa Maria and Santa Lucia which command an important position on the right bank of the Isonzo. The assaulting party succeeded in capturing two trenches on the eastern slopes of the hills.

The Austrians lost heavily in killed and wounded, the victors capturing 17 officers, 547 soldiers, guns and ammunition.

In the Carinthia and Cadore regions the fighting continues to favour the Italians. The artillery which the Italians have placed on the heights of Seikofel and Crodarossa silenced the Sexten forts, whereupon the batteries at once commenced a flank fire upon the Austrian trenches in the Sexten valley and drove the enemy out.

To the west of Sexten the Italians took the offensive between Oberbarber and Kanzel, the Austrians retreating hastily.

AUSTRIAN WITHDRAWAL FROM PLEZZO REGION.

The Austrians have withdrawn suddenly from the Plezzo region.

The Italians are now driving home an attack on the Popena valley west of Landro. Important actions are being fought beyond Plezzo and at other points south and east of Montenero.

However, the point at which the Italians are applying the greatest pressure is to the north of Tolmino where they are threatening the other forts of the stronghold advancing from Montenero.

The Italian aerial fleet is hovering over Nabresina, a dirigible dropping eight bombs at regular intervals on the railway station at the moment the trains are leaving, causing considerable damage to the Austrians.

ITALIAN PROGRESS SOUTH OF TRENT.

Rome, Aug. 18.

News from Verona published in the newspapers says that the Italian troops in the region south of Trent are progressing slowly. The artillery continues to bombard the outer forts of Roveretto and action continues in the Riva sector.

Operations will assume a livelier character when the progress made at other points of the western sector is more pronounced, particularly along the road from Valsugana.

On the eastern frontier, according to telegrams from Geneva, the Austrians have recently received further reinforcements both of infantry and artillery which were immediately sent to the front.

The same telegram states that the Commander-in-Chief of the Austrian forces in this region has sent urgent demands to Vienna for important reinforcements both of men and material in order to arrest the advance which the Italians are preparing to make along the whole of the sector with the object of forcing the enemy's second line of defence.

Italy and Turkey

IMPROVEMENT IN RELATIONS.

Rome, Aug. 17.

The Turkish Ambassador returned from Vallombrosa expecting some extremely important decisions at the Cabinet Council for yesterday which was postponed at the eleventh hour.

The Ambassador is now showing much optimism, relations having improved owing to Turkey's willingness to accede to Italy's demands.

TURKLY'S LATEST WEAPON

PATRIOTIC ODES FOR THE TROOPS.

New York, Aug. 14.

Enver Pasha is reported from Constantinople to be touring the battle front, haranguing the troops and accompanied by the principal Turkish poets and writers who are throwing off Patriotic odes and addresses, scattered throughout Turkey after the manner of D'Annunzio whom they wish to imitate.

DESTROYED BY SHELLFIRE

END OF AN AUSTRIAN SUBMARINE.

Paris, August 16.

Official despatches state that the Austrian submarine U.3 after attacking various ships in the Adriatic without success and Italian auxiliary cruisers, was chased by Italian and French destroyers during the whole afternoon of August 13. On the morning of August 13, she was surprised and destroyed by well placed shells, the gunfire of the French destroyer Bisson, which saved one officer and eleven sailors.

ITALY'S ARTILLERY

NEW QUICK FIRING GUNS

London, August 16.

A despatch from Berne says that the Italian army has more than trebled the number of artillery regiments. The new quick firing guns of the Deport model firing at full speed, forty rounds a minute have been found in every way better and more practical than the type previously in use. They are declared to be excellent for use on rough ground.

ITALIAN COAST BOMBARDED

BY AUSTRIAN DESTROYERS.

Rome, Aug. 12.

A despatch published by the Ministry of Marine states that two Austrian destroyers yesterday bombarded Bari, Santo Spirito and Molfetta, killing one and wounding seven persons. Little material damage was done.

TROUBLE IN ALBANIA

MONTENEGRIAN REVERSES.

New York, Aug. 17.

A delayed despatch from Scutari states that during recent attempts to subjugate the rebellious tribes in the vicinity, the Montenegrins have sustained serious losses. Albanians defeated the Montenegrins in a recent action at Sicala and Sciosa mountains, inflicting losses of 100 men. At Socala mountain the tribesmen captured an entire battalion which had invaded their country. At Slac, another expedition was defeated in spite of reinforcements brought up from Scutari. In order to conciliate the tribesmen, King Nicholas has promised that Scutari shall become the new capital of Montenegro. The Montenegrin National Bank is already opening its headquarters in the city.

ANGLO-BELGIAN ARMY ADVANCES ON THE YSER.

Important German Positions Captured

OFFENSIVE TO BE RESUMED AT LA BASSEE

London, August 18.

After several days of relative calm on the British front, very heavy cannonading recommenced last night, the Germans attempting to destroy some of the British defence works but without success.

According to despatches from the Commander-in-Chief, the British are about to renew the offensive in the La Bassée region, and operations in that direction have already begun.

A NIGHT OF RELATIVE QUIET ON FRENCH FRONT.

Paris, Aug. 18.

It is officially announced that last night passed in relative quiet along the greater part of the front, only artillery engagements being reported in the sectors north of Arras and between the Somme and the Oise, in the region of Roye and in the vicinity of Lassigny.

There was fighting yesterday with bombs and hand grenades in the Arbonne, at Haute Chevauchée, Fontaine-aux-Charmes and the forest of Cherpy.

The French bombardment yesterday of the German positions near Linge destroyed two heavy batteries and caused the explosion of several ammunition depots.

On the crest of the Sonderbach two fresh violent counter-attacks during the night against the position taken by the French yesterday were completely repulsed. The French made about fifty prisoners.

BELGIAN ADVANCE ON THE YSER.

London, Aug. 18.

It is reported from Havre that the Belgians are making a vigorous attack upon the German positions on the Yser and have already succeeded in capturing some advanced posts where the enemy was constructing defence works.

AIDED BY THE BRITISH TROOPS

The Belgians have been reinforced by several British battalions.

A later despatch from the same source states that the Belgian artillery is doing great damage among the German ranks along the Yser. It is known that the enemy has had to send with all speed reinforcements to the lines as the troops defending them are rapidly losing the power of holding out longer.

A NEW POISON GAS

FOR USE BY THE ALLIES.

Paris, Aug. 16.

Professor Daniel Berthelot says, in announcing his discovery of a method of using cyanhydric gas, that it is a most deadly gas, its effects being so poisonous as to cause instant death.

The Germans will have reason to regret that they began the use of asphyxiating gases. So far, none of the means which they have adopted to protect themselves against the asphyxiating bombs have been successful.

British Army Reinforced

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM CANADA AND AUSTRALIA

London, Aug. 18.

The War Office announces that the British lines in the north of France and Flanders have been reinforced by contingents from Australia and Canada, and by Irish regiments.

The whole of the firing line has recently been carefully reviewed by Field Marshal French who expressed himself highly pleased with the condition of the Expeditionary Army.

Every Man Required

GERMANY'S CALL ON HER CITIZENS.

New York, Aug. 17.

Despatches from Amsterdam say that Germany is about to call out every man in the Empire who is fit for service.

It is beyond doubt that Germany cannot recall any troops from Russia; moreover, she is contemplating offensive operations in the Balkans, is assisting Austria against Italy, and has to face the Allies in France and in Flanders. In this last instance fresh troops are urgently required, and it is probable that they will be drawn from the garrisons at Antwerp, Liege, Namur and other important towns in Belgium.

"LITTLE WILLIE'S" ORDER

"WE MUST AND SHALL TAKE VERDUN."

Geneva, Aug. 18.

The newspaper "La Suisse" says that in the pockets of German prisoners recently captured has been found an order issued by the Crown Prince containing the following words:—"We must and shall take Verdun. Then the war will be over by December at the latest."

GERMAN CRUISER SUNK

RUSSIAN SUCCESS IN THE BALTIC.

London, August 14.

A despatch from Petrograd reports the sinking in the Baltic, of a large German cruiser. Neither the name of the vessel nor any details are at present known.

WHEAT CONTRACTS CANCELLED

ALLIES' INTIMATION TO CHICAGO

New York, August 13.

Great interest is expressed in commercial and grain circles on account of an intimation from Chicago which states that the Allies have cancelled a contract for two million bushels of wheat. The reasons for this action are unknown.

No Annexation!

MEMORIAL TO THE GERMAN CHANCELLOR.

Paris, August 17.

The paper "L'Humanité" publishes the text of the memorial presented to the German Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, on the subject of territorial annexation. The document bears the signatures of eighty German persons of high political standing such as Herr Dernburg, Herr Harnack, Herr Delbrueck, Prince von Hatzfeldt and a number of Deputies.

The memorial protests against the proposal of annexation on the ground that it would do the Empire harm and would bring with it the enmity of nearly all the neutral countries. It declares that what Germany wants is an enduring peace which will permit her to develop her industrial and economic potentialities and place her above future aggression.

"GERMANY DID NOT ENTER UPON THE WAR WITH THE INTENTION OF MAKING CONQUESTS."

Paris, Aug. 17.

The memorial addressed to the German Imperial Chancellor by the 82 prominent Germans who signed it, according to the text published in "L'Humanité," declares that Germany did not enter upon the war with the intention of making conquests, but to preserve her existence against the threatened coalition of her enemies. The document states: "We declare ourselves partisans of the principle that the incorporation or annexation of a people politically autonomous or accustomed to autonomy must be condemned."

"The German Empire sprang from the idea of national unity and homogeneity. Elements that are racially foreign she could only assimilate slowly and incompletely. Annexation continues the danger that territories which Germany would have to evacuate as a condition of peace might become ramparts for her enemies, who could easily be provided against in some other way."

The manifesto concludes with the affirmation of confidence in the complete and final victory of Germany.

CONTROVERSY RAGING IN GERMANY.

Copenhagen, August 18.

The question as to whether Germany will annex Belgium or not is absorbing the attention of the people of Denmark in view of the increasing urgency of the militarist party in Germany who, emboldened by the recent successes in Poland, are pressing the Government to declare categorically the annexation of the country.

The argument of this party is that Germany ought not to tamely abandon what has cost Germany so much to conquer. To this however a large part of the population of Germany, especially the industrial classes, are opposed on the grounds set forth in the memorial presented recently to the Imperial Chancellor.

The question seems likely to result in the formation of two separate parties in Germany.

CALLING UP THE UNFIT

GERMANY'S RECKLESS WASTE OF MEN.

New York, Aug. 11.

From Geneva the Germans are reported to be organising in the greatest haste, bodies of volunteers to send to the Polish and French fronts. Many refused for defects at the beginning of the war are now accepted. In a few days the principal factories must begin to feel the want of workers, all available men having been sent to the front. Extraordinary activity is shown in the organisation of these volunteer corps, and recruits are incessantly at drill at the permanent camps.

GERMANS SURPRISED

BRITISH VICTORY AT HOODGE

London, Aug. 17.

Wiring from British Headquarters in Flanders, the "Morning Post" correspondent says that at the capture of trenches at Hooze, the Germans were undoubtedly surprised.

Expecting the cessation of the British bombardment, they were waiting comfortably in their dug outs, and did not realise that the artillery attack had ceased till the infantry were upon them.

Some German officers refused to surrender and barricaded themselves in the dug outs. Sand bags and planks were torn from the roofs and bombs hurled into the interior, followed by shots, deafening explosions and yells.

One by one the dug outs were destroyed and their inmates blown to fragments. Our men drove the Germans back and still back. In some places the bottom of the trenches were so filled with dead and dying that the Germans stood upon the bodies of their fellows to fire. To form traverses they piled up their dead. The British troops pushing up a slope reaches a point, whence they could see crowds of Germans in the hollow below. Being unable to reach them, they signalled to the guns which opened on the hollow, searching it with salvos of rapid fire shrapnel and swept them to destruction. On the right of the redoubt a trench had been carried as far as the old crater, which was full of Germans, apparently a reserve. When the British troops gained the edge of the crater, their position became desperate and they were most anxious to surrender, clambering up the side to yield themselves.

Time, the Victor

GERMANS WEAKENING UNDER FRENCH ARTILLERY FIRE

London, Aug. 18.

A telegram from the north of France says that the French artillery is inflicting severe punishment on the Crown Prince's army, causing very heavy losses in its ranks, destroying defence works and preventing the Germans from making fresh attacks, despite the indifference with which the Crown Prince sacrifices the lives of his soldiers without gaining any advantage thereby.

Whilst the German forces are becoming weaker daily the French are gaining in strength and improving their positions. In the trenches the opinion is predominant that the end of the war is not far off. Germany cannot go on replacing the losses she has suffered, and the climax will soon come when, for want of reserves, the Germans are compelled to leave part of their lines insufficiently defended. The moment when that will be the case is not very remote.

U 12 SUNK

..JUBILATION IN ROME

Rome, Aug. 12.

Great satisfaction is felt in Rome on account of the official notice of the sinking of an Austrian submarine, the U 12. The Press regards this as a brilliant revenge for the recent destruction of an Italian submarine, in which case the Austrian vessel also perished.

Naval critics, before commenting, await with interest the details of the action, but the skill and energy of the well trained Italian personnel is already recognised. They have not failed to seize every opportunity which the enemy has offered at sea.

RUSSIANS RETREATING FURTHER EAST

Civilian Population to Evacuate Riga, Vilna, and Bielostok

German Losses Reported to be 3,500,000

PETROGRAD, AUG. 18

IT IS SEMI-OFFICIALLY STATED THAT GRAND DUKE NICHOLAS HAS ORDERED THE EVACUATION OF VILNA, RIGA, AND BIELOSTOK BY THE CIVIL POPULATION TO BE CARRIED OUT IMMEDIATELY.

WHILE THE TSAR'S ARMY BEFORE RIGA WILL CONTINUE TO DEFEND THE BALTIC PROVINCES, IT IS NOW REGARDED AS CERTAIN THAT BIELOSTOK AND VILNA WILL BE ABANDONED TO THE GERMANS, AND THE RUSSIAN FORCES WILL CONTINUE THEIR RETREAT EASTWARDS.

THE TSAR HAS GIVEN UP THE WINTER PALACE AS A HOSPITAL FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS, GREAT NUMBERS OF WHOM ARE ARRIVING DAILY IN PETROGRAD.

NEW YORK, AUG. 18.

AN OFFICIAL DESPATCH FROM BERLIN REPORTS THAT AFTER AN OBSTINATE RESISTANCE ON THE PART OF THE RUSSIANS THE FORTRESS OF KOWNO WITH 400 GUNS HAS FALLEN INTO THE HANDS OF THE GERMANS.

BOMBARDMENT OF VILNA

Probable Capture of the Town

RUSSIAN PREPARATIONS FOR EVACUATION

Petrograd, August 18.

German aeroplanes are persistently bombarding Vilna. The possibility of the capture of the town is foreseen, and the operations preliminary to its evacuation are progressing.

The Governor-General of Vilna has ordered the removal of the equipments of the factories and banks, together with supplies of metals, including church bells, leather and everything which might be useful to the invaders. Horses and other live-stock are being taken away.

The preparations for the evacuation of Bielostok also continue. The town is in darkness on account of the attacks by German aircraft.

Reports are reaching here from Poland that the Russians who remained in Warsaw after its capture were removed to the interior of Germany.

The Winter Palace has been converted into a hospital with a thousand beds in each row. The gorgeous state chambers facing the Neva will be used for wards, and only the Tsar's personal quarters will be undisturbed. The beautiful Pompeian gardens will be utilised for baths.

The English and American hospitals have been requested to increase their operations as far as possible. The American hospital is negotiating for additional room for hospital facilities.

The city is overtaxed owing to the removal to this city of the wounded from Bielostok, Vilna, Kowno and Riga.

FAILURE OF OPERATIONS AGAINST RIGA.

Petrograd, August 18.

An official communication issued to-day says:—

"In the region of Riga the enemy's endeavours to advance have failed completely.

"Towards Dvinsk violent fighting continues. We have repulsed all attacks.

"Round the fortress of Kowno a desperate battle is developing. The enemy, after a very violent bombardment with all his heavy artillery, tried to take by assault the fortifications on the left bank of the Niemen, but only succeeded in capturing a small fort.

"On the left bank of the Narew and in the direction of Bielostok and Bielsk we repulsed several series of attacks.

"On the Nustry and Bug rivers we continue to hold in check the enemy's offensive.

"In the Novo Georgievsk region a violent artillery duel is going on."

Warsaw to Lille

GERMANY'S NEW TRAIN SERVICE

New York, August 18.

A telegram from Berlin reports that eleven days after the fall of Warsaw the Lille-Warsaw express train has been inaugurated, thus establishing communication between the extremes of the territory occupied by the German forces.

The train is booked to start from Lille at 6.40 a.m., passing Brussels at 8.30 and arriving at Berlin at midnight. She is due to reach Warsaw at midday the following day.

The first train carries seven American war correspondents who will be present at the bombardment of the fortress of Novo Georgievsk.

FLIGHT FROM AUSTRIA

200,000 ITALIAN CIVILIANS PASS THROUGH SWITZERLAND.

Berne, Aug. 14.

Over 200,000 Italian civilians have passed through Switzerland, on their way home from Austria. Many special trains were employed to convey them to Rome.

2,002,000,000 MARKS

Germany's New War Credit

TO BE VOTED TO-DAY

New York, Aug. 18.

Despatches from Berlin via the Hague report that, despite the activity of the Socialist leader, Herr Liebknecht, the majority of Socialists in the Reichstag are prepared to vote a war credit of 2,002 million marks when Parliament convenes tomorrow.

Herr Liebknecht will probably vote against the proposal to grant further credits for war purposes, and a few other Socialists may leave the House as a silent protest, but the majority, following a three-day conference, have announced their determination to support the vote.

As a spectacle, to-morrow's session will rival the famous meeting of a year ago, when the first credits for the prosecution of war were voted amidst unparalleled scenes. The diplomatic corps is making arrangements to attend.

PARTY DIFFERENCES.

It is reported that the coming session will bring to light several party splits, principally in the ranks of the National Liberals and the Socialists. The Socialist and Labour leaders, for instance, will insist that action be taken against the alleged food speculators, and are also prepared to oppose certain new orders respecting the Landsturm.

The executive committee of the National Liberal party, meeting to-day in advance, adopted a resolution demanding that Germany agrees only to a peace that will guarantee her, both from a military and an economic viewpoint, immunity from attacks in the immediate future.

Cholera in Galicia

STATEMENT OF AUSTRIAN MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR.

New York, August 18.

It is reported from Zurich that the Austro-Hungarian Minister of the Interior has officially announced the prevalence of cholera in the Empire, especially in Galicia, but that the necessary steps have been taken by the health officers to prevent it from spreading, and the danger may be expected soon to have vanished.

LIBAU A NAVAL BASE

GERMAN BALTIC SQUADRON'S NEW BASE.

Copenhagen, Aug. 12.

The German Baltic squadron is occupying Libau as a naval base. Experts are superintending the works, which go on day and night, of repairing, adapting and fortifying the harbour works.

U.S. REPLY TO AUSTRIA

EXPORTATION OF MUNITIONS NOT A VIOLATION OF NEUTRALITY.

Washington, Aug. 13.

The Government has forwarded the reply of the White House to the Austro-Hungarian protest against the export of ammunition to the Allies. It is set forth therein that such export is entirely in accord with international law and does not constitute a violation of neutrality which the United States has carefully maintained throughout the conflict. The whole text will be published shortly.

Three and a Half Millions

GERMANY'S CASUALTIES IN THE KAISER'S WAR.

Paris, Aug. 18.

A telegram from Petrograd says the Germans have intensified the bombardment of the forts to the west of Kowno. Their losses have been very heavy.

It is estimated that the German losses, including Prussians, Bavarians, Saxons and Wurtembergers, both at sea and on land, amount to 3,500,000 men, to which must be added 120,000 more who have fallen in the last engagements. These figures have disquieted the German General Staff who have had to recognise the failure of their plan and have been obliged to withdraw six army corps from the line of battle in order to form fresh reserves.

A Russian General states that Novo Georgievsk is able to withstand a long siege and has ammunition for a year.

THE GENTLE GERMAN

BECOMING POPULAR IN WARSAW

Amsterdam, August 14.

Various reports show that the Germans are making the greatest efforts to secure the sympathy of the Polish population especially in Warsaw. Since the publication of the amnesty decree, nearly all political prisoners have been freed, among them many imprisoned by the Russian Government some years ago. The Poles appear pleased with the gentle and benignant treatment of the Germans but wish to see autonomy in force as soon as possible.

RUSSIAN TAXES REPEALED.

Amsterdam, August 14.

In Warsaw and other Polish cities the Germans are distributing literature in favour of their interests. Several Russian taxes in Poland have been repealed. Newspapers, under a mixed Germano-Polish personnel are being issued.

Serbia's Gallant Stand

AUSTRIAN INVASION EFFORTS FOILED.

Nish, August 18.

It is announced that the Serbian troops on the Danube frontier have foiled all the efforts of the Austrians to invade the territory. The Serbian artillery not only silenced the enemy's batteries but destroyed several fortifications inflicting losses of importance on the Imperial army.

Confirmation has been obtained of the statement that German divisions are with the Austrians on the Danube.

Retribution!

DESTROYER OF THE LEON GAMBETTA SUNK BY ITALIAN SUBMARINE.

Rome, August 18.

It is stated that the Austrian submarine which was sunk a few days since by an Italian submarine was the vessel which sank the French cruiser, Leon Gambetta, last December. The statement is corroborated by the German Press.

Venizelos Accepts

REQUEST TO FORM A NEW CABINET

London, Aug. 18.

A Central News telegram from Athens announces that M. Venizelos has informed King Constantine that he is prepared to undertake the formation of a new Cabinet.

WRECK OF THE IRISH MAIL

TRAIN CRASHES INTO DERAILED ENGINE

London, August 14.

A terrible disaster occurred to the forenoon Irish mail from Euston to Holyhead.

The traffic was heavy and the train ran in two portions. The second portion worked by two 4-4-2 engines had covered about a quarter of the distance to Holyhead and was emerging from Stoke Tunnel when the leading engine was struck by the connecting rod of a train coming in the opposite direction and which had apparently broken.

Both engines of the Irish Mail became derailed and parted from the train; the first four passenger coaches and Post office vans were hurled to either side of the line.

Eight passengers were instantly killed and over thirty injured, of whom four died later. Luckily none of the derailed carriages took fire but both lines were blocked for some hours. Doctors and ambulances were speedily on the scene from neighbouring towns.

Among the injured are Lord Mounteagle. Mr. Dominich Spring Rice, nephew of the Ambassador to Washington, and Colonel Lynch, M.P., formerly of the Irish Brigade of the Boer army and now an energetic and loyal Nationalist member.

There were a number of Irish soldiers on furlough including one who had gained the Distinguished Conduct Medal. He had a miraculous escape from injury, as had Lady Lees Knowles and Sir Lees Knowles, who were only married on Thursday. Both were thrown down the embankment but unhurt.

HOLIDAY MAKERS IN THE DISASTER.

London, August 15.

The latest information available of the wreck of the L. and N. W. Irish mail near Stoke tunnel says there are between six and ten dead and severely wounded. These figures were overstated at first. The mail train, running in two parts, was carrying holiday makers away from London. The first part ran into an engine which had overturned owing to the breaking of the piston rod. The second part following crashed into the wreck. Some soldiers were among the victims.

COTTON AS CONTRABAND

GREAT DEMONSTRATION IN LONDON.

London, Aug. 12.

A large meeting has been held here with the object of impressing upon the Government the immediate necessity for declaring cotton, contraband of war. It was pointed out that cotton is indispensable to Germany for the manufacture of explosives.

"COTTON NOT NECESSARY FOR WAR PURPOSES!"

Amsterdam, Aug. 12.

"The Frankfurter Zeitung" says that the British proposal to declare cotton contraband will not resolve any problem of victory for the allies because German Technical Science has already made cotton unnecessary for war purposes.

HUNGARY'S COTTON SUPPLIES

AN INVENTORY TO BE TAKEN.

London, Aug. 11.

A despatch from Zurich states that an inventory of all cotton supplies has been ordered throughout Hungary and restrictions are being placed on the sale and manufacture of cotton textiles.

TWO DAYS' SIEGE

ANTI-REGISTRATION AFFRAY

Dublin, August 16.

A sensational affair which has kept Lurgan, County Down, in an uproar for two days, ended to-day by the suicide of David Johnson, who shot himself with a magazine pistol.

Johnson, who is believed to have been mentally deranged, resented the visit of the Royal Irish Constabulary to get his name for National Registration, supposing it meant conscription. He barricaded his house and opened fire on the police. His house being in the main street and ammunition plentiful, he stopped traffic for two days and killed himself when further resistance became impossible.

LORD KITCHENER AND CONSCRIPTION

London, Aug. 13.

In a Press interview, Lord Kitchener said that the Government had come to no definite decision as to compulsory service, but were about to consider the matter with the greatest attention. He said that the Government were very well satisfied with the volunteer recruiting system results, and that the excellence of the divisions organised showed that the country had responded to the official call.

COMPULSORY TRAINING

London, August 14.

The Singapore Legislature has passed a bill making military instruction obligatory on all British residents in the Straits Settlements between the ages of 18 and 55 years.

IRISH VOLUNTEERS

ORGANISATION OF NEW CORPS.

London, Aug. 13.

Telegrams from Dublin state that the organisation of corps of volunteers is actively proceeding.

It is expected that in a short time a number of new regiments completely organised and equipped will be sent to the fighting line.

BRITAIN'S FINANCES

POSSIBILITY OF LOAN IN THE STATES.

New York, Aug. 14.

It is stated that on London Stock Exchange, exchange fell to 4.69 1/2, a figure hitherto unknown. New York financial circles believe that Great Britain must shortly contract a loan of £100,000,000 in the United States in order to meet the expenditure on munitions ordered from American firms.

GOLD RESERVES.

London, August 15.

Thursday's statement of the Bank of England is regarded as highly favourable by contrast to preceding days. The gold holding has increased to £35,000,000, the largest amount yet held. Six months' loans public and private were heavily reduced. On the whole the return was the best since March. The improvement was largely due to the freer use of currency notes. Much interest was shown in the Bank of France return of Thursday. It had accumulated £12,000,000 gold in one month through its patriotic campaign, and its holding of metal is now a record. All indications point to easier money in the United States on account of gold shipments now en route, which may continue some months. Indications point also to your (Argentine) financial operations abroad increasing for same reason. Mexican securities are better on prospect of U. S. and Latin-American combine intervention.

GOVERNMENT NEGLIGENCE

RESPONSIBLE FOR LOSS OF LIFE

LORD BERESFORD'S INDICTMENT

London, August 12.

At a meeting in the city on the subject of declaring cotton contraband, a letter was read from Lord Charles Beresford, in which he stated that had certain advice which he tendered Mr. Asquith been followed the Lusitania might have been saved. In it he said, "I wrote to the Prime Minister showing how inefficiency had been brought about by want of organisation and forethought and was causing the loss of invaluable lives. I further stated that all these disasters were avoidable and that men's lives were being sacrificed through criminal negligence. I have it my power to prove this statement; in fact when the proper time comes I will do so."

COLONIAL TROOPS FOR EUROPE

NEW CONTINGENTS FROM CANADA AND AUSTRALIA.

London, August 13.

Advices from Ottawa state that several transports are preparing to leave Canada with fresh bodies of troops for Europe.

Similar reports are received from Melbourne.

BOTHA'S MEN FOR THE FRONT

CONTINGENT LEAVES CAPE TOWN.

New York, August 13.

Reports from London state that a body of troops have already embarked at Capetown for Britain. General Botha is of opinion that these seasoned troops are no longer needed in South Africa, and that their good organisation and discipline fit them for taking effective part in the lines in France and Flanders.

The Secretary of State for War has telegraphed expressing his conformity and satisfaction to General Botha.

GOLD FOR THE STATES

TO BE SENT FROM SOUTH AFRICA.

New York, August 13.

A London despatch says that it is intended to send 200,000,000 dollars of bullion from the South African mines to the United States, in order to establish a definite gold credit—to meet the Foreign Exchange situation. The gold will be conveyed on British warships, but which or when is not definitely known. It will be landed either at New York or at a Canadian port for transshipment.

RELIEVING PRESSURE ON RUSSIA

WHY BRITAIN UNDERTOOK THE DARDANELLES CAMPAIGN.

Petrograd, August 16.

In reply to journalists, the British Ambassador to Russia said that, when Turkey declared war on her, Russia turned to Britain and requested her to divert some part of the Turkish force in the Caucasus by a counter demonstration against some other point.

Operations in the Dardanelles were undertaken with the double object of reducing Turkish pressure in the Caucasus and forcing the opening of the Straits to enable Russia to export grain and to receive the stores and foreign produce which she so urgently requires.

MUKHTAR'S MISTAKE

STATES CENTRAL POWERS ARE EXHAUSTED

RECALLED AT REQUEST OF THE KAISER

London, Aug. 14.

The "Evening News's" Athens correspondent wires that Muckhtar Pasha, the recently appointed Ambassador to Berlin, has been recalled at special request of the Kaiser. It is said that the reason is Mukhtar's candour in informing his Government that Germany and Austria were in the last days of exhaustion; that a serious defeat on either frontier or a heavy repulse will precipitate their destruction, and warning the Porte that the utmost discretion is necessary, as undoubtedly, if defeated, Germany will seek to make Turkey a scapegoat and to make terms at her expense.

FRANCE'S MUNITIONS SUPPLIES

WORKERS RETURN FROM THE FIRING LINE

Paris, Aug. 13.

M. Thomas, the Under Secretary for War in the Munitions Department has made some interesting declarations concerning the supply of war material. He states that 10,000 expert workmen have returned from the front, by order of the Government, in order to place themselves at the service of the heads of the various factories. M. Thomas states that if absolutely necessary women and children will assist in the work. He states that the French army is now sufficiently equipped not only to defend themselves but to take the offensive. He adds that the English and French armies are daily increasing in strength and that complete confidence is felt as to the final result.

345 MUNITIONS FACTORIES

HOW BRITAIN HAS FACED THE PROBLEM.

London, August 13.

Mr. Lloyd George, the Minister of Munitions, has declared that there are 345 factories at present engaged in the manufacture of munitions of war. He further states that the output of war material has increased rapidly and will continue to increase.

MUNITIONS FROM BELGIUM

GERMANY'S NEW SUPPLY BASE.

Amsterdam, August 14.

The Germans have established 14 large ammunition factories in Belgium from which most of the projectiles used on the German front in France and Flanders are turned out. The original German factories supply material for the campaign against the Russians. This is the explanation of the enormous output of ammunition which the Teutons have produced, so much in excess of the Allies' calculations. German experts only are engaged for the Belgian factories, none of any other nationality being admitted. The Germans have also established factories for poison gas in Belgium. These works are running at full pressure and new installations arrive daily.

THE AGRICULTURAL SHOW

SUNDAY, August 15, 1915.

Despite conditions which by no stretch of imagination could be described as favourable during the past two years, the annual exhibition of the Rural Society, which is to be formally opened to-day, can claim to be a big success. The conditions referred to are those which must tell materially on any exposition of agricultural products, particularly the live-stock, for it needs little knowledge of rural matters to understand that what is seen in the show ring is but a reflex of what has transpired in the rural industries for the two or three years preceding. If, therefore, weather has been unfavourable and disease has been present, there is bound to be a visible effect on the show.

This year, the stated cause has resulted in the entries being small in number, though, to the great surprise of many who foretold a serious effect on the quality, the exhibits have been quite up to standard in quality, and in some sections superior to what was seen in former years. When this can be said, while remembering that many valuable areas of camp have been flooded during the past two years and there has consequently been more than an ordinary prevalence of disease in stock, it proves that the primary industries of Argentina cannot seriously be disturbed by adverse circumstances, and so far as the breeding of high class stock is concerned, the leading enthusiasts are not to be discouraged nor put out of court by any difficulties.

Now that the Show is on, it is well to bring home once more to the general public the importance of such expositions, not only to the breeders and exhibitors, but to the people of the cities. The Palermo Show and others of its kind are factors of immense value in educating the estancieros and farmers in their own professions. By such expositions they are enabled to apprise themselves of what strides are being made, not only in this country, but abroad, for through the instrumentality of the imported judges the exhibitors practically receive lessons in the higher culture of the stock they desire to produce, and also learn which way the breeds are developing abroad. There are many advantages to camp men in the holding of such shows, but it may be said that the greatest of all is their educative value.

From the city man's point of view, the Palermo Show is generally regarded as affording him the opportunity to learn what it is the farmer needs, so that he may supply that need. This is certainly one desirable way of looking at it, but there is another and more important point of view, and that is that such shows should give the city business man occasion for reflection and profitable thought along the line of national economies. In comparatively small compass he should be able to glimpse the whole and vast wealth of the primary industries of the country, upon whose welfare and development his own successful existence depends. He should be able to realise, after seeing such a show, that the land and what it produces constitute our wealth in the first and last instances. Having realised this, and having seen, as he must have seen if he has been a regular attendant at Palermo, that our real wealth shows no diminution in quantity and quality, he cannot fail to be an optimist and to feel completely confident in the welfare of the nation that has behind it the immense capital of such productive-

The Rural Society of Argentina is deserving of the thanks of the country and the city for the work it is

THE NIGHTMARE OF THE BALKANS

TUESDAY, August 17, 1915.

Unless the press correspondents in the nerve centres of Europe are hopelessly wrong in their anticipations, and unless they have been grievously misinformed, it is safe to assume that, as in the case of Italy, the rumours will shortly give place to the realities of Balkan intervention on the side of the Quadruple Entente.

The present war has been particularly noteworthy for the kaleidoscopic rapidity with which various situations have changed, and probably in no instance has change been so rapid or so complete as that in the Balkan attitude. It was assumed in the early days of the war that anxiety to fall upon Turkey would cause an immediate upheaval; but the Balkan nations remained neutral. Subsequently it was stated that the intervention of Italy would precipitate the entry of countries which were merely awaiting an opportune moment. At one time it did appear that the opportune moment had arrived. Then came the Russian retreat from Bukovina and Galicia. So far from assisting the Entente, the Balkan States at this period appeared to be more inclined to throw in their lot with the Central Empires. In taking this stand they were not so much influenced by the temporary failure of the Russian arms as by individual obstinacy. Bulgaria, apparently the key to the situation, was adamant against assisting Serbia's allies unless Serbia and her partners restored the territory taken under the Treaty of Bucharest. Without the support of Bulgaria, the remaining nations deemed intervention an operation too precarious to be undertaken without grave consideration, and the only path open to the diplomats of the Entente was to persuade Serbia and Greece to modify their unyielding attitude.

The process would, in the ordinary course, have been a lengthy one; apparently, however, the Central Powers and their Turkish ally have succeeded by intimidation in forcing a crisis for so long beyond the capacity of the diplomats of the Entente. Fear, it seems, has conquered where argument failed. Whether or not Austria and Germany made due allowance for the fact that the driving of a wedge through Serbia to the assistance of Turkey would precipitate an upheaval in the Balkans, is not at the moment known. Possibly the super-egotism of the Teutonic race led Berlin diplomacy to believe that the crushing of Serbia would be followed by the gaining of Balkan aid far the Central Empires. On the other hand, the successes in Poland and Galicia may have strengthened the Kaiser and his counsellors in the belief that the German arms are invincible. However, it is immaterial which view was held, the result must be the same. The small states in the Near East realise that the success of the Teuton arms means the aggrandisement of Austria and the expansion of Turkey. This naturally means the end of the independence of the Balkan nations. They would suffer the fate of Belgium.

The obvious fact is that the rulers of the Balkan countries have arrived doing, and of which the great and successful expositions at Palermo are only the outward and visible signs. We trust that the Show which is to be formally opened this afternoon by His Excellency the President, will in every way gratify the committee of the Society, and in that sense repay them for the strenuous work they have had in guiding the destinies of our great industries through the past two or three "lean" years.

at the decision that united action is necessary if they would save themselves from the aggressor! Serbia knows full well that unless her immediate neighbours can come to her aid she must be crushed. For that reason, if for none other, she is stated to be willing to accede to the demands of Bulgaria. Greece is expected to adopt a similar course. Her attitude will, no doubt, be defined by M. Venizelos in the course of a few days, but it cannot be doubted that in the meantime she is being subjected to considerable pressure by the Ministers of the Quadruple Entente. Here again, self-interest must be the deciding factor, and the spectre of an Austro-German advance to the shores of the Aegean is one that Greece cannot view without anxiety.

Bulgaria's point of view has been made clear time and again. She was stripped of her belongings while she lay bleeding after the second Balkan war and she seeks for an opportunity of re-adjusting the balance. Had Turkey not been an ally of the Central Powers it is conceivable that she might have allied herself to their cause. The presence and avowed object of Turkey places a different complexion on the case, and Bulgaria, consequently, has little for which she can hope from that direction. By joining the Quadruple Entente she can not only retain her place as an independent state, but, in addition, if her late enemies can be coerced by the powerful western allies into returning the territory which they took from her by force of arms, she will have succeeded in gaining that on which she has set her heart.

When intervention will come is a point on which we cannot be dogmatic. We believe, however, that the next few days will witness a change in the Balkan situation; moreover, we are reasonably confident that the change will mean the resuscitation of the Balkan League and the addition of the League to Germany's ever growing number of enemies.

THE SMALL LANDOWNER IN ARGENTINA

WEDNESDAY, August 18, 1915.

In view of the studied indifference with which men of importance in this country treat the practical affairs of every day life in so far as they concern the small man, and especially the small landholder, one frequently feels that comment on a position such as that revealed by the letter from a Chubut farmer published in yesterday's "Herald," is mere waste of time. The facts are there, nobody disputes them, and certainly nobody in political circles deems it worth while to give the practical side of colonization any real support. Stated baldly there is no getting away from the fact that the smaller settler is not wanted in Argentina by the men who have the control of the only land available for real settlement, the unoccupied, officially unoccupied, tracts of fiscal land. This may appear a bold statement, and one that calls for justification. Is not the country always crying out for more labour, more 'colonos,' and are not elaborate arrangements made for the housing and subsequent distribution of such labour when it arrives? This would be the natural query of any newcomer, after a few days perusal of the Argentine press, especially if his landing coincided with the near approach of harvest. "Hands for the Harvest," is almost a standing headline during September and October, but apparently the official mind can see no connection whatever between this cry and that of the bitter plaint of those men who, gulled by specious promises, made their home in the outlying territories in the sure belief that their development work would be given the seal of official approval, and a fair commercial value at one and the same time, through the extension of good titles, valid against all comers.

In plain language serfs rather than settlers are what official Argentina has sought and has obtained up to the present. That owing to the richness of the soil and the climatic advantages of the country, many of these erstwhile serfs have managed to save sufficient money to buy out their masters, is not a proof that the system of servitude,—for that is all that the average "colonia" amounts to—is desirable. It merely makes one regret that a more intelligent method of development was not undertaken years ago. Broadly speaking, the settlers in Chubut for the past twenty years have had their difficulties in the matter of land titles increased rather than decreased as time went on, for the simple reason that land down south has become more valuable, thanks to the efforts of those selfsame settlers. It may be that the Chubut valley gets more than its proper share of attention, and that the government have some reason on their side when they say that the Welsh settlers are never satisfied. From the point of view of the second generation, they never will be satisfied until the outlying lands they have taken up are secured to them and to their children by definite titles. The government looks at matters in quite a different light. As far as one can see their reasoning is based on the fact that other 'squatters' in other parts of the republic do not complain as long as they are left unmolested, and that the Chubut 'squatters' ought to follow this eminently pacific example.

Admittedly this refusal to grant titles is general. What is never admitted is the fact that from time to time large tracts of fiscal land are put up for sale on conditions that render it impossible for the small man to buy, even if he would. There have been various cases in the past of men who after years of work on land reclaimed and settled by their own unaided efforts have been forced to recognise the rights of a recent buyer direct from the state, and either pay rent, or quit, losing the labours of a lifetime. It would perhaps be going too far to say that the presence of settlers on fiscal land is added to its other attractions when the same comes under the official auctioneer's hammer, but obviously, to anyone knowing the area for sale, the fact that a nucleus of population is present, must weigh in the balance. The settler's argument naturally stands for nothing against the official papers. Weak men go on in the hope that their precarious tenancy will not be disturbed, but such men are not good settlers. Men of sterner mettle prefer to face the facts. And if, as has happened on more than one occasion down south, those facts resolve themselves into the unpleasant certainty that no permanent tenure is obtainable, the settler with grit and a reasonable care for the future of his family, frequently prefers to cut his losses, sells up what he has, and emigrates. His loss is heavy, but it is as nothing in comparison with that suffered by the Argentine republic, with its vast uncultivated areas calling for development. The pity of it is that her leaders cannot see the suicidal folly of their so-called land policy.

OFFICERS' FAMILIES FUND

BRITISH WOMEN'S PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION.

The net amount realised in aid of the Officers' Families Fund at the entertainment at the Plaza Hotel organised by Mrs. C. S. Edye and Miss Stubbs was $1803.50. The Patriotic Association record their appreciation of the efforts of all concerned in the achievement of such a satisfactory result, the organisers, the performers, the artists whose assistance was so generously given, the manager of the Plaza Hotel, and many others who helped by the sale of tickets and in other ways.

SOLVING THE MINISTERIAL CRISIS

(La Prensa.—August 16).

Officially, says "La Prensa" nothing was done on Sunday towards solving the ministerial crisis. H.E. the President passing almost the whole afternoon at the Rural Show, retiring to his private apartments after dinner and seeing no-one. Various interviews with sundry ministers led "La Prensa" to suppose that nothing official was known regarding the new holders of the portfolios of Finance and Justice and Education, no-one having any fixed conviction as to the course which the forthcoming nominations would take. Nevertheless, it is said, and that on very good authority, that H.E. the President intends to make it very clearly understood that he does not favour any special political party when seeking out the best men for the posts rendered vacant, and as a proof thereof will offer the vacant charges to gentlemen who at the present moment are in no way connected with political manoeuvres which are being carried on throughout the republic.

Added to this statement comes a well founded rumour to the effect that Dr. de la Plaza does not think there is any immediate hurry in so far as filling the vacancies left by the resignations of Drs. Cullen and Carbó are concerned. In the meantime he will meditate on the claims and capabilities of the various possible candidates for these important posts. In so far as the interim holders are concerned, this point has already been decided upon. The Minister of Agriculture will act pro tem as head of the Finance Department, whilst the Minister of Foreign Affairs will look after the matters appertaining to his colleague of Justice and Instruction.

BUDGETS AND TAXES IN THE PROVINCE

(La Nación.—August 16).

The government of the Province of Buenos Aires has declined to prepare estimates for the coming year, deeming such a course inadvisable seeing that no alterations in existing taxation can be thought of. "La Nación" agrees with this decision, whilst admitting that a Budget of $56,000,000 is exaggerated when compared with the resources of the taxpayers; the plain fact is that for the present the money has to be found. Of the $56,000,000, or 40 o/o, goes to pay the service of the public debt, the balance being spread over the following items; schools, $10,500,000; police, $7,800,000; justice, $3,000,000; roads, $1,200,000; upkeep and equipment, $1,200,000; hospitals and hygiene, $1,600,000; telegraphs, $850,000. Remains $8,000,000 for ordinary administrative expenses, of which the legislature takes a cool $2,000,000. Hence it will be seen that there is not much room for real economies.

In so far as taxation is concerned, the government thinks, continues "La Nación," that at a time like the present it ought not to be altered. True the actual system of taxation is bad, but that the government and the taxpayers both known, and any thorough revision would only result in fresh trouble. A new system of collection introduced at the present time would in all likelihood disturb the actual collection of revenue, as always happens when novelties in tax-gathering are first introduced, with the result that the province would not be able to make both ends meet. The year is already far advanced and there would not be time to apply any new regime with success in 1916. Hence, concludes "La Nación," given the actual situation of the province, one fails to see how its rulers could do anything save continue with the existing system for the present at any rate, merely introducing such modifications as immediate circumstances may call for.

PROFIT-SEEKING EMPLOYEES

(La Prensa.—Aug. 14.)

The frequent use that is made of the municipal automobiles by employés who take them for their own private ends has been previously commented upon, remarks "La Prensa," and constitutes a grave administrative offence. But the abuse does not stop there. For whilst employés of superior rank are able to get a motor when they need it, the underlings also look to get free passes for everywhere. In short, says "La Prensa," municipal administration appears to be one vast abuse that ought to be checked. Even the porters are supplied with free tramway passes, on the ground that their services often include journeys outside the office, despite the fact that such journeys ought to be paid for from the funds allocated to that end. The free pass on the trams ought only to be conceded to those employés charged with the duties of tramway inspection, and certainly cannot be regarded as the attribute of practically all the employés of the administration without an admission that such a thing is not right.

Free passes given under such conditions may be, and perhaps are, in the nature of a bribe, and at the same time are a charge on the public exchequer since it implies a diminution of vigilance on the part of the authorities, to say nothing of the tax that should be received on these fares. "La Prensa" points out that it is not the correct thing for the companies to be able to distribute free passes to all and sundry, inclusive of the magistrates who are responsible for the pronouncement of judgment when the companies are charged with faults or omissions on the part of their personnel. In this connection "La Prensa" quotes the findings of the Congress committee of the United States in 1885, charged with the investigation of abuses committed by the railways. Among the observations recorded there was one that fits the present case of Buenos Aires. "A privileged class has been created through the granting of free passes, and owing to the manner in which this has been abused, the cost of fares for the general public has been largely increased."

COASTAL NAVIGATION

(La Nación.—Aug. 14.)

The superior functionaries of the Port Prefect's office having been recently changed, it was to be expected, says "La Nación," that, in accordance with immemorial custom, the newcomers should at once upset all the rules laid down by their predecessors. This is the reason, "La Nación" further observes, why in this country nothing is ever set on a permanent base. The intention may be good enough, but in practice this system is often found wanting. Hence the regulations dealing with the navigation in the Delta now shows a complete ignorance of the way in which work is carried out in that region, and between the provincial taxation, the rapacity of the municipal charges (San Fernando and Las Corchas) and the new regulations of the Prefect of Ports, all industry in that part of the world stands a fair chance of being extinguished.

The new rules state that boats without gear, i.e. lighters or boats in tow, from 10 to 200 tons must carry a crew of four. Now there are daily boats of 10 tons being towed hither and thither, with but one man really required to take the tiller. On a round voyage these boats make $50,

PRIVATE SCHOOLS IN QUILMES

(La Prensa.—Aug. 18.)

"La Prensa" states that it has always regarded as of primary importance the question of national training in the private schools of this country, believing that the formation of national character is something towards which the foreign communities here established ought to assist. Hence it regards as of serious importance the report of Señor Atanasio A. Lanz, member of the Quilmes School Committee, on the deficient patriotism of the teaching carried out in these private establishments, where some thirteen hundred children are educated. This gentleman, when elected to the aforesaid committee, declared his intention of looking into the matter of the private schools, and now states that the teaching of Argentine history and geography is deficient, and the same applies to the "idioma nacional" and to civil instruction. The heads of these schools, "La Prensa" continues, prefer to teach their pupils subjects that have no bearing on Argentine life and history, in a foreign tongue, whilst the scholars have little or no knowledge of Argentina's forbears, her symbols, her geographical characteristics, or her tongue.

Sr. Lanz has, so he states, met with cases that call for the intervention of the Argentine Government. Children of three and four years' school attendance hardly speak a word of Spanish, and, when asked what nationality they belong to, reply that they are English, despite the fact that they have been born in Buenos Aires, often of Argentine families, who also describe themselves as English. True these schools have a national teacher, but he only teaches for an hour a week in each grade, thus making the national teaching a mere farce, since the other teachers are all foreigners, many of whom do not understand a word of Spanish. Moreover, various schools have made futile pretexts to avoid being present at the national celebrations of the 25 de Mayo and 9 de Julio. Sr. Lanz also charges the directors of certain schools with trying to delude the inspector by telling the children that they ought to say they are Argentine, when as a matter of fact they have replied that they were "English born in Argentina, Chile, Peru, and so forth." In short, this gentleman finds a pronounced foreign tone in the Quilmes schools, and has urged the Quilmes School Committee and the educational authorities of the province to take such action as is called for in defence of Argentine nationality.

and the crew's wage is usually $40. How can they be expected to carry four men? And what is still more ridiculous is the order that vessels propelled by sail must carry but two men, including the "patron." In regard to small passenger boats, the same lack of all proportion applies. A boat of ten tons must have four men, also a boat of a hundred tons. Add to this the municipal charges and the business becomes impossible. A boat of 30 tons, a small passenger steamer, pays on an average $70 per month for entry dues in the port of San Fernando. Add a couple of hundred dollars for annual inspection of machinery, and it will be seen that such a vessel pays close on $1000 per annum in dues alone. This, concludes "La Nación," is proof of the difficulties with which trade in the Delta has to contend, despite the fact that many circumstances point to the necessity for quite other treatment if it is ever to develop on normal lines.

RAILWAY COLONIZATION

(La Nación.—Aug. 18.)

The Administrator General of the State Railways has laid before Government a scheme for colonising the lands adjacent to the lines under his charge, urging that such a scheme is necessary to the development of traffic. "La Nación" agrees in the main with the suggestion, and points out that whilst private enterprise and the lines specially planned to this end have failed in their object, this is due to the fact that all such plans were based on the rapid valorisation of the land, and its subsequent realisation at high prices. Moderate prices ought, however, to be the object of any such scheme, and the Administrator General proposes to take over the land required at a dollar a hectarea, re-selling in agricultural lots payable in five yearly quotas, with interest at 6 per cent., and the strict obligation to live on and cultivate the land bought on these conditions.

If this eminently sensible plan is carried out, both the line and the colonist will benefit, at the same time doing away with the speculative schemes of those who propose establishing colonising enterprises that are merely founded on a plan of selling the land at fictitiously high prices. Now that the scheme of special lines destined to populate the outlying regions has been definitely abandoned, the Government cannot do better than utilise the existing State railways for a continuance of the experiment, since it risks no capital outlay and the sale of the land at cheap prices can do no harm. The lines are there, also the land, and the only thing needed is the colonist, who will undoubtedly be attracted by favourable conditions.

THE SALE OF EGGS, FOWLS, AND FISH

(La Prensa.—August 17).

A recent decree of the Municipality states that on and after the 23rd instant, the sale of eggs, poultry, fish and similar articles of food, will be carried on wholesale at the new market, Adolfo Bullrich, situated in the Paseo Colon, and "La Prensa" proceeds to give some details of the scope and objects of the new measure. It states that the sanitary inspection department will revise all the merchandise at this market before it is placed on sale. Once such inspection has been carried out, the crates or boxes will be duly labelled by means of an adhesive stamp which will bear the date of the said inspection. No goods can be taken to another market for retail despatch unless this certificate of suitability for consumption is present, nor will it be permissible for goods to be sold retail in any market unless they have first gone through the hands of the inspectors at the Adolfo Bullrich depot.

The punishment for an infringement of this decree will be a fine of $100, without prejudice to the right of the municipality to destroy the merchandise. There is moreover ample room in the new market for carrying out the inspection of all these products commodiously and at stated times. The fish market, in particular, is admirably adapted to the handling of all classes of fish on a wholesale scale, whilst there will also be stalls for retail salesmen, fitted with every convenience for keeping the goods in first rate condition. Fowls will also be very carefully revised, a permanent veterinary expert being present, aided by six employees, whilst the superintendent of markets has been asked to provide for the permanent attendance of the aviculturist attached to the department in the special building set apart for this trade.

IN THE OFFICE CHAIR

"Upon my tongue continual slanders ride,
Stuffing the ears of men with false reports."—Henry IV.

Rumour is currently referred to as "a lying jade." She is as busy as a German on the Bolsa and the Stock Exchange. "Enter Rumour, painted full of tongues," says Shakespeare's stage Direction, but sometimes Rumour speaks truly. There are three rumours, recently current in England which one hopes are true. One is a modest rumour which it is no boot to publish in the presence of German spies. If true they will learn it too soon for their comfort. Another is that the submarine (U39) which sunk the Lusitania has been captured, her officers sent to Edinburgh, tried for their crime and shot in the castle, and a third that an individual of German extraction who had served on both the Bulwark and Princess Irene, but escaped both catastrophes, was apprehended on the Queen Elizabeth and shot after trial and condemnation. All these are highly interesting and rather picturesque, the latter quality is the most suspicious feature about them.

Men, and Wind Bags.

Among the most remarkable features of the present House of Commons is the little knot of mean-spirited pacifists, the extremist Rump of rabid Radicalism and Socialism, whose purblind folly and wind swollen conceit makes them every day snap and snarl at the heels of the Government. Sir Arthur Markham, more fool than knave, and Sir Henry Dalziel, are with, but not of them. Indiscreet babblers they, but Sir William Byles, Ramsay Macdonald, Snowden, Keir Hardie, Mason and Outhwaite have the genuine whine of those covert traitors who have for years tried to thwart Government plans of defence. The imbecility of these men is staggering. In the case of Snowden, it is probably something worse, for the man has a crooked mind, but Sir William Byles repeatedly questions the Government about negotiating "the Germans out of Belgium!! Gracious Powers! Negotiate! Mr. R. Outhwaite was contemptuously rejected by several constituencies before Hanley, in a lunatic moment elected him. He might well sit for Hanwell. Ever since then his feeble mind and preposterous vanity have made him, like his fellow nulsance, Mr. D. Mason, a perfect pest to the House, an obstruction to business and a rejoicing to the enemy. Last month the Coventry Liberals, Unionists and Labour parties collectively informed Mr. Mason that they considered him a disgrace as representative. A man with self respect or a thin skin, would resign, but that is not the way of these promoted Bumbles. As long as they can get on their legs, "Mr. Speaker, Sir," their wearisome cry can only be suppressed by carrying them forcibly out. Men of this sort make one sympathise with Cromwell and his methods, the vain, impotent, noisy, bleating self-important nobodies who are the curse of Democratic assemblies, into which a small number of them generally penetrate by ill luck, persistence or fraud. If, however, these gentlemen are painful, one has the consolation of seeing the fine spirit in which Mr. Ben Tillett has harangued the workers. Not the workers generally by any means are to be blamed for slackness. In fact there is very little slackness anywhere, but there are unfortunately the usual greedy, grabbing "men of means and position," a small minority fortunately, who only see in the country's need a chance for gratifying their rapacity, or those stodgy creatures who as an indignant Yorkshire lady, farming her own land as she has sent her men folk to the war, says spent several weeks and employed many men cutting brush and fencing in their fox coverts; said foxes in the meantime playing havoc

MISSIONS TO SEAMEN CONCERT

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

The Missions to Seamen Concerts maintain a remarkable level of excellence, not of uniformity merely. One does not recollect a single case in which the function could be described, even approximately, as "a frost." Last night's was no exception, and if the audience, which was a good one, were not quite so thronged as some predecessors, it was because comparatively few ships are in port at present. Mrs. Eidelberg is always a draw. Miss Knight's songs are for their rending thoroughly appreciated, and the infectious cheerfulness and espièfnerie of Mrs. Richards never fail to hit her hearers. Last night Mr. Scannell, whose Hibernian humour of a dry and caustic quality, and Mrs. White of Quilmes, well known as a clever and sympathetic pianist, were also present, and the Rev. H. W. Brady was in good voice and his happiest vein. The programme was as follows:—Piano solo, "Retour de Printemps," Mrs. White. "True till Death," by Mr. Parry. This fine old song is seldom heard, and is of superior merit to many of those which have replaced it. "On the Mississippi," "The Silvery Moon," and "Tipperary up to date," by Mrs. H. R. K. Richards. "The Student" and "The Brahmin's Paradise," recitations by Mr. Scannell, whose restrained humour they suit admirably. "Love the Pedlar," "Little Grey Home in the West," Miss Knight. "Stone-cracker John" and "Sympathy," by the Rev. H. W. Brady. Interval. "A Geisha's Life" and "The Amorous Goldfish," by Mrs. Eidelberg. "Swallows" and "Up from Somerset," Mrs. Knight. "Gunga Din" and "A Dream," by Mr. Scannell. This vision was an unpleasant interview with St. Peter, terminating in Mr. Scannell's (provisional) perdition. "Boys in khaki, boys in blue," and "Sue, Sue, Sue," by Mrs. Richards. "Angus Macdonald," Mrs. Eidelberg, with a "Cakewalk" as encore. The concert terminated with cheers for the artists and "God Save the King" by all hands.

with the poultry round. These unpleasant features, however, on the whole, only show up the solidity and good spirit of the kingdom as a whole, and the speeches of Mr. Tim Healey, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, and other Nationalists, warm one's heart to read.

Brussels and Warsaw—A Contrast.

There is a kind of hideous humour about the German idea of conciliating Warsaw and the Poles with one hand, while Brussels and Belgium are ruthlessly ground in the talons of the other. Yesterday's reports relate further ferocities and that systematic ill-treatment of a generous and high-spirited people which is so delightful to mean and spiteful minds of the Von Bissing and German official type. It is curious and demonstrative of either a certain amazing credulity in the German composition or a cynical audacity and contempt, that they should think it is possible to deceive the Poles by their shallow artifices. The very name of Freedom or Autonomy is hateful to Prussian ears, and no sooner had the specious bait been displayed than Junkerdom, which ought to know how its Government can lie, and that there is as much chance of German autonomy for Poland as of Heaven for Wilhelm II., raised a scream of protest, pointing out how inconvenient all this would be, and how opposed to all the traditions of Prussia. Truly like Caliban, whom it resembles in its base and ugly disposition, the German Government is of "four legs and two voices, a most delicate monster."

CORDOBA NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 16.

Annual Meeting of the English Club.

The adjourned Annual General Meeting of the English Club was held at the Club Rooms on August 12th, at 9 p.m. The meeting was presided over by the Hon. Chairman, C. C. Lewis, Esq. After the reading of the minutes of the previous annual meeting, the reports of the Hon. Secretary, George Lang, Esq., and the balance sheet of the Hon. Treasurer, E. W. Marks, were read and accepted. The election of Honorary President, four new members of the Committee and three "suplentes" then took place, and the following members were duly elected: Committee, Messrs. R. J. Cochrane, C. Davis, P. P. Schultz and V. R. Sadler; Suplentes: Messrs. G. E. Morton, Arthur Hughes and A. D. Dunbar. W. Robinson was unanimously re-elected Honorary President.

Football.

The following are the results of the league games played on Sunday last: First Division: After a most exciting match the University team were successful against the champion Belgrano team by the close score of 1-0. The game was played at Sarmiento Park and Referee Robert Barnes had charge of the whistle, and as usual gave satisfaction to both teams. In the Second Division: Argentino Peñarol beat Central Cordoba 1-0; Juniors (A) defeated Alta Cordoba 3-2. Matches were also played in the third and fourth divisions. The complete tables are as follows:

Farewell to the Rev. Cyril Moore.

When the Rev. Cyril Moore took his departure from Cordoba on the Friday night train for Junin, where he will be located for the future, many of the congregation were on hand to bid the popular parson "bon voyage." Among those present at the station were: Miss Florence Morton, Miss Doris Robinson, Miss Lilly Robinson, Mrs. Talbot Wright, Miss Bessie Hughes, Mrs. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. K. Struthers, Mr. T. F. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindeman, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Babb, Mr. and Mrs. George Lang, and others.

Tennis Team Match at Cordoba A.C.

Another enjoyable tennis event took place on last Sunday at the Cordoba Athletic Club, when the team selected by the Captain defeated the Secretary's team by the score of 22 sets to 16. In the absence of the Tennis captain (G. E. Morton), who was detained at home on account of illness his team was taken in charge of by the Vice Captain (E. W. Marks). The teams were made up as follows: Captain's team: Mrs. Walters and Mr. Dunbar, Miss

LEGATION DESPATCHES

Mobilising the Nation

WONDERFUL INCREASE IN MUNITIONS OUTPUT

FIGHTING AT THE DARDANELLES

The following telegrams have been received by His Britannic Majesty's Minister at Buenos Aires from the Foreign Office, London:—

August 17th (2.35 p.m.)

August 17th.—Admiralty makes the following announcement:—"British transport 'Royal Edward' sunk by enemy submarine in Aegean Sea last Saturday morning. Transport had on board 32 military officers and 1350 troops, in addition to ship's crew of 220 officers and men. Troops consisted mainly of reinforcements for 29th Division and details for Royal Army Medical Corps. Full information not yet received, but it is known that about 600 have been saved."

August 17th (7 p.m.)

Summary of past week's events:—August 15th was the day appointed for returning National Registration form. Everyone between 15 and 65 is being now registered, with details necessary for complete mobilisation of nation. Industrial mobilisation also proceeds.

Minister of Munitions announced on the 12th that 345 establishments had been declared to be controlled under Munitions Act. As result profit of employers in these is limited, excess being paid to State and similar rules or shop customs limiting output are suspended.

Mr. Lloyd George interviewed by "Temps" said figure one representing output September, 1914, figure fifty represents output July, 1915. It will be a hundred times greater in August and curve will thenceforward rise precipitously. 12,000 skilled workers had been brought back from the front, and 40,000 new workers have been enlisted. "Times" publishes a series of articles entitled "Workshops of War," showing that enormous establishments in various parts of England are now full going concerns, with gigantic and increasing output.

Gladys Symonds and Mr. P. P. Schultz, Miss Florence Morton and Mr. E. W. Marks, Miss Gladys Guppy, and Mr. R. J. Cochrane. Secretary's team: Miss Doris Robinson and Mr. L. G. Babb, Miss Minnie O'Farrell and Mr. M. L. Zimmer, Miss Glancy and Mr. K. Struthers, Mrs. George Lang and Mr. Hudson. The ladies of the club are to be congratulated on the excellent luncheon and tea which they provided.

The luncheon and tea arrangements which were in charge of Miss Lilly Robinson, Mrs. L. G. Babb and Mrs. V. R. Sadler left nothing to be desired. It is anticipated that a monthly tournament may be arranged with luncheon served at the Club grounds.

The new tennis court is now receiving the final touches, and will be ready for play either on Sunday or a week later.

Blackheath Golf Cup Contest.

The Sub-Committee appointed for the arrangement of the contest to be held this year for the Blackheath Cup, composed of Messrs. Dunbar, Ferguson, and Harris Smith, are making preparations to have the contest held during August or September. Due to the courtesy of General Manager C. H. Pearson of the F.C. Central Argentine Railway, an extra train has been added to the time table between Cordoba and Alta Gracia, leaving Cordoba at 8.20 a.m. and returning from Alta Gracia at 6.30 p.m., making it possible for golfers to enjoy a day's golf at Alta Gracia, and return in time for dinner.

PATRIOTIC FUNDS

BRITISH WOMEN'S PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION

The monthly meeting of the Association was held on Friday morning last, at the Plaza Hotel, Mrs. Tom Bellin in the chair.

The Red Cross Fund has benefitted to the extent of $300, being the proceeds of a raffle of a horse donated by Mrs. James Taylor; the winning number was 91, and was held by Mr. José García. A vote of thanks was passed to Mrs. Taylor.

The two Bridge afternoons organised by Mrs. Gamburg produced the sum of $470 for the Officers' Families' Fund.

Mrs. Mackie has arranged an Ice Carnival to be held at the Palais Glacé, the proceeds to be for the benefit of the Red Cross Fund. On this occasion a general entrance charge will be made of $2.00; boxes will be charged for at $8 and $5 plus the general entrance fee. Further announcements in regard to the nature of the Carnival and sale of tickets will be made in due course.

The date originally suggested was Saturday, September 4th, but as this day is found to be inconvenient, another date will be arranged and advertised as soon as possible.

An earnest appeal is made to all patriotic British women to attend the meetings of the Association, which are held on the 2nd Friday of each month at the Plaza Hotel, at 10 o'clock. Many a mickle makes a muckle, and it is by the co-operation and assistance of individuals that great results can be organised and achieved.

H. E. Powell-Jones, Esq.,
Hon. Secretary,
British Patriotic Committee,
Calle Sarmiento 613,
Buenos Aires,
Argentine.

Dear Sir,

Your kind letter of the 10th March has been handed to me by His Excellency the Belgian Minister, and I have great pleasure in acknowledging the safe arrival of the generous gift of clothing which you have sent on behalf of the British Women's Patriotic Association.

The two cases reached me in good condition, and I cannot tell you how delighted I am with the contents. This splendid contribution to the Fund will go a long way to alleviate the distress of my poor compatriots and I am sure the gifts will be thoroughly appreciated. I am sending them at once to the proper quarters for distribution.

May I ask you to be good enough to convey my sincere thanks to all the members of the British Women's Patriotic Association, who have so generously contributed to the gifts. I greatly appreciate these practical proofs of their sympathy with my distressed kinsmen.

Again thanking you,
Yours very faithfully,

Ladies,

On behalf of the men of the Royal Naval Division stationed here, I beg to tender our very sincere thanks for your kind gifts which will help materially to mitigate the discomforts of camp life in this climate.

I remain, yours gratefully,

Dear Madam,

Tobacco Fund.

Please accept our sincere thanks for your generous help by sending £30 4s. 1d. to our Tobacco Fund for Soldiers and Sailors at the Front, and your wishes are having our best attention.

The aim of our Tobacco Fund is, as you know, to keep them well supplied with Cigarettes and Tobacco during the whole time of the war, and your kind interest and co-operation is very much appreciated.

Yours truly,

Mrs. R. McClure,
73, Gloucester Terrace,
Hyde Park, W.

Dear Madam,

I have very great pleasure in acknowledging the second generous contribution which you have sent for our soldiers on behalf of the British Women's Patriotic Association of Buenos Aires, comprising:—

4 scarves.
6 helmets.
2 pairs hose tops.
3 pairs knicker socks.
6 pairs socks.
2 jerseys.

Owing to the very generous support we have received from so many contributors, we have been able to overtake all the urgent requirements, and we feel confident that supplies will be forthcoming for the requisitions in front of us. The chief wants now are for shirts and socks.

Up to the present we have distributed 28,904 articles or pairs of articles, and we know that these have been deeply appreciated by the soldiers who have received them.

Please accept and convey to the ladies of the Association the grateful thanks of the Committee and myself for their renewed kindness.

Believe me, etc.,
(Sgd.) JOHN DOUGLAS,
Chairman.

February 25, 1915.

Mrs. McClure,
73, Gloucester Terrace,
Hyde Park, W.

Dear Madam,

I beg to acknowledge with very many thanks the five cases of clothing which you have sent on behalf of the British Women's Patriotic Association, Buenos Aires, which is very highly appreciated.

These cases will be sent over to Holland as soon as possible, and from thence, under the protection of the American Flag, will be conveyed into Belgium and carefully distributed in the various towns and villages by responsible committees.

Such practical expressions of sympathy with my unfortunate and suffering countrymen enable me to render very material help to those in need, and I hope I am not troubling you too much in asking you to forward the enclosed letter of thanks to the ladies of this Association.

It is very gratifying to note the widespread interest taken by the kind English people in almost every corner of the world, for donations of garments have been received from all parts of America, the United States, Canada, South Africa, Australia, India, China, Japan, Straits Settlements, etc., etc.

Thanking you for your kind interest in the matter.

I am, dear Madam,
Yours faithfully,

The Minister has given notice that the Danish Government prohibits the exportation of all any every kind of fat.

"HERALD" READERS THANKED

BY CREW OF H.M.S.' MACEDONIA

[MORE BOOKS NEEDED]

Since the latter days of February "The Herald" office has been a receiving house for reading matter to be despatched to the British warships on the South American station. Our appeal to our readers at that time received a magnificent response and supplies have arrived with automatic regularity ever since. Thanks to the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company and Nicholas Mihanovich and Company, the packages have been carried to Montevideo free of charge, and distribution from that city has been undertaken by the British Patriotic Committee of Uruguay and Messrs. Moor Brothers.

A further chapter in the story was reached on Aug. 13, when the following letter was received from Captain B. E. Evans, R.N., commander of H. M. auxiliary cruiser Macedonia:—

The Manager, "B. A. Herald."
H.M.S. Macedonia,
at sea, July 29, 1915.

Dear Sir,

The ship's Company greatly appreciated your present of reading matter.

The petty officers and men whose signatures are given below—a representative committee of the ship's company—are anxious that you should understand, by their signatures, that all portions of the ship's Company wish to be associated with this letter of thanks.

I am, dear Sir
Yours very truly,
B. S. EVANS,
Captain R.N.

WALT. J. SAUNDERS, Petty Officer — JOHN EVANS, Sbs. Corporal — W. O. MEECH, R. Marines — JOHN RILEY, Stoker — GEORGE ROBINSON, Asst. Steward — A. H. HARDACRE, Seaman.

The letter speaks for itself. No doubt many of those who contributed to the "Macedonia" gift will be glad to send us further supplies, while others who have not yet despatched their surplus reading matter will now be glad to do so. Theedium of long spells at sea can only be relieved by the provision of a sufficiency of books and magazines to occupy the spare time of the men on board the vessels engaged in the present patrol work.

H.M.S. GLASGOW AT MONTEVIDEO

BANQUET TO OFFICERS AND CREW.

H.M.S. Glasgow was at Montevideo on August 11, and left within the 24 hours. The far sailing and hard fighting cruiser will it is said, shortly leave for home, and on the occasion of this visit, officers and crew were publicly entertained by the British community with the hearty co-operation of the allied residents. At the banquet were present with the British Minister, the representatives of France, Belgium, and Russia, the Italian Minister being unable to come owing to family bereavement in the war. The principal members of the British colony were present including those prominent in commercial and banking circles. Sir Reginald Tower sent a telegram regretting his inability to be present. Numerous patriotic toasts were given and honoured with the greatest enthusiasm and at the conclusion the national hymns of the allies were vigorously rendered. All the officers were in full dress and their pleasant manners and those of the men made the most agreeable impression everywhere. "Our own" ship, left as stated, again yesterday, con rumbo desconocido.

ENTERTAINMENT AT THE AMERICAN CHURCH HALL

"JUDITH OF BETHULIA."

Last evening the American Church hall, Corrientes, was filled to over-flowing by an interested audience, who had gone there to see a most remarkable film, "Judith of Bethula" and to enjoy the musical programme which opened the programme and filled up the interval.

The film was one which favourably competes with the best productions such as "The Last Days of Pompeii" and the like. It is a thrilling story of ancient days and perfectly produc-ed and its interest and length can be gathered from the fact that it occu-pied, apart from the musical items, the whole evening, in the giving.

It was excellently received, as such a masterpiece of photographic art deserves to be.

The musical programme consisted of pianoforte selections by Miss Nen-mann, who also supplied the inci-dental music for the film and of songs by Mrs. J. B. Munks. The lat-ter was in excellent voice and her singing greatly appreciated. Owing to illness Mrs. Jessie Pamplin was unable to sing.

SCOTTISH RED CROSS FUND

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY OF THE RIVER PLATE THANKED.

The following letter acknowledg-ing the proceeds of the Scottish Red Cross Concert has been received by the Society and has been sent to "The Herald" for publication, as it is thought by the Committee that mem-bers, wellwishers, and all who have helped would be glad to learn how very much the efforts made in Bue-nos Aires are appreciated at home.

The St. Andrew Society,
65 Castle Street,
Edinburgh,
June 22, 1915.

David C. Anderson Esq.
President

St. Andrew's Society of the River Plate.

My Dear Sir,

I have to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 22nd ult. with draft for £108.2.9 on the London and River Plate Bank, Ltd., London, being net proceeds of your concert held on April 17. In accordance with your expres-sed wish we are sending this sum to the Treasurers of the Scottish Branch of the British Red Cross Society, and shall write to you further as to its allotment.

I need scarcely say that the help you have given and are giving to this special work is greatly appreciated by all, and we of the St. Andrew's So-ciety, Edinburgh, are delighted to be the medium of communication. You have already equipped two beds in France, and we think it probable that our Scottish Branch will want to de-vote your present remittance to the equipment of two beds for Scottish in-valid soldiers in Glasgow. However, you will hear definitely as to this.

We thing that the arrangements for your concert must have been very complete, to become such a splendid success. All who took part in the af-fair will be gratified to learn that they have been the means of alleviating the sufferings of many of our brave Scottish lads, who have fought so well in this war. It is a comfort to think that by the best of medical care and by good nursing so many of our wounded are able to return to the front when called upon, or (in the cases of permanent disablement as soldiers) to take up other duties. The four beds established by your Society will be the means of restoring to health a large number of our good men before the war is over.

Your gift will of course receive due acknowledgment from the Red Cross Society. In the meantime, please ac-cept the thanks of my colleagues and myself for your very welcome and timely gift.

Believe me sincerely yours.

DAVID MACRITCHIE,
President of the St. Andrew Society.

Donations will be received and ac-knowledged by Mr. W. Watson, Hon. Treasurer of the British Society, 536 Cangallo, and it is requested that they may be forwarded without un-necessary delay. It was hoped that the money needed might be raised within a month, and if this hope is to be realised no effort must be re-laxed now.

A man who was very vain of his personal appearance went to the doc-tor one day and asked him to explain a singular circumstance. "Doctor," he said, "my hair is perfectly black, but my whiskers are turning white rapidly. Now, how do you account for that?" "Well," replied the phy-sician, "I don't know, unless it is be-cause your jaws have worked a great deal harder than your brains."

WOMEN AND A WORLD'S FAIR

No. 1.

"Lovely Woman at the Exposition" is the title of an article written by Frances A. Groff, for the "Sunset Magazine," and it contains much that is interesting about the work of women exhibited at the San Francisco Wonderland.

At first the writer questioned herself owing to the "keen flick of the editor's whiplash." "This," he said, "is a contemporaneous position. We have heard much of late of women's progress. What can you show for yourselves? Go and find out." Hence this question: "Apologist or champion?" And her answer: "Champion, if we haven't a rag or a stick or a stone!" The writer found comfort in the last word, for she saw some sculpture on the outside of the Exposition—wonderful work of women. "All were of a respectful commanding quality, but Mrs. Burrough's "Morgiana"—well—men had done beautiful and sublime things, but she was a beautiful and sublime, and subtle, Morgiana Ali Baba's faithful slave, who smothered thirty-seven thieves in the fumes of hot oil! She appears embracing the cover of one of the fateful jars, a still smile on her face; no mere man could have so blended her loyalty, craftiness, and charm."

Then the writer went within to hunt for "lovely woman's" work. She found, she says: "Nothing in Machinery. Nothing in Mines. I had counted, at least, on Dr. Rose Burgham, of the Yellow Aster. Nothing in Transportation. Yet Woman had invented the first vehicle, the perambulator! Nothing in Agriculture. No evidence there had ever been a human female on the farm; and later, . . . the only hints of woman on the farm were a few jams and jellies and a toy model of a lady in slippers ease on a farmhouse porch, rocking a baby."

"The Palace of Food Products—not a woman entrant there? The spirit of championship was fighting a death struggle. Liberal Arts? Nothing worth mentioning. Manufactures? Nothing. Varied Industries? Quite a bit. I began to revive. At Education and Social Economy . . . few entries in women's names. Horticulture promised quite a story, and Fine Arts confided the secret of a woman's room. It was, upon the whole, a frosty outlook. Then, suddenly . . . 'Lovely Woman' sprang up everywhere, bringing with her light, warmth, colour, gaiety. She came with her sacred, dear, domestic virtues, to be hostess in the state buildings of the south and east. She brought her achievements as voter and business woman to her reign in the western state buildings. She filled the Palace of Food Products with the tempting odours of her cooking. She took possession of the Palace of Education, to advise, instruct, uplift. She blossomed among the flowers in Horticulture; she was Ceres among the fruits. She officiated in a hundred capacities in Manufactures, Varied Industries and Liberal Arts. She helped her husband in the exhibit booth when she was not running the booth alone! She brought her young boys to Machinery Hall and understood the technical explanations. In dignity and broadcloth she welcomed all comers to the California Host Building. Her countenance of wholesome hospitality beamed in the Y.W.C.A. She shuffled on her little sandalled feet in the Japanese tea-house. Her camera-shy face was to be seen of all who frequented the Chinese Pavilion. She rang the bells of a thousand cash registers. The keys of the office piano hummed under her nimble fingers. She presided at the telephone switchboard. She examined visiting babies and gave medical advice to mothers. She waited in the cafés. She sang in front of the Tower of Jewels on opening day. One hundred thousand of her rubbed elbows with one hundred thousand of him in the crowd that reached from the tower to the gates. She sold buttermilk and peanuts and souvenir watches and postcards and chewing gum from gaily ornamented kiosks. She gyrated in the hula-hula. She bound up wounds in the Emergency Hospital. She answered a million questions. She asked ten million. Wrapped in a serape, she lectured in the Grand Canyon. She trumpeted from the balcony of Alt Nuremburg. She was a giant policewoman in Toyland. She danced in the Jintown dance halls of the '49 camp. She trained leopards and lions and put horses through their paces in Selig's Wild Animal Show. Her veiled face, bold-eyed, looked out from the "Mysterious Orient." She sat, white-uniformed, silent and antiseptic, behind glass partitions in the "Infant Incubator" exhibit. She was a geisha girl in "Japan Beautiful." She was a cow-girl in the 101 Ranch. She was a window dresser for the Japanese Government. She told fortunes. She dived. She made candles. She rolled cigarettes. She mounted great fish for souvenirs. She was a silver-smith. She was a modeler. She was a bacteriologist. She was the manager of a mine.

Every day, in the shifting kaleidoscope of the Exposition, Lovely Woman appears in some new and startling phase. She rounds the race-track with an auto-devil. She flies over the Exposition with Christofferson. She is ever the bright spot, the attractive bit of colour, decorating and adorning life. Arrayed in velvet, fur, jewels, and plumes, she is the dominating spectator at all the great events. She takes part in some of these events. She comes from the rural districts of California, bearing violets in her arms. So throughout the Fairtime Lovely Woman will be there, brightening, vivifying, serving, amusing, beguiling, instructing.

What of Lovely Woman's work? What shows she to justify herself?

As exhibits were gradually set in place woman's work appeared so inextricably mingled with that of man it was nearly impossible to say where one left off and the other began. Masculine threads and feminine were all woven in and out of the modern social fabric. Then I re-discovered something I had forgotten. Governments, states, industries, corporations, were without gender; but the control of them had been so long in the hands of man we had grown accustomed to thinking of them as his sole estate. The woven silks and cottons, the knitted silks and wools, the laces, the pottery, the tapestries, the jewellery and ornaments, whether machine-made or hand-wrought, exhibited in the names of Governments, states, corporations, and individual men, were either partly or wholly the work of women. To cite one instance—the laces exhibited by one man and one firm of men had back of them the skilled labour of sixteen hundred women. Those rich, hand-embroidered kimonos, pictures and screens—in the Japanese exhibit in the Palace of Manufactures, how much woman's work is back of them? Truly, as man slowly, surely, filched from Lovely Woman her industries and took them out of the home, just so slowly and surely she is following them and him out into the world, for, though he may think he can get along without her, she is not happy except by his side. Not only in America, but in the older countries she is going out. I talked with men and women from Asia and Europe, and found that oceans could not stop an idea. As the palaces filled with exhibits, on every hand and from every lip came evidence of woman's part in them. Think then of all the household tasks she performs, here absolutely unrepresented. Think of her arduous labours on the farm, and nothing to show at the end of years made of days except a few jellies and a model lady in a toy rocking chair!

Fully half the world's labour must be performed by woman. Yet when we spell Labour with a capital L, we think of Man Labour and not of that mass of woman labour unpaid, unrecognized, or underpaid and underestimated. With Labour with a capital L, the law of associative suggestion brings the word Capital with a capital C. That furnishes the key to the situation. Capital with a capital C is Man Capital. That gives him the supremacy; that subordinates her—a situation not likely greatly to change, for many reasons.

Working along the line of delving beneath the surface, of finding the woman back of the machine and the fabric and the man, I came upon exhibits of the telephone and the telegraph, the sewing machines, the paper patterns, the adding and calculating and book-keeping machines, the electrical companies. Behind all these man exhibits my mental vision beheld a mighty army of women. In a world chorus the sweet voice of "Central" was heard and my ears were deafened with the whir and buzz and click of millions of machines with women and girls sitting at them all day long.

The pitifully small part that women were playing in the Exposition and the world was becoming wonderfully large. And the men see it. That Exposition is making us all think; it is directing our thoughts into new channels; it is revising many of our ideas, for it is cosmos in a nutshell. I talked at different times to broad-minded generous men who believe Lovely Woman should be allowed to do any work she is capable of doing, without repression or thwarting or interdiction; and three of them said, "Woman made the Exposition." This view I could not share; those glittering palaces were almost entirely the product of man's planning and were erected in the sweat of his brow. Yet women may have inspired the architects, may have eliminated from their lives the small worries and obstacles, just as the workmen's freedom to do their work was made possible by the women who stayed at home and swept and furnished the house and cooked three meals a day and washed and dressed the children.

Women's careers are subordinated to their glorified potentialities as mothers of the race; and even when they do not function they are, at best, incapable of man's greatest achievements, greatest daring, greatest brutalities. When it comes to cities that float on the wave and sky-penetrating towers and monstrous and soul-deadening machinery and all the panoply and horror of war, women can only regard men in marvel, worship and fear, as demi-gods and semi-devils; and when they look at that beautiful Exposition feel something akin to adoration for the men who built it. And when man takes a thinking look at the work Lovely Woman has done within the Exposition walls, and what she does outside, and then thinks of how she tecters around on her high heels and wears skirts that wrap about her in a wind and changes styles every week and powders her nose and has hair to do up and no pockets to put things in and is constantly trying to please him in looks and words and deeds, he must think woman a wonderful sex, which she is. In fact, there is only one sex more wonderful!

No, women did not make the Exposition, but they helped; and speaking of them in this connection let us drop the abstract woman behind the fabric and the machine and the man; and take up the concrete woman who helped and is helping to fashion the Exposition.

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

A masculine correspondent says in a contemporary, Financially, woman is doing well out of the war, and looks like doing better. It has given her an industrial start. If she is any sort of an efficient at all, Armageddon is her time to prove it. Within two weeks of its commencement 22,000 women in England alone had volunteered for jobs left vacant by men. Exchanges and labour bureaux are now at work adding to the number. Where the work is technical, facilities for becoming acquainted with it are offered; and where the woman shows capacity she is paid on the same scale as the man whom she has supplanted. Women clerks have been engaged in thousands in London, and in the big industrial centres. They are being employed in increasing numbers in the railway offices, and as bus and tram conductors. The woman policeman has arrived, and the woman taxi-driver and railway-guard are coming. Regiments of women who never had a profession before are doing well and spending happy and interesting lives as nurses. Up to the beginning of last month over 1700 women had got well paid jobs in ammunition factories. The shopwalker is being ousted in large quantities; likewise the waiter, the hall porter, the butler, the footman, the boots and other anomalies and excrescences. Very few of these jobs are going to revert to man when the war ends, if woman shows that she is capable of holding them.

Mrs. Margaret Ash has been employed for the last fifty-one years in the Treasury Department at Washington.

Mrs. Harriet C. Adams, the noted ployed for the last fifty-one years in tains four times in the saddle.

In Victoria public opinion is advanced enough to warrant the formation of a Council of Sex Hygiene and Morality. Its objects are to advance right teaching on sex, and combat adverse social influences. Affiliated with it are the Victorian Lady Teachers' Association, Women's Christian Temperance Union and Victorian Neglected Children's Aid Society.

Miss Shirley Martyn, an attractive young lady of good address, recently offered her services as a motor-van driver in London, to replace some man at the war. She was accepted, and a new occupation for women was created that day. Miss Martyn found the men motor-van drivers respectful and kindly.

Mrs. Belle Van Dorn Harbert, a practical farmer of Colorado, is the president of the International Congress of Farm Women. The object of the congress is to help women to a higher statue and more consideration in country work, where the life has often degenerated into mere hopeless drudgery. It has asked for the establishment of a farm woman's bureau in the Agricultural Department at Washington.

Miss Edith Downing, an English sculptor, has modelled a charming set of doll's head and limbs, which is being made of china and wax, with stuffed body, by the workers in the toy factory started by the East London Federation of the Suffragettes. This doll is entirely English in manufacture, and its appearance is essentially so.

Roumanian women rejoice in the decoration of Madame Eugenie Jancovlesco, President of the Roumanian Woman Suffrage Society, who has received the Bene Merenti, first-class, in recognition of her literary and social work. She has been devoting herself to the care of orphan girls, and is directress of the only school for them in Roumania.

Land of Lilliput.

Conducted by Egeria

My dear Lilliputians,

Of course you all know the British National Anthem, also the Argentine National Anthem; and since the War, you probably know that of Belgium, and maybe, of the Allies altogether.

Do you ever think why nations have their own particular anthems, or a certain song set to sacred music, whereby each nation may publicly give utterance to loyalty and patriotic sentiment? "God Save the King" and "Rule, Britannia" are, of course, sacred to all Britishers; and it is said that it will take a long time before "It's a long way to Tipperary" is forgotten after the War; as it is the ideal marching song, which the others are not; and it is "a little masterpiece in its way"; besides, it is a real soldier's song. There is a great deal of doubt as to the authorship of the music of "God Save the King," which came into public favour at the same time as "Rule, Britannia," in 1740, the latter being written by Dr. Arne, as the finale to his masque of "Alfred." But the other nations—Germany, Denmark, Switzerland, and at one time Russia—have all made use of the same music for the singing of their national anthems. The air of "God Save the King" was sung as the German National Anthem under the title of "Hail, thou with victory crowned," but it is only "Die Wacht am Rhein," now, I suppose, for them. The poem of "Die Wacht am Rhein" was born in 1840, when the left bank of the Rhine was threatened by the French troops, and the music of Carl Wilhelm is that to which it is sung; but it only became popular in 1870.

Perhaps the most stirring war song which is also the National Anthem, is that of France. "La Marseillaise," so-called because it was first sung in Paris by the battalion of volunteers from Marseilles. Its composer was Rouget de Lisle, a young captain of engineers in the French army; and the year was 1792. It is the most glorious of war songs, and it not only inspires the soldiers to war; but Governments with alarm on account of its revolutionary associations; and for a long time it was not permitted to sing it in public throughout Europe.

The national hymn of Belgium is "La Brabanconne," and it, like the French anthem, had its origin in stirring times, namely, the revolution of 1830, when Belgium separated from Holland, and became an independent state. The words, written by a soldier called Fenneval, who lost his life fighting near Antwerp, in 1830, are better than the music, although the work of a trained musician (Francois Van Campenhout), which proves perhaps that the martial or warlike spirit of the soldier can produce more suitable music for soldiers than can the professor. Russia's National Anthem is "God the All-Terrible," the work of Lvov, composed in 1833, up to which time the tune and time of "God Save the King" had served Russia.

The Austrian hymn had Haydn as its composer, and the time was in 1797, when the country was astir over the French outburst. And this is also used by the Germans as a patriotic song beginning, "Deutschland, Deutschland, uber Alles." The aged Haydn was on his deathbed when the French occupied Vienna in 1809. His last performance was to play over the hymn three times, his servants carrying him to the piano. Now you will see that a war song and a National Anthem are not the same thing at all except in the case of the "Marseillaise." And it is much better not, because war is uncivilised, and when on public occasions the national song is sung, it is better that it should convey patriotism and loyalty to one's country without that warlike spirit which suggests that the British bulldog is going to bite all who venture into his yard, don't you think so?

And now the poor Belgians cannot worship in their churches or sing their national hymn; for the Germans are their masters. Freedom has gone—ground out of the country by the Prussian machine which is still grinding, grinding—not only Belgium, alas! May it soon be stopped.

Now here is your story, which is called—

KING WIND'S FROLIC.

King Wind was in a mischievous frame of mind, and he bellowed and roared like a mad bull and rushed along at a terrible pace. "I'll make somebody smart to-day before I have finished with them," he said in his mirth, and he roared again louder than before, frightening everybody almost out of their senses.

The leaves fled in all directions out of his path, the trees bent their bodies, and groaned aloud in pain, because King Wind stung them so much. Their branches waved to and fro in utter bewilderment, striking and scratching each other as they did so.

Some chickens had been lazily pecking away on the hillside before King Wind became frolicsome, and as he raced down upon them, shrieking with delight, they rushed off helter-skelter to get out of his way; some had trousers on and some had none, and those with them seemed in a terrible state. Their trousers flapped and banged round their legs until they didn't know what to make of it all, and as they rushed to and fro in a terrible state of excitement, old King Wind laughed aloud in delight at having made the poor little chickens so frightened.

"Ho! Ho! Ho!" roared King Wind. He was so amused that he couldn't contain himself, and yelled at the top of his voice in delight, at which a bough broke off a tree and fell into a pond in which some ducks were swimming, and frightened them so much that they fell over each other in their excitement and eagerness to get out of the way of the monster. A short distance along the road the windows of a cottage rattled so violently that Master Thomas Cat, who was asleep in front of the fire, woke up in a terrible state of mind, jumped quite three feet in the air out of sheer fright, and rushed off down the cellar into the darkness with his tail in the air.

"He! he! he! this is lovely!" said the Wind, as he looked through the window, and saw Master Thomas Cat scampering away, and again the windows rattled as he laughed, frightening Master Thomas so badly that he wished he had never been born. He ran down the cellar steps at such a rate that he got his feet mixed up at the fourth step and fell headlong to the bottom, hitting each step with a bump, and at last dropped into a bucket of water standing at the side of the last step. This sudden water shock brought Master Thomas round a bit, and he climbed out of the water looking awfully miserable because he had wetted his best Sunday suit right through.

"Oh, dear! oh, dear!" said the Wind. "What a commotion I am making all over the place. I will give them a rest for a little while," and he chuckled to himself, highly amused at all the excitement he had caused.

There was a lull in the storm, and everybody and everything breathed freely for a time. Poor Master Thomas was in a very bad temper, and commenced at once to lick off all the water he could, so as to make himself presentable to the family. He felt very sore at having to spend all the afternoon in cleaning himself, and had to be very careful how he licked, for his poor back and head were covered with bruises through bumping down the stairs. He felt so miserable that he hadn't the heart even to chase a little mouse who ran in front of him just then.

While Master Thomas was grumbling away to himself, Fido, the dog, was having rather a bad time with the children. They could not go out to play because the wind was blowing so hard, so they turned their attention to Fido. He had to sit up and beg for a piece of sugar for ever such a long time. After that they bandaged one eye up, and one of his legs, and then put the bandaged leg in a sling, and made him sit up like that for quite two minutes. Poor Fido felt so miserable. He thought they were tired of him then and tried to get out while they looked through the window, but they were after him like a shot and treated him again very badly. They pulled his ears, his whiskers, pushed him over, tickled him in the ribs, and made him cry out by their tricks. He began to get a bit cross, and no wonder, for the children teased him until he didn't know what he was doing. He tried so hard to stop them by talking to them in dog language, but they didn't understand what he said, so he caught hold of one of them gently with his mouth. The child screamed with fright and said Fido had bitten her, but he had done nothing of the kind. The child's mother didn't think so, however, and poor Fido got a whipping and was sent out of doors to get over his bad temper. That was too bad, for he was quite happy until the children teased him. He found himself out in the cold, and went off down the garden grumbling that he was a badly used dog. As he was walking quietly along, someone opened a door and threw a nice bone at him, hitting him just on the side, near the tail. Poor Fido was so alarmed that he gave a terrific bound and then turned round quickly to find out what was the matter. Seeing something sticking out at the end of his body, he made a grab at it, and missed, but kept on trying, spinning round and round after this little thing like a top, until he became so giddy that he fell over on to a chicken that stood by laughing at him for being so stupid; for he had been rushing round after his tail.

The chicken was laughing so heartily that tears ran down his cheeks and prevented him from seeing Fido falling. When he fell over with Fido on the top of him he gave one long screech of surprise, and startled the dog so much that he got up on to his feet, and with his ears pricked up, sat down to think what this awful noise was. In front of him, racing along, and wobbling from side to side as it ran, was the chicken, shrieking at the top of his voice.

As he watched it still wobbling along he espied the bone lying a few yards away, and immediately snapped it up, and ran off to a quiet place on the roadside to enjoy his meal.

King Wind woke up from his short sleep feeling quite pleased with himself, and looking round to see whom he could tease saw Fido worrying a large bone on the side of the road. He smiled, then laughed, and then raced down the road toward little Fido with a terrific screech in all directions. Fido was so frightened at the awful noise that he dropped his bone and raced down the road as fast as he could, followed by this roaring monster. Oh, how frightened he was! In his hurry to get away he tried to run a little faster, but in doing so fell over his feet, turned six somersaults, and at last fell in a great puddle of "slosh" left by the road-sweeper on the side of the road.

Poor Fido! He crawled out of the puddle covered with astonishment and mud, and sat down on the pavement to think things over. When everything was quite quiet he found himself alone in the street. He looked down and counted his feet to see whether he had lost any, and then turned round to see whether his tail was in the same place as it was when he became so alarmed and rushed off down the road, leaving his bone behind him. Finding everything all right, he crawled miserably along to his kennel to try and get rid of the sticky mud.

In a tiny little cottage down the road two little children huddled together over the dying embers of a small fire.

"What an awful wind it has been," said their mother, "and so cold, too," and she looked at her two children trying to get warm over the tiny fire. "Here," she said, "run out and find some wood now the wind has dropped. It has blown so hard that it must have broken some branches off the trees."

They jumped up, pleased at the chance of running out to get warm, and in a short time came back with quite a lot of dry wood. Mother took it from them, and made a lovely fire, and soon they all sat round, warming themselves, while mother told them nice stories.

Creeping by the window slowly and quietly came King Wind, and as he looked in he felt quite pleased.

"How strange it is," he said. "I thought my boisterous fun was going to upset everybody and make them cross; but I see that I have been the means of providing warmth and comfort for these poor people."

He came up to the other cottage, and there was Master Thomas Cat, perfectly dry, asleep again in front of the fire; while Fido, in the kennel, was eating his bone in perfect contentment.

And King Wind, seeing everybody happy and calm, crept away to sleep.

With love to you all, Lilliputians,

EGERIA.

TO GERMANY.

Germany, in arrogance of thy folly
Pause, and look around:
Strewn at thy feet, thy friends,
Before thee, armed in wrath
Those thou hast made thy foes!
Those that wished thee well, but Naught wouldst thou heed, thy pride hath blinded thee.

Thy hope—One onward rush
Through hearts and homes of unoffending souls.

Destruction and barren waste,
Burnt hearts and ruined homes
Still following in thy wake.
Thy pride shall be thy ruin, sinking thee

Unto the bottommost depths,
Crushing thee as thou hast crushed
The innocent ones,
When wilt thou stay thy hand and cease

Thy senseless murders on the outraged world?

But nay! Thy pride hath blinded thee, and thou

Must rush onward to thy fall. . . .

Which speedily awaits thee!

See glittering in the hands of enemies,—

God's vengeful sword
Thine hour shall come, and soon

And ever stand recorded in the page of history,

Thy deeds of shameful guilt.

And thou shalt fall hurled to thy just deserts

By the world remembered
Only with shuddering horror.

Dance in Aid of the Red Cross.

On Saturday night a dance was arranged by the Port Athletic Club. The proceeds are to be devoted towards the Red Cross Funds. It is not yet known what this amount is but no doubt it will be considerable, as a large number of tickets were sold and there were more people present than on former occasions. The decoration of the hall had been left in the hands of Mr. Mortimer and looked very nice with the rows of different coloured flags stretched across the room. The stage, on which was the orchestra, was hung with the English flags as well as with those of Argentina. The refreshments were given by various people and sold in aid of the funds. As on the former occasion the catering was in the hands of Messrs. Pollard, Bennett, Simpson, Robertson and Haliwell assisted by Messrs. Bennett Anker and Simpson. Flowers were sold by Lizza Robertson, and a cake bearing the Red Cross Flag was raffled for over $20 and won by Miss Laspuir. All the committee worked hard to make the dance successful. A large number of people were present from Bahia Blanca, a special train taking them back at 3 a.m. in the morning. The pleasure of many was somewhat marred by the notice that within an hour of the dance commencing a robbery had taken place in one of the railway company's houses. Some people coming to the dance saw three had tied the servant up before stealing everything of value they could take away. The alarm was at once given, so that the police were on the spot within an hour. In the intervals between the dances various songs were given. Mr. Mortimer sang "Farmyard Ragtime"; Miss Thelma Simpson, "My Treasure," and Mr. Alfredo Duc, whose voice sounded very nice in the large hall sang "After the Ball" in Spanish and received an encore.

Items in Brief.

Within the last few days several men dressed as Priests have been going about the streets and to different houses asking for charity, but it now appears that these people are not genuine priests and have no connection with the Catholic Church or authority for what they are doing.

A policeman living in Villa Mitre has been arrested and imprisoned for thrashing his 9 year old son with a belt, the buckle of which was used on the boy head, making some very nasty wounds.

A new sub-comisario has recently been appointed here in the police force, and much to the surprise of the men on duty at night they were all visited by him. Five of those on duty were found asleep and were at once discharged.

During the first six months of the year the exportation of cereals from the Republic has been 2,287,260 tons of wheat, out of which 841,692 tons have been sent from Bahia Blanca, or 36.8 per cent of the total amount, and out of 476,017 tons of oats exported from the country, 80.7 per cent of the total, 284,002 tons have gone from here.

The registration of foreigners closes to-day and up to yesterday the total amount who had taken advantage of this was 87.

The offices of the District Farming Expert have now been moved from Calle Soler 377 to Calle Alsina 221 (at the side of the Tribunales).

The Police Station at Ingeniero White does not seem to be improved in anyway. The four tins of kerosene given by the residents have long since become exhausted and no other steps have been taken for the lighting of the building. The brooms in use are said to be made out of tamarijka shoots although according to common reports the B. Blanca Municipality have voted the sum of $2,000 per month towards this place. The policemen are still obliged to do their work on foot as no horses have yet been provided to them.

Fire in a Flour Mill.

Late last night, the alarm was given that a fire had broken out in the Flour Mill known as the Molina America, which is situated below the Southern Railway near the level crossing leading into Villa Mitre. The firemen were shortly afterwards on the spot, and subsequently they succeeded in putting out the fire, which broke out in the top story caused, it is said, by a short circuit in the installation of the building. Four lines of hose pipe were put on and the fire was eventually got under before it got to the machinery in the lower part of the mill. The manager and watchman have been arrested pending inquiries into the cause of the fire.

Fatal Accident on Board Ship.

On Sunday evening last as the carpenter of the s.s. Tavian from London was fixing up the shifting boards in the ship's hold in order that the work of loading might be begun there on the following morning, he had the misfortune to slip and fall to the bottom of the hold. He died shortly afterwards from the injuries received and was buried in the cemetery here. His name was Eynon Philips, age 38 years and living in Cardigan, Wales. He was a widower and leaves three young children, for whom a collection has been "got up" around the ships and at the seamen's concert last Thursday.

Visits of the Deputies Escobar and Arce.

These two gentlemen, who have taken such interest in pushing forward the question of the sale of the fiscal lands in Ingeniero White, arrived here yesterday and accompanied by Mr. Coleman and others from Bahia Blanca paid a visit to Cuatrecaseros. They returned in the afternoon by special train on the Pacific line. In the evening a banquet was held in the South American hotel. To-day a banquet is being given to these two visitors and several others from Bahia Blanca by the Port residents at the Bar Ida, the arrangements being in the hands of the South American Hotel.

Bahia Blanca Volunteers.

The following have left Bahia Blanca since the outbreak of the war, in order to volunteer for active service: W. Adamson (555, H. D. Cycle Corps, Dundee), R. Barker, Berry, C. Billings (Sapper, Royal Engineers), V. C. Bovet (Artists' Corps), E. J. E. Boys H. Campbell (Royal Field Artillery), J. Checkley (Royal Engineers), Clark, N. Cobbold, F. H. Colvin, P. Crane (Sapper, 55686 Royal Engineers), E. S. David (Welsh Guards), J. S. David (Welsh Guards), L. Dennis (1476, 3rd Hussars, 24th Service Batt.), B. Dyke (Sapper, Royal Engineers), W. Ellis (53276, Motor Transport Corps), P. Gallagher (Sapper, 55788, Royal Engineers), W. Green (Hon. Artillery Corps), J. Greig, A. G. Hall (Royal Engineers), A. District Notes.

At the auction sale held on Thursday, at Villa Borden, fat half-bred cows were sold at from $116 to $162 each, cows for fattening $88 to $98, steers from eighteen months to two years fetched from $114 to $127 each, half bred Jersey steers $120, criollo bullocks $123.50, wethers for killing $12.50, the total amount of the sales being $28,718. The next sale of livestock will be held there on September 9th.

The men sent from Port Militar to Choele to help the residents in the recent floods there have now returned on the government tug "Ona."

At a bazaar recently held in Santa Rosa in aid of the poor people of the town, the sum of nine hundred dollars was obtained.

A committee of ladies in General Pico have applied to the Public Authorities for a grant of ten thousand dollars for the building of a Centeno Hospital in that town, consisting of thirty beds. They have also asked for a monthly grant to be made to this building when it is completed.

A gentleman of the name of Harris, accompanied by a friend, was badly hurt by his motor-car turning over between Quemu Quemu and General Rico.

In the neighbouring estancia of General Alca, foot and mouth disease has broken out very badly amongst the cattle there. The Municipality of the town have asked the Minister of Agriculture to send a veterinary surgeon to that part in order to help them to combat the sickness.

The residents of the town of Gonzalez Chaves have asked the Government for permission to form a municipality. There are over four thousand inhabitants, and the town is a big business centre.

CONCORDIA NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 11.

Weather.

Conditions at present are somewhat changeable, fine weather on the whole but at times cold and cloudy days follow north winds. Last Saturday was so depressing on account of the damp north wind that very few turned out to the tennis courts, those that did giving up after a few games. Rain that was badly wanted fell heavily last week and apparently there will be more.

Dance.

The first dance to be given by the new Dance and Concert Committee will be held on Saturday in the premises of the Argentine Social Club. As the price of admission is quite reasonable good support is promised. Part of the Imperial Club Orchestra will play the dance music.

Tennis Tournament.

The American tournament held by the Tennis Club is almost finished, play taking place during the last two weeks-ends. Miss Ida Birdsall and Mr. Williams ran out winners of the doubles, though they were hard pressed for points by Messrs. Fiedler and Harrison. The singles will be finished by next Saturday. Three were in the running but Mr. Fiedler resigning owing to a "tennis elbow" took away a certain amount of interest. Some good matches were watched at times by a large gathering of enthusiasts but it must be said that play never reached a high standard.

Military Matters.

Over a week ago two trains of Infantry and officers from Buenos Aires arrived in Concordia and proceeded later to Kilometro 6 on the N.E.A. Ry. for shooting practice. The major portion of the soldiers came from the Military School of shooting in Buenos Aires. Several big guns were taken out also as a month's training will be gone through. It was reported that manoeuvres would take place later round Concordia but they have been cancelled, it is said, on account of the expenses in bringing up troops.

Bishop Every's Visit.

The Right Rev. Bishop Every paid a visit to Concordia last Saturday and held Divine Service in St. Thomas's Church on Sunday in the morning and evening. His many friends were glad to see him looking so well. On Monday Mr. and Mrs. Sketch kindly lent their house where a reception was held, many invitations being issued by the Rev. Mr. Bate. Amongst those who were present were, Mesdames MacKenzie, Bell, Palmer, Dickinson, Fiedler, A. G. Walton, G. Walton, Cain, Neville, Petersen, McClean, Lammernuir; Misses Birdsall, and Roberts; and Messrs. Paterson, Williams, Bell, Colls, Dickinson, Neville, Bentzen, Petersen, G. Walton, Fiedler and others whose names have not been recorded. A most enjoyable afternoon was spent. Miss Roberts and Messrs. Bentzen, Williams and Colls kindly provided music.

H.M.S. Glasgow.

In view of the arrival of the Glasgow at Montevideo it was suggested by Mr. J. Petty that as a small recognition of the splendid services the officers and men of the Glasgow have rendered to King and Country gifts of tobacco and literature would be gladly received by him to be forwarded to H.B.M. Minister, Sir Reginald Tower who kindly promised to send them to their destination. The support given to the idea was most satisfactory a large assortment of cigarettes and cigars being forwarded to Buenos Aires.

BRITISH TRADE IN ARGENTINA

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ANNUAL MEETING

Addresses by Sir Reginald Tower and Mr. Hope Gibson

The annual general meeting of the British Chamber of Commerce in the Argentine Republic was held on Friday afternoon in Prince George's Hall. Mr. Hope Gibson, the Chairman, presided over the meeting. The agenda consisted of the financial report, an address by the Chairman, some remarks by Sir Reginald Tower, British Minister in the Republic, the election of new Council members, auditors and general business.

The meeting was attended by some 60 members, representing the most important of British commercial houses in the Argentine.

The Chairman, in the course of his address, said that they met under circumstances that were unprecedented in the history of mankind. Millions of men were engaged in the most bloody struggle the world had ever known, and millions more were ready, or nearly ready, to enter the conflict. The narrative of the atrocities and of the outrages that had been committed not only on combatants but on civilians, and evidence of which had been but lately supplied to members of this Chamber, was so horrible that it was almost possible to conceive that some of the very inmates of Hell have been let loose in Europe. But that was not a subject on which to dilate. When men were in grim earnest they did not talk. Britons were in grim earnest, and if fate had willed it that some of them could not take part in the bodily struggle it was for those to help their kinsmen and friends engaged in it by every means in their power. That brought him to the subject that remarks had been made that the Chamber had had nothing to say in the public press about its doings in relation to the war. He wondered if there could be among them men who would actually advocate the Chamber doing such a thing, or whether the criticism was not prompted by outsiders to whom it would be of great moment to get information of their plans. Personally he was not inclined to treat such criticisms, if they were intended as criticisms, very seriously: for he was quite sure it would be obvious to anyone who would give the matter a little reflection that the adoption of such a policy—that of rushing into the Press with announcements of what they had done, what they were doing, and what they proposed to do—would be suicidal. It would be to play directly into the hands of her enemies, and would be opposed to the very interests for which they were working. He would feel very much more uneasy if, as their Chairman, he had to face them to defend such action and give reasons for having adopted such a policy than he did in the position of asserting that it had not been their policy and that, in so far as he could speak for his colleagues in the future, it was not going to be their policy while present conditions lasted.

They would remember that the Chamber had been originally founded as the result of a feeling that there was necessity for an institution whose function would be to act as a kind of watch-dog over the interests of British commerce in the Republic: to extend and encourage those interests; and to act as a mouthpiece for giving expression to the needs, the difficulties and the ambition of those interests. "Well, gentlemen," said the Chairman, "we had to feel our way. We had, I think, very little experience of the actual working of a Chamber of Commerce. But we knew what we wanted, and we had to devise the best means of getting what we wanted done. Incidentally I would like to repeat what I hinted at last year: that it would be most helpful if our members would tell us as often and as emphatically as they can, any directions in which they would like to see the energies of the Chamber turned. It is the duty of your Council to administer the Chamber of Commerce for the best advantage of the greatest possible number, but it is not easy in these early stages to find out unaided everything that might be done. We have been on trial now for two years, and it is true that we have gained strength numerically, financially and in influence. But we are not satisfied. The membership ought to be much larger, there ought to be, and I myself believe that it will not be long before there will be, a membership double of that of to-day. But about one thing let us be quite clear: we do not want members for the mere sake of their subscriptions. Subscriptions are necessary to enable us to pay our way, but we are not out to make a profit. We want members because we want more strength, more influence, more weight to our recommendations, and more power to do good in the interests of the British commercial community as a whole as well as of our Empire trade. In addition to which it is not equity that merchants and others here should profit by the general measures effected in the general interests by a Chamber in whose upkeep they do not share. And while admitting that more members are desirable if partly to swell our income, what we much more desire is the co-operation, the advice and the support of those among our community who have hitherto stood aloof,—some, I am sure, through forgetfulness,—(I know firms who have been surprised to find they are not members)—and some from indifference. There are others, I am sorry to say, who have not yet joined the Chamber from a feeling of distrust, and it is rather amusing to find that the distrust arises from two entirely different view-points. On the one hand there are those who fear the Chamber will prove to be to the detriment of those already established here in trade, on the other hand there are those who actually think the Chamber is a selfish institution promoted for the self-protection of its members. Or, to put it another way, that the Chamber will either be the means of introducing a flood of competition or will endeavour to confine British trade to those who are fortunate enough to be its members. I need scarcely say that neither of these views is well founded. It would be as unreasonable to expect local traders to pay for the support of an institution working solely to assist and to encourage the entry of possible competitors as it would be to permit the Chamber of Commerce to become a local concern confining its energies within the narrow limits of the self-protection of its members."

The symbol on the seal of the Chamber was not merely an heraldic one, it was a living thing. They were there to uphold it. The Chamber had for its field a country whose every industry needed for its development what the British Empire was prepared to supply in exchange for the products of those industries. Theirs is the policy of the full measure, true and sound to the bottom of the bowl. To obtain a just recognition of that policy what they asked for was plain honesty. They had been too long shadowed by imitations of their own handicraft. They had no stomach for the trade of thrusting discredited goods on an unwilling market by means of false pretences and under various disguises. They wanted to open the door still wider to the sterling goods of British make and to ensure that those were handled by local British traders, and to direct the return flow of the country's produce—that was the abiding mission of the Chamber. They had both to attack and to defend. Let them make no mistake about the need for defence. Nothing was more certain than that their present enemies were already organising themselves for an effort to return to the neutral markets from which they had been to a certain extent ousted, thanks in no small measure to the British Navy. They would use every means they could to re-capture the trade they had lost. They were already making in Germany hundreds of thousands of labels with "Not made in Germany" for the use of their own manufactures, as well as designing wrappers for packages which were to convey the impression that the goods they contained had come from countries held in greater esteem. And but lately they had petitioned the Argentine authorities to endeavour to get them a free permit to import into the country goods of their own manufacture which, with amazing effrontery, they claimed were of vital necessity. Those attempts must not find British commercial men and local trustees of millions of pounds of British capital, unprepared and unorganised. They required and counted on the co-operation and support of every British subject in the Republic who recognised the magnitude of what was at stake. This concentration of energy was of the greatest importance, because individual action was usually ineffective whereas the opinion of a really wide and representative section of the business community was bound to carry weight. It was the business of the Chamber of Commerce to note and to sift the information which came its way, and it would be but little trouble, especially when the offices of the Chamber were transferred to a more central point, for members to report more freely matters that were lost sight of in the rush of daily affairs. He did not wish them to misunderstand his meaning. With the private and personal business affairs of the members the Chamber had nothing whatever to do, but during the exceptional conditions which obtained during the war they ought to combine their energies and pool their information so as to deal with circumstances that were for the time being abnormal. He was sure that in whatever they did they would use discretion, keeping in mind that they were in a neutral country. But he could not help reminding them that again and again during the last few months the British Government had urged the industrial community to capture German trade, and that they could strengthen their people at home by efforts in Argentina. They were the experts on the spot, they could supply information, advice and guidance. They could, in short, act as an Intelligence Department and make their influence felt to their own benefit and that of British trade in general. For after the war was over there would be great changes in commercial matters which would be reflected out here. Among others would be an end to the monopoly too long usurped by other countries of the manufacture and the supply of goods which could have been quite as economically produced in Great Britain, but had hitherto been neglected. For there was no country in the world so well situated and equipped as Great Britain for the production of goods of all and every kind, and the war was awakening Great Britain to the fact.

The Chairman's concluding remarks were as follows: "I have the privilege as your retiring Chairman to offer some suggestions or recommendations for the coming year. The most important, to my way of thinking, is the matter of new offices, the Chamber requires more commodious accommodation, and that situated still closer to the business centre of the city. I am confident that this change is not only necessary, but that it will be beneficial. We are too cramped where we are just now, and we are a little too much out of the way. Members do not frequent the Chamber as they ought to do, and would if it were in a more convenient position. I also recommend that our Secretary should have an assistant, a man well qualified in every respect. The work is more than sufficient for one alone as it is, and our Secretary cannot undertake the increasing work of the Chamber unaided. There is still another suggestion which I hope will meet with your support, that of the publication of the Chamber's Journal.—I need scarcely say I do not mean a journal of the nature of the popular Edinburgh magazine of that name. I wish we had been able to start this journal before. It would have been very useful in the past year, dealing in a general way with what was occupying the attention of the Council and Executive, the essential points of Government notices affecting trade, and containing, as all such journals do contain, matters of commercial interest with especial reference to those affecting local trade. These suggestions, if they are adopted, spell increased expenditure. But we need not take heed of that. Our financial position is perfectly healthy. If we were to frame a budget on our revenue of the incoming year and our expenditure on what the present monthly expenses amount to, we should show a balance to the good at the end of the year.

During the past year we have had occasion to make heavy demands on the time and patience of Sir Reginald Tower and of his staff at the Legation, demands which have been met with unfailing courtesy and attention. Sir Reginald knows, without any assurance, that we in our work of the Chamber rely upon his co-operation and support of our recommendations, and I shall leave him to speak of the relations that should exist, and which in our case I hope do exist, between the Legation and a Chamber of Commerce. But I welcome this opportunity of expressing on behalf of the British Chamber of Commerce in the Argentine Republic our sense of appreciation of the work which Sir Reginald has accomplished unassumingly, untiringly and ungrudgingly for British interests during these difficult days. If we, in our turn, have been able to add our quota of assistance in various technical matters which have arisen, we shall only have paid a small portion of the debt which the British community here owes to the Honorary President of our Chamber, H.M. Minister.

It is also a pleasure to refer to the cordial relations that exist between the Chamber and H.M. Consul General, Mr. Mackie, relations which have been much strengthened within the last few months by arrangements which have brought the Consulate General and the Chamber into still closer touch one with the other.

I take this opportunity of mentioning that within the last fortnight our Secretary has attended two meetings at Rosario at the invitation of the British business circle there who have resolved to throw the weight of their influence into the scale by joining hands with the Chamber. It is too early yet to speak of the details of the organisation for the establishment of this, our first Branch. But I am sure you send a cordial welcome to Rosario with an assurance of goodwill and good fellowship. I hope we shall have other commercial communities following the example of Rosario, and coming forward to offer their co-operation towards the realisation of the work of the Chamber, so that perhaps by the end of next year we shall have representatives from more than one Branch at our annual meeting.

In England the Chamber has been most fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Donald Begg as its representative there. Mr. Begg, in his capacity as our delegate, attended the annual meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce where, I may add, he spoke in support of a resolution to bring pressure to bear on the British Government in favour of a general and immediate adoption of the metric system as a means of assisting British firms in their competition in countries where that system is in vogue, a resolution that was adopted. Mr. Begg has been doing good work for the Chamber at home, the benefit of which we are now beginning to reap.

After paying a tribute to the work of the Secretary, Mr. Gibson added:

"It is my duty to make a brief allusion to the close association of the Chamber with the work of the British Patriotic Committee. I wish it to be clearly understood that even if the Chamber has put patriotism before commerce in the past year, it has nevertheless served both. Had the Chamber not existed, the great war for freedom and justice to which our Empire is committed, would have called it into being. I need not tell you in how many ways a body of practical business men, united to uphold the prestige and to widen the scope of British commerce, can support the cause and strengthen the power of the Empire. The British Chamber of Commerce has done everything that lay in its power to assist the work of the British Patriotic Committee, and I hope that you will express your approval that it should continue to do so.

The statement of accounts for the year were then approved and unanimously adopted. On completion of this introductory business, Sir Reginald Tower addressed the meeting.

Sir Reginald Tower, in reply, stated that: "It was with sincere pleasure that he availed himself of the opportunity of replying to the kind words used by the Chairman, and of expressing very briefly his personal views upon the relations which had existed for two years between H.M. Legation and the Chamber of Commerce in the Argentine Republic.

When the question of founding a British Chamber was first seriously discussed, he remembered saying on more than one occasion that what they wished to see was a body composed exclusively of British merchants, whose duty it should be to watch British commercial interests in general, so that by the united counsels of such a body, they could be assured that advice, assistance or what not which might at any time be required to protect or foster British trade could be given, not only with a far greater prospect of success, but what was still more important, with a security that the question dealt with was equitable and just.

He added on that occasion that, if the British Chamber were called into existence, as he sincerely hoped it might be, he would have no share or part in it or its deliberations, as he was convinced that they, the British Legation on the one side, and the Chamber on the other, must work on parallel lines, helping each other to achieve the common object, viz., a constant increase and development of British trade in the Argentine Republic. For those two parallel lines, he was prepared to be a sort of convenient bridge, by which approach from the one to the other could be readily effected. He did not think the bridge has been much obstructed during the twelvemonth which they were reviewing. It had been a constantly increasing pleasure to him to know that matters of vital concern to their country formed the subject of deliberations in the Chamber, and the carefully reasoned opinions of the Chamber as a whole which came to him with a suggestion for action, whether by submission to the Government at home or by means of representations to the Government of Argentina, had in his opinion, and he trusted in the opinion of all thinking minds of the community, fully justified the establishment of their body corporate. It had been to him a source of strength and reliance to have the experience of the members of the Chamber at his back, and he did feel that they had no reason to be ashamed of several questions which had been materially advanced during the past year by a free use of the bridge which he desired should always continue to unite them with the Legation.

The results had been encouraging, and the promise for the future was great. There was a wide field open to them in Argentina, but calculations were apt to be somewhat upset by the abnormal conditions which obtained at the present unhappy moment. It was easy to talk glibly of capturing enemy trade, but for that they required not only all their energy and intelligence, but also the hands to operate. Men could not be in both places at the same time. They could be fighting in the trenches and at the same time fighting in the commercial market of Buenos Aires. Those whose fate it was to stay behind had to multiply themselves to carry on the work which would otherwise have been done by those younger and more fortunate compatriots who had returned to the motherland.

The Patriotic Committee which, as the Chairman reminded them, had for the whole year been working in the closest collaboration with the Chamber of Commerce, had done and was still doing all that was in its power to assist those who desired active employment at home, but the feeling of splendid enthusiasm for the cause should not make the community blind to the fact that there was many a British subject who showed deep loyalty to his King and his country by remaining at his post in the Republic, even if that duty be stigmatised as merely commercial. Where would they be at the present moment without their overseas trade, and where would that trade be without the patient workers who for one reason or another were convinced that their place was here? Let them be grateful to the others for their participation in their national life as worthy descendants of the builders of British trade abroad.

And to whom had they to look for guidance in executing the trust reposed in them for keeping the flag flying in Argentina? The answer was surely those who formed the British Chamber of Commerce in Buenos Aires, and he would be sadly lacking in his sense of right were he not to record his keen appreciation of the work they had done during the last trying year, with a special tribute of grateful acknowledgment to their Chairman, Mr. Hope Gibson, to whom so much of the successful accomplishment was undoubtedly due.

Questions and notices on any particulars of the Chamber's business were then invited, and a member inquired whether the election of the Chairman was the duty of the general meeting or the Council. On the reply that the Council elected their own chairman, the meeting proceeded to the election of new members of the Council, in which there were seven vacancies and eight candidates. The retiring members eligible for re-election were Messrs. D. G. Anderson, Hope Gibson, W. E. O. Haxell, Robert Paton, H. C. Thompson, and Harry Tudor. The two new candidates proposed were Mr. C. Wentworth Cumming and Mr. H. H. Slater. All these members were elected with the exception of Mr. Harry Tudor.

Mr. Leng, of Messrs. Leng, Roberts, and Company, who had been acting as Honorary Accountants to the Chamber, proposed that Messrs. Deloitte, Plender, Griffiths and Co. should be elected accountants, and the proposal was duly seconded.

A member asked the reason of the appointment of new auditors, without any explanation being forthcoming as to the necessity for the change. The Chairman replied that Mr. Leng quite recognised the honour of acting as accountant to the Chamber of Commerce, and remarked that it was a most graceful act on his part in proposing another firm and voluntarily retiring. (Applause.) The member then proposed that there should be no change in the honorary auditors, but as the motion was not seconded, the meeting continued to the formal election of Messrs. Deloitte, Plender, Griffiths and Co. The Chairman then proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Thomas Lloyd, the Hon. Treasurer, who, he said, seemed to be the most successful treasurer of almost every institution in the Argentine. (Laughter and applause.)

Further business consisted in the election of sub-committees for the various branches of the Chamber. All these were selected en bloc, and there were no further proposals from members to the Chairman's suggestion that they had the right to propose any extra sub-committee for any purpose desired.

A most hearty vote of thanks was then proposed to the Chairman for the excellent and energetic work of the past. In his reply Mr. Hope Gibson remarked that the Chamber of Commerce had yet much to do, and that they were only beginning their work, but that he looked forward with perfect confidence to the future, and believed that he would see in future meetings the hall quite full of members at their annual general meetings. The proceedings then terminated.

RECONQUISTA

A DYING FESTIVAL.

The celebration of the Reconquista anniversary is not what may be called a popular festival, every year that passes makes this plainer; this year's ceremonies were overlooked by the great majority of the residents of the city. A small number of houses had bunting out, of these the greatest number were German who seemed to be trying to be more Argentine than the Argentines.

Some of the evening papers waxed wrath because the Chief Magistrate was not present at the religious ceremonies, also with the exception of the Minister for War, the Cabinet was missed. Business went on as usual and four blocks distant from Santo Domingo church no one could detect any sign of festival.

UNITED STATES UNIVERSITIES CLUB

DANCE AT THE MAJESTIC HOTEL

A most successful dance organised by the United States Universities Club was held last night at the Majestic Hotel. The evening was arranged to celebrate the sixth anniversary of the founding of the institution. It could not have been a more pleasant evening, either in organisation or entertainment. Amongst the large number of guests who were present were:—Mr. and Mrs. Stimson, Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. John Denton, Miss K. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Honeycomb, Mr. Sutherland R. Haxton, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Brown, Messrs. Fermin Urutia, John R. Stanford, A. E. Bast, C. W. Town, H. W. Bingham, Mr. and Mrs. Stanford, Mr. and Mrs. Rueda, Engineer Rincanson, Engineer Bell Horne, Engineer J. H. Williams, Messrs. John Backer, M. M. Renwick, L. Prettyman, Best Thomas, Dr. and Mrs. Prettyman, Engineer C. J. Cohn, Dr. Modesto Caroga, Engineer Rowike Rueda, Mr. A. Loheed and Mrs. Loheed, Mr. Pedro René, Miss Antonia René and Miss Sara René, Dr. D. G. Turnbull, Mr. Gordon Dukes, Messrs. M. A. Marino, Louis Colby and Prescott, Mr. and Mrs. Dixon, Miss Dixon, Miss Blanch, Felix Romero and Stas. de Romero, the Misses Finney, Miss Boote, Messrs. E. Finney and Boote, Sr. Carlos Reisig, Sr. Robinson and Sra. Robinson de Colson, Sr. and Sra. de Carabajal, Sres. R. Sanmartino, A. Sifo, Enrique Wulff, C. P. Dickerman, A. Rizzieri, M. D. Rowe, F. Decaso, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Finney, Mr. MacComble, and Mr. Kuhlert.

SERIOUS FIRE AT CAMPANA

AN OIL TANK EXPLODES.

Alcohol to burn, burning and burnt may possibly be a red letter day in the calendar, so far as Campana is concerned. On Saturday, shortly after 12 o'clock a serious outbreak of fire occurred in a distillery in the town. It is quaintly reported by telegrams that a fire broke out after the explosion of a tank, but no explanation is forthcoming as to whether the tank contained water or whiskey and the facts state that the fire occurred at a distillery and caused an immense amount of alarm. The distillery was situated near some petroleum oil tanks which caused the whole of the town's fire brigade to be called out, together with a number of sailors, whom after the burning alcohol had done an immense amount of damage were able to quench the flames. A petition has been sent to Sr. Mujica, the Chief of Police, concerning the matter. When the fire broke out all the workmen engaged upon the premises fled. Vast columns of smoke poured upwards, which subsequently broke into flames, until the sight of burning oil and alcohol was stupendous. Already a request has been formed that the town should be granted a more efficient number of fireman so that sailors should not have to be relied upon to help extinguish alcoholic fires.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

One of the most thrilling stories of the British Merchant Marine during the War is that of the escape of the London steamer Anglo-Californian. She was off the Irish coast, homeward bound from Quebec, when she was signalled to stop by a German submarine. Captain Parslow refused to surrender, and for some time was under shell fire until he was killed. His son, second mate of the vessel, took Captain Parslow's place, and steered the ship, with shells bursting all round him, until assistance arrived. The captain and eight men were killed and others wounded. A vivid conception of the episode is the subject of our first picture. The second picture was taken at the time of the conference at Calais between the principal Ministers of France and Britain, and the French and British generalissimos. Severe fighting has taken place in Alsace, where the French have more than held their own. A photograph is included in our illustrations of a captured German machine gun manned by French Alpine Chasseurs, and employed against the enemy. The Government and the people of New Zealand have provided their own hospital ship for the wounded among the colonial contingents of the forces at the Dardanelles. The vessel was formerly a crack passenger liner. The provision of such a vessel will obviate the crude arrangements which exist on the ordinary transports such as that shown in the second picture. Germany has gone in for immense aeroplanes as well as Zeppelins, and the sketch we give shows one of these craft with its two sets of engines and propellers, with the car between, on which machine guns are mounted. General Botha's two sons shown in the last picture are officers in the South African forces.

BANFIELD CRICKET CLUB

A SUCCESSFUL DANCE.

When the committee of the Banfield Cricket Club decided, at their general meeting early last year, upon important and necessary improvements, they little knew of the difficulties they would later have to face in carrying out their project.

All arrangements had been completed for the purchasing of a new ground, erection of pavilion and the provision of other necessities when war broke out, and cast its destructive work on the peaceful and progressive efforts of the committee. The majority of the Club's members have long since joined in the sterner game and left the remainder with the by no means light task of settling the arrangements of the Club. With the loss of a number of members the financial position of the club was seriously jeopardised, but this difficulty the committee hope to dispose of by aid of a number of dances, and judging by the success of that which took place on Saturday night, at the Italian Hall, they seem in a fair way to attain the desired result.

The hall had been tastefully decorated with floral effects and presented a very animated scene. A splendid dance programme had been prepared which was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present. Mrs. Christian again proved her ability in providing excellent music. Among the ladies and gentlemen present were the following:—Messrs. Robinson, Ambrose and Alfred Jutton, Mr. and Mrs. Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Green, Messrs. W. K. Griffith, W. Scorey, W. and B. Pentreath, Kelly, Jones, Prince, Pehl, Mr. and Miss Nugent, Mr. and Miss Perrins, Mr. and Miss Thomas, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Lennie, Mr. Caldwell, the Misses L. and F. Triggs, Miss Robinson, Mrs. Jutton, Miss Pentreath, Mrs. Kelly, Mrs. and Miss Duffy, Mrs. Duncan, Mr. Paliza, Mr. Remonte, Mrs. and Miss Johnston, Miss Grater, Mr. and Mrs. Green, Mrs. B. Tabor, Mr. Halliday, the Misses Tabor, Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. and Miss Langley, Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Hanson Mr. Hanson, Mr. John Mussey, Mr. and Mrs. Roxall.

JUVENILE CONCERT

AT ST. SAVIOUR'S, BELGRANO.

So highly enjoyable and successful was the juvenile concert held last night at the Parish Hall, St. Saviour's, Belgrano, that it is to be repeated, with a few changes, on Monday afternoon, at 4 p.m., August 23.

The concert had been arranged by the ladies of the Sunday School, and in conjunction with San Isidro, and with the assistance of Mr. James Lee, who was the artist responsible for the "paint and powder," and Mr. F. Philips, who most ably controlled the light and shade effects. Financially, too, the entertainment was a success, and the excellent idea of setting on one side a tithe of the receipts to worthy objects has enabled the Patriotic Fund to benefit to the extent of $20. This plan will be continued in future, so that ten per cent. of the takings of these evenings will always be devoted to the Patriotic Fund.

So large a number attended last night's entertainment that many had to be turned away without accommodation.

The feature of the evening was little Jack Caminos, the youngest artist on the programme, who with the assistance of six little wives, most daintily dressed, sang Yen How's famous song and chorus, which had to be repeated three times. Each item was splendidly done by the children, and throughout the evening encores were loud and frequent.

Master Arthur Brown was unfortunately ill with cold, and so his place had to be taken by Miss Mabel Ridley, who in a little Dutch costume sang "Zuyder Zee." The remainder of the items of this thoroughly excellent entertainment were as follows:—Piano solo, "Wedding Day," Doris Marr; song, "What is in your eyes?" Winnie Lee; dance, Julia Palmer; recitation, "Empire Day," Ernest Perkins; dance, Gladys and Karl van Wassenaar; recitation, "Little Orphan Annie," Miriam Wharton; action song, "Little Dame Trot," accomp. Ala Davies, Dorothy Davies and Alice Palmer; song, "Zuyder Zee," Mabel Ridley; piano solo, "Murmulo del Bosque," Phyllis Plant; quartette, "When Life is Brightest," Miriam, Kitty and Zillah Wharton, and Mabel Ridley; recitation, "Bravo!" Winnie Lee; dance, Miriam and Kitty Wharton, Mabel and Blanche Ridley; recitation "Big Steamers," Herminia Marval; solo and chorus "Yen How" (soloist, Jack Caminos), chorus of six wives: Winnie Lee, Dorothy Blackburn, Alice Palmer, Mabel Ridley, Zillah Wharton, Dorothy Davies.

SAN ISIDRO SALE OF WORK

IN AID SUNSET HOUSE QUILMES AND "LOS COCOS" HOMES, CORDIBA.

The following is the result of the entertainment and sale of work, held in San Isidro, in aid of the above homes. The amount will be equally divided between the two institutions,

Receipts	$835.45
Expenses	62.15
	$773.30

Thanks are due to the performers, to those who kindly gave donations in money and cakes, to "The Buenos Aires Herald," and to "The Standard," for publicity, and also to the following who gave goods for the stalls, Messrs. Mitchells, Auld, Bagley and Co., Bradford, "Paulista" Coffee Company, Machardy, Moody, Gibson, Cassels, Moore and Tudor, Robert Grant and Co., Guy, Heger, Feeney and Co., Simons and Co., Las Palmas Produce Co., Perlander, La Blanca Argentine Freezing Company.

The successful winners of the raffles were: Mrs. W. Cowlshaw, clock; Miss Ivy van Wassenaar, doll; Mrs. Ireland, cushion; and Mrs. Collins, cruet.

BOHEMIAN CONCERT

AT BELGRANO CLUB.

A successful and enjoyable Bohemian concert was held on Saturday evening at the Belgrano Athletic Club before a large and appreciative audience. The Belgrano Club has not only the knack but the talent to make these entertainments most pleasant, and last night was no exception to their rule and their possibilities.

An excellent programme was provided, at which Mr. H. C. Thompson did the honours of the evening, assisted immensely by the talent at his call, and truthfully to such an extent that the chairman was entirely obliterated by the audience when certain artists sang. This will only describe only how excellent was the concert, the artists, how appreciative the audience, and how essential a chairman.

Apart from Mr. Ellis Griffen, whose songs attracted such an amount of welcome—they always do so—there was Mrs. Evans, who came all the way from the British Hospital to do her kindness in another sphere. She was appreciated almost as fully as her kindness as in another sphere.

Every item on the programme went well, and deservedly so, so that the Belgrano Club's Bohemian concert was a great success.

The programme was as follows:—

1. Pianoforte duet, Mrs. Heslop and Mr. Cowlshaw.
2. Song "The Trumpeter," Mr. F. F. Bideleux.
3. Violin solo, Mrs. Cowlshaw, "A swing song."
4. Song, Mr. W. H. Forget, "Give me a Garden."
6. Song, Mrs. Evans, "There is a land."
7. Song, Mr. Fairfield Magrane, "Love could I only tell thee."
8. By special request, "A village concert," Mr. R. W. Cassels.

Part II.

1. Duet, Spanish Dances, Mrs. Heslop and Mr. Cowlshaw.
2. Song, Sympathy and the curate's song, from a "Trial by Jury," Mr. Magrane.
3. Songs, Mr. Ellis Griffin, four times encored.
4. Violin, Mrs. Cowlshaw, "A Romance."
5. Song, Mr. W. H. Nye, "Star of my soul."
6. Song, Mrs. Evans, "My own folk."
7. Song, "Chorus gentlemen," Mr. F. F. Bideleux.
8. Mr. R. W. Cassels in the "Soup up to date." God save the King.

INCREASING TRAFFIC ON ALL THE RAILWAYS

AN ENCOURAGING AUGURY.

It is interesting to compare the railway returns for the past week in comparison with the same period of last year, which was the first week of the European war. Throughout the Republic there is an increase in traffic, with a corresponding increase in profits. The figures are as follows:—

	1915.	1914.	Increase.
Central	£ 101,000	£ 84,000	£ 17,000
Pacific Rly.	92,000	76,000	16,000
Southern	£ 77,000	£ 76,000	£ 1,000
Railway	77,000	76,000	1,000
Western Rly.	45,000	38,000	7,000
Midland Rly.	1,700	1,587	113

Other railways also show an increase for the above period in their returns. Such as the Central Cordoba £235, Rosario and Port Belgrano $14,300, Provincial (Santa Fe) $63,000, General of Buenos Aires $60,402, the North Central $50,942, Northern Argentine $10,913, Argentine and North-western Cordoba $6,607, Buenos Aires Central $7,030. Furthermore the Central Uruguayan shows an increase of $175,084.

The State railways again return figures for the first seven months of the present year, which show an appreciable increase over the first seven months of 1914. The North Central shows an increase of trade done at $5,807,886.61, as against $5,757,796.15 for the previous year. The Northern Argentine at $2,417,537.80 as against $2,326,616.06.

This shows an increase on these two railways of $141,149.80, which is regarded as satisfactory.

FOR THE ALLIES

PROPAGANDA IN URUGUAY.

The introductory article of the twelfth number of "Por la Civilización" reviews the war under its latest phases, and by a series of cogent arguments justifies the optimistic chord of the article "Los Aliados Triunfarán." It says the hordes for some time past have been held up and do not advance one yard more in the original object of their campaign, and for them to be effectually checked and not allowed to advance, is to be defeated. The triumphal march and smashing victory anticipated by the German Army Staff was to be effected by living on the conquered enemy's country and to be sustained by the produce and food stuffs robbed from and the formidable contributions and confiscations levied on the conquered. All these dreams are being dissipated. The Germans begin to feel the pangs of hunger and misery. With their ships unmoveable in ports, factories at a standstill (except those engaged in the production of war material) no markets for their commerce, their people drained of resources, capital non-productive, and the banks striving to exist on discredited paper money, the handwriting is on the wall. The universal reprisals for Germany will be terrible, for the whole world views Germany as a hypocritical, treacherous and dangerous nation. Its products and manufactures, and the selling agents for same will be regarded with suspicion, and for a long time there will be no possible quotable price for the word of a German or his honour. The horrors of the vandalism practised in Belgium, Serbia and Poland will live in the memory of civilised peoples as an unpardonable crime in this hour of human history.

In a few months more—and there are indications already—the imperious sovereigns will be humbly begging forgiveness of the allies and of the world. But, it is hoped this will not be lightly accorded, because for years the martyrdom of Belgium, its massacred inhabitants, maltreated prisoners, the use of poisonous and asphyxiating gases are indelible stains on German character. No, the heart that has not the fibres of a Hun will not forget for years to come the women and children victims of the Zeppelin bombs and the Lusitania outrage.

Other interesting subjects are:—"Alemania Juzgada por un Alemán," "Los Francófilos Españoles," "El Desgaste Humano en Alemania," "Como los Alemanes han Saqueado Amberes," "Digna Contestación," "La Escasez en Alemania," "También Austria Sufre Hambre," "Por qué son Bárbaros," "El Boycot a los Productos Austro-Alemanes," "Dice el Académico Francés, E. Bouteux," "Menudencias" and "La Opinión de una Norte-Americana de Sangre Teutona." This good lady who had donated $1,000 to the German Red Cross, visited Germany and returned disgusted. She was not able to cash her American cheque and returned to the States with five pfennigs. She made a declaration thanking God she was a citizen of free America. She was convinced from the letters of soldiers she had seen in Germany, that the atrocities imputed to the Germans were far worse than had yet been published and she hoped for the emancipation of the German people from its infamous Government, by a general revolution, and that the Germany army might be annihilated for the greater welfare of the German people.

THE TURF

PALERMO

The particular adjective that could be used to describe Sunday's meeting at Palermo is a matter of opinion. Perhaps it might be said that the programme with the exception of the Classics, was an ordinary one, and that the classics themselves were poor events. With this point of view we would disagree, because, apart from the two chief events which deserve a criticism all their own, the other six races on the programme were events of interest from one or another viewpoint, as we shall see in due course.

The course was in excellent condition, and the going easy, and it was quite within the range of possibilities that some good times would be registered on account of the strongish wind blowing down the course, which could be accounted good service to a horse when making his finish.

The result of the Premio Belgrano was a win of threequarters of a length for La Natita over Aventurero the favourite. Although Aventurero was the book candidate, the prospective winner, it was no surprise whatever to see this crack beaten. The result of the race in no way makes any alteration in our opinion concerning this son of Druid, who is not only a beautiful animal, but who should never have lost a race this season. Jockeyship has lost his races, and although one cannot possibly blame Laborde, who is now hardly of the age to compete with the vigorous riding of his younger adversaries, and who did his best, one can criticise his tactics and at the same time be permitted to wonder why the owners or trainers of this great horse do not provide him with a jockey who has natural advantages to enable him to compete with his fellows.

La Natita won, after allowing Pan Pan to make the running to the home straight. Aventurero to win should have taken the lead, should have made most of his remarkable powers and not relied on his finish, which he can make equally as well after making all the running, as when he runs a waiting race.

It was somewhat noteworthy to remark Pan Pan on the 1400 metre mark, working for his head, and we firmly believe that the event would have doubled in interest had Rivero allowed Pan Pan to go ahead as he wanted to go, he could only have lost, which was his final fate, but it would have ruined La Natita's winning chance, and perhaps have bettered Aventurero's. Be this as it may, the total result was a somewhat poor race, run in the slow time of 2.38½, and throughout to the advantage of the winner.

The Premio Olavarria, Ocurrencia's classic, held its surprises, especially in the betting. She was allowed to pay $2.85, thanks to one section of the public believing her unbeatable and refraining from purchasing tickets, which were adjudged to be worth 2.10 or 2.20, and again to another section of the public, being so extremely foolish as to believe that Portaña had any chance at all. Our opinion that 1400 metres, 1600 metres, 2000 metres and more will not make the slightest difference to this wonderful filly, was in some degree proved.

She was never out of a canter, and when asked the question close to home came out with superb ease, and won as she liked, with her jockey sitting up on her, without the smallest effort to ride. The time was highly respectable though not wonderful, but that is really a thing apart, because the filly was never pressed. What a wonder, a world wonder, she is!

The first event was easily won by Bolin by a length and a half from Nitrico, with Zio third, in the remarkably fast time of 2.3, which is only fractions outside the record. Bolin was one of the favourites to flatter his supporters. Campesino was most unconvincing, and put up a really weak performance. Nitrico looked very fit and well, but showed unmistakable signs of leg weakness. However, Nitrico should win in due course.

Floridora cleverly beat the favourite, Maria Leczinska in the sprint race for youngsters, getting home by half a neck, with that strapping and useful filly. Sada Yacco, third. Perhaps the surprise of the race was the poor exhibition put up by Carmucha, of whom, at least, something was expected, but there was nothing doing. Hermosa, a debutante and a nice-looking filly, was installed third favourite, but did not run up to expectations. She got none too good a start.

Farol easily beat the favourite, Callejas, in the third event, with Tamandare showing up surprising weak in the fourth place, just behind Fint. The public had a few remarks to make concerning Papeleta's running on the previous Thursday, which created considerable amusement.

Again in the fourth event the favourite (Englander up) could do no better than run second, a length and a half behind that exceedingly useful Andrade. Espartillar could not give the weight, and the result of the race only showed what a really fine animal the Santa Teresa people possess in Andrade.

Grey Eyes won the very best event of the day at the expense of Debutante and Wotan. He was left at the post, and was shut in for the rail position in the run home, and yet even with all these disadvantages he scored a truly fine victory. Chucker Out did not by any means do his best, but we are very doubtful as to whether he could have made the least impression upon Grey Eyes. The time, too, of the event was highly creditable, 1.43 3/5 takes some doing for the 1700 metres.

In the last race of the day, the favourite Lusitano scored easily enough from Mustafa and Dijital, both the latter in spite of their 62 kilos, ran well and strongly. It was a race to the exclusion of prentices, which led to some miscalculation. This event brought to a close an afternoon's racing of entertainment and sport, and by far the most interesting event was the one that Grey Eyes annexed.

ROSARIO

The results of the meeting at Rosario on Sunday last, provided one big surprise in the victory of Nervaez, in the third race, but apart from this the public had a good and satisfactory day, although Ambicioso a hot favourite for the Premio Malicia, let them down rather badly when beaten by Miruca.

The general results were as follows:

PREMIO MARENGO, 1100 mts.

1. Verdi 56; 2. Gala Day 47; 3. Juncal II. 56; 4. Jellicoe 52. Also ran: Galupin 52 and Scala 47. The winner paid $5.25 and $2.75; 2nd, $2.65. Half a neck. Time 1.8.

PREMIO MALICIA, 1400 metres

1. Miruca 55; 2. Ambicioso 57; 3. Vogler's Melody 52; 4. Don Gabriel 54. Also ran: Pagare 57, Breccaneca 55, Sotto Voce 55 and Betrayer 54. The winner paid $13.15 and 2.55; 2nd, $2.30; 3rd, $4.05. Three-quarters of a length. Time 1.27½.

PREMIO MALICIA, 1400 mts.

1. Narvaez 56; 2. Apple Tart 54; 3. Tango 56; 4. Hermetica 56. Also ran: Silvano, Galliard, Marco Antonio, Blondin, Don Clorindo, Potcholo, Avelina, Barcaldina 54, Redoblona 54, Caminata 54. The winner paid $22.95 and $5.70; 2nd, $2.65; 3rd, $6.80. Three quarters of a length. Time 1.7 4/5.

PREMIO REMATE, 1600 mts.

1. Everest 57; 2. Duna 44; 3. Picador 49; 4. Lingera 44. The winner paid $2.05; 2nd, $2.05. Several lengths. Time 1.41½.

PREMIO MANDARIN, 1300 mts.

1. Cleipan 57; 2. Leuctress 49; 3. Suzana 52; 4. American Boy 62. Also ran: Italy, La Bulliciosa, Ladkin, Galana, Flashlight. The winner paid $15.25 and $7; 2nd, $12; 3rd, $7.10. A length. Time 1.20.

PREMIO MANOLITA, 1600 mts.

1. Lord Bramble 51; 2. Formosa 46; 3. Sopeton 51; 4. Suplente 45. Also ran: Everest, La Gordetti, Pantomina, Vinicio, Don Gabriel. The winner paid $3.95 and $2.90; 2nd, $3.75; 3rd, $7.90. A length. Time 1.41.

PREMIO MANOTON, 2200 mts.

1. Opulento 55; 2. Sunchales 52; 3. Farward 60; 4. Pan Duro 45. Also ran: Button Hole, Macabeo, Petimetre, Gigantea, and Lucifer. The winner paid $15.10 and $3.20; 2nd, $2.70; 3rd, $2.70. A half neck. Time 2.20 1/5.

LA PLATA

Sunday's meeting at La Plata provided some unexpected results, which were not exactly in favour of backers, but the racing in general provided some good sport and a few excellent finishes. Two dead heats were registered when, in the first event, Mabile and Saqueador disputed for first past the post, and again in the Premio Nota, when neither Perlino nor Juanaco could get his head in front. This Perlino succeeded doing in the run off. This event was the most exciting of the day, because Diorita who ran 3rd, was only half a head behind the dead heaters. Another good finish was when Finette beat Camorsito by a head. Mal Palo was the great surprise of the meeting and paid out the highly respectable figure of $74.80. The results were as follows:

PREMIO NAVARRO, 1600 mts.

1. Mabile 54; 1. Saqueador 43; 3. Renta. A dead heat; 1½ lengths. Time 1.41. Dividends: Mabile $9.80 and $10.70. Saqueador $8.40 and $7.80. Also ran: Effusion, Divino. Glou Glou (4), Edgardo, Licinio.

PREMIO NERICIA, 1400 mts.

1. Variacion 45; 2. Grandval 52; 3. Coquin. Won by half a neck; 2½ lengths. Time 1.28 1/5. Dividends: Variacion $25 and $8.50; Grandval $5.40. Also ran: Didur, Fable, Pirincho, Macaulay (4).

PREMIO NEUTRAL, 1600 mts.

1. Puro 53; 2. Saltarin 46; 3. Farrista 49. Won by 2 lengths; 2½ lengths. Time 1.41 1/5. Dividends: Puro $13.70 and $10; Saltarin $8.10. Farrista $10. Also ran: Forajido, Periwinkle, Gorrión, Alta Mar II (4), Monarch, Pionon, Chiquitina, Condarco, Ibicuí, Duquesita, John Wood, Sigfrido.

PREMIO NIKEL, 1300 mts.

1. Mal Palo 53; 2. Galleguita 51; 3. Weyman 53. Won by 4 lengths; 3 lengths. Time 1.21 2/5. Dividends: Mal Palo $74.80 and $11.90; Galleguita $3.80; Weyman $6. Also ran: Don Paul, El Rey, Seguidor, Bayonne, V. Flower (4), Hirmita, Pitina II.

PREMIO NONDINA, 2200 mts.

1. Pretty Boy 47; 2. Normando 62; 3. Liberty. Won by a head; 4 lengths. Time 2.18 1/5. Dividends: Pretty Boy $4.30 and $3.30; Normando $4. Also ran: Fox and Paul Pons.

PREMIO NOTA, 1500 mts.

1. Perlino 54; 1. Juanuco 55; 3. Diorita 47. A dead heat; half a head. Time 1.36 1/5. Dividends: Perlino $8.60 and $6.20; Juanuco $8.20 and $5.60; Diorita $5.40. Also ran: Nubifer, Bonci, Matatias, V. Chief, Marabú, Per Baco, La Tubau, Cata Adair, Isolina II, Cebada (4), Fine Mouche, Ehontée.

PREMIO NINICIE, 1400 mts.

1. Finette 55; 2. Camorsito 57; 3. Villemil 54. Won by a head; 1½

DAVID ENGLANDER--JOCKEY?

Why Papeleta Lost

SEVEN MONTHS' RECORDS

(By Our Racing Representative.)

The criticisms that have been passed upon the jockey, David Englander, in more than one of our contemporaries, for his exhibition of riding on Papeleta last Thursday may or may not be well deserved. It is perfectly possible to agree with much that has been said concerning Englander, but there is one point, and perhaps this of paramount importance, that has been forgotten and neglected, and that is his utter incapacity in the saddle, when mounted on young horses, and his doubtful capacity on other horses.

Every racegoer is aware that no jockey grows wings--least of all David Englander--but at the same time it will be interesting to carefully inquire into his record for this year, before we pass sentence of utter roguery upon him, and we shall see that while there are cases, perhaps a number of them, in which he has ridden to advantage--his own probably--we shall observe in general that rank, bad riding, especially of youngsters, is at the bottom of many failures, which without careful judgment might appear to be fraudulent.

In the first place an expert racing man (and by this term we do not only mean a racegoer, but an actual rider of race-horses) from England would point out the nature of Englander's seat on a horse and would logically prove it faulty. Secondly, one has only to remember this seat to know what poor hands he must have because every rider knows that one depends upon the other, and that bad hands used on young horses are infinitely more effective than on old stagers. That Englander should be warned off the Palermo track we can almost agree, but from a different point of view to that which generally obtains. To a great number of racegoers the very fact that this jockey is riding in a race takes the pleasure clean out of the event, because he has earned for himself such an unenviable reputation which is summed up in the phrase, "What about Englander, can he put it across us?" This "putting it across" the public shows exactly the spirit of the public, and the nature of the jockey. How and why this feeling has arisen can be best answered by the man himself, and at the same time even his own figures may surprise him. But before we pass to these we should say that Englander might well be dispensed with at Palermo, not only on account of the manner he takes the pleasure out of a race in which he rides, but mainly because he cannot ride and ruins many a good two-year-old and young horse. We can point to many examples and why the owners and trainers of these animals tolerate him it is impossible to prove, though it can be guessed at. Let us glance at his 1915 record:--

During the month of January he rode 34 times with 11 wins. He won 3 times on favourites, which paid $3.15, $5.80, and $6.50 respectively. He lost four races on favourites, while on the other hand he won on outsiders some very surprising races, paying $18.80, $44.15, and $19.60. On lengths. Time 1.28 2/5. Dividends: Finette $9.10 and $4.10; Camorsito $7.20; Villemil $13.70. Also ran: Floweret, Copete (4), Estambul, M. de Oro, Hamburgo, Genia, Fécida, Sagonia, Herb, Jolle Jeu.

PREMIO NOVEDAD, 1600 mts.

1. Menianto 47; 2. Pilleria 48; 3. Divagadora. Won by half a length; 1½ lengths. Time 1.40 4/5. Dividends: Menianto $5.60 and $4.20; Pilleria $3.40. Also ran: Charlotte, Electro (4), Neleo, Sibarita.

Perlino won the run off of the dead heat by 1½ lengths from Juanuco and paid $2.90, Time 1.35.

second favourites he won three races, paying $7.55, $7.60, and $8.60. He never had a ride on a two-year-old. This is perhaps an average record.

In February he had 30 rides and four wins, out of which he rode the favourite to victory three times and the second favourite once. He lost races on seven favourites, and got no wins or places on outsiders. He rode six two-year-olds, of which five were made favourite. He won on 2 of these.

March saw him out 13 times, riding two favourites, on both of which he lost. He rode two winners, both outsiders, paying $14.40 and $30.90. He rode five two-year-olds and failed with all of them. Peculiar!

April was a month which has much to say. 27 rides, four wins, seven times on a favourite; six defeats; six times on a second favourite; six defeats. He won three races on outsiders paying $7.95, $13.30, and $9.25. The favourite he rode paid $5.35. He had three mounts on two-year-olds and failed every time. May saw him out 34 times with 9 wins, 4 times winning on the favourite, 6 times losing on the favourite. Three times winning on outsiders which paid $10.85, $12.85, and $11.50. He rode twelve two-year-olds, winning on one of them. Out of these twelve he was on the favourite two-year-old four times, and never won once.

June: 39 rides; nine wins. Thrice home on the favourite, and seven times a loser on the favourite. Six wins on outsiders, which paid $17.35, $6.35, $12.95, $8.75, $8.40, and $9.05 respectively. He rode 16 two-year-olds, won on three of them (two favourites) lost on 13 of them (five favourites).

July: 31 rides; three wins. Seven times on the favourite, twice winning on them, but it should be noted what they paid, namely $16.50 and $7.85. He rode one outsider to victory paying $14.30.

His two-year-old record was appalling. 15 rides, 0 wins. Five times on the favourite, five times on the second favourite. The month of August has been more appalling still, so far as young horse flesh is concerned.

Therefore, excluding August, we have the following record of 208 rides, 42 wins, 16 wins on favourites, 37 losses on favourites, 26 wins on outsiders.

These facts are interesting, but still more so is England's record on two-year-olds, and it will prove our point concerning his incapacity to ride.

55 rides, 7 wins, 5 wins on a favourite, 13 losses on a favourite, 0 wins on an outsider.

There is one thing to point out which cold figures do not give. England loses on a favourite or wins with it, and then reverses the proceedings with any marked difference in weight, but it is to his riding of two-year-olds that we can point out that he loses on them and other jockeys win on them. We will furnish two concrete examples. Estribor versus Faucheur. Estribor is the better, England acknowledges it by riding it win he has his choice. A favourite, it loses, and yet he tried for all he was worth. There was no pulling Sun-Yat-Sen. When ridden by England a 3-year-old, but as few know some six months younger than other three-year-olds. He has never won yet when pounds in the best of the weights, yet Denna, a baby boy and a very decent little rider, can win on him and it was not the 'prentice allowance that did it as a reference to the book will prove.

At the end of three weeks of married life, a Southern dandy returned to the minister who had performed the ceremony and asked for a divorce. After explaining that he could not grant divorces, the minister tried to dissuade his visitor from trying out his intention of getting a saying:

You must remember, Sam, that I promised to take 'Liza' for better or worse."

"Sir, I know dat, boss," rejoined the dandy; "but—Liza she wuss I took her for."

GOLF

SAN ANDRES v. ARGENTINE G.C.

A team of Argentine Club golfers visited San Andres on Sunday for playing in the Inter-Club Championship, and after an enjoyable day's golf returned the losers by 8 matches to 10.

Morning play consisted of the singles, in which play was even, each side gaining 6 points. It was in the foursomes that the home team came out on top, and thus succeeded in winning by a margin of 2 matches. The course was in perfect condition.

The scores were as follows:—

ARGENTINE G. C. II. v. SAN ANDRES II.

The second string of the above Clubs met on the Argentine Club's links at Palermo, and as in the case of their first team, the San Andrians proved successful, but by just double the homesters' score. 12 matches to 6 was the result. The weather was ideal, but the most accurate golf was none too easy on account of the wind, still play was good and was thoroughly enjoyed.

QUILMES GOLF CLUB.

THE KELLY CUP.

Further play for the Kelly Cup was indulged in by a few members of the Quilmes Golf Club on Sunday, and sufficient progress was made to leave only the finals and semi-finals to be played. Mr. W. J. Shilton defeated Mr. P. A. Grassick, and Mr. H. C. Simmons disposed of H. E. Hetley.

The winners of these matches, together with Messrs. W. C. Patterson and S. W. Croker will, in due course, meet in the semi-finals.

Afternoon play was devoted to mixed foursomes.

SAN ISIDRO GOLF CLUB.

MONTHLY HANDICAP.

On the links of the San Isidro Club on Sunday, play was indulged in for the honour of heading the list of the monthly handicap. Mr. S. O. RUGBY

THE KNOCK OUT CUP FINAL.

BELGRANO (5 PTS.) v. BUENOS AIRES (14 PTS.)

The Lomas Ground was, on Sunday afternoon, the venue of the final match for the Knock Out Cup between Buenos Aires R.F.C. and Belgrano.

After a fast game and somewhat severe struggle, Buenos Aires ran out the winners with a score of two goals and a dropped goal (14 points) to a goal (5 points). Mr. H. B. Heatlie refereed the match.

For the winners a fine game was played by Gahan and Mackern, and for the losers Scott, Bourne, and Watson were prominent.

The game was a fast and open one, the forwards generally controlling most of the game. At the commencement play favoured Belgrano, but the B. A. defence was very sound. First score was registered by Darch, who cleverly ran over for Bush to convert. Up to this time play strongly favoured the Belgrano Club, but from now onwards the tide turned in favour of B. A. The second half saw Macadam dribble over and score, Smyth converted, and a little later Gahan repeated these tactics and again scored for Smyth to convert. The last score was a clever dropped goal by Smyth, who thus put his side well ahead, and it was incidentally due to his kicking that the match ended in the score already noted.

The teams were as follows:—

Buenos Aires.—Mackern; Trillia, Martin, Walker and Beardmore; Mold and Smyth; Wigg, Gahan, McCall, Heroit, Macadam, Cox, Etchandy, and Drysdale.

Belgrano.—Bush; Fenwick, Sinclair, Charlton, and Van Deurs; Watson and Piper; Scott, Bourne, Nisbett, Darch, De Meyier, Whittington, Troncoso, and Cullerne.

SAN ANDRES.

An open mixed foursome (medal play) will take place at San Andres on Saturday, August 21, in aid of the British Patriotic Fund. The prizes are presented by Mr. James Marjoribanks. Entrance fee $5 m/n for each couple, which can be paid on the ground before starting. Members of all clubs are invited to take part. Entries close on Thursday, August 19 and should be sent, mentioning players' handicaps, to Mr. V. G. Scroggie or Mr. B. W. Gardom, Club Ingles, 478 Bme. Mitre. A time sheet can be seen at Mr. Robert Grant's, 536 Cangallo, where entries can be made, and players are requested to mention their handicaps.

FOOTBALL

ARGENTINA V. URUGUAY

COMPETITION FOR THE LIPTON CUP.

The great interest taken in the destination of the Lipton Cup this year was evidenced in the large number of spectators; not since the visit of Swindon has such a large crowd been present, the lowest estimate is 18,000, and this must rather be below the actual figure. The formation of the Argentine team was, as usual, the cause of much argument, and public opinion placed it as strong in defence, but weak in attack; whilst the Uruguayan combination was better balanced. Greeted with rounds of applause the two teams made their appearance at 2.40 and after the usual preliminaries a start was made at 2.45, the Argentine captain electing to defend the upper end facing the sun. Wind was not strong enough to be of any consequence.

From the kick-off the visitors made two attacks, both being dealt with by the home backs, then the home forwards came along and should have scored twice in the first eight minutes but for ill-luck. On the first occasion Viale from the wing missed an open goal, on the next Marcovechio fell over the ball within a yard of the line and Varela cleared. The Uruguayans now took charge of the game, and attack followed attack, the passing of the forwards being magnificent. After 25 minutes' play their efforts were rewarded, Pendi-bene beating the backs in a sprint, shot hard giving Rithner no earthly chance.

After this score the Argentines made an effort to regain control, but were soon again on the defensive, while Rithner was called on to save on various occasions. Ten minutes from half-time, Hayes got through and looked all over a scorer, but Saporitti saved in a magnificent manner, reaping a well-earned harvest of applause. Half-time arrived with the visitors pressing, and the score

Uruguay 1; Argentina 0.

On resumption it was seen that the Argentine team was a changed body; they went to work in a business-like fashion and the spectators were treated to some beautifully directed passing, while the backs and half-backs broke up their opponent's attempts at combination. The enthusiasm of the crowd was slowly roused and came to fever heat, 17 minutes after the restart when Marcovechio scored the equalizing goal. This point was the result of a pretty piece of work by the whole line, and the goalie had no chance. From now on the Uruguayans began to slack, while the home team improved, Saporitti made some fine saves, and corner followed on corner. Thirty minutes had passed before the winning goal was scored, when a beautiful centre from the right wing was taken on the hop by Hayes and a roar of applause announced that Argentina was leading. No further scoring took place, though both goalies were called on and found at home. The end came with the home team on the war path. Final result:

Uruguay 1; Argentina 2.

There is no doubt that Sunday's match was one of the best played for the Lipton Cup, and although one or two individual parts of the Argentine team might be improved on, still the whole was strong. The defence was the best and at all times proved capable, John Brown specially was a tower of strength. The halves were a magnificent line, Badaraco being a shade better, though Garcia's head was very prominent. The forwards did not understand one another, and at first many passes went begging; during the last forty minutes of the match, however, they were worth watching. Viale is not the outside left of former years, and both Ohaco and Marcovechio are inclined to hang on to the ball when passes

SERBIAN RED CROSS FUND

SUCCESSFUL CONCERT

On Friday last a successful concert was held in Prince George's Hall in aid of the Red Cross Funds of Serbia and Montenegro. Mr. E. Stein, the Russian Chargé d'Affaires, at the opening delivered a lengthy address in which he pointed out that while, quite rightly, Belgium had occupied so much attention, the other allies who were not so strongly represented in the Argentine should not be forgotten.

The musical portion of the programme was excellent, Signorita Gilda dalla Rizza, from the Colon Theatre, sang Santuzza's recitative from Cavalleria Rusticana for which she was encored. Mdlle Chalot again delighted her audience with her harp playing, while the instrumental music given by Mdlle. Romaro was perfect. Madame Chambroux on the piano, Madame Coemme Cestier with her recitations, gave other items on the programme which were greatly appreciated. While successful financially, and while musically perfect in its art, the concert in general was cold and flat, and the organisation left much to be desired. Amongst those present were the Ministers and representatives of France, Belgium, Russia, etc. including Sir Reginald Tower, British Minister, and Mr. H. G. Mackie, H.B.M. Consul.

The programme was as follows:— Part I.—1. Address by Mr. E. Stein, Russian Chargé d'Affaires; 2. Violin Solos, "Reverie" (Vieuxtemps) and "Souvenir" (Drdla), Mdlle. Nerina Romaro; 3. Songs, Signorita Gilda dalla Rizza; 4. Harp Solos "Ballade" (Zabel), "Pres du Moulin" (Tedeschi), Mdlle. Heléne Chalot.

Part II.—1. Trio (four movements) Azensky, Mdlle. Romaro; 2. Recitations, Mdlle. Coemme Cestier; 3. Piano solos, "Estudio" Op. 10, Chopin, "Arlesienne" Bizet-Delaborde, "Dance Rustique" Dubois, Mdlle. Pouja de Chambroux; 4. Violoncello, "Czardas" Fischer, "Gavotte" Popper, Mdlle. Fernanda Romaro.

The accompanist was Signor Martino.

COAL FROM CHILE

UNDER CONSIDERATION BY THE RAILWAYS.

Amongst the latest telegrams from Chile reference is made to the fact that certain Argentine railways are considering the adoption of Chilean coal. At the commencement of the war there was an almost complete paralysis of mineral output and in Argentine circles the possibility of an increasing trade with Chili, which is thought would be possible if the railways give orders for coal, is looked upon with satisfaction.

would be more beneficial to their side. Rithner in goal was the great goalkeeper he always is. The Uruguayans were one and all good, they were faster than the home side and evidently have played together a good deal, as their combination was splendid. H. Alfano had charge of the whistle and the teams were:

Argentinos: Juan José Rithner (Porteño); A. A. Chiappe (River Plate) and Juan D. Brown (Quilmes); Alberto Olivari (San Isidro), Cándido Garcia (River Plate) and Jerónimo Badaraco (San Isidro); A. Fraga Patrao (River Plate), Alberto Ohaco (Racing), Alberto Marcovechio (Racing), Harris Hayes (Rosario Central) and José Viale (Newells Old Boys).

Uruguayans: Cayetano Saporitti (Wanderers); José Benincasa (River Plate) and M. Varela (Peñarol); Jorge O. Gacheco (Bristol), B. Saporitti (Peñarol), B. Saporitti (Peñarol) and A. Banzino (Nacional); José Pérez (Peñarol), Pablo Dacal (Nacional), José Pendi-bene (Peñarol), Angel Romano (Nacional) and A. Lázaro (Nacional).

GRAIN FOR THE ENEMY?

Exportation to Scandinavia.

"TIMES OF ARGENTINA'S" CAMPAIGN

"The Times of Argentina" is still pursuing its sane and soundly reasoned campaign in favour of the regulation of the grain export trade with Scandinavia.

In yesterday's issue, "The Times" published tables demonstrating the enormous and probably unjustifiable increase in the maize exportation to the Baltic nations, and, commenting on the subject, said:—

"We have to thank our esteemed contemporary, "The Buenos Aires Herald" for some kindly words regarding our small campaign to obtain fair competition for the Scandinavian business. It was in no spirit of antagonism to the Scandinavian peoples that we commenced our arguments on this subject, but in a desire to have all grain exporting firms of Argentina placed on a parity of condition. At the present moment the Anglo-French firms are not allowed to, or are afraid to, transact business with Scandinavia, owing to the risk of the shipments eventually finding their way into German ports. We contend that a system should be evolved whereby all firms be allowed to compete for orders going, and we have suggested, as a means to this end, that an arrangement be come to whereby legitimate Scandinavian business be proved and thrown open to free competition, whilst that which is not so proved be advised as suspicious and the firms carrying it out be warned of the probability of the closure of their London offices, which would imply the destruction of their chartering business. The adoption of such a suggestion would benefit the importing nations by freeing the ships engaged in their legitimate trade from possible capture and delay, it would materially simplify the task of the British navy and it would throw honest trade open to free competition. Surely in such a suggestion there can be nothing derogatory to the countries which border Germany, for we do not confine ourselves to the Scandinavian nations but include Holland, Switzerland and Roumania. At present there is considerable cause for friction. Injustice is unwittingly committed, a spirit of antagonism prevails and mutual confidence is lacking. Yet such should not exist, for it is recognised that Great Britain has the right to capture and revise, whilst the Governments of the countries bordering Germany have expressed their willingness to prevent contraband."

NELSON LINER'S ESCAPE

Highland Corrie Attacked

SUCCEEDS IN REACHING TILBURY

London, August 16.

The Nelson liner, Highland Corrie, which left Buenos Aires on July 20, is reported to have been badly damaged by a torpedo discharged by a German submarine, when within a day's sail of London. The ship was due on Saturday, but has been detained by her injuries. No details are available at present.

The Nelson liner, Highland Corrie, has been docked at Tilbury, after a narrow escape from destruction by a submarine.

THE FORESTAL CO.

A FLUTTER IN THE DOVECOTE

"Santafecino" writes as follows:—

"The complete and two-sided report of the ordinary general meeting of the Forestal Company in London, which has lately come to hand, will be scrutinised with interest by those who read an article published in "The Herald" on July 29, criticising certain statements made by the Baron d'Erlanger, and published in the report under the heading "Far Reaching Measures."

Had this criticism been more exhaustive, and had it extended itself beyond the limits of the Buenos Aires offices of the Company, it would have come across rich supplies of German jobs in the Santa Fé and Chaco establishments of the Forestal Company, where, I am informed 75 per cent of the higher administration officials, mechanics and workmen (excluding the peonada) are German, or at best Swiss of German extraction. Many of these men are not technical experts, and they could have been replaced without a stoppage of the factories occurring.

However, I learn that the Company's Inspector General, Herr Augusto Rohr, has left on a visit to Buenos Aires to arrange with the board as to what is to be done prior to the arrival of the London Managing Director, Mr. Baldwin. This gentleman had the misfortune to lose a brother by the sinking of the Lusitania, and consequently has every reason to have no sympathy towards the enemy. But as he has so large a hostile majority to contend with it is to be hoped that his endeavours to get some practical patriotism into the concern, will not meet with the same fate as those of his predecessor and co-director, Mr. Ogilvie."

NATIONAL AGRICULTURAL SHOW

FRIDAY

It may not be strictly correct to speak of the Agricultural Exposition at Palermo as the "annual festival" of the swing, as the "annual festival" of the Sociedad Rural Argentina, because that body holds a number of annual shows every year, but for the majority of camp men, and certainly for the city dwellers, it is the one and only "annual show." It is the occasion when the Society brings before the public in complete array the many and varied products of the country's great rural industries, and generally it is an exhibition which for quantity and quality rivals the most important agricultural shows of England, after which it is fashioned and managed.

This year's show at Palermo, although not officially opened till Sunday last, which is "the" day for the general public, was really inaugurated on Friday, when all the exhibits were on the ground and the judging commenced. The weather was favourable, though overcast and somewhat bleak towards the end of the day, and there was a very large attendance. Breeders and exhibitors, as well as estancieros and farmers from all parts of the Republic, were present, and there was also a fair sprinkling of visitors from neighbouring countries and the United Kingdom. The judging by the gentlemen brought from the British Isles to undertake this onerous task, was followed with critical eye. Generally speaking, it gave entire satisfaction, although, of course, there was some difference of opinion brought about quite naturally by each critic's judgment being based on his own accepted standards, which might not be those of the particular judge.

As is usual in this great cattle-breeding country, the Shorthorn classes attracted most interest, and the judges wasted no time in proceeding to allot the awards. The entries, though not as numerous as we have seen them, were of good quality. Many visiting experts said they had never seen such a representative and uniformly good collection of high class Shorthorns at any previous show. That such praise could honestly be given speaks well for the class of cattle in this country, and the skill and care of breeders, seeing that many establishments have suffered heavily during the past two years through bad seasons and the prevalence of disease. As a matter of fact, the effects of "aftosa" were plainly visible yesterday in some of the stock.

Among the Herefords, considerable interest was shown, though it did not equal in strength the interest shown in the Shorthorns.

The judging started at nine a.m. with Shorthorns, Herefords, Percherons and sheep, and before the day closed a fairly large portion of the judges' task had been got through.

ald, was placed at the head of the line from which position his superiority was never seriously challenged. From the ring side he appeared to be a beautifully well fleshed bull and deserving of his place. The runner-up in this class was Normando, who won in his class at Rosario. The third ticket went to an exhibit of Messrs. C. E. and B. Duggan, which was considered to be one of the most typical bulls on parade. The mentions went to exhibits of Messrs. Francisco and Arturo Molina, La Plata, "San Agustin," and Sr. Celedonio Pereda for two meritorious specimens of the breed.

The second class brought out 28 entries, and the first prize was awarded to Sanquhar's Mowbray, a beautifully backed bull which showed well on parade. This bull was possibly not as good on his shoulders as he might have been, but notwithstanding he was a magnificent animal. The second ticket was awarded to Quilmes Shenley, 5, the property of Sr. Leonardo Pereyra, and was considered by many experts to have the makings of a great sire. The third award fell to a beautifully presented specimen from "Las Palmas," the property of Sr. Urquiza.

The following class comprised 41 entries, and for a considerable time that sweet, though somewhat small red bull shown by Sres. Vivot headed the line, but to be afterwards displaced by Storm Signal, shown by Sr. B. Gimenez Paz. The third winner in this class was a most meritorious example from the well-known Cabaña of Sr. Villatte Olaguer, beautifully shown and likely to be again heard of.

In the fourth class the competition was exceptionally strong, when some 52 superb specimens of the Shorthorn breed were submitted for the judge's verdict. The numbers entering the ring were not as numerous as the entries catalogued, but the few remaining animals were left in their stalls suffering from lameness or effects of their recent railway journey. The first animal to be placed in the leading position was that magnificent specimen of the Shorthorn breed shown by Messrs. Ignacio Goñi e Hijos. The judge, after a thorough scrutiny of the leading animals, finally selected the compact though smaller bull, the property of Sr. Julio Peña. In no small way this bull deserved his triumph to that well-known expert Mr. George Matheson, who showed his triumph to that well-known expert applauded for his well merited suc-

SATURDAY

Saturday morning broke clear and fine, but cold, and with a strong wind blowing, the latter making matters none too pleasant for the judges, who had to resume their duties at the Palermo showground.

Mr. A. W. Law commenced operations in the Shorthorn ring a few minutes after 9 o'clock, there being quite a large gathering of interested spectators to witness the first lot of bulls entering. Mr. W. T. Hayr made a beginning with the Shire horses in the small ring situated between the horse and bull galpones, while Mr. Charles Clarke was busy awarding the prizes in the pig section.

After breakfast Mr. W. B. Whigham placed the winners in the a palenque Shorthorn classes, selecting the large ring to work in. From start to finish there was a large assemblage of visitors, the surrounding spacious grand stands being requisitioned to provide comfortable seating accommodation. It was only natural to find the largest attendance around the enclosure in which Mr. A. W. Law was working.

JUDGING THE SHORTHORNS

in the principal pedigree classes, and the first lot to parade before him were the 137 bulls comprising the 7th class for two-year-olds. There was no outstanding winner at first examination, but it was not very long before Sr. M. A. Martinez de Hoz's "Favourite 2nd," a good thick roan son of that grand bull, Lord Douglas, was placed at the head of the line, a position he rather easily held at the finish. Next to him stood a good useful bull in "Sanquhar's Vulcan Santa Ana," by Ascott Vulcan, and third ticket went to a shapely good-coloured roan "King's Seal," coming from the herd of Dr. J. M. Malbran. Messrs. C. E. and B. Duggan's "Gold Clip," by Strowan Archduke out of Gilliver 36th, was a close fourth, while the next best of a big lot of real good bulls was "Azucenaga Regent," nicely presented from Sr. Carlos V. Aloguer's Olivos Cabaña.

Class 8 was not so strong numerically as some of the previous lots, and of the 96 parading, there was an outstanding winner in Messrs. Ignacio Goñi and Son's "New Year's Gift," called on Jan. 1, 1914, by Sunbeam's Pride out of a Daybreak cow. This bull is perhaps one of the best ever seen at Palermo, and were he to possess a better and bolder gait he would be hard to beat in any showground in the world. Later in the day he was fittingly awarded the Championship. Messrs. Ginnochio and Sons showed a very nice bull in "Golden Morn" and took second prize, while "Lunatico of Espartillar" boasted so many good points that he gained Sr. Alberto de Bary third ticket. Messrs. Tomas de Anchorena, with "Broadhook's Champion," worthily filled fourth and fifth places, respectively.

The ninth class was the last for Shorthorn bulls, and between 60 and 70 animals paraded. There has, perhaps, not been a better lot of calves seen at Palermo for some time, and Sr. Pages gained pride of place with a nicely-grown roan get of Mendel and Sanquhar's Favourite. Messrs. Nicolas Bruzone and Sons showed a nice red and white Lavender bred calf that took second prize, while Sr. L. Palacios got third ticket with a thickly built roan that should improve with age. The next two places were filled by representatives from the "La Josephina" herd.

The judge's next task was to find and nine candidates lined up for the verdict, being representatives from such famous breeding establishments as those of Messrs. Miguel A. Martinez de Hoz, Executors of the late Narciso Vivot, Tomas E. de Anchorena, Ignacio Goñi e Hijos, the late Benjamin Gimenez Paz, the late Manuel José Cobo (now Sr. Julio Pena).

SHORTHORNS

FRIDAY'S JUDGING.

Class No. 1 comprised ten entries, and that beautiful white son of a former Palermo winner, Master Do-cess. If the man in charge of the former leader had understood how to show his animal to the same advantage, the placing of the awards might have been different.

The fifth class might justly be described as one of the strongest ever seen at Palermo, and occupied the judge for a considerable time before finally placing the awards.

Eduardo Healy and Pedro T. Pages. What a brave show these nine bulls made! "A picture in itself; a proof of what the Argentine can produce," as one visitor remarked. It is safe to say that no better nine specimens of the Shorthorn breed have been seen at many a Royal of England, and there has certainly never been a finer lot placed before a judge outside of Great Britain.

The first two to be pulled aside by Mr. Law were "New Year's Gift," belonging to Messrs. Ignacio Goffi e hijos, and "Paragon," the property of the Executors of the late Señor Narciso Vivot. The former kept his position to the end, but the latter had to give way to "Best Chief," by Best of All, a former Palermo Champion, coming from the herd of Sr. Eduardo Healy. After a most careful examination of every candidate, the judge's verdict was given in favour of "New Year's Gift," amidst loud applause, and Sr. Healy's bull was awarded the Reserve ticket.

AMOS CRUICKSHANK PRIZE.

From a breeder's point of view this is one of the most coveted honours at the Show, and when Sr. Emilio Meyer Pellegrini framed the conditions under which the award was to be made, he clearly demonstrated that he was familiar with the art of breeding, and what a breeder's aim should be. The prize is given to the best group of five Shorthorns, irrespective of sex or age, but to be bred and shown by the exhibitor, and to be won three times, but not necessarily at consecutive shows, before it becomes to property of any one breeder. In 1913 it was won by Sr. Miguel A. Martinez de Iloz, of estancia Chapadmalal; in 1914 the honour was secured by that veteran breeder, Sr. Leonardo Pereyra, while thus far it has gone to Messrs. Bartolomé Ginocchio and Sons for 3 bulls and 2 cows, one of the latter carrying a beautiful red heifer calf at foot by the $80,000 bull "Americus"—and a right good calf it is too.

FAMILY GROUP PRIZE.

This is another very valuable prize for any breeder to win. It is given to the owner of the best group of three Shorthorns, a cow and two of her progeny which have to be bred and reared in the Republic. Sr. Bartolomé Ginocchio is the donor, and in 1913 and 1914 it was won by Sr. Pedro T. Pages, while by a strange coincidence this year it goes to Messrs. B. Ginocchio and Sons.

JUDGING THE COWS AND HEIFERS

occupied the time of the visiting expert during the greater part of the afternoon. Females this year are an extremely good lot, there being an entire absence of that "tail-end" so frequently seen at former Palermo Shows. Championship honours went to Messrs. Bartolomé Ginocchio and Sons for that grand wealthy, breedy, good-coloured and characteristic roan get of Golden Fame, a bull bred by Sr. M. A. Martinez de Iloz and the winner of the Championship for bulls at the International Show held in the Centenario year at Palermo.

Champion Aberdeen Angus Bull—"Pride of Barreto," exhibited by Messrs. Barreto Bros.

JUDGING THE SHEEP

occupied the various judges throughout the whole day on Friday, and yesterday morning the final verdicts were given in all classes. The long-wooled and black-faced sheep classes at Palermo this year are rather disappointing in some respects. Firstly, entries show a big decrease on figures of many former years, while, comparatively speaking, there are a greater number of inferior sheep. However, on the other hand, taking the principal winners, they are thorough good specimens of the breeds, and should be eagerly sought after when the auctions begin.

It was quite an education for anyone to watch Mr. Charles Clarke judge the Lincolns. A more careful and painstaking judge it would be impossible to find, and therefore it is only natural that his verdict throughout gave entire satisfaction, not a murmur being heard against his decisions. The older ram class provided two pens of grand bodied sheep belonging to Sr. Villafane, and both lots possessed so much quality that it was not an easy matter for the judge to separate them. The fourth prize pen in this class, shown by Celedonio Pereda, were also good sheep, but the trio were spoiled by one of the lot having a badly-shaped jaw.

The young rams were quite the strongest class of the show, and gave the judge a lot of work to separate them properly. Sr. Juan B. Yraizoz proved breed of sheep as the Romney Marsh, a breed that is both popular and in demand in this country at the present time. Messrs. Cipriano Newton and E. St. C. Haydon were the only exhibitors, the former obtaining, with his two-shear rams, both Champion and reserve prizes. Mr. Newton's sheep are true to type, while Mr. Haydon's sheep have been greatly admired for their wool.

The Corriedale breed is only represented by one solitary ram, but we can, upon revising this ram, realize the great popularity these sheep have in New Zealand, the country of their origin. They must have a future in this country, not only on account of their wool and mutton propensities, but for crossing with the coarser Lincolns, thereby at once arriving at a lamb well covered and with fine wool. The Corriedale breeders maintain that these rams breed true to type, whereas a half-bred or Lincoln Merino cross, will not do so.

Mr. Crompton, who so ably judged the black faces, informs us that he finds the sheep well grown and with excellent skins. He also says that he cannot understand how we grow the wool so well and good as in England one does not find such length of staple. Mr. Haydon obtained both Champion and Reserve Champion for Shropshires. The first prize pen of this exhibitor are very even and of great wool and frames. The Champion indeed would be hard to beat.

Dr. Victorina de la Plaza, President of the Republic, witnessing the parade of the prize-winners last Sunday afternoon. On his right is Dr. Calderon, Minister of Agriculture, and on his left Dr. Abel Bengolea, President of the Argentine Rural Society.

gained first and second awards here, and his sheep were full of quality and, in addition to having good sound bodies, carried an abundance of wool of the right sort. It will be remembered that Sr. Yraizoz gained premier honours in the ram class last year also, and the fact that the Champion and Reserve Champion were found in the one pen of his sheep this year speaks for itself. An equal of this year's champion has not been seen at Palermo since the late Manuel José Cobo's palmy days.

Ewes were quite a good display, and the first prize and champion animals were taken from a pen in the young class belonging to the Estancias Cecilio Lopez, Ltd. These were a specially good pen of females, a well-grown and even lot with good backs and bodies carrying plenty of first-quality wool all over. There should be keen competition for these sheep when they enter the sale ring. The first prize pen in the older class were ewes that were afterwards awarded reserve championship. They are the property of Sr. Julio Pena, but bred by the late Manuel José Cobo.

It was rather disappointing to see so few entries in such a grand im-

SUNDAY Official Inaugural Ceremony

The 1915 Agricultural Exhibition held under the auspices of the Argentine Rural Society was duly inaugurated at the well-appointed and spacious grounds at Palermo Sunday afternoon. The weather by no means benignant was nevertheless quite favourable to the occasion and long before the hour appointed for the arrival of His Excellency the President of the Republic and his party all available seating accommodation in the members' and other grandstands was fully taken up, while there was not standing room to be had at any point of vantage around the large show ring; in fact all the drives and sidewalks in the vicinity were thronged with visitors, and never before have we seen such a bumper attendance at the showground. "The crowd has exceeded our most sanguine expectations," said a leading official of the Society to our representative, "but it is about time that the public realised the importance of this exhibition to the country and gave their patronage to it." There is indeed more than a modicum of truth in what this gentleman said, and, to gain some knowledge of what live-stock raising means to Argentina, one has only to digest the speeches made during the afternoon, the main portions of which are embodied in this report.

Almost to the minute of half-past two o'clock, Dr. Victorino de la Plaza, President of the Republic, accompanied by Dr. Calderon, Minister of Agriculture, arrived at the grounds, being met and escorted to the Presidential box, situated in the centre of the members' grandstand, by the President and leading officials of the Rural Society. There were also present the Minister of Public Works, Ministers of War and Marine, the President of the Legislative Assembly, officers of the Supreme Court, the Lord Mayor, the President of the Banco de la Nación, the Chief of Police, various members of the Diplomatic Corps, the visiting Judges from Great Britain, and a large number of specially invited guests from the Capital and Provinces of the Republic.

After the President and his party were comfortably installed in that part of the members' stand specially set apart to accommodate them, Dr. Abel Bengolea made the following speech:—

"In these Expositions we have always relied on the benevolent assistance of the high authorities, both National and Provincial, and of a select and numerous attendance to inspect the products of cattle-breeding. These shows are highly interesting to the public spirit, as demonstrating the country's principal industry, and the improvement that has taken place during the year.

"Agriculture and cattle-breeding belong to the country: they constitute the axle of the country's economy and finance, consequently their successes have a powerful influence on the national prosperity. These of us who have the honourable charge of fomenting and extending these industries, are quite conscious of the responsibility laid upon us, and for that reason we always anxiously await the verdict of the public.

"Although the grave economic problems caused by the crisis, and further complicated by the war, have not as yet been satisfactorily solved, the internal commercial horizon is beginning to clear. Agriculture and cattle have aided in no small measure to bring about this improvement. During the last half year, our exports amounted to $310,910,368, gold, of which agriculture was responsible for $208,869,852, gold, and cattle for $90,592,457, gold, giving a total for both industries of $299,462,309, gold, which represent 96.50 per cent of the general exportation. The decrease of $6,168,362, gold, in the figures for cattle exportation as compared with the first half of last year, is principally due to the effect of the war on certain businesses, and the decreased facilities of shipping, and not to a lack of production on this side. It is therefore apparent that these industries have amply responded to public expectations, and we may count on a production next year that will powerfully influence the re-establishment of the economic-financial equilibrium, provided no prejudicial climatic conditions intervene.

"This exhibition, gentlemen, presents the results of intensive work in cattle-breeding. You see here the seed prepared by expert hands, that is to be diffused all over the country, so that we may later gather the fruits, enormously increased, of our labours. The effort on the part of breeders to perfect their pedigree stock is colossal. It entailed much sacrifice, investment of huge capitals, work on scientific lines and many difficulties that gradually but surely had to be overcome. Fortunately the country can count on having energetic and intelligent men who personally attend their breeding establishments and they in turn are aided by those breeders on a large scale who require pure-bred sires to improve their stock. From this combination of breeders associated with the worthy energy displayed by the Cold Storage Companies, results the organisation of our meat business that preponderates in the world's market.

"In mentioning these points it would be unfair to forget the help accorded by the public authorities and the credit establishments. We are gratefully aware of the interest displayed by all governments, and of the welcome our projects receive from the Honourable Congress. The present moment is not, unfortunately, appropriate for the fulfilment of agrarian legislation with the object of organising production and finance, so we are reluctantly compelled to postpone the realisation of these great schemes that have merited the applause of the public, to a future date, as it entails considerable outlay.

"On the other hand, it is satisfactory to note that the law of agrarian values, as regards cattle, for example, which was promulgated at a critical moment in the business world, had a most beneficial effect. The credit institutions gladly fell in with the arrangements, and, as a result, financial operations are carried out with greater facility, and will continue so while the debtor observes honesty in complying. I do not know the total amounts lent by private banks on live-stock guarantees, but, as regards the Banco de la Nación, I am authorised to state that 507 loans have been granted of a total value of $16,721,000, and further requests are being attended to.

"The organisation that this innovation is responsible for, apart from the direct facilities it affords, is of great value in other directions, as the compilation of agricultural records are very useful. Loans are granted on breeding stock only, and in this way breeders are prevented from disposing of this class of live-stock, though at other times financial difficulties may have tempted them to do so."

After making a few more praiseworthy remarks with reference to the Banco de la Nación, the speaker went on to say that they were not in agreement with the projected law for the postponement of the payment of interests on mortgages, and was of opinion that it would cause grievous harm. He said it was also necessary to take precautions so that too large a number of cattle were not exported from these shores, and, in this respect, their opinion had been expressed to the Executive Power, which doubtless would take the steps that were obviously required. The speaker concluded with the following important statement:—"The Argentine Rural Society thinks, gentlemen, that as it is charged with the vigilance of the two great industries which have such a preponderating influence on the Nation, the Society's views on public matters that concern it should be brought to the knowledge of the national authorities. As to the rest, breeders and agriculturists would continue to work with the energy shown heretofore and with the Society's motto ever before them—"To cultivate the earth is to serve the country."

The Minister of Agriculture, in the name of the Executive Power, then made the following speech of inauguration:—

"I have the honour to assist, for the second time as Minister of Agriculture, to this act of inauguration, which is the most solemn annual ceremony in our country, and demonstrates externally our material progress obtained by the triumphant efforts in the oldest and noblest of industries.

"This year's inauguration is of exceptional importance, as it takes place at a time when the European countries are engaged in a great war, and it should mean for us a new era in our international commercial relations."

He insisted on the necessity of introducing pure blood into the thousands of herds of bad cattle all over the country in order to elevate the general standard of quality, and also to improve the pasture for these animals, instead of allowing them to roam over camp of natural pasture of little value. With the object of aiding this proposition, he mentioned that the Government is actually considering the means of modifying the sanitary regulations referring to the importation of sires. These arrangements which the Government was discussing with England will prove of great advantage to estancieros here.

As regard horse-breeding, the Minister said that the Executive Power had named a commission in which were represented the Argentine Rural Society, the Jockey Club, the Ministers of War and of Agriculture, with the object of studying the subject extensively. The pig-breeding industry, which up to now had been very backward, showed signs of considerable improvement, thanks to the action of two freezing establishments that had commenced slaughtering. In this, as in the other industries, the projected law of agrarian credits of the Executive Power should prove of incalculable benefit.

Champion Shorthorn Cow, "Baronesa Santa Aurelia," with heifer calf at foot, by the $80,000 bull "Americus." Owners and breeders: Messrs. Bartolome Ginocchio and Sons.

The Minister observed that the country's phenomenal progress in a century was such that the founders of the Society, were they to behold it to-day, would think they saw a vision. We had not, however, reached the point we were obliged to occupy, and it was imperative that we should strive to obtain that high position in as short a time as possible. Our cattle-breeding is a long way off producing the maximum we are capable of, and the average quality of our live-stock may be improved, except in some honourable cases, and greater attention should be paid to sanitary arrangements. His remarks did not apply to those worthy estancieros by whose constant efforts the animals now in exhibition were produced. The result of carelessness in breeding was apparent in some provinces where the rate of increase instead of standing at about 80 per cent was really about 40 per cent.

Referring to the damage caused by diseases amongst cattle, His Excellency said that much could be averted by judicious vaccination. The Ministry kept posted in all matters relating to the various diseases, and improved the methods of combating them. It had been proved that the "tristeza" was conveyed by the "garapata," or tick, and, as the latter could be cured, with perseverance the former would disappear. On the other hand, no certain remedy had been yet found for tuberculosis, though experiments were constantly taking place. The figures for this disease in Argentina were below those of other countries, and in 1913 they were 3.5 per cent., in 1914 8.2 per cent., and in 1915 (six months) 10 per cent. The Government, through the Argentine Rural Society, requested breeders to strive to lower even this proportion of disease.

After further remarks concerning diseases of cattle and the work of sanitation that was practised, the Minister concluded:—"I have tried to convey to you, gentlemen, the opinion of the Government regarding these great industries. I have wished to convey to you the highest homage that is justly yours, and I have stated with frankness the deficiencies that are apparent. I feel sure that you will thank me for speaking plainly instead of restricting myself to the laudatory expressions that are generally employed. We desire to crown our efforts with success, and in this respect the Argentine Rural Society will give its decided and efficacious co-operation. With these high ideals, I declare, in the name of His Excellency the President of the Nation, this National Exhibition inaugurated."

Dr. Calderon's speech was concluded amidst loud applause, and the Chief Steward of the Exhibition, Mr. Emilio Meyer-Pellegrini, to whom has fallen the bulk of the work of organisation, then ordered that the exhibits be passed before the presidential box.

Parade of the Prizewinners

Immediately after the conclusion of the speeches, the parade of the prize-winning animals in their respective classes was proceeded with. The first to enter the ring was the champion Shorthorn bull "New Year's Gift," bred and exhibited by Messrs. Ignacio Goñi & Hijos. On arrival in front of the members' stand, a halt was made, and Dr. Plaza rose from his seat to get a good view of one of the most perfect champion Shorthorns that has ever paraded at Palermo. On expressing a wish to be allowed personally to compliment the breeders, His Excellency was informed that Sr. Ignacio Goñi was absent from the country, but his sons Antonio, Eulogio and Ignacio were brought forward to receive the congratulations so richly merited. After the Shorthorn bulls had completed one round of the show ring, the Herefords came next. The parade was concluded with an exciting ten minutes with the Hackneys, an event that annually provides much merriment and applause from spectators.

After partaking of tea and refreshments in the restaurant, the President and his party visited the principal sections of the show, it being after half-past-five o'clock before the departure was taken.

SOLD FOR $60,000

Champion Shorthorn Bull

BOUGHT BY MR. CARLOS W. DRABBLE

WEDNESDAY

A quarter-past-two o'clock yesterday afternoon was the advertised hour at which Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co. had notified the public that they would submit to auction this year's champion Shorthorn bull, "New Year's Gift," bred and exhibited by Messrs. Ignacio Goñi é Hijos, but long before the specified time every available seat was occupied in the spacious selling ring situated behind the members' grand stand, while standing was not to be had in the gallery, neither on the stairways, nor near any part of the ring commanding a view of the proceedings. Hundreds of people were unable to get near enough to hear what the auctioneer was saying, whilst speculation was rife as to what figure Messrs. Goñi's bull would bring. The crowd was greater than that present on the 16th of September, 1913, when all world's records were broken by Mr. Leonardo Pereyra's "Americus" being bought by Messrs. Bartolomé Ginocchio and Co. for $80,000.

Prominent breeders from all parts of the Republic were present, and there was quite a good attendance of the fair sex, who seemed to take a great interest in the proceedings. Punctually at the advertised hour, Don Eduardo Bullrich mounted the rostrum, and, after making an appropriate speech in which he specially eulogised the work done by Mr. A. W. Law, the visiting judge from Great Britain who made the awards in the pedigree Shorthorn class, ordered that "New Year's Gift," the champion Shorthorn bull, should be brought into the ring. With the assistance of several "bomberos" and "vigilantes," assisted by the Chief Steward of the show ground, Sr. Emilio Meyer Pellegrini and his assistante, a passage was made through the eager and anxious crowd and the bull entered to the clapping of hands and prolonged applause.

Strange to say, the first bid was exactly the same as that made in the case of "Americus," $10,000 being called out from the gallery. This was increased by a $5000 nod from Mr. Vivot jr., but Sr. Bernardo Wirsch winked his eye and $20,000 was called; but 22, 25 and $30,000 offers came within the space of four minutes, and after receiving three more nods and winks Don Arturo Bullrich called $40,000 amidst loud applause. At this stage of the proceedings it was difficult to prophesy what the next bid would be, or what the bull would ultimately realise, but $42,000, $45,000, $48,000 and $50,000 were called, loud cheers greeting the last mentioned bid of Mr. Charles Drabble. From this forward, it was plainly evident that the struggle rested between him and Sr. Bernardo Wirsch, the latter gentleman evincing more than usual interest in becoming the purchaser, and at $58,000 it looked as though he was to get the bull, but after some persuasive remarks from the auctioneer, Mr. Carlos Drabble became the proud owner of the 1915 Palermo champion at $60,000.

if ever they are it will be done in this Republic. There is no one that will gainsay this statement.

The sire of this year's Palermo champion is "Sunbeam's Pride," bred by Mr. James MacWilliam, of Garbity, N.B., (who acted as judge at Palermo some few years ago), and was imported to this country and sold to the Messrs. Goñi by that well-known importer of pedigree farm live-stock, Mr. George Campbell. "Sunbeam's Pride" is a half-brother to that famous sire "Pride of Tees," and both were sold in this country for large sums of money. However, Messrs. Goñi have got more than their purchase money back, as they only paid $36,000 for the sire of this year's champion. By a strange coincidence, "Daybreak 6th," the mother of "New Year's Gift," was also imported by Mr. George Campbell.

And now, to return to the sales of yesterday afternoon. After the champ-pause. At $38,000 Sr. Wirsch retired, and at $40,000 the bull became the property of the Executors of the late Sr. Narciso Vivot. The buyers were heartily congratulated on their purchase.

As showing the high esteem in which Mr. Healy's herd is held by breeders, it is only necessary to mention that the 15 bulls sold during the afternoon returned their owner an average price of just over $9,232 each.

The first-prize bull in class I, "Royal Master Donald 4th," belonging to Sr. Tomás de Anchorena, was sold by auction during the afternoon to Sr. Felix de Alzaga for $14,000, and "March On," bred and exhibited by Mr. Eduardo Healy, was taken by the same buyer for $13,000. But these were the highest prices, though demand was firm and trade good. There is every prospect of good prices being paid throughout for good quality cattle.

THE CHAMPION SHORTHORN BULL IN THE SHOW RING AT PALERMO YESTERDAY.

There was immediately great excitement. Cheering, clapping of hands, embracing, hand shakes and congratulations were followed by calls for the breeders, but it was found that only one of the brothers had managed to gain admittance to the ring. The other two were standing some distance away chatting to the judge, Mr. A. W. Law, who with his brother confrères was also unable to get within earshot of what was transpiring. However, when it became known that the figure was $60,000, Mr. Law shook hands with the brothers Goñi, saying: "It's a grand price for a bull mon, but there's nae doubt he's a guid un. I would'na mind haeing a dozen of his sort to tak back wi' me."

Up to the present time, the highest price ever paid for a bull—or a sire of any class for that matter—in any part of the world was $80,000 paid for "Americus," and now yesterday's sale is the next best figure, while the 4,500 guineas sterling paid by Lord Fitzhardinge for the Booth bull "Duke of Connaught" at Lord Dunsmore's sale in England at the time when Shorthorn breeders in the United Kingdom of Great Britain were what was commonly termed "Booth mad," comes next. Will these figures be beaten? We think not! But ion was retired from the ring and the excitement had calmed down, the sale of other bulls from Messrs. Goñi's herd was proceeded with, but the next best price obtained for any individual animal was $11,000, paid by Messrs. Boero Hnos. and Lanfranke for "Diamond Prince 2nd," a grand roan sired by Newton Prince out of Polonaise Zarina.

Mr. Eduardo Healy, through having bred and exhibited the Reserve Champion bull, was the next breeder entitled to submit his bulls to auction. His first animal into the ring was the 1st prize and reserve champion "Best Chief," a grand red and white get of a former Palermo champion, "Best of All," out of Countess Waterloo 4th. Undoubtedly this is a grand bull, and had he been correct on his back would have made things rather unpleasant for the champion. However, he did not lack admirers, no less than twelve different breeders competing for him. From a first bid of $10,000, a rapid advance was made to $25,000, at which sum he stood to Sr. Bernardo Wirsch. After exactly four minutes talk by the auctioneer, a move was made to $27,000, then the even thirty, and the bid of $35,000 by Sr. Wirsch was greeted with loud ap-

Mr. Charles W. Drabble, buyer of the Champion Shorthorn Bull, "New Year's Gift."

THE SHEEP AND HORSE SALES

MONDAY

TRADE AND PRICES GOOD

It was not far off the stroke of ten o'clock yesterday morning when Don Emilio Annoni entered the rostrum in the sheep "galpon" to sell on behalf of his firm, Messrs. J. M. de Yriondo and Co. The first ram to come in was the champion Lincoln, No. 550 from pen 1261, bred and exhibited by Sr. Juan B. Iraizos, who also showed the champion last year and has won numerous honours at the principal shows throughout the Republic. $2,000 was the first offer and this was quickly crowned with another thou, the ram finally becoming the property of Sr. Toribio Sanchez at $5,100, which is quite a good price considering the present scarcity of money.

The reserve champion ram, also bred and shown by Sr. Iraizos, was bought by Sr. Diogenes Ruiz, the well-known auctioneer of Tandil, for $4,000, the same buyer paying $2,900 and $2,800 for two ram lambs from another first-prize pen shown by Sr. Iraizos. These were the highest prices realised for sheep during the day, and left the breeder the handsome average price of just over $2,762 for the eight sold.

$700 to $600 were the highest prices fetched by young rams from the Estancias Cecilio Lopez, Ltda., while Sr. Miguel A. Martinez de Hoz's lot sold up to $1,450, $1,300 and $1,200.

Señor Patricio A. Smith got $2,100, $1,700 and $1,600 for some of his prize-winning rams, while Messrs. Villafañe and Sons' exhibits made up to $1,200, $1,150, and $900; but nothing else in Lincoln rams sold during the day reached the above figures.

The following are the results of the sheep sales:—

BY MESSRS. J. M. DE YRIONDO AND CO.

Messrs. A. Bullrich and Co. sold sheep to the total value of $50,520.

HORSE SALES.

Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co. were the first to commence selling in the horse sale ring. There was a splendid attendance, but bidding was inclined to be very slow, trade being anything but in favour of sellers during the morning when the Percherons were under the hammer.

Shortly after two o'clock in the afternoon the sales were continued, when some of the Shire and Clydesdale stallions were offered. There seemed to be more interest shown for the latter breed and some fairly good prices were realised. The total amount realised throughout the day by Messrs. Bullrich and Co. for stallions of all classes sold was $67,500.

The following is a list of animals sold, and prices obtained:—

TUESDAY

There was quite a large concourse of people at Palermo again yesterday and the sheep galpones were well crowded, when Messrs. Bullrich and Co. resumed their auction, while around the sale ring in which the horses were being sold, there was a large number of interested spectators.

Most interest was shown in the sheep sales, and bidding was quite brisk throughout the day, and occasionally competition was keen for rams of good to fair quality. At the conclusion of their auction yesterday afternoon, Messrs. Bullrich and Co. reported having sold 205 sheep for a total value of $113,350, or close on $554 each, figures comparing very favourably with previous years; and more especially so when it is taken into consideration that there are a lot of very medium quality sheep shown this year.

The highest price paid for any single ram during the day was $1,600, Mr. J. C. Ruiz giving this figure for Sr. Ciprano J. Newton's Romney Marsh Champion. As a proof that this breed is becoming more popular both in this Republic and Uruguay, we may mention that the reserve champion ram, also bred by Mr. C. J. Newton, brought $600, another out of the same pen fetching $400, while practically all Mr. E. St. C. Haydon's rams were bought at good prices with Montevideo as their destination.

In Lincolns, a ram from pen 1284, bred by Sr. Celedonio Pereda, made $700, Sr. Miguel Alcurna being the purchaser, while 2 rams bred by F. Miller and shown in pen 1299, were taken by Sra. Maria de Pradere at $600 each. Sr. José Maria Imaz, who is also making a name for himself as a breeder of good quality pedigree Lincoln sheep, got $800 from Sr. José Aguel for a ram from pen 1287, and $490 from the Executors of the late Sr. R. Liebel, and $450 from Sr. José Luis Bustamante for two other rams from the same pen. Moreover, none of these sheep were mentioned in the list of prize-winners. Strange to say, but nevertheless true, ewes do not seem to be in demand this year, and what have been so far sold have brought very small prices in comparison with the figures realized by the males.

Up to yesterday afternoon Messrs. Bullrich and Co. report having disposed of 109 stallions of various breeds for a total sum of $123,900, or an average of $1,137 per horse, these figures being generally considered very satisfactory. The Hackney stallion, "San Miguel," belonging to Sr. Agustin de Elia, and which won the Championship at Rosario Show this year, was sold yesterday to Sr. H. A. de Leloir for $2,100, at which figure he may be considered to be a good bargain. Sr. Arturo Tomás Bell, of estancia "El Rincon," F.C.S., who has for years past won fame in the prize ring as a breeder of first quality Yorkshire Coaching horses, sold one of his stallions to Sr. Alzoda for $2,100, and one to Mr. Guillermo Whigham for $1,300. In shire stallions sold yesterday, Sr. Miguel Alfredo Martinez de Hoz, the popular owner of estancia "Chapadmalal," F.C.S., easily headed the list by selling his 3-year old unplaced "Latest Sort," by King's Sort, to Sr. Rocha Martinez, for $2,500. Nothing else sold in horses yesterday calls for special mention.

Whether or not the opportune remarks made by Dr. Calderon, Minister of Agriculture, in his opening ceremony speech last Sunday regarding the improved outlook for pig breeding in this country were seriously taken to heart by any of his vast audience, we know not, but it is pleasing to record that there was considerably more animation shown at the pig sales yesterday afternoon than has been the case for some time past. Berkshire boars coming from the herd of Messrs. Carlos Olivera é hijos made such satisfactory prices as $440 and $420 each, while Middle White Yorkshires, bred by Mr. John E. Stent, fetched up to $260. Many Berkshire boars also at $320, $240 and $200, and the 36 boars of various breeds sold during the afternoon realised the handsome total of $6,300, or an average of about $191 each.

There should be a bumper attendance at the showground this afternoon to witness the sale of the

CHAMPION SHORTHORN BULL,

"New Year's Gift," the property of Sres. Ignacio Goñi & hijos. There were insistent rumours afloat yesterday that he would not enter the sale ring to-day, but we have it on fairly good authority that he will come under the hammer this afternoon at 2.15 p.m. However, should his owners decide at the last moment to withhold him for use in their own herd—not an unlikely matter—there will still doubtless be keen competition for many other leading prize-winners in the Shorthorn classes. Everything points to a good trade this year, and it would not at all surprise us to have to record a better all-round average than that obtained the last two years.

On Thursday afternoon there will be another general parade of prize-winners, after which a programme of Hippic Sports will be proceeded with, and, given fine weather, there should be another large attendance of the public.

The following are the principal sales reported yesterday by Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co.:

SHEEP.

Account of Cabaña "La Josefina," the property of Sr. P. T. Pages.—Three ewes from pen 1307 at $120, to Srs. Luis Yriondo y Cia.; 2 from pen 1304 at $120 to same buyers.

LEVEL CROSSING FATALITYWOMAN KILLED ON F.C.O.

Another level crossing fatality occurred yesterday morning, just before 6, when Señora Maria de Gastidú was cut down by a fast train from Once while crossing the metals at Caballito. So severe were the injuries inflicted on her that she died instantly. The customary sagacious practice of arresting the driver and fireman for failing to pull up within forty yards, has been followed.

OBITUARY

MR. WILLIAM DODDS.

The death is announced of Mr. William Dodds who passed away early on Monday morning, Aug. 9, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Weir, of Funes (F.C.C.A.), after a severe and protracted illness. The deceased who had attained the age of 80, left his home at Arroyo Medio about a month ago and entered a Rosario sanatorium, being subsequently removed, after a short stay therein, to Funes, apparently in an improved state of health. His condition, however, rapidly changed for the worse, and following an attack of pneumonia, he succumbed. The funeral took place on Tuesday at the Protestant Cemetery, Rosario, Rev. J. A. Rickards officiating at the burial ceremony. The late Mr. Dodds, who migrated from Scotland 58 years ago, was attached to the Scotch Church at Chascomús, acting as preceptor thereof for over 18 years. Sincere condolences are tendered to his children and relatives on the occasion of their bereavement, the latter of whom are requested to kindly accept this notice as the only intimation of death.

THE LATE MR. N. P. WILLIAMS.

We regret to record the death which occurred suddenly on July 14, of Mr. Nicholas Patrick Williams, formerly of Buenos Aires, which event took place at his residence in London, (Eng.), 37 Hyde Park Gate, W. The deceased gentleman was 58 years of age, and was the younger son of the late General James Edmund Williams, of Dublin. He was at one time an estanciero, and was a big stock breeder in the Argentine, in which he took a keen interest. Since leaving the Argentine some time ago, he had lived considerably on the Continent.

The funeral took place at Kensal Green Cemetery, on Saturday, July 17. Father A. Jackson, of the Carmelite Chapel officiated. The obsequies were of a quiet character, and only a small attendance was present, including Mr. J. Blair Williams, Second Lt., Basil J. Williams (City of London Yeomanry Roughriders) (sons); Mrs. Frank Haydon, Col. James Macartney, Mr. F. Tetley, Miss Lucy Freeland, Miss Close and Miss Grace Sanders. A large number of choice floral tributes were sent as a last token of respect.

FUNERAL OF DON EDUARDO DUGGAN.

The funeral of Mr. Eduardo Duggan, whose lamented death at the early age of 34, from nephritis induced by a severe cold took place on Monday, proceeded to the Cementerio del Norte yesterday at 3.30. The great popularity of the deceased gentleman and the wide esteem in which he was held was evidenced by the very large gathering of friends and mourners at the Cemetery. The assembly was representative of the many activities with which the deceased gentleman was so prominently identified and was as may be perceived composed of many well-known men in the cattle business, commerce, athletics, legislature art and literature. Among those who assisted at the funeral service were:—

Messrs. C. M. de Alvear, A. M. Wilson, E. J. Frias, A. W. Boote, General Uriburu, H. Wilson, E. F. Lynch, L. Pereyra Iraola, C. T. de Alvear, E. Bengolea, R. A. Warner, G. E. St. J. Peters, S. J. DANCE AT THE PLAZA HOTEL

IN AID OF THE KEATING INSTITUTE.

Last night's dance at the Plaza Hotel, which had been arranged by the ladies of the St. Patrick's Society was a most successful and well enjoyed function, in spite of the fact that there were not quite the same number present this year as last, for reasons which are obvious. The proceeds of the dance had been already dedicated to the funds of the Keating Institute, and amongst the ladies who were responsible for this fully appreciated dance, Miss Morgan, Miss Macdonald, Miss Hutchinson, and Miss Harrington are to be mentioned for their untiring efforts in assisting to make the evening a success.

There were a large number of ladies and gentlemen present to enjoy the dancing to the strain of the Plaza orchestra, and amongst them were the following:—Misses Villanueva, Rosa Harris, Cortejarena, Gladys Jacobs, McKeon, Lucy McCruden, Adeline Maguire, L. "MILLER" BULLS AND RAMSA RECORD SHIPMENT.

Mr. Frederick Miller, famous in the first ranks of British live-stock importers, landed yesterday from the s.s. Highland Brigade a record shipment of stock—inasmuch as it comprised, practically, all the Lincoln ram-winners at the last Royal Show held in Nottingham from June 29 to July 3 last.

The total shipment numbered 192 rams and 3 bulls, of which two of the bulls and the pick of the rams will be sold by auction by Messrs. Bullrich and Co. on September 8. The famous Shorthorn bull "Gainford Royal Champion" was first at the Royal Show last year and is the winner of 9 first and several champion prizes.

Perhaps the most notable rams are the 1st and 3rd Royal Show winners in the two-shear-ram class, since they are the very last of the late Mr. Dudding's own breeding that will ever land on Argentine shores. "Dudding" was indeed a name by which to conjure in every mart where Lincolns were shown in any part of the world, and Mr. Dudding's death at Christmas-time the year before last closed a brilliant page in the history of British breeders.

The ram-prize-winners, all of which will be put up to sale on September 8, comprise the following:—1st, 2nd, and 3rd in the 2-shear Class; 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th in the Shearing Class; 1st and 2nd "Pens of 5." and champion and reserve champion, a total of 17 animals, the most highly honoured Lincoln rams in the world, bred by Dudding, Wright, Howard, etc.

The Highland Brigade made a quick passage, as she left Liverpool on July 19 and arrived on August 12.

FROZEN MEAT FROM THE STATESFRENCH RESTRICTIONS REMOVED.

Paris, August 18.

The Provisions Commission recently appointed by the French Government has decided to recommend the cancelling of restrictions on the sale of frozen meat from the United States. Hitherto only certain dealers have been permitted to sell it. Of late the price of the meat has averaged 15 cents the pound.

IMPORTED PEDIGREE SHORTHORN BULLS

Successful Sale by Bullrich and Coy.

AVERAGE OF OVER $9,371 FOR 21 BULLS

This year and for the first time in our recollection, Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co. held an auction of imported pedigree stock in their yards at Calle San Martin 254, on a Sunday, and, strange to say, the "breaking of the Sabbath" was done on account of two Scotsmen, (a nation so respectful of the holy day), wishing to sell their imported animals prior to the annual auctions at the Palermo showgrounds. The saleyard was crowded by interested spectators, seating accommodation being fully taken up long before the advertised hour for selling. Don Eduardo Bullrich wielded the hammer on behalf of his firm, and right well did he do so, securing no less an average than $9,961. Liquid for Mr. Donald MacLennan's 13 bulls, and $8,400 for Mr. R. P. Duncan's 8.

The first bull to come under the hammer was "Redgorton Cruiser," a well-grown 20-months-old roan get of Royal Crest out of Dorothy 12th, and coming from the herd of Mr. A. J. Maxtone Graham, Redgorton, Perth, Scotland. This bull took first prize in his class of 128 at the Perth Show and Saic, also winning the MacLennan Challenge Cup at the same exhibition from 400 other bulls; furthermore, the sire of this bull was bought at Mr. MacLennan's sale in Buenos Aires two years ago by Sr. Leonardo Pereyra for $40,000.

The first offer was $3,000, but this sum increased by substantial bids to $25,000, and after considerable perseverance Don Arturo managed to get the figure to $29,000, the buyer being Sr. Raymundo Pineyro. The next best prices realised for Mr. Donald's bulls were $14,500 paid by Sr. Juan B. Migniqui for "Ranuncula," a dark roan sired by Pride of Edgcote, and $13,500 given by Sr. Narciso Stegmann for "Royal Favourite," a very nice roan bull calf from the herd of Mr. J. E. Kerr, of Harviestoun Castle, Dollar, N.B. The thirteen bulls imported by Mr. MacLennan this year give him an average price of $9,961. The following are particulars of the sales:—

"Redgorton Cruiser," roan, by Royal Crest out of Dorothy 12th.—Price, $29,000; buyer, Sr. Raymundo Pineyro.

"Ranuncula," roan, by Pride of Edgcote out of Lady Ramsden.—Price, $14,500; buyer, Sr. Juan B. Migniqui.

"Royal Favourite," roan by Prime Favourite, dam Butterfly Bell.—Price, $13,500; buyer, Sr. Narciso Stegmann.

"Garbity Proud Champion," by Collynie Chieftan dam Proud Rosebud, bred by Mr. James McWilliam, Garbity Orton, N. B.—Price, $10,000; buyers, Messrs. Mauras e Hijos.

"Golden Broadhocks," by Royal Prince Goldie dam Rose of Underley 8th, bred by Lord Lovat, Beaufort Castle, Beaulieu.—Price, $9,000; buyer, Mr. J. E. MacDonald.

"Ulstermann," red, by Proud Victor dam Waverly Eliza 2nd, bred by Mr. J. J. Moubray, Naemour, Rambling Bridge, N. B.—Price, $8,500; buyer, Sr. José M. Ituralde.

"President of the Herd," roan, by President of the Mint out of Beaufort Queen 6th, bred by Mr. Duncan Stewart, of Millhills, Crief, N. B.—Price, $8,500; buyer, Sra. Maria E. de Salvo.

"Golden Ducat," by Pride of Edgcote out of Golden Lady, bred by Mr. R. Mylie Hill, Balhayock, Perth, N. B.—Price, $7,500; buyer, Mr. John Byrne.

"Redgorton Commandant," red, by Royal Crest dam Crocus Fairy, bred by Mr. A. G. Maxtone Graham, Redgorton, Perth, N.B.—Price, $7,500; buyer, Sra. Maria L. de Bellocq.

"Meteor," roan, by Lex of Cluny out of Carnation 6th, bred by the Hon. James Sievwright, N.C.M.G., Tulharian.—Price, $5,500; buyer, Mr. John E. MacDonald.

"Umpire," roan, by Star of Dawn out of Collyrice Rosaline, bred by Mr. J. J. Moubray.—Price, $5,500; buyers, Messrs. Mauras e Hijos.

"Cluny Prince Windsor," red, got by Nimmo of Cluny out of Windsor Belle 21st, bred by Lady Cathcart, Cluny Castle, Aberdeenshire.—Price, $5,500; buyers, Messrs. Mauras e Hijos.

"Balmakyle Proud Prince," red, by Proud Morning dam Princess Helena, bred by the late C. M. Cameron, Balmakyle, Munlocky, N.B.—Price, $5,000; buyers, Messrs. Angel Velaz and Co.

MR. R.L.P. DUNCAN'S BULLS

AN AVERAGE PRICE OF $8,400.

Immediately after the last bull belonging to Mr. MacLennan had left the ring, the sale of the first eight bulls brought to the country this season by the above-mentioned importer was proceeded with. The highest figure realised by Mr. Duncan was $15,500, paid by Mr. Arthur O'Connor for "Admiral," a grand roan get of Royal Crown out of Augusta 62nd, and a padre fit to head the herd of any es-

The World's Crops

RECORD YIELD IN AUSTRALIA

London, Aug. 18.

Messrs. Broomhall's circular report on the world's crops contains the following information:

United Kingdom.—The crop prospects are distinctly unfavourable, continuous rain delaying the harvesting.

France.—The wet weather which has prevailed during harvesting has further affected the yield, which will be much under that of last year. Quality also is poor, and importation will be large.

Germany.—Officials still claim that the harvest is excellent both in yield and quality.

Russia.—The harvest generally both of winter and spring crops has been good. The Minister of Agriculture reports that supplies are abundant, and there will be a large amount available for exportation.

Rumania.—The harvest is good, but the lack of facilities for exportation is causing much trouble.

India.—Some rain has fallen in the Punjab, but elsewhere the fall has been insufficient. Holders of wheat are very reserved, offering little even at an advance.

Australia.—Sydney reports further beneficial rain in places. The yield of wheat in the Commonwealth is 148 million bushels, the previous record having been 100 million bushels.

Italy.—The weather is fine and harvesting is progressing rapidly. It will be necessary to make arrangements for the importation of only 20 million bushels, as it is reported that the present reserves are liberal.

Spain.—Complaints are general of poor yields.

North Africa.—Good yield, export movement moderate.

Scandinavia.—Weather more favourable, but yield smaller than last year.

establishment. Two other splendid bulls sold on behalf of Mr. Duncan were "Orion of Cluny," $14,500, and "Royal Marshall," $12,000. The latter, in our opinion, was a particularly cheap bull. The following are particulars of the animals sold:—

"Admiral," roan by Royal Crown dam Augusta 62nd, bred by Mr. John J. Reid, Cromlybank Ellen, N.B.—Price, $15,500; buyer, Mr. Arthur O'Connor.

"Orion of Cluny," roan, by Edgcote Jester dam Daisy 5th, bred by Lady Cathcart, Cluny Castle, Aberdeenshire.—Price, $14,500; buyer, Sra. Maria de Pradere.

"Royal Marshall," roan, by Royal Stamp out of Spley May, bred by Mr. Wm. Anderson, Saphock, Old Meldrum.—Price, $12,000; buyer, Sr. Bernardo Wirsch.

"Oscar," red, by Dunglass Marshall dam Orange Blossom 17th, bred by Messrs. W. and J. Peterkin, Dunglass, N.B.—Price, $7,500; buyer, Mr. E. Baker, on commission for Mr. Carlos A. Brown.

"Polmaise Pacha," roan, by Proud Massa out of Lady Dora, bred by Major A. B. Murray, Polmaise Stirling, N.B.—Price, $5,500; buyer, Messrs. Angel Velaz and Co.

"Boquhan Sovereign," red by Proud Monarch out of Pure Gold, bred by Mr. Stephen Mitchell, Boquhan Kippon, N.B.—Price $4,800; buyer, Sr. Manuel Ballester.

"Rosewood Prince," red, by Collynie Golden Prince dam Rosewood 94th bred by Mr. Robert L. P. Duncan, Harthill, Whitehouse, Aberdeenshire. Price $4,200; buyer, Sr. Eugenio Rosa.

"Augusta's Pride," roan, by Collynie Golden Prince out of Augusta 114th, also bred by Mr. Duncan.—Price, $3,200; buyer, Mr. Nicholas P. Murphy.

The eight bulls made an average price of $8,400.

AN OCEAN TRAGEDY

BARQUE'S CREW ATTACKED BY BERI-BERI

New York, August 17.

A Peruvian barque, the Alliance, laden with sugar, has arrived in port from Callao. The entire crew except the captain have been attacked by Beri-Beri. Five died and were buried at sea.

THE NEW PORT WORKS

JULY PAYMENT.

The Government Executives have yesterday afternoon authorised the payment of $444,436.36 to the management of the New Port Works for the amount of construction and work done during the month of July. The amount as stated will be paid over to the New Port Works in paper value.

ACCIDENT AT AVELLANEDA

MAN KNOCKED DOWN BY TRAIN

Alfonse Letreve, a Frenchman, aged 42, who was walking on the Southern Railway yesterday morning, was knocked down by a fast train for La Plata, just outside Avellaneda Station. More fortunate than most who suffer such accidents and who are almost invariably killed on the spot, Letreve escaped with his life but, was removed to the Fiorito Hospital, where he is being treated for serious internal injuries.

CULTIVATION OF RICE AND CAPERS

A BOOM IN CORRIENTES

In the Province of Corrientes a stimulus has been given to the rice and spurge (caper) harvest. Owing to the excellent results obtained last year from the small holding, it has been decided to lay down these cereals in much greater abundance and the encouragement received by the present price of the latter commodity, namely $7 per 10 kilos has caused quite a number of planters to increase their sowing.

STATE RAILWAY REVENUE

A SMALL INCREASE.

A report received from the management of the State Railway Department, in which is given the returns for the past week shows an appreciable increase over the amounts of the equivalent week of the previous year.

Up to the fourteenth of August of the current year the turnover represented $328,430.48, which is an increase of $70,004.11 on the last twelve months. The North Central Line has produced the best returns, and this turnover leaves but a small margin for the other State Railways. The figure officially reported is $248,115.71.

The total turnover for the year is $8,553,890.89, which shows a small increase of $211,153.31 over the corresponding seven months of 1914. There is yet much improvement to be made on the State Railways.

GENEVA EXPRESS DISASTER

4 PERSONS KILLED; 48 INJURED.

Geneva, August 18.

A telegram from Zurich announces that the Geneva express came into collision last night with a local passenger train at Dietikon near Zurich with the result that four persons were killed and forty-eight injured.

THE SUGAR HARVEST

INCREASE DEMAND TO BALANCE POOR SUPPLY.

Throughout Tucuman Province the greatest activity exists in the various sugar mills which are already coming to the end of their season's milling. This year on account of the severe frosts the production has been poor and inferior to previous years. It is firmly believed that the actual financial loss will be infinitesimal, because an increased demand is expected, which will bring higher prices.

WHITE STAR LINER "ARABIC"

SUNK WITHOUT WARNING

More American Lives Lost

English and Foreign Press Comment

London, August 19.

The report that the steamship Arabic has been sunk by a German submarine has been confirmed.

The vessel was bound from Liverpool to New York and was sunk at 9.15 a.m. to-day off the Irish coast, going down in eleven minutes.

It is understood that fifteen boats loaded with passengers and crew have reached the coast.

BOATS MAKING FOR QUEENSTOWN.

New York, August 19.

A message to the office of the White Star Line states that the Arabic was sunk this morning. Fifteen or sixteen boatloads of people are making for Queenstown. No other direct news have been received by the Company and it is inferred that the greater number of people on board were rescued.

FOUNDERED IN ELEVEN MINUTES.

London, August 19.

It is reported that the Arabic was sunk off the Fastnet, four miles south-west of Cape Clear. It is said that she foundered in eleven minutes. Later advices are doubtful that there was no loss of life.

400 SURVIVORS PICKED UP BY PASSING STEAMER.

London, August 19.

Information have been received from Central News says that the crew of the Arabic succeeded in launching eleven life boats which picked up many passengers. The number of those drowned is as yet unknown. An Exchange telegram says that a rescuing steamship has 400 persons on board. Weather condition are favourable.

London, August 20.

Forty-eight of the passengers on board the White Star liner, Arabic, at the time she was torpedoed are still missing. Four of these are of American nationality.

The report appears to have been confirmed that the vessel was torpedoed without warning.

WOUNDED SURVIVORS IN HOSPITAL.

London, August 20.

A telegram from Queenstown reports that many survivors of the liner Arabic arrived there yesterday evening. Many of them are suffering from wounds and contusions and thirty have been taken to the hospital.

The survivors declare that the vessel was attacked suddenly and those on board had barely time to put on the lifebelts and throw themselves into the sea before she sank.

FOUR HOURS IN THE BOATS.

Some of the passengers say that they were walking about on deck watching a ship in the horizon and discussing the possibility of being attacked when without any previous warning the explosion took place. Ten boats and all the rafts were immediately lowered, and many who had thrown themselves into the sea were soon picked up. Most of the passengers were four hours in the boats until they were rescued. The injured suffered greatly during that time.

TWO AMERICAN LIVES LOST.

London, August 20.

At noon to-day an official report denies the report that four American passengers by the Arabic are missing and still unaccounted for; but those who are known to have been lost are Mrs. Josephine Bruguere of New York and Edmund Woods of Janesville, Wis.

Thirty persons of other nationalities are reported missing and are believed to have been drowned, making the total deaths thirty-two.

Queenstown advices despatched early to-day said that a revised count has shown that 391 survivors were landed there by the salvage steamers last night.

$15,000,000 OF U.S. SECURITIES ON BOARD.

London, Aug. 20.

It is understood that the Arabic was carrying from ten to fifteen million dollars' worth of American securities, all insured with the underwriters at Lloyds. Various financial institutions were busy this afternoon looking up details and arranging for claims.

DIRECTORS' ALL-NIGHT VIGIL.

Liverpool, August 20.

The scenes that occurred when the Lusitania was sunk were repeated when the sinking of the Arabic was announced, many of the relatives of passengers by the latter vessel hastening to the offices of the White Star Line to learn what news was to hand. One of the passengers is a survivor of the Lusitania tragedy.

The directors of the company remained in their offices all night.

According to the Captain's records, the passengers aboard the Arabic consisted of 143 British, 25 Americans, 3 French, 1 German, 1 Belgian, 3 Russians, 1 Swiss and a Spaniard.

LONDON PRESS COMMENT ON THE ARABIC MURDERS.

London, August 20.

The "Daily Telegraph," "Daily News" and "Daily Express," voicing the consensus of British opinion, say, in effect:—

"The torpedoing of the Arabic without warning was a more flagrantly illegal and inhuman act than was the sinking of the Lusitania.

"The Arabic was outward bound from Liverpool. She carried no munitions and was unarmed. Among the passengers was a number of American citizens.

"After the Lusitania tragedy Washington advised Berlin that a repetition of such an illegal attack would be regarded by America as a 'deliberately unfriendly act'."

"WHAT WILL WASHINGTON DO NOW?"

After denouncing the attack on the Arabic as a "twice-damned deed calculated to murder," the "Daily Telegraph" asks "What will Washington do now?"

The financial editor of the "Daily Telegraph" says that the White Star fleet is owned by the Ocean Navigation Company, which was turned in 1902 into the International Marine Company of New Jersey, otherwise known as Morgan and Company.

The latest outrage by German submarines was therefore a direct attack on American property, and the loss of the vessel will depreciate the value of the shares which are held by the American company.

VESSEL'S COMMANDER INTERVIEWED.

London, Aug. 24

"The Times" publishes a telegram from Liverpool containing the opinions of Capt. Finch, of the Arabic, interviewed at his residence in Liverpool. He states that there is not the slightest doubt that his ship was sunk by a deliberately fired torpedo.

It was not remarkable that the periscope was not perceptible, but the foaming wake of the torpedo through the water was distinctly visible. There was no possibility of error for as soon as the track reached the ship's side the explosion followed. The first and second officers and many passengers saw the wake of the torpedo. Captain Finch is certain that those on board the submarine saw the Arabic clearly when they discharged the missile. As to why none of the passengers saw the submarine, these vessels can sink leaving only a small fraction of the periscope visible when discharging their projectile, and in such circumstances it is impossible to see the submarine and scarcely possible to distinguish the periscope. The idea of the explosion being due to a mine, is absurd.

AMERICA AND THE ARABIC

Little Danger of Rupture with Germany

AUSTRIAN PRESS COMMENT.

New York, Aug. 25.

Radiograms from Berlin continue to assert that the Arabic was sunk by striking a mine, or probably had explosive bombs on board which destroyed her. There is no news of any German submarine being on the spot where the affair occurred.

The German Government will make a careful investigation of the occurrence and send their official finding to the American State Department.

DANGER OF RUPTURE DIMINISHING.

Washington, Aug. 25.

The opinion gains ground daily that the danger of a rupture of relations between the United States and Germany is diminishing. The State Department accepts the German Ambassador's proposal that the White House shall await the German explanations of the sinking of the Arabic before forming any resolution.

The fact has caused an excellent general impression, and the anxiety regarding a possible conflict is disappearing.

It is rumoured that the recent complications arising out of the submarine campaign between Germany and the United States has roused too many delicate questions to permit President Wilson to act the part of mediator at present.

"AN ACCIDENT TO ONE OR TWO AMERICANS."

Zurich, Aug. 25.

The Austrian Press has begun to give opinions on the Arabic question. The "Neue Freie Press" says that one thing is quite certain: the American Government has now every ground to consider the grave perils to peace involved by its policy.

It is absurd that an accident to two or three Americans in the war zone should endanger peace between two great nations. Germany has made reasonable proposals which would absolutely prevent such threatening incidents.

Should the Arabic affair develop further difficulties, the Dual Monarchy would deeply deplore it.

Possibly when the affair is cleared up, America may be led to revise her policy.

GERMAN SUBMARINE AGROUND

BALKAN MINISTERS IN ROME

Rome, Aug. 25.

All the Ministers of the Balkan States in the Italian Capital paid visit to-day and conferred with Baron Sonnino, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The various meetings were separate and private confirming the opinion that the Balkan affair has entered on a separate and definite phase.

The Press says there is nothing new but that the Allies have lost no ground in the Diplomatic conflict.

Latest opinions are that Rumania will enter the war on the first days of September when the Dardanelles conflict will have taken another aspect.

Territory for Bulgaria

SERBIAN MINISTERS DISCUSS ALLIES' PROPOSALS.

New York, Aug. 25.

Reports from Nisch state that a Council of Ministers is taking place in that city to decide on the proposals put forward to Serbia by the Triple Entente in respect to territorial concessions to Bulgaria with a view to reconstituting the Balkan League.

DECISION WITHIN FORTY-EIGHT HOURS.

New York, Aug. 25.

A London despatch reports that the Serbian Council met to-day at Nisch to consider their reply to her proposal that Serbia secure Bulgaria's assistance by ceding certain territories. Some quarters confidently predict Bulgaria's entry into the war, and the Serbian decision is expected to be made known within forty-eight hours. The London Press appears optimistic to-day on the Balkan situation, although these views are not entirely shared in diplomatic circles.

Effect of Intervention

1,000,000 TROOPS FOR THE ALLIES.

London, Aug. 25.

A despatch from Rome, published by the "Daily Telegraph" says that if the Balkan League can be reconstituted, it will bring a million of troops to the aid of the Allies. No despatches have arrived from Athens, from which it is presumed that pending the outcome of the Council at Nisch, the Greek Government is exercising a strict censorship.

Will Remain Neutral

BULGARIA'S POSITION IN THE GREAT WAR.

New York, Aug. 25.

From Athens it is stated that the Bulgarian Minister there, has given assurances that his country will take no action hostile to Greece.

The Bulgarians will remain neutral in the conflict and await the fulfilment of their desires.

TREATY WITH TURKEY REGARDED AS TRIUMPH FOR TEUTONS.

New York, Aug. 25.

It is reported from Berlin that the Turco-Bulgarian treaty is regarded as a triumph for the Central Empires. Full confidence is expressed that the benevolent neutrality of Bulgaria is assured.

DEAF EAR TO RUMANIAN PROPOSALS

Sofia, Aug. 25.

It is said that Rumania desires to ensure Bulgarian support in case of a conflict with the Central Empires. It seems that the Bulgarian Government has rejected all overtures of this nature hitherto made to it.

Italy's Offensive

EFFECTIVE ARTILLERY FIRE

Rome, Aug. 25.

"La Tribuna" says the artillery fire against the hollow of Plezzo is giving excellent results, and that the fortifications are sustaining such damage that the Austrians cannot possibly repair them during the night while the infantry watch incessantly for opportunities for successful attacks on the enemy's positions. The enemy has been obliged to evacuate his advanced trenches lest the occupants should be annihilated by the Italian fire.

Rising in the Yemen

POSSIBLE OVERTHROW OF TURKISH RULE.

Rome, Aug. 25.

A telegram from Assab to the "Corriere della Sera," of Milan, says that the rebellion in Yemen is assuming proportions dangerous to the Turks who, in their conflict with the Allies cannot spare forces to subjugate Said Yovios, who is receiving promises and assistance on all sides, having greatly strengthened his position and influence with the tribes in the last two years. He has made great preparations and his vanguard is near Hodeida, which being feebly garrisoned, he hopes to take by assault. One or two defeats of the Ottoman troops will bring all the tribes of Yemen against them and produce complete independence from the rule of Constantinople and Turkey.

BATTLE IN THE BALTIC

GERMAN FLEET BEATEN

SINKING OF THE MOLTKE

Petrograd, Aug. 23.

An official notice just published states in detail that on August 16 the German fleet in strong force renewed operations against our positions along and at the mouth of the Gulf of Riga. On the 16th and 17th, our ships repulsed the initial attacks of the enemy, whose preparations for entering the gulf had been singularly favoured by misty weather. Taking advantage of the prevalence of this and of actual thick fog, the enemy in considerable numbers entered the gulf on Wednesday 18th. Our vessels retired continuously firing on the enemy with their batteries and without losing touch with him. On Thursday and Friday, the enemy reconnoitred in various directions, at the same time keeping up the fight with our ships, which inflicted material losses on them and especially on their torpedo destroyer flotilla. We lost the gunboat Sivoutchy, which perished gloriously in an unequal fight with a German cruiser which was escorting the destroyers and engaged her at a distance of 400 yards. Although burning fiercely and in parts enveloped in flame, the Sivoutchy worked her guns to the last, firing shot for shot until she sank, having previously accounted for one of the enemy's destroyers.

In view of the losses suffered and the evident futility of his efforts, the enemy evacuated the Gulf on Saturday the 21. Between August 16 and 21, two cruisers and at least eight destroyers were either sunk outright or put out of action.

Simultaneously, our gallant Allies succeeded in torpedoing in the Baltic one of the most powerful Dreadnought units of the German fleet. This is now known to have been the Moltke.

GERMAN FLEET OUTMANOEUVRED AND DECEIVED.

Paris, August 23.

Despatches from Petrograd insistently declare that the battle cruiser Moltke was destroyed by a British submarine in the Gulf of Riga. It is also reported that the Russian squadron is pursuing and harassing the retreating Germans in their precipitate retreat to the south. It is supposed that several Russian ships obtained this signal success supported by some British submarines. The enemy was outmanoeuvred and deceived, having supposed that the Russians were in flight.

BRITISH SUBMARINES EXPLOIT.

Petrograd, August 23.

Information from an official source in the battle in the Gulf of Riga states that the destruction of the Moltke was not due to the fire of the Russian ships but to the action of a British submarine operating in those waters.

DENIED BY BERLIN.

New York, Aug. 25.

Radiotelegrams from Berlin state that the sinking of the Moltke is denied there. A German detailed account of the naval operations in the Baltic will be published shortly.

[It will be remembered that, in addition to the ordinary Press cables, the British Foreign Office despatch to Sir Reginald Tower also contained the news of the sinking of the Moltke—Ed "The Herald"]

BRITISH TRANSPORT ON FIRE

ANGLO-CALIFORNIAN ABLAZE OFF MONTREAL.

New York, Aug. 24.

The steamship Anglo-Californian, with 1100 horses on board for the British Government, is on fire off Montreal. There are no details as to the damage or losses suffered.

SUBMARINE BASE WRICKED

40 BRITISH WARSHIPS BOMBARD ZEEBRUGGE

London, August 24.

The Admiralty has received details of the bombardment of Zeebrugge and amplification of the first reports.

The British squadron attacked Zeebrugge and a portion of the Bruges Canal, in which the Germans had constructed covered shelters to conceal submarines, and from which the latter were wont to sally to pursue their inhuman work in the North Sea and British territorial waters.

The British aviators located these concealed vessels in every case under their protecting covers and indicated the range to the warships which opened an increasingly fierce fire upon the positions from their largest guns. The results were most felicitous. In every case the cover, sheds or protection was entirely destroyed. Fires and terrific explosions occurred, and the submarines and destroyers concealed in these shelters have been entirely destroyed. Several tried to escape up the canal, but were observed and either sunk or blown to pieces. The Admiralty believes that not one of these boats has escaped without the severest injuries.

40 WARSHIPS ENGAGED.

London, Aug. 24.

The "Daily Mail's" Rotterdam correspondent reports that at daybreak yesterday a British squadron of forty cruisers and destroyers bombarded Zeebrugge and the adjoining coast. As soon as the grey twilight of the dawn showed the chimneys of the Solvay works against the sky, the cruisers opened fire from a distance of nine miles. The flare of the shells could be seen bursting on the mole and in the works which supply the German submarines with electric power. As the light improved the cruisers found their target more surely still, and proceeded along the coast under easy steam well beyond the mine area firing incessantly. The coast was bombarded also from the Oster Knocke. Shells burst among the dunes where the German 16-inch guns defending Zeebrugge are supposed to be concealed. A destroyer daringly went close in shore to draw the fire of the German batteries, which opened all along the coast. The fire was most violent at Knocke and Zeebrugge, where the new big guns have recently been laid in concrete emplacements. The Garrison of Zeebrugge remained in their specially prepared shelters, but the marines at Knocke paraded behind the Grand Hotel, as their officers plainly feared a British attempt to land. A German aeroplane ascended, but the British directed their fire on the enemy's batteries. During the bombardment, which lasted several hours, eyewitnesses state that the British shells fell with remarkable accuracy and rapidity. The British fire thoroughly searched the dunes and their batteries were repeatedly hit. The shore batteries seemed to make no impression on the ships, most of their shells falling short. Some of the British shells exploded in the country behind Zeebrugge. The bombardment resembled in power of fire developed and duration that on November 14 last year, and many guns at Knolhe and Heystand were put out of action.

RUSSIAN AIRMEN RAID CONSTANTINOPLE

Allies' Cruisers Again Bombard Dardanelles Forts

Athens, Aug. 25.

Reports from Tenedos state that fighting at Gallipoli has been favourable to the British who have inflicted heavy loss on the enemy by fierce bayonet charges.

Many soldiers and Turkish officers have remained prisoners in the hands of the British.

The struggle continues with the utmost fury at various parts of the line.

British warships continuously cannonade the enemy from the Gulf of Saros.

RENEWED BOMBARDMENT BY ALLIES CRUISERS.

The newspapers publish telegrams from Athens announcing the fact that two cruisers of the allied squadron have penetrated into the Dardanelles and have bombarded Kastanea with

MORE TURKISH TRANSPORTS SUNK.

Athens, Aug. 25.

United Press messages report that several allied warships entered the Dardanelles yesterday and bombarded the Kastanea batteries with considerable effect. Dispatches also say that a British submarine sank four Turkish sloops carrying troops from Lapsayi to Gallipoli. Heavy fighting has been resumed in the Krithia and Aviburnu region. A Mytilene report says that the Australians at Suola Bay took a Turkish trench yesterday after a fierce encounter.

TURKS LOSE 800 YARDS OF TRENCHES.

Paris, Aug. 25.

An official report says, the period of five days since issuing the last Dardanelles communication has been marked by further progress of the British left wing in the northern zone.

These British troops occupied another 800 yards of enemy trenches in the southern zone. Other operations have been confined to artillery actions and fighting between patrols.

On the night of August 23-24 a French company completely surprised some Turkish positions used by the enemy for listening purposes. On the morning of August 25 a detachment of Turks tried to recapture the position but were repulsed.

On August 20 our squadron successfully bombarded the point of debarkation at Achachilman on the European side of the strait north of Nagara.

In spite of a violent fire from the hostile batteries one of four aviators also sank a large Turkish transport lying at anchor.

TURKISH ARMY REINFORCED.

New York, Aug. 25.

Communications from Constantinople via Berlin state that the Turkish army on the Gallipoli Peninsula have just received re-inforcements to the number of 40,000, fully equipped and organised.

Marshal von der Goltz has inspected the new army and expressed his complete satisfaction with their organisation.

Constantinople Raided

VISIT BY RUSSIAN AIRMEN.

London, Aug. 25.

Telegrams from Athens are published stating that Russian aviators have bombarded the environs of Constantinople. These despatches state that 41 persons were killed or wounded and that the raid of the Russian aviators has caused an intense panic in the Turkish capital.

PANIC IN THE CAPITAL.

Petrograd, Aug. 25.

After the first attack, the Russian aviators made other flights over Constantinople, renewing the intense panic reigning among the Turkish populace. A heavy artillery fire opened on the aerial squadron proved entirely ineffective.

AUSTRALIAN TRENCH-DIGGERS DISCOVER NUGGETS.

New York, Aug. 25.

From Athens it is announced that the Australian troops in the Gallipoli peninsula while digging trenches have discovered numerous gold nuggets.

The discovery has caused a sensation, as it is believed that the find is a valuable one. General Hamilton has ordered experts to enquire into the matter and report upon in the briefest space of time possible.

HEAVY INCREASE CAUSED BY WAR.

New York, Aug. 25.

In financial circles it is stated that the Dutch-American line of steamships has accumulated profits of over 30 million dollars since the commencement of the war. Other steamship companies, too, have made fabulous profits.

GERMAN DESTROYER SUNK

BY FRENCH VESSELS OFF OSTEND.

Paris, August 23.

The French Government officially announces that two French destroyers sank a German destroyer off Ostend. The communication adds that both destroyers returned to port undamaged.

THE BRITISH OFFENSIVE

Troops Concentrating at La Bassee

FRENCH SUCCESSES NEAR ARRAS

London, Aug. 25.

The British in the La Bassee region are developing the most extreme activity, having concentrated large bodies of troops there.

The British artillery has scourged the entire front of the enemy with intense shell fire, with only slight intermissions and has established what appears to be a distinct and permanent superiority over the enemy.

SUPERIORITY OF FRENCH ARTILLERY FIRE.

Paris, Aug. 25.

Recent reports state that artillery duels of intense violence are proceeding in the Meuse and Moselle districts. The French pieces prove increasingly their superiority over the German guns, and have caused severe ravages in the enemy's ranks.

FRENCH PRESSING HOME OFFENSIVE NEAR ARRAS.

Paris, Aug. 25.

A despatch to the Ministry of War states that the French are concentrating to the north of Arras, to strengthen the already powerful offensive which has not been checked in spite of the enemy's counter attacks. It is known that the French troops have pushed the Germans back during the last battles and have captured numerous prisoners and great quantities of material.

ARTILLERY WARFARE IN ARTOIS

Paris, Aug. 25.

Official despatches state that in Artois, in all sectors north of Arras, sharp cannonading took place during last night. Some fighting with bombs and grenades took place round Souchez and Neuville. In the district about Roye and Lassigny violent artillery duels continue. Only minor conflicts are reported in the Vosges. There was fighting with grenades at Barrenkopf. Last night one of our aeroplanes bombarded Torrach station in the Grand Duchy of Baden.

Peace Proposals

BY GERMAN SOCIALISTS.

New York, Aug. 25.

Berlin telegrams state that the Socialist Press publish the results of conferences among the members in the Reichstag and the Party Committee on Peace aims. These are that a peace must be permanent leading Europe into closer inter-relations.

Germany's opponents must not be permitted to acquire any German territory.

The "most favoured nation" clause should be inserted in all treaties and all Belligerents' Tariff walls as far as possible removed.

Freedom of the seas should be established and right of capture abolished; all straits important to the world's commerce should be internationalised.

Austria and Turkey must not be weakened by annexation nor must the rights of other people's to self government be violated by the annexation of foreign territory. Such action weakens harmony and strength of the German nation and is therefore opposed. All schemes of the kind by short sighted politicians favouring conquest are bad.

Sunk by the Sea Huns

BRITISH FISHERMEN DONE TO DEATH.

London, August 21.

A German submarine has attacked and sunk two fishing boats in the North Sea. The crews perished.

DUTCH TRAWLER SUNK.

Amsterdam, August 21.

The Dutch trawler, Ymuiden, has been sunk in the North Sea off Ameland by a mine or German submarine. The crew has been landed.

TEN SEAMEN DROWNED.

New York, August 23.

A telegram from London reports the sinking of the British steamer Diomed of 4000 tons by a German submarine and the drowning of ten members of her crew.

BRITISH SCHOONER SUNK.

London, August 23.

The British three-masted schooner, Martha Edmonds, has been sunk by a German submarine. The crew escaped and have been landed.

PASSENGERS SEIZED FROM NEUTRAL VESSELS.

New York, August 24.

A correspondent recently returned from Scandinavia says that the German submarines have of late adopted the practice of detaining neutral ships in the North Sea and demanding the surrender of enemy passengers of military age. These proceedings, at a hundred miles from the Norwegian coast may, or may not, be legal but add much anxiety to the passage.

FISHERMEN LOST IN THE NORTH SEA.

London, Aug. 24.

The fishing vessel Boyle has been attacked and sunk by a German submarine in the North Sea. Three of her crew perished.

London, Aug. 25.

Lloyd's Agency confirms the report that the British steamer Silva has been sunk by a German submarine. The crew escaped.

Submarine Victims

FUNERAL SERVICE IN DENMARK

London, Aug. 25.

An Exchange Telegram from Copenhagen says that the steamship Vidal has sailed for Hull carrying the corpses of fourteen men killed by the German fire after the British submarine grounded in Danish coastal waters. A funeral service was held before the ship sailed, at which several Ministers and Commander Layton R.N. of the submarine, were present, also the remaining survivors and Danish Naval officers and representatives of the British Legation. The coffins were reverently carried on the shoulders of Danish sailors, carried between decks and placed in an improvised chapel. They were covered by the British and Danish flags. A great crowd on the water front, respectfully saluted the flag and the coffins. As the Vidal steamed out, minute guns were fired in salute.

Oufenburg Raided

FRENCH AIRMEN'S SUCCESS.

New York, Aug. 25.

Radio-telegrams from Berlin confirm the statement that French aviators have bombarded Oufenburg, and that 12 persons were killed and several injured.

In Berlin it is announced that the Germans by way of reprisal will bombard Paris, and other important towns.

RUSSIAN ARMY'S GROWING DANGER

German Commanders Continue Flanking Movements

RUMOURED APPEAL FOR JAPANESE AID

Story of German Failure to Land at Pernau

New York, Aug. 25.

Berlin despatches say that the German advance on Brest Litovsk continues without interruption.

The Austro Hungarian troops are now less than ten kilometres from the exterior defences and have begun to bombard them.

It is added that Marshal von Hindenburg is making an enveloping movement on the strong places of Grodno, Vilna and Dvinsk.

TURNING THE RUSSIAN FLANKS.

New York, Aug. 25.

A United Press dispatch from Berlin via the Hague says that the German advance is now only held back by rearguard actions. Marshal von Hindenburg is closing in on Vilna, and the Slavs are again retreating after fruitless attempts to stop the German forward movement by heavy counter attacks. The capture of Vilna is looked for in a few days.

Both Kovno and Kovel, the extremes of the Russian defensive line which has its centre at Brest Litovsk, are now in the hands of the Austro-Germans. Grodno and Bielostok are also expected to be taken in a few days.

Possibly the Russians may make a stand behind Brest Litovsk, despite the swampy nature of the ground around the fortress.

The enveloping movements on the Western and South-Western fronts are proceeding satisfactorily. The Russians have been driven to cover in the outer works, which are now actually being attacked.

The Bavarians have fought their way several miles east of the railway to Bielsk, and occupy the eastern part of the bailowienka forest. The Russians are falling back on the Lake district, and it is reported that the Austrians have made numerous prisoners.

RUSSIAN ARMY IN DANGER.

New York, Aug. 25.

A London telegram says that the Russians defending Brest Litovsk are placed in a very dangerous position by the arrival of a force of German cavalry at Kovel as part of a manoeuvre to turn their flank. German Austrian sources announce the actual capture of Kovel by the Teutonic forces.

The German Failure

TO LAND TROOPS AT PERNAU.

Petrograd, Aug. 25.

A Russian official just arrived from Pernau says that on the evening of August 19, the elite of the city were assembled in the Naval Park listening to a band concert when a policeman advised them to disperse. A German ship was then observed on the horizon where she remained for some time making observations.

It appeared later that the Russians signalled her to stop, not knowing her nationality. The signals were not answered.

The people were in no way alarmed until the thunder of cannon woke them in the night. The smoke was visible of seven German ships, of which three seemed light cruisers and four large transports. The Russian shore batteries then began to fire, and the cruisers replied. The noise rose into a continuous crescendo roar, a very chaos of sound. Owing to the shallow water in shore the German ships were quite three miles away. Their fire was heavy but their practice poor and inaccurate. Nobody in Pernau was killed, although a few deaths occurred at Oretors. The railway line was damaged but quickly repaired. The Germans kept up an incessant fire from eleven at night until three the next afternoon.

People of all classes ran to the station in a panic and crowded the trains to excess. Many were carried away even on the roofs, and as the trains moved slowly through the suburbs, passengers climbed up as they passed. The hulls of three German transports crippled by the Russian guns were plainly visible from the railway. On the enemy's repulse the people returned with the Postal and Telegraph officials.

Another account states that the Russians captured the German transports and sloops laden with landing parties. Two torpedo vessels were sunk.

Ossowetz Garrison

EVACUATES FALLEN FORTRESS.

Petrograd, Aug. 25.

In accordance with orders received from the army authorities, the garrison of Ossowetz on August 22 joined the Russian field army, evacuating the fortress after blowing up the permanent fortifications, burning the wooden structures and removing or rendering useless all guns thus concluding a gallant defence of the place which commands the principal crossing of the Bobr River.

Commenting on the abandonment of the fortress, War Office officials say that though peculiarly adapted for defence by the marshes surrounding it, that fact also operated as a disadvantage as being cut off by marshes, neither manœuvres nor sorties were feasible. Its importance disappeared with the abandonment of the line of the Bobr River.

Bialostok is still in Russian hands but the Germans hold large part of the railway to the north-west and will make every effort to extend their lines towards Grodno. Meanwhile the Austro-Germans press on the flanks of Brest-Litovsk from north and south. Serious battles are developing near Pishica and Kovel, on the extreme south the Russians are inactive but to the far north minor actions have taken place on August 23 about Jacobstadt and Dvinsk with alternating success.

The Emperor has received the President of the Duma and this with repeated Ministerial Councils has produced much lively speculation in the lobbies of the Duma regarding the possibility of formation of a Ministry of National Defence including representatives of the several parties in the Duma.

Aid from Japan

REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN ASKED BY RUSSIA.

Petrograd, Aug. 25.

In well-informed circles it is said that Russia has asked military assistance from Japan. Tokio has forwarded large quantities of war stores and the War Departments are arranging the despatch of numerous officers and trained artillerymen.

GOVERNMENT'S PRACTICAL SYMPATHY WITH RUSSIA

Paris, Aug. 25.

The Japanese Ambassador in this capital, Count Ishii, declares that the work of the Japanese is to give all possible assistance to the Russians. He states that in this the Government are sparing no efforts and that they are dispatching large consignments of ammunition to the Russian army. Count Ishii is the Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs, and his declarations are considered to be of an official nature.

Paris, Aug. 25 (Later).

The statement of the Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs has created an excellent impression in this capital. The expert opinion is that the Japanese assistance will be of immense value to the Russians.

Peace far Distant

GERMANS ANTICIPATE WINTER CAMPAIGN WITH RUSSIA

London, Aug. 25.

The "Morning Post" has received despatches from its correspondent which states that the Germans are preparing with immense activity for the winter campaign in Russia. All the German factories are working at full pressure in order to furnish the army with all necessities at an early date, so as not to interrupt the operations and so that the army shall not experience the same severe hardships as last winter. The "Morning Post" consider these statements as tending to shew that Austria and Germany will continue the campaign indefinitely and that prospects of peace are as far off as ever.

The Teuton Armies

NEARLY 3,000,000 MEN OPPOSE THE RUSSIANS.

London, Aug. 25.

A semi-official statement says that on July 31, the Germans had, on the Western front 1,800,000 men; on the Eastern front 1,400,000 men, while 1,120,000 Austrians also opposed the Russians. There were also numerous German troops of various kinds in garrisons, fortified positions and on lines of communication, without taking account of convalescents or sick.

German Socialists

ISSUING MANIFESTO ON THE WAR.

New York, Aug. 25.

Radiotelegrams from Berlin state that the Parliamentary deputation of the Socialist party and the executive committee are issuing a manifesto setting forth their views on the European situation. They declare that the Socialist party desire that the efforts of the Central Empires in the present struggle may result in a lasting and definite peace, with assurance of the territorial integrity of the German and Austro-Hungarian empires.

Cotton as Contraband

ATTITUDE OF THE UNITED STATES

Washington, Aug. 25.

The British statement declaring cotton contraband of war is interpreted as placing the onus of proving that the cotton is consigned to neutral countries, on the shipper and that it was not intended for Germany.

If this be the intention of the British Government, the State Department will take the ground that it is contrary to all practice to make the shipper responsible for proof of destination. Burden of Proof should be upon the Belligerent Government desiring to stop the cotton from entering hostile ports.

In the ordinary way the United States Government would object to any Foreign Government dictating how much cotton might be shipped to a neutral country.

In the present instance however, it is believed that the United States will not object to neutral countries being restricted to normal amounts.

Forty Seven Million Dollars

RECEIVED BY THE STATES FOR MUNITIONS

New York, Aug. 25.

According to information recently published, the United States has exported during the year of war, explosives to the value of forty-seven million dollars, 20,000 automobiles of various descriptions and 152 aeroplanes.

The amounts of foodstuffs and various articles for war purposes are fabulous.

Financial circles say that the present is the greatest period of monetary circulation experienced in North America as all the gold in Europe is pouring into the coffers of the United States exporters.

The ammunition factories have increased their plants in order to be able to deal with all orders, and to produce enormous quantities of war material.

Cholera in Prussia

GOVERNMENT COMBATting THE DISEASE.

Amsterdam, Aug. 25.

Insistent reports are current that a virulent form of cholera is raging in East Prussia. The German Government is taking measures to abate the ravages of the scourge.

Another Air Raid?

ZEPPELIN PASSES OVER DUTCH TERRITORY.

London, Aug. 25.

An Amsterdam dispatch says that the "Telegraaf" reports from Vlieland that a Zeppelin has passed over the island from the East, heading in a north-westerly direction.

PETROGRAD'S IMPATIENCE

CRITICISM OF ALLIES CENSURED BY THE PRESS.

London, August 21.

Reports from Petrograd state that a certain sense of injury is felt there against the Allies for small activity in the West. It is evident that the Russian General Staff does not share these views as there the German efforts are understood but among the populace, knowledge is not complete. The Press points out that such opinions are very unjust. In the West the enemy has been held and unable to advance for many months; very shortly a new offensive will demonstrate the real power of the allied forces fighting in France and Flanders.

BRITAIN DISCOVERS WORLD'S MOST POWERFUL EXPLOSIVE

Paris, August 19.

Instructions have been given at all base hospitals near the fighting zone to clear out their patients at once and send them into the interior.

A great offensive is preparing against the Germans, and will begin almost immediately.

Lord Kitchener and M. Millerand have finished their inspection of the front whither large numbers of British reinforcements, including 45,000 Canadians have gone. The long deferred drive is about to take place.

The postponement has already caused much surprise, but a well informed recent arrival from London attributes it to Lord Kitchener, who has a surprise for the Germans. This is a new shell, which will, it is believed, entirely revolutionise all artillery operations and greatly facilitate the Allies' road to Berlin.

The importance of high explosive shells being recognised, British chemists have devised a shell filled with an explosive of enormous destructiveness, and much more powerful than any previously used. It will supersede all existing types.

Experiments were made with heavy ordnance at Woolwich, but every gun was either fractured or blown to fragments. Finally last November experts discovered an alloy steel which will stand the strain and a 17-inch weapon was produced. The experiments made were entirely successful. The shell carried 25 miles, and the havoc occasioned was appalling, and utterly unprecedented. This is the reason why no movement was made even when Warsaw was about to fall and the bulk of the German troops were on that front.

It is also the reason why nothing was attempted after the great reinforcement in June, as nothing was to be done till these guns were delivered in sufficient quantities at the front. The result may soon be apparent.

BOTHA'S MEN FOR FRANCE

ENTHUSIASM AT THE CAPE.

London, August 23.

It is announced from Cape Town that General Botha has ordered the organisation of several regiments proposing to send them to France in accordance with the instructions received from the British Government.

Intense enthusiasm reigns amongst the troops and both officers and men are desirous of an immediate departure for the scene of action.

ZEPPELIN WRECKED

RUSSIAN GUNNERS' SUCCESS AT VILNA.

Petrograd, Aug. 21.

An official statement says that near Vilna the Russian gunners burst four shells against a Zeppelin approaching the city and brought it down. It contained a pilot, engineers, eight soldiers, machine guns, bombs, incendiary darts and photographic apparatus.

WAR IN THE AIR

AUSTRIAN AIRCRAFT DESTROYED BY ITALIANS.

Paris, August 21.

"Le Figaro" publishes a telegram from Turin to the effect that a severe aerial combat between Austrian and Italian squadrons took place over the Adriatic coast. The Austrians fled but three of their craft were destroyed and their pilots captured. The Italian airmen returned safely to their base.

BRITAIN'S GOLD RESERVES

REGULATION OF SHIPMENTS TO THE STATES.

London, August 21.

After the Arabic, the principal subject of conversation is the fall of sterling Bills at New York to a new and important discount. Though means to remedy the situation are at hand, this procrastination has been the feature of our conduct since the war began, and conspicuously so during the last fortnight in applying correctives to the upset in the New York sterling market.

The explanation of delay must be that the money market is so cramped by restrictions as to have lost its initiative, for the only real development in the last fortnight has been the bringing to an understanding of the Treasury and the Banks, and in all probability, our allies also, concerning financial policy.

The chief pre-occupation just now is to remedy the shipping of gold to New York, which may occur too freely. The best quarters strongly advise relief measures other than gold shipments. These cannot be divulged, but are presented by a deputation of practical bankers who are going to New York to discuss the situation. This is considered advisable for various reasons. One is that Wall Street is not sufficiently informed of financial conditions here as free interchange of news has been prevented from the commencement of the war.

It is freely recognised that New York is thinking of the ambition to make the U.S. an increased Monetary Power, and it is felt that, within limits, these ambitions must be accomplished. Nevertheless it is felt that the men with biggest views in the United States will realise that, the Republic's greatest wealth and power lie in its productive capacity and ability to supply the requirements of Europe.

E 13 LOST

FOUNDERS WHILE ON WAY TO THE BALTIC.

London, Aug. 20.

It is announced that the British submarine E 13 has foundered near the island of Saltholm while on the way to the Baltic Sea. Fifteen of the crew were saved and fifteen are missing.

GROUNDED ON AN ISLAND.

London, Aug. 20.

The text of the official report of the loss of the British submarine E. 13 says:—

"Submarine E 13, commanded by Lieutenant Leyton, on its way to the Baltic Sea, grounded yesterday morning on the Danish island of Saltholm in the Sound. Fifteen officers and men are reported saved while fifteen more are missing. Full details will be made known as soon as received."

A NEW ZEPPELIN

GERMANY'S LATEST MODEL.

Geneva, Aug. 23.

The latest Zeppelin built at Friedrichshafen differs somewhat from its predecessors in some details. The important features are a small platform provided in the top of the envelope for cannon to defend the gas bag from aeroplane attack. The speed is increased by extra propellers and the motor power also, but the extra weight has diminished the lifting power. The airship is slate coloured and cost $500,000 or double the cost of the first type. It is reported from Germany that the chief difficulty with Zeppelins is lack of capable pilots as most of the competent men have been killed or captured.

KITCHENER AT THE FRONT

MEETING WITH M. MILLERAND

CONFIDENCE IN VICTORY OF THE ALLIES.

Paris, Aug. 19.

On the night of Tuesday last Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, after a very interesting visit to Woevre, arrived at Bar-le-Duc, where he received a particularly warm welcome from the inhabitants.

A supper was given in honour of the British Secretary for War, at the conclusion of which the French Minister of War, M. Millerand, made a speech welcoming his British colleague. He said that after a year's warfare the enemy no longer entertained any illusions about a victory over the Allies on the field of battle, and is trying to gain his purpose by other means, endeavouring to prejudice the neutral nations against the Entente and even to sow seeds of disension and doubt among the Powers constituting the Alliance so as to obtain peace. However the nation, the Parliament and the Government of France are more firmly than ever resolved not to lay down their arms until the day on which the object desired has been attained.

ENGLAND'S RELATIONS WITH FRANCE.

Lord Kitchener in replying stated that after having seen the magnificent army of which General Joffre is Commander-in-Chief, he was more than ever convinced of the ultimate certainty of victory. He said that England was determined to do everything that was necessary to help her faithful ally France, and to continue to the very end.

On Wednesday Lord Kitchener and M. Millerand proceeded to Saint Omer where, in a conference with Field Marshal French, various matters pertaining to the allied armies were arranged, the two Ministers then leaving for the British battle front. The defence works were inspected and the French Minister of War reviewed some of the troops, expressing admiration for the soldierly bearing of the men and the impression of solid strength conveyed by the British troops.

M. Millerand returned to Paris this morning.

TRIBES IN TRIPOLI

WATCHED BY FRENCH FORCES.

Rome, Aug. 24.

Telegrams to the "Giornale d'Italia" from Tunis state that the French military authorities here adopted all the necessary means to prevent the rebel tribes in Tripoli from establishing outside communications or receiving aid in arms or money. All the French garrisons on the frontier between Tunis and Tripoli have been reinforced as a precaution.

The journal agrees that the French and Italian Colonial authorities are acting in perfect accord to prevent any massing or rising of the tribes or the spreading of a propaganda declaring a holy war against the infidels.

SPIES IN HOLLAND

GERMANY'S NETWORK AT THE HAGUE.

New York, Aug. 20.

It is reported from the Hague that the whole of the Netherlands is permeated with German espionage, the object being to obtain information regarding the naval operations of the Allies, to influence the Dutch Press in favour of Germany, and to find out how the Belgians manage to get out of their country in spite of the measures taken by the German authorities.

The "Telegraaf" says that the Hague is the centre of operations and that many of the spies are women.

GERMANY'S WAR CREDIT

ADDITIONAL VOTE AFTER ALL NIGHT SITTING.

New York, Aug. 21.

A despatch from Berlin says that the Reichstag has voted a third loan of 10,000 millions (marks) early today after an all night session. This increases to 300,000,000, the total war credit. The Reichstag endorsed the Government's conduct in the great conflict and approved the Secretary of the Treasury's report.

GERMANY'S VICTIMS

APPALLING CASUALTY STATISTICS SUBMITTED TO FRENCH SENATE

Paris, August 20.

The following official list of killed, wounded and captured, summarising the total losses of both sides has been submitted to the French Senate:

Allies — Killed 1,919,000. Wounded 2,589,000. Prisoners 1,135,000.

Teutons — Killed 3,500,000. Wounded 3,885,000. Prisoners 1,795,000.

Distributing the number of killed among the respective nations engaged in the war, the number of French casualties are 460,000; English 160,000; Russians 1,250,000; Belgians 49,000; Germans 1,630,000; Austrians 1,610,000; Turks 100,000. (Query: 200,000.)

VON BISSING, THE BRUTE

INTIMATES THAT JOCLAR BELGIANS WILL BE MURDERED.

New York, August 21.

From Brussels it is reported that General von Bissing, the German Governor has threatened that the German troops shall fire upon the populace if there be any repetition of the jocular insults in the streets when men and women called derisively after German patrols and demonstrated banging pots and saucepans and blowing whistles. All shops were closed and civilians forbidden to pass through the streets.

MORE BREAD FOR BERLIN

New York, Aug. 21.

Berlin reports state that the daily bread ration has been increased from 200 to 225 grammes per head, as result of careful estimate of the wheat supply. The populace of the capital made a demonstration outside the Imperial Palace, where the Chancellor spoke from the balcony. He said that the Russian forts were smashed like earthenware. The Reichstag had strikingly displayed the unconquerable spirit of the Germans in voting ten billions of marks at a single sitting for the prosecution of the war. The fight was still unfinished, but if it was God's will, the day would come when they could say that what would not bend, must break.

SULTAN'S REPRESENTATIVE

LEAVES TRIPOLITANIA.

Rome, Aug. 24.

A Stefani Agency telegram says that General Ameglio, Governor of Tripolitania, announces the departure of the Sultan's representative, Sheikh Eddin Nabul, with his suite for Constantinople, on the declaration of war by Italy. The General has sent to Rome proofs of the Turkish representatives' arbitrary behaviour and of his complicity in recent tribal risings.

TWO MILLIONS A WEEK COST OF GERMAN PROPAGANDA IN THE STATES

New York, Aug. 19.

Continuing its revelations of the machinations of German agents in the United States, the "New York World" has published further correspondence which has passed between officials in Germany and their agents in America, showing, inter alia, the amounts spent by the German Government in employing these agents.

The documents in particular throw light upon the activity displayed by a German commercial traveller named Waetzold, who has been for some months in the country. From a report furnished by this man to the German Chancellor, von Bethmann-Hollweg, it appears that while the Chancellor was inveighing against the measures adopted by the British Government against German commerce, he was recommending his Government not to send goods to the United States even under a British safe-conduct, with the object of thereby increasing the tension existing between Washington and London.

The papers show that the German propaganda in the United States was costing the German Government somewhere about $2,000,000 a week. Special reference is made to the payment of a sum of $1,200,000 which was made through the German Bank to the credit of the German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff.

One of the documents published by the "New York World" is a letter from a Mr. William Travers Jerome to a well-known American of German extraction named Arthur von Vriesen, wherein the former applies for a gratuity of $10,000 for the performance of some task the nature of which is not disclosed.

The "Providence Journal" declares that the German Government availed itself of the services of Mr. Kuhn, of the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, to obtain the voting of the Bill sanctioning the purchase of the German merchant shipping lying in American ports, in the hope that the United States Government would take them over.

The "Journal" publishes proofs that the German Government attempted to obtain the control over all the wireless stations in the Philippine Islands through the Telefunken Company; and it alleges that Dr. Frank, chief of the Sayville station, tried to get hold of a system of secret signals used by the American Navy.

It is reported from Washington that proceedings are to be taken against those American subjects who have been intriguing on behalf of the German Government.

SPIES IN THE STATES

CLOSE WATCH ON SAYVILLE WIRELESS STATION.

Washington, Aug. 20.

The Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Daniels, after a conversation with Mr. John Rathom, manager of the "Providence Journal," in which paper sundry revelations have recently been made concerning German machinations in the United States, has given orders for increased vigilance at the Sayville wireless station. In future all messages which give the slightest grounds for suspicion are to be subjected to special scrutiny at Washington before being allowed to pass.

CARDINAL VANNUTELLI DEAD

DOYEN OF COLLEGE OF CARDINALS

Rome, Aug. 19.

The death is announced of Cardinal Serafino Vannutelli, Prefect of Ceremonials at the Vatican.

The Cardinal, who was 81 years of age at the time of death, was doyen of the College of Cardinals.

GERMANY DOOMED?

BETHMANN-HOLWEG'S ADMISSION

Amsterdam, August 24.

It is stated that last Thursday before the reassembling of the Reichstag, the Imperial Chancellor, Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, convoked a secret conference of Ministers, political leaders and influential writers. The Secretary of the Treasury explained that the New Loan would completely exhaust the Empire's resources and the issue of Exchequer bonds would precipitate bankruptcy. He therefore urged that it was needful to prepare to seek honourable terms of peace. The Chancellor also stated the enormous difficulties confronting the Empire, which were increasing, and advised his hearers to employ their influence to soften the bellicose tone and annexation policy in the Reichstag and the Empire, and pave the way to peace proposals acceptable to the members of the Quadruple Entente. Herr Dernburg's report of the failure of his mission in the United States and other neutral countries, made a strong impression on the Conference. General Von Moltke is said to have declared that he fully agreed with the Chancellor, and added, that only those not fully informed of the situation could hope for the possibility of a complete Russian defeat. In spite of these declarations, says the report, the meeting refused to adopt a resolution advocating moderation in the Reichstag upon which the Chancellor declared that if the majority did not display more conciliation and abandon their extreme Chauvinist attitude, he would be obliged to resign, as he could not accept responsibility for the ensuing disaster to Germany.

2,500,000!

GERMANY'S LARGE ARMY OPERATING AGAINST RUSSIA.

Petrograd, August 23.

Information from headquarters authorises the belief that the total of troops which Germany has at present concentrated against the Russian front cannot be less than two and a half millions. This enormous force is thoroughly equipped and accompanied by all the services and elements needful to the prosecution of the campaign. Notwithstanding the terrific pressure of this numerical superiority of the enemy, the Russians have succeeded in retreating in good order, and without suffering any crushing disorder at the hands of the pursuing Germans. Even allowing for the fact that the defence has lost many men and quantities of warlike stores, these losses are not considered of extreme seriousness, when it is considered that the enemy is continually wasting his strength.

ATTEMPT TO CRUSH RUSSIAN RESISTANCE.

Petrograd, August 23.

More than 2,500,000 Austro-German troops are being massed and hurried up against the Grand Duke's armies on the front extending from Galicia to Riga, in an attempt to crush the Russian resistance. A semi-official statement estimates these at 120 divisions of infantry, 20 of cavalry, and the usual divisional services and details operating on the Russian front. This is about forty per cent. of the total German forces, and seventy per cent. of the entire Austrian strength.

PIRATES OFF SPAIN

Madrid, Aug. 24.

Reports have reached San Sebastian that several German submarines are off the Spanish Coast. It is supposed that these vessels are on their way out to the Dardanelles.

A TURKISH ROUT

WAR CORRESPONDENT'S STORY

New York, Aug. 21.

A despatch from Louis Edgar Brown, Special Correspondent to the "New York Globe," and the "Chicago Daily News" from Mudros, near the Allies eastern base on August 20 via Athens, says that the complete demoralisation and surrender of the Turkish army defending the Gallipoli Peninsula is predicted for the near future.

"The opening of the Dardanelles and the eventual fall of Constantinople are now inevitable.

"It is only a matter of time that the 20th century Crusaders will raise the standard of Christianity over Saint Sophia.

"Minor military difficulties may prevent the Allies actually reaching Constantinople before the spring, but the startling results of the latest British military achievement, eclipsing anything of a similar kind in history, assures to the Allies a full eventual victory over the Turks, and appears to indicate that the European side of the Dardanelles will be under the control of the Allies within a few weeks, through a bold stroke dealt to the Turks by the British Army, inflicting a humiliating and disastrous surprise and defeat.

"This has resulted in the capture and destruction of the main line of communications between Constantinople and the troops defending the Gallipoli Peninsula, entirely cutting off ammunition and food supplies. It is considered, as a strategic success equal to the fall of Warsaw, and was achieved by a ruse.

"Completely equipped forces were concentrated by the Allies at various inland bases near the coast of Asia Minor, and a great demonstration of intention to invade the latter was made. The Turks rushed all available troops to the defence of Smyrna, Adramyt and other points, weakening the real point selected for attack.

"During the night of August 13, many thousands of troops from half a dozen bases embarked in all sorts of craft, transports, destroyers and trawlers, which steamed off to an unknown rendezvous. The greatest secrecy was maintained, and even staff officers were ignorant of the true objective.

"On learning that the British were in motion, the Turks prepared to give them a warm reception at any point on the coast of Asia Minor. Like a thunderbolt the British invasion fell upon them at Suvla Bay, where the Turks were quite unprepared for such an assault. During the night a large fleet gathered in the Gulf of Saros. The expeditionary force was flung against the Turks when least expected. The landing was orderly and rapid, and quite unopposed. A speedy march followed with the seizure of a position four miles inland which was immediately fortified, entirely severing the enemy's communications. Some 10,000 Turks, the remains of seven army corps, defending the Peninsula are virtually besieged. They cannot retreat and must fight or surrender. The only question is how long their present supplies will last.

The landing was splendidly executed under supervision of the Navy. A multitude of boats, launches and pin-races carried the troops ashore. Each man carried entrenching tools and rations for three days.

Fifty Turkish outposts surrendered and were the only enemy soldiers seen during the day. The whole affair was as quiet as manœuvres. Not a shot was fired till dark. Turkish reports state that 60,000 British troops landed within twenty-four hours.

TURKISH TRANSPORT SUNK

"BOMBED" BY A BRITISH AEROPLANE.

London, August 23.

It is reported that a British hydroplane, of the Dardanelles squadron, has attacked and bombed a Turkish transport. As a result of the ensuing explosions the Turkish vessel sank.

MUNITIONS SENT TO THE BOTTOM.

London, August 23.

The Turkish collier Spahan has been torpedoed by a British submarine off Haidar Pasba. The German steamer Bndos, of the Levant line, loaded with munitions and provisions for the Turkish fighting line, has also been sunk in the Sea of Marmora.

TURKEY'S GROWING BURDEN

TROUBLE IN THE YEMEN.

Rome, Aug. 23.

The Press comments on the news that the Shereef Said Idriss, cousin of the Chief of the Senoussi, has again risen against the Turkish Government in the Yemen, as he did in the last Turco-Italian war. Said Idriss, whose desire it is that the Arabs of the Arabian Peninsula should be independent of the Caliph of Constantinople, will undoubtedly obtain support from the Quadruple Entente. This rebellion is a serious menace to the Turkish power, which appears likely to lose these provinces finally and for ever.

DANGER IN CONSTANTINOPLE

PAPAL REPRESENTATIVE TO RELY ON U.S. PROTECTION.

New York, Aug. 23.

A United Press telegram from Rome says that the situation in Constantinople has become so acute that the Papal representative has considered it advisable to assure His Holiness that he has obtained assurance of Austro-German influence to protect the Catholic clergy. The Envoy, however, adds that he is disposed to rely more upon American protection, which will be indispensable should a coup d'etat lead to the overthrow of the Young Turk régime and their influence.

CONSTANTINOPLE'S PLIGHT

COAL SHORTAGE CAUSES LIGHTING BY PETROLEUM.

Sofia, August 23.

A telegraphic communication from Sofia states that the gas works at Dolabotchie which supply Constantinople have shut down owing to lack of coal. Constantinople is now lighted by petroleum.

According to the latest advices the police have instructed the proprietors of hotels, cafés and other establishments to place oil lamps outside their buildings. For the same reason the trains on the Anatolian Railway are running at half speed.

STILL MORE REGRETS

VON JAGOW'S MESSAGE TO DENMARK.

New York, Aug. 25.

A Reuter despatch from Copenhagen says that the Danish Legation at Berlin has received a communication from von Jagow regretting the violation of the Danish coastal waters by the attack made on a stranded British submarine. He states that repeated orders have been sent to German commanders to respect the rights of neutrals.

Mainly About People

The marriage of Miss Lizzie W. Gomes to Mr. William C. Currie will take place at the home of the bride's parents on Thursday, August 26.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ricardo Sinnott, from "La Favorita," wish to advise their friends that in future their address is Estancia "Adela," Puerto Piramides (Chubut).

Information is wanted by the American Consulate General, 341 Lavalle, of the whereabouts of Charles Petersen, formerly steward of the American schooner "Edgar W. Murdock."

The Central and South American Telegraph Company has messages from Merida to Alfredo Erasa, Buenos Aires. Also from Saupildarena to Angela Merlini, Santa Fe 1861, Buenos Aires.

Mr. Andrew Elliot, from Barreta, is so far convalescent, as permitted his visiting the show yard. He received a most hearty welcome from his many friends who were deeply concerned regarding his well fare.

Information is wanted of the whereabouts of Walter R. Walters who left his home in Mount Vernon, State of Washington, in January, 1912. Any information about this man may be sent to the American Consulate General, 341 Lavalle.

In the absence of the Rt. Rev. Bishop Every from the diocese upon the Pacific Coast, the clergy and laity are requested to note that Rev. Canon Stevenson is in charge in the Republics of the Plate as representing Archdeacon Hodges), and Ven. Archdeacon Bleg in Brazil; and matters of importance may be referred to them. By the kindness of the Western Telegraph Company, however, he himself may usually be communicated with, for which purpose it will be well to consult Rev. H. W. Brady, Chaplain, Paseo de Julio 693, Buenos Aires.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA.

(From Our Correspondent).

August 22.

Extreme regret has been felt at the sad news of the death of the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, of Port Militar. Only a short while ago he left school and was apprenticed to the s.s. Scottish Monarch, which was torpedoed and lost with all hands (with one exception) on his third voyage.

Mr. Beeles of the firm of Messrs. Leng and Roberts, is spending a few days down here in connection with the Gas Company.

Amongst the passengers of the Highland Corrie, which was damaged by the German submarines, were Mr. and Mrs. Quincey and family, who were going to England in order to live there.

Mr. Marrs returned from Buenos Aires on Thursday after an absence of three weeks. Mrs. Marrs is expected to arrive out from England about the middle of next month, having left on the s.s. Bogota on August 18.

Mr. Sheephanks is in town for a few days from the "El Prado" estancia.

Mr. G. D. Jones arrived here on Friday last and returns back to Buenos Aires to-night.

On Saturday last Mr. Chevallier Bontell accompanied by Messrs. Thompson, Peeston, Haxwell, Chambers and Bennett arrived here from Buenos Aires, and with the exception of the latter gentleman they are all returning to-night.

A golf tournament in which several visitors from outside clubs will be competitors is to be held here next Sunday.

DAY BY DAY IN ROSARIO.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Aug. 18.

Mr. Spencer S. Dickson, British Consul, is expected to arrive in Rosario next week.

Mr. Dolbey, Manager of the London and Brazilian Bank, is about to take up his residence at Roldan.

There is something afoot in connection with the Rosario Athletic Club. The weather is certainly veering round to the Gymkhana quarter.

The Rev. P. Hill Nicoll will be a visitor to Rosario this week-end and on Saturday night will give a lecture on ex-President Roosevelt's Tour through Brazil. On Sunday morning Mr. Nicoll will preach in the First Methodist Church, Boulevard Oroño, and in the evening at the Talleres Church Hall.

By a printer's error last week Miss G Fones' name was written Jones in the account of the duet in which she took part.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lace on Sunday, August 15.

On Tuesday, August 24, St. Bartholomew's day there will be a celebration of Holy Communion at 8 a.m. in St. Bartholomew's Church, and a special evensong at 8.45 p.m.

Contributions will be gratefully received at the British Consulate, General Mitre, for the Prince of Wales' Fund, the Overseas Tobacco Fund, the River Plate Aeroplane Fund, and the Talleres Bazaar. Tickets are available for the Rosewood piano and for the Bazaar.

On Saturday evening, the new premises of the Traffic Institute were formally opened. Mr. D. S. Martin presided, and Mr. J. P. Crouch and Mr. T. G. Russell were present. Mr. Martin spoke of the aims and objects of the Institute, and mentioned that the membership nears one thousand.

Mr. William Day and family left for Rio Cuarto on Saturday of last week.

News was received yesterday from Casilda of the death of Mr. Joseph Valentin Gay. He was buried in the local cemetery yesterday afternoon.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Bury, Los Molinos, on Tuesday.

On September 29, the wedding will take place in Cordoba of Miss Maria Josefa Yofre to Santiago Bergallo, of the firm of Agar Cross and Co., Ltd. in Rosario.

FLOODS IN CORDOBA AND SANTA FE

FUTURE GOVERNMENT PROVISIONS.

In the National Loan for 1916 the Minister of Public Works has included a sum of $100,000 to be set aside for the work of draining the "Cañada" of San Antonio, which covers a considerable amount of land in the Departments of San Martin and Belgrano, in the Province of Santa Fe, and also of San Justo and Marcos Juarez in that of Cordoba.

The damage done by its overflowing during the recent floods was considerable and it is alleged in the evening Press that this sum would not have been set aside by the Government had it not been for the inundation of the property of Dr. de la Plaza at Flores.

Two years ago the Government sanctioned the drainage of these waters acting in agreement with the Government of Cordoba but up to now nothing whatever has been done in the matter and it is due to this that some 300,000 hectares of land are in an unfit condition for cultivation or pasturage, owing to the overflow of this "Cañada," which with a good system of drainage to the River Carcarañá would have been entirely avoided.

YOUNG PEOPLES SOCIAL

AN ENJOYABLE EVENING AT THE AMERICAN CHURCH HALL.

A most entertaining time was spent at the hall of the American Church in Calle Corrientes last evening. All kinds of amusements, games, and songs were included in a varied programme of an informal character. There was a goodly attendance and the "social" was excellently organised. Some of the games were most humorous and created plenty of laughter and gaiety. No better name could describe the evening than that of a "young people's social." Everyone was sociable and even the elderly were young in the enjoyment of the music and games. First of all came a game called "Publicity Puzzles" each person was given pieces of a cut advertisement and had to search for the rest and piece the whole together. During the hilarity which followed Miss Beatriz Penny played selections on the piano. Then came a song by Mr. Sydney Brown "The Dear Little Shamrock," which was followed by the most entertaining game of the evening which was christened "The Observability Test" in which the aptitude of the competitors (of which there were eight) for observation was highly tested. Needless to say there was Sherlock Holmes present amongst the company and such questions as "How Many Columns has the Cathedral in the Plaza Mayo" and "Does a cow get up on its hind or its fore legs first" were found awkward problems. Even the question of observability concerning the number of times the word "Peso" occurred on a dollar bill was a question, surely, that should have been answered and which only shewed how careless young folk are with their money! It was an enjoyable game which preceded a recitation by Miss Lilian Gamble "The Owl Critic." Then came a youthful rush for refreshments.

The second half of the evening was occupied by "Musical Arms" a game similar to musical chairs and differed only in the forwardness of the young ladies in clutching a gentleman's arm, by songs, loudly encored, by Mr. Victor Ried "Until" and "As-thore," by a musical story game and a song by Miss Zelaya "To-Night."

The winner of the first prize for the observability test was Mr. A. T. Nixon and for the other prize event the musical story, a game in which the title of a story had to be guessed from the music played was won by Miss Malloy and Mr. Harrison. The social evening voted a success and a thorough enjoyment then broke up.

NO TRADING WITH THE ENEMY

HOW BRITISH TRADERS ARE TREATED IN GERMANY.

Messrs. Raphael Tuck and Sons have been notified by the Board of Trade that an announcement has appeared in the "Reichsanzeiger," the official Gazette of the German Empire, that the branch business established by the firm in Berlin some eight years ago for the sale of their postcards and other British publications has been sequestered, and the business and assets sold by the German authorities. It appears that soon after the outbreak of war the Berlin branch was taken over by the German Government, and an official administrator placed in charge. Shortly afterwards violent attacks directed against the firm appeared in a leading Berlin journal calling upon the German public to boycott the art productions of this British house, and similar articles were published in 200 journals throughout the German Empire, these attacks finally culminating in the sequestration of the business by the authorities.

The firm's reply to this official information intimated to the Board of Trade that it would naturally look for the intervention of his Majesty's Government with regard to this sequestration of their property at the conclusion of the war.

MISSIONS TO SEAMEN

The successful concert last evening at the Seamen's Mission was arranged by Mrs. Ballantyne and was highly appreciated by a good audience. In spite of the absence of Mr. Soane and another gentleman, who were unable to be present, the affair went well. Mrs. Richards is always, figuratively, a tower of strength, and with the agreeable tenor songs of Mr. Charles Gabb, Miss Knight, and the dry humour and music of Mr. Wilberforce, with the assistance of the Rev. Mr. Brady, gave an unflagging entertainment. The programme was as follows. Mrs. White played accompaniments in her usual sympathetic manner, and it may be seen that Mrs. Richards was very hard-worked indeed, the penalty of popularity.

Rev. Mr. Brady, "Rolling down to Rio." Miss Knight, "In the sunshine of your smiles," and "My Hero" as encore. Mr. Wilberforce, humorous sketch "The choir boy," with encore. Mrs. Richards, "I like your apron and bonnet" from "The Quaker Girl." Encore, "On the Mississippi," "Tipperary up to date," and "Don't blame me for loving you." Mr. Gabb, "The last watch." Miss Knight, "Up from Somerset," encore "Cooee!" Mr. Wilberforce, "Silver wedding," encore "Anecdotes," humorous sketches. Mrs. Richards, "Mandy Lane," encore "Love me just a little Sue." Mr. Gabb, "Sweet early violets," encore "Until some day."

Cheers for the artistes and "God save the King" terminated the concert.

PREPARATION OF SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS

DR. FLEMING'S ADDRESS AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH HALL.

Last night at St. Andrew's Scotch Church Dr. Fleming gave an address on the preparation of teachers before a select and interested audience. It was an address full of sound common sense and advice and to the attentive one of invaluable service. The lecturer explained how the teacher's preparation came under the four headings of the preparation of Nature, Grace, Knowledge and the Weekly Lesson and explained how a successful teacher must have the adaptability of temperament acquired or from natural gifts.

Particularly did Dr. Fleming lay stress upon the Preparation of Grace which included Conversation, Love—love of the world, love of children; perseverance, not enthusiasm and emotion for these quickly wore out. Faith and the Ideal End and in this latter it was pointed out how knowledge was not the ideal end of the Sunday School teacher as it was of the day school teacher. The ideal end of the former was to win the children to Christ's service.

Dr. Fleming then continued his address with the technical preparation of the teacher. The necessity for knowing the road along which to travel and the necessity of a knowledge of Bible History was explained and he advised that essential works to be consulted should include, "Modern Commentary, a Concordance, an Encyclopædia, the Century and the Cambridge Bibles.

In the preparation of the weekly lesson the need for anticipation and thoroughness were clearly indicated and Dr. Fleming advised upon these points and the works to be studied and read.

In conclusion the need for the preparation of the body (one must not be tired to assist young children) and for the knowledge of children, by which latter it was meant that one child might be lazy, another impatient, another fidgety and that the teacher's adaptability to these various and ranging moods and characteristics was all essential if success was to crown the effort.

The address was one of considerable interest to all present and highly appreciated for its lessons, its soundness and the method in which Dr. Fleming treated his subject.

ROSARIO NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 18.

Sailors' Appreciation.

To show how small things are appreciated, Mr. T. H. Marston has received the following letter acknowledging the receipt of a small present of fruit which was sent on board the "Macedonia" from Montevideo last month:

"H.M.S. Macedonia,"
at Sea.

July 29th, 1915.

Mr. T. H. Marston,
Rosario de Sta. Fe.

Dear Sir,—The ship's company greatly appreciate your present of fruit.

The petty officers and men whose signatures are given below, a representative committee of the ship's company, are anxious that you should understand by their signatures that all portions of the ship's company wish to be associated with this letter of thanks.

I am, dear Sir,

Yours very truly,

(Sgd.) B. S. Evans, Capt. R.N.

(Sgd.) Walter J. Saunders, Petty Officer John Evans, Lce.-Corpl. N. O. Meeck, Royal Marines, Jno. Riley, Stoker, Geo. Robinson, Assist. Steward, A. H. Hardacre, Seaman.

Maize Markets.

The maize market has been extremely slow this week, and prices have sagged. As a consequence sellers do not appear to be in any hurry to meet the market at the decline, so that shippers who have interests to fill freight have to pay prices which are high on present values in the home markets. Last week I called attention to the accumulation of maize stocks in this port, and this has continued during the past week, so that to-day it is calculated that the stock of maize in this port approaches 140,000 tons.

The River Falling.

The river continues falling, 21 feet being the maximum to which steamers can safely load to cross the bars between here and San Pedro, whilst the Engineer's Department of the Rosario Port forecasts that by about the 23rd there will only be 20 feet on the bars, owing to advices of falling river at Corrientes. Freights, in view of the poor demand for maize, are quieter.

An acknowledgment from the "Glasgow."

The following letter has been received from Captain John Luce of H.M.S. Glasgow:

H.M.S. Glasgow,
Montevideo.

August 12, 1915.

Dear Mrs. Murray Hudson,

Your letter and cheque for $105 gold Oriental has just reached me and I thank you and the ladies of Rosario for the great kindness and generosity shown us. I hope to spend the money in providing fruit and other little luxuries for the men, as opportunity offers when we visit a port, it is very much appreciated.

Please thank the ladies of Rosario for their kind wishes and thoughts for us.

Yours very sincerely,

JOHN LUCE.

"There's a whisper down the field."

A whisper has reached me that the Rosario Athletic Club under the energetic presidency of Mr. George Middleton has a surprise or two in view for the benefit of one or other of the Patriotic Charities. That any entertainment organised by this old-established club will be a huge success is, of course, a foregone conclusion. Talking the other day to one of the oldest members of the "Plaza Jewell" Club he wistfully lamented the absence in recent years of the Social Meetings, Gymkhanas, Sports, etc. for which the Rosario Athletic Club used to be so famous. "In those days" he said, "We youngsters used to take our exercise and recreation properly, but now the as-phyxiating wave of golf seems to have overcome us. Nowadays we don't seem to have a soul above an occasional dance, which however enjoyable to the younger members of the club rather leaves us old boys in the cold." Perhaps he was rather hard on the youngsters, but if funds are wanted for any charity, the organisation of a dance which usually swallows up a good deal in expenses does seem rather misplaced energy and certainly leaves the old unsung out of it. However with a President who knows what's wanted, backed up by a strong Committee, whatever eventuates is sure to be the right thing. More power to "Plaza Jewell"—and perhaps more anon.

Stallholders at the Talleres Bazaar.

Judging by the efforts that are being put forward by those arranging the Bazaar in aid of the British Red Cross Society, to be held on the 10th and 11th of September next, in the Talleres Church Hall there is little doubt that the affair will be a huge success. All arrangements are well under way and from the programme we should imagine that Rosarinos who miss this function will have missed the event of the year. As usual the Central Argentine Railway Company and its chiefs are giving their very willing help towards this noble and humane effort.

I understand that Mrs. C. H. Pearson and Mrs. J. P. Crouch have kindly consented to open the sale on the respective days.

Apart from the stalls which are to be furnished with useful articles, there are to be a number of side attractions which will be well worth a visit, reminding one of the old English Fairs:—

Miniature Rifle Range, Aunt Sally, Goal Scoring Game, Fishing Pond, Competitions, Lucky Bran Tub, Concerts and Cinematograph also a well arranged Tea and Supper Room.

There is ample time for those who have not already done so to contribute and the following ladies will gratefully acknowledge the receipt of any goods towards their stalls Tie and Handkerchiefs Mrs. J. P. Crouch, "La Quinta" Rosario; Flowers, plants and sweets Mrs. C. H. Montgomery, Fisherton, F.C.C.A.; Toys, Mrs. Deacon, Porton 3, Los Talleres, F.C.C.A.; Plain and Fancy Goods, Mrs. Rickards, 716 San Luis Alberdi; Provision Stall, Mrs. Roberts, 3379 San Luis, Plaza Jewell; Tea and Supper Room, Miss Studert, 86 Calle España, and Mrs. Every Miller "Dalswinton" Fisherton. Or subscriptions may be sent to the Hon. General Secretary, Mr. J. W. Challen, London and River Plate Bank, Rosario.

First Methodist Church.

A special song-service was held last Sunday evening, a large congregation attending. The choir rendered two special anthems: "What are these" by J. Stainer and "Know, therefore that the Lord" by J. L. Hatton. Sacred Solos and duets were also given. As the singing took up so much time it was impossible for the Pastor to give the address on "Harmony." He will deliver this next Sunday evening when the choir will again render special hymns.

On Sunday morning the Rev. P. Hill Nicoll will preach.

Golf Notes.

The Ladies match for two prizes offered by Mr. J. P. Crouch was played on Saturday, the 14th. The winner was Mrs. H. Middleton with a net score of 114; Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Gross tying for 2nd place with a net score of 115. The tie was played off on Sunday. Mrs. Lee winning with a score of 105 net.

F.C.C.A. Cup.

The match for the F.C.C.A. Cup took place on Sunday, the 15th. Mr. H. Buchanan, Mr. A. Watson (Jr.), and Mr. J. A. Murray, tying with a score of 5 down to Bogie in 4 rounds. The tie will be played off on Sunday, the 22nd.

Northern Club Championship Cup.

The Northern Club Championship Cup is to be played for on Sunday.

NO AID FOR B.A.!

The Embarrassed Municipality

GOVERNMENT IGNORES APPEALS

It is stated that the rumours of Dr. Gramajo's possible resignation of the post of Municipal Intendente are discredited from an authoritative source—himself, but the afternoon Press insists that there is foundation for the statement and that his resignation is not only inevitable but justifiable and necessary. "La Razon" observes "Dr. Gramajo entered in his duties in the midst of serious financial difficulties of the Municipality, over which he presides. It was thought that from the very beginning he had sought and obtained from the National Government security that he would receive pecuniary aid where essential to overcome obstacles which otherwise rendered administration impossible. All efforts however made to obtain a remedy for the situation have failed in view of the refusal of the National Government to supply funds indispensable to carry on the business of the City." The proposal to raise a loan has been discountenanced by Dr. de la Plaza, both on account of the state of the country's business and for its credit abroad. Meanwhile the Intendente fails to obtain the hoped for aid, rates and receipts diminish and debts accumulate. It is not only the heaped up collections of unpaid "expedientes" and overdue accounts which have brought the Communal authority to this direful pass, but actual judicial executions and embargos, which have piled ridicule and discredit on the City Administration, especially when it lacks funds to pay its employees and elementary necessities. When it is added that this lack of resources is so extreme that the sick in the hospitals are short of food and medicines, some idea of the painful posture of the Municipality may be realised. The salaries of the medical men were docked to supply medicines, drugs and dressings, but not a single extra kilo of medicated cotton or a thermometer has been delivered to the hospitals as a result of this saving. Dr. Gramajo's unpleasant position may therefore be appreciated. Besieged by duns, urgent and pressing creditors, refused any assistance by the National Treasury, even by making reductions and economies, his chances of efficient work are poor indeed, and if he resigns no one need be in the least surprised.

the 29th. It is open to members of all River Plate Clubs. The conditions are 4 rounds of 9 holes medal and scratch play.

Rosario Football League.

The matches played for the Championship of the first division on Sunday last were:—

Tiro Federal 1 v. Belgrano 0.

Central Cordoba 2 v. Rosario Atletico 1.

Provincial 5 v. Atlantic Sportsmen 0.

Sparta 1 v. Nacional 0.

A friendly match was played between Newell's Old Boys and Rosario Central. A large number of spectators turned out to watch the game, which resulted in a draw, there being no scoring on either side, with the utmost interest.

NOTES FROM PARAGUAY

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Asunción, August 22.

Fiestas.

There have been quite a number of feast days—fiestas—lately August 15 was the day of the Patron Saint of Asunción. The programme for the day was quite an elaborate one. Masses in the Cathedral, a procession with the Saint, a military review—ending with a gala performance in the theatre. To-day San Roque was celebrated in the Church of that name, the procession being quite imposing.

Tennis.

This was the day set for the tournament (the revenge) of the "Asuncion Lawn Tennis Club," and the Lawn Tennis Club, but for some reason has been postponed until next Sunday.

Spring time.

Spring is with us. By the end of July the peach trees were in bloom, and at the beginning of this month the orange trees laden with blossoms. Even so, the new season has been without rain until to-day when there was a short but hard shower. Much more is needed but even this will do a world of good if only to the plants. Everything green has been carried with dust, and now has the appearance of having its face washed. Asunción itself has that appearance after one of the hard rains. Being hilly and sandy, the water runs off leaving the streets clean (which are never washed in any other way) and no mud on account of the sand. This rain to-day must have been our "Santa Rosa" which as often comes eight days before the 30th, as eight days after. But it is to be hoped that this is only the beginning, not only the river is lower then we never even see it, but very few aljibes are left with water. "It is an ill wind," etc., the water carts are doing a brisk business. This drought seems to agree with the strawberries, such beauties are on the market just now. Visitors.

The hotels are full of visitors from the Argentine. The mild weather must be the attraction, after the long continued cold of Buenos Aires.

Mrs. John Wright made a flying visit to Asunción and San Bernardino, accompanied by her son, Mr. Sidney Wright.

Mrs. Raynel O'Connor is stopping at San Bernardino with a little granddaughter, a few English among the many Argentines.

Our Chaplain, Rev. F. Middleton, whose health was not all that could be desired, was sent to Mendoza for a rest and change. He has since been appointed to Rosario de Santa Fé, a much more desirable place than Sapucay, a small village on the R. R. about 90 kilometres outside of Asunción. His friends and those of his wife regret their departure, but are pleased at this change for the better. Mr. Limb has returned to take charge of the work here, and has been warmly welcomed by his many friends.

Mr. Daniel Mooney, the American Minister, and the American Consul, Mr. S. Wiley, have returned from their trip up north. We all regret that Mr. Mooney is ill in bed. He has out best wishes for his speedy recovery.

Mrs. Stanley Barnes, of Patiño, has been visiting friends in town.

A SEPARATE PEACE

GERMANY'S PROPOSAL TO RUSSIA AND FRANCE.

Petrograd, Aug. 24.

To a publisher of leading journals, who called to urge facilities for the transport of paper supplies, M. Sazonoff stated plainly that Germany had twice attempted to open pourparlers for a separate peace, once with France and once with Russia.

POVERTY IN THE CAPITAL

THE PROBLEM AND ITS SOLUTION

A SOUND INVESTMENT

The unemotional, matter-of-fact, and eminently sensible remarks of the gentleman who is at the head of the Salvación Army's work here, on the subject of Poverty, real and pretended, in the city of Buenos Aires, must have met with a warm echo in the hearts of all practical people. For there is no denying the fact that vagrancy and misery are far more common in this country than they were a few years ago, and even admitting that many of the most pathetic cases, outwardly at any rate, are merely professional lazzaroni from the south of Spain and Italy, there is evidently room for definite social work on the lines that Col. Palmer has laid down. Indiscriminate almsgiving in the streets is irrepressible in the Latin Lands, in so far as the giver is concerned. Customs that date back for centuries cannot be altered in a day, and whereas England and the Anglo-Saxon races generally have always been peremptory in their treatment of "beggars, rogues, and vagabonds," to use the Elizabethan classification, in southern Europe, as in the East, begging is almost classed in the light of the honourable professions.

Hence whilst some good may be done by reasoning with the more enlightened givers of public alms, more permanent benefit will be derived by rounding up the beggars and classifying them in accordance with their age, sex, infirmities, and character. This is done from time to time by the police, but their action is merely disciplinary, very temporary, and utterly useless as a means of social prophylaxis. The police are in the very same difficulty that confronts the charitably inclined individual who finds a beggar at his door. They have nowhere to send the case for examination and eventual treatment, if, as is often the case, real want and misery are proved. It may be urged that there are already many societies formed for the purpose of looking after the poor, but in their majority these societies are sectarian, and, rightly enough, have all their work cut out in helping what for want of a better phrase one may dub the chronic cases, people who have fallen in the struggle for life, and who manage to keep their heads above water by gifts of money, food, or light work, accompanied by friendly supervision. There is also the care of the sick, a work that is admirably undertaken by various bodies, notably the old-established Sociedad de Beneficencia, which, despite the mud that is occasionally thrown at it, has a noble record. All these societies are doing good work in their own sphere, but their sphere is not that which has been so clearly outlined by the Army. There is no call to argue as to the ability of the Salvación Army in this field to-day; their successes in regions as remote from each other as the East End of London and the slums of Yokohama speak for themselves. What they have done elsewhere they can do here. Eminently practical, painfully economical in their administration of social schemes, the officers and privates of the Salvación, through Col. Palmer, are offering to this country a magnificent investment. Leave the moral side of the question entirely apart, and it must surely be admitted that $10,000 a year is cheap as a means of financing a scheme that will turn even a small percentage of the city's wastrels into sound, healthy, working members of the community. If it pays in the overcrowded cities of Europe, surely in Argentina, where population is the crying need, reclamation work such as is proposed pleads its own cause. Even if the proved successes do not average more than ten per cent of the total number of cases passed

HURRICANE IN PAMPA CENTRAL

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Telen, F.C.O., August 15.

On the night of August 13, a violent hurricane from the S.W. swept across a part of the Pampa Central. It touched sections 25, 24, 19 and 18, and passed on to the Province of San Luis. It appears to have wrought most destruction in the neighbourhood of Colonia Emilio Mitre, where several houses were wrecked, and a little further to the N.E. the roof of the house of Estancia "La Gloria" was entirely stripped, being carried some distance by the wind, and on its way smashed the roof of a large galpon. Fortunately no lives were lost. The wind lasted for nearly 24 hours, and such a violent storm has not been known in these parts for very many years.

HOSPITAL FOR THE PAMPA

THE GOVERNOR IN BUENOS AIRES.

The Governor of the Pampa has been engaged with various Ministers during the course of yesterday, on matters appertaining to his Province. An important interview was one he had with Dr. Cabred, concerning the building of a hospital in the province. The President of asylums and hospitals is interesting himself in the matter. Dr. Centeno also interviewed Dr. Escalante Posse concerning certain bridge repairs, and also Dr. Ortiz, to impress upon the Minister the necessity of increased telegraphic services which the Governor pointed out were at present totally inadequate.

PARK OF ARMS DESTROYED

A PRIVATE ARSENAL IN CORRIENTES.

There has been much excitement in La Plata recently regarding the armed forces which the Provincial Government has in pay. Recently a meeting was held demanding the disarmament of these forces and the Government of the Province was indicated as the head of the organisation.

It appears that the Province of Corrientes has had a very arsenal in its midst. "La Razon" affirms that the destruction of a private house, the Chalet "La Eloisa" the perty of Sr. Senator Vidal in the barrancas del Parana, has reduced, to cinders and mislaid metal a number of rifles and other weapons sufficient to equip a very formidable force. Among those are said to have been 1000 Mausers, Paraguayan model; 800 Wetterli rifles; 1000 Remingtons, besides a mixed multitude of revolvers, magazine pistols, rifles of a more or less uniform bore and great quantities of ammunition. It is said that these were bought from Paraguay but the telegram making the report adds that it is not understood why any private individual should be permitted to have in his possession, so large a store of arms.

through the Army's hands, the grant is justified. Times are hard, but the sum named ought to be obtainable between public and private aid. But to be of real benefit it must be a permanent subscription, and one can only hope that Col. Palmer will keep pegging away until his ambitions are attained, and the suggested system of investigation and aid for the poor now on the streets is a practical money-making scheme. For after the first year's working that is what the proposal really amounts to, since the whole community benefits by the measure.

IMPORTATION OF JUTE

EFFECT OF BRITISH GOVERNMENT PROHIBITION.

It is stated that the British Government's prohibition of the export of jute will only have the minimum effect upon the Argentine, and it is pointed out that sacks employed for the carrying of wheat, maize, barley and other cereals are manufactured from jute which is exported from Calcutta and is not under the published prohibition of the British Government. It is, however, not easy to realise that the prohibition will not sooner or later make itself felt even in South America. Jute has been quoted at 17 shillings, but to-day reaches 31 shillings, and it may be considered that within a brief period even this latter price will show a rise. Under such probabilities, in spite of the optimism felt in certain business circles, it would seem that any country which finds it necessary to employ sacking for the packing of commercial commodities must feel the prohibition in time to come. Furthermore the British Government have been making considerable purchases to which is doubtless due the enhanced prices of jute.

AUTOMOBILE SMASH

FURIOUS DRIVING AT MIDNIGHT.

When a chauffeur hands over the control of his machine to a passenger, he must not be surprised if things happen. Many things do happen at the vague time known as ma drugada from midnight on, for as the streets are relatively clear, the various Jehus drive furiously, and frequently come to grief. Yesterday morning about one, taxi no. 4010, was proceeding at top speed towards Cavia, under the guidance of Jose Gentile, to whom the chauffeur Saturnino Escudero, had surrendered control. Unfortunately at the corner of Cavia, a large hole in the road had been left open for work on the drains. The adventurous Gentile driving the car at its limit of speed, observed this danger when only a few metres distant. He made a frantic effort to turn, but at so violent an angle that the car overturned and fell on its left side in the street. Both Gentile and the chauffeur were badly hurt, as were also Angelina Rivas, Rosa Marques and Gerardo Rivas, who were in the tonneau. All were carried to the Juan Fernandez Hospital, where the police are also taking an interest in the two first named, by reason of their causing the accident.

STATION MASTER ASSAULTED

AFFRAY AT DIQUE LUJAN.

A violent affray has taken place at Dique Lujan station of the F.C.C.A. Five bad characters, Matias, Antonio, Juan, Pedro and Umberto Cerilo went to the station armed with clubs and revolvers and attacked Sr. Constantino Sayanes, the stationmaster, who defended himself, receiving severe blows on his left arm, which had been aimed at his head. Other station officials came to his assistance, and the scoundrels, who intended robbery, fled pursued by the Customs police.

RICE SEED FOR THE NORTH

DISTRIBUTION IN SEPTEMBER.

The Government Department which is engaged in fostering and encouraging agriculture and distributing seeds has received a number of requests for rice from agriculturists in the Northern provinces and the coast, and from certain parts of the Chaco, Misiones and Formosa.

The total of these requests amount to a sufficiency of rice to put under seed, 10,000 hectares of land.

The distribution of the seed will commence at the end of September.

BRAZILIAN NEUTRALITY

ALLEGED VIOLATION BY BRITISH WARSHIP.

Rio de Janeiro, Aug. 21.
From Santos is reported the departure of the cruiser Tymbira to the South to investigate the report that a British warship has been violating Brazilian neutrality by cruising for prizes in Territorial waters. The affair was spoken of some days ago, but no one had any reliable information and the Government is exceedingly reserved concerning the Tymbira's mission.

(The Tymbira is a small cruiser of 1,014 tons, 22 1/2 knots with two 4.1 and 6in. 2.2 guns, built at Kiel in 1897).

ARGENTINE PETROLEUM

COMODORO RIVADAVIA STATISTICS.

The Chairman of the Board controlling the oil fields of Comodoro Rivadavia forwarded during the course of yesterday afternoon to the Ministry of Agriculture statistics relating to the latest output of the oil fields dating his returns as from Aug. 15 to 21 inclusive. The production is only normal and as far as the figures shew, not particularly encouraging. The amount of produce from all the wells between these dates is 1854 cubic metres, made up as follows:

Well No. 4 . . .	224 c.m.
" No. 8 . . .	330 c.m.
" No. 10 . . .	161 c.m.
" No. 11 . . .	3 c.m.

" No. 14 . . .	114 c.m.
" No. 15 . . .	312 c.m.
" No. 16 . . .	136 c.m.
" No. 17 . . .	270 c.m.
" No. 19 . . .	240 c.m.

THE SUGAR HARVEST

THE END OF THE MILLING.

All the notices which are being received from the north of the Republic concerning the sugar harvest, confirm the previous published statements, that the returns will fall much below those of 1914. It is stated, however, that in spite of this there will be no appreciable increase in the price of sugar owing to the stock on hand, which will be included in this year's output.

Such a statement is difficult to credit in the face of the figures published in these columns a few days ago, when it was shewn that the stock was insufficient to supply the demand. The milling and working of the sugar will be concluded throughout Tucuman in a few days and it is interesting to note that while in 1914 the work occupied 130 days, that this year the time occupied has been but 100 days from 20 mills working against the 30 of last year.

MR. REDMOND AND HOME RULE

SUSPENSION DURING CRISIS.

Mr. John Redmond, M.P., has sent a reply to the vote of confidence in the Nationalist party passed by the Dublin Corporation, in the course of which he says:—"In my deliberate judgment, any attempt to bring pressure to bear on the Government to bring the Home Rule Act into operation while the war is in its present critical stage would be an act of bad faith on our part. It could not possibly succeed, and would, on the contrary, inflict a deadly blow on the national cause and play right into the hands of its enemies. The times are extremely critical. Although in my judgment full of hope for Ireland's cause, a single false step might ruin the work of thirty-five years, and I think I may with confidence appeal to the record of the Irish party during the last fifteen years in justification of the attitude adopted by the Corporation of Dublin when they carried the resolution which they have forwarded to me by 2 to 1."

the last four months. He was sent to the Front about a month ago, and his address is given as Lieut. F. J. Oerton, Royal Engineers, R. E. Details, 5 General Base, B. E. F., Rouen, France.

PATRIOTIC RAILWAYMEN

THE BRITISH SOLDIER AND HIS URUGUAYAN FRIENDS.

Since the outbreak of the war, the Uruguayan employees of the Central Uruguay Railway have worked most assiduously in the cause of the Allies. On their own initiative they started a monthly subscription amongst themselves to the British Patriotic Fund, a round sum of £50 being handed in monthly. Their interest and generosity have never abated one cent. They have independently collected money for tobacco for the British soldiers and considerable sums have been remitted for the Tobacco Fund on their account. A large number of the subscribers have received grateful acknowledgments from soldiers at the front. The following are two examples of such letters:—

Alexandria, Egypt.

Sr. Bertrand,
Inspección Tráfico,
F.C. Central del Uruguay.

Dear Mr. Bertrand,
You will be a little surprised to get this letter from me. Well I got your name and address from the Overseas Club Tobacco list. I am at present in hospital, wounded from the Dardanelles. I expect you will have read all about us forcing a landing on to the Dardanelles before you get this letter.

I am starting to make a collection of old used stamps and would like to get a few of America or any other country. Hoping to hear from you soon.

Yours respectfully,

SERGT. J. MUNRO.

Sr. Bertrand has sent Sergt. Munro a supply of stamps with a very cheerful letter.

Turnchapel, Plymouth.

Sr. P. J. Rontin,
Calle San Martin,
Uruguay.

Dear Sir,
Thank you very much for your kind typewritten letter which I gladly received this morning. I was very ill when I received it and it did cheer me up, and now I am so pleased that I am answering it. I am very sorry that I can't tell you anything about the war, but still I would only be too pleased to tell you. We are going on all right. I had a severe dose of frost bite but I will soon be fit again. We are putting all our hearts and souls into this big war and I am sure it can't last much longer. I am very sorry that I can't tell you any more this time, so will conclude.

I remain,
Yours most sincerely,
(Signed) GEORGE ARKLEY.

TO HELP THE BELGIANS

THE ARGENTINE SOCIETY AND ITS WORK.

A committee formed for the purpose of giving help to the distressed Belgians and which is under the presidency of Dr. Benito Villanueva has received an anonymous gift of $5855 from a "business house" in the city. It has also been announced that a further sum of $24,889 had been received from a sub-committee, operating on the Corn Exchange, and again that the committee in Rosario had collected a sum of $13,294. The amount now collected by the Society and its branches amounts to some quarter of a million dollars. Some little time ago two cargo vessels of 4300 tons each were sent to Europe with a shipment of all kinds of merchandise and goods likely to be needed by the Belgians, and their arrival is daily expected. The Society in aid of Belgium in this Republic is still continuing its excellent work.

RED CROSS EVENING AT QUILMES

It is announced that the net proceeds of the dance and bridge evening at Quilmes, organised by the "Old Girls" of the Quilmes High School, amount to £85. One of the old girls has arranged a raffle for some very handsome needlework, and the result of this, together with some donations, bring the final total to exactly £100. Of this it has been decided to give £70 to the British Red Cross Fund per Mr. F. H. Chevallier Boutell, and divide the remainder between the French, Belgian and Serbian Funds. The "Old Girls" and the committee of the Quilmes Musical and Dramatic Society wish to take this opportunity of thanking all those who responded so generously to their appeal for refreshments, the whole of which were given. Also to the ladies committee for invaluable assistance. Mrs. A. G. Lovett, Mrs. J. A. Oldham, and Messieurs H. W. Walter for prizes, and the Press for publicity given to the various notices regarding the evening.

An urgent appeal is again made for donations to the above fund. If a thousand dollars a day are received during the next ten days, it will be possible to close the list and the money needed will have been raised within a month of the publication of the first notice. This was the time limit suggested.

So far, as will be seen, the response has been a splendid one. The subscribers to the fund already number nearly seven hundred, and it is expected that this number will be doubled by the time the total is reached. The exploits of the "River Plate" aeroplane will be watched with particular interest if some 1500 British residents in Argentina have contributed directly towards its purchase. It is asked, however, that the subscriptions may be sent in without delay. They will be received and acknowledged by the Hon. Treasurer of the British Society, Mr. W. Watson, 336 Cangallo, Buenos Aires.

N.S.S.O. CLUB

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—The N.S.S.O. Club would be very much obliged if you would publish this letter, as they consider it only fair that the friends whose kindness helped them to raise $1000 cl by the Living Pictures given in June, and the Beehive Sale, held this month, should know how the money has been applied. The Club have distributed it as follows:—

UNWANTED LUXURIESCrisis Compels Economy*LESS CHAMPAGNE CONSUMED

After a year of war it is becoming apparent that the demand for many articles of luxury is at a low ebb. The necessity which has been felt for the general reduction in expenditure, both public and private, is making itself felt and is daily attracting more attention as the official figures of this or that commodity, as effecting importations, are issued. Articles of luxury are naturally the first to be affected. The official figures furnished concerning the importation of champagne vividly point to the truth of the fact that personal expenditure on luxuries in the Argentine is being considerably reduced.

During the first six months of this year only 9014 cases of champagne were imported, while during 1914 the number was 18,807. The difference of 9,793 cases is equal to approximately 115,000 bottles, which at a low estimate is equal to $800,00.

MODERN ITALYLECTURE BEFORE LOMAS LITERARY SOCIETY.

It was "hat night" at last evening's meeting of the Lomas Debating Society. A paper on "The making of modern Italy" by Mr. H. H. Roger was also included in the programme. Owing to considerable pressure of work, Mr. Roger was only able to run briefly over the points of his interesting subject, at the close of which he was specially requested to repeat at length his paper during the course of next session.

The lecturer briefly pointed out that the founder of modern Italy was Joseph Mazzini, and he traced the work and character of this celebrated Italian Republican statesman, comparing him with Cavour and pointing out how different were the two, one an Imperialist and the other a Republican.

The lecture was immensely appreciated by the few members present, and owing to its brevity the remainder of the evening was spent in miscellaneous subjects, including "Does the average woman overdress?" "Does the average business man work too many hours?" "Is the cinema of real value in modern education?" a subject which lent itself to the best discussions of the evening. "Has the modern woman too much liberty?" was the closing subject which was ably discoursed upon by Mr. Herald. Whether or not it was possible to agree with his views, was a question of only minor interest. Amongst the speakers were Messrs. Herald, Shepard, Triggs, Smythe, Yorston and Thompson, and Mrs. Herald.

A vote of thanks to Mr. H. H. Roger was proposed by Mr. Shepard and duly carried.

DIPLOMATIC CHANGESBRAZILIAN MINISTER TO LEAVE.

The probable retirement of Doctor Luis Martins Souza Dantas, present representative Minister of Brazil in Argentina, is considered probable, as overtures have been made to him to accept the post of Secretary to the Foreign Office under Dr. Lauro Muller. The post is rendered vacant by the retirement of Señor Carvallo. In Rio, the matter is regarded as settled, but the Brazilian Legation in Buenos Aires has no official information of the change. Owing to the unfailing courtesy and charm of the Minister, the departure of Dr. Souza Dantas will be a subject of regret to all with whom he has come in contact.

THE RAILWAY PENSION LAW*SERIOUS DEADLOCK*MINISTER'S CONFERENCE WITH RAILWAY REPRESENTATIVES

Representatives of the various railways established in this country were called together a couple of days ago by the Minister of Public Works, the official object of the meeting being to arrive at an understanding as to the best means of working the new law relative to railway pensions. The meeting was not exactly a success, seeing that the railway representatives stated that not only had they no suggestions to offer, but that it was their intention to submit the legality of the decree to judicial proof. All of which everyone knew beforehand. Yet none the less the mere fact of the meeting being held, and the categorical reply of those most immediately concerned, warrants a further exposition of the main point at issue, which, be it carefully remembered, is something quite apart from the admitted right of every worker to be able to count on sufficient means for subsistence when his working day is done.

There may come a time when the social millennium is an actual fact; a time when every labourer will know that each day that passes adds to the sum standing at his credit as a capital addition to the fund that will one day reach such proportions as shall warrant him retiring on a pension, which in truth will be no pension at all, but the fruit of his savings in the shape of deferred pay. This idea, coupled with various political considerations into which it is scarce necessary to enter here, is undoubtedly at the back of the proposed Pension Law for railwaymen in Argentina, and no-one, least of all the directors and shareholders of the lines concerned, can object to the principle involved. What they do object to is the arrant injustice of thus arbitrarily selecting one particular branch of economic effort for experiment at the cost, not of the state, but of the subject experimented upon, the more so since everything indicates an early and complete breakdown of the proposals made by the Government. Added taxation, quite contrary to the clauses of the Mitre Law, have increased the cost of railway management until dividends and capital are alike seriously threatened, and now, on top of this comes a forced contribution to a philanthropic scheme drawn up by Government officials on such sketchy lines that although money is already being collected in accordance with the law, the ultimate destination of such funds is still the subject of discussion. There is indeed something Gilbertian in the idea of imposing an unpopular levy on the companies and then asking them to give the Government the benefit of their aid in the due disposal of the money thus obtained, but doubtless the Argentine Government, never conspicuous for its sense of humour, has missed that aspect of the affair.

It also failed to note the bad effect that the passing of the Railway Pension Law has had on the immature economic knowledge of our legislators. If the railways can be made to provide pensions for all and sundry of their employes, why not carry the idea further, and bring in the banks; the gas and electric light concerns; the telephones; in fact anything and everything that employs large quantities of labour. Contributions will be forthcoming from the employes and from his employer, but the state also does its share. It keeps the funds, and promises to augment them and pay interest on the same. What more can anyone ask? That, at any rate appears to be the reasoning of the official mind which is utterly oblivious to the fact that in every civilised nation the utmost attention

THE FLIGHT FROM CHUBUTWHY WELSH SETTLERS ARE LEAVING

(To the Editor).

Sir.—A few weeks ago I saw in "The Herald" about the Welsh people leaving for Australia. Perhaps I can give one reason for them doing so.

I have been 12 years in this territory—7 years in Chubut Valley, and 5 years up here in 16 de Octubre—and have not got land yet, and it may be another 12 years, if the land laws remain the same as they do now. This is the law here as regards the land: The other day a friend of mine applied to the land office in Esquel, the town of 16 de Octubre, for land outside the town. "Oh, yes, certainly you can have the land," the Government agent said. "Go and put a fence up and house where you want the land. If anybody comes along and wants the same land, tell him to clear out. Nobody except the Government can turn you out." "But can't you give me papers to that effect? And what will happen if the Government turns me out?" my friend asked. "And shall I receive any compensation when they do?" "I cannot give any documents nor papers of any sort," the agent replied, "but you may be there for years."

I personally know people on land in the Colony—on leagues of land—on the same conditions for at least 10 years, keeping blood suckers in Buenos Aires who are trying to get the land, and if even they do get it, the price of the land is gone, paying those gentry in 100 dollar bills.

There are large families of Welsh people here, and down in Chubut Valley, and the children all want and will want land, but not on the "go and put a fence and house" system. So that in a few years most of the Welsh young people must clear out, and some are already on the way.

Go to Australia? Why not? There the conditions are good and the land becomes their property in a year or two at all events, and not such a slipshod system as there is here.

These are facts that cannot be disputed, if anyone cares to hunt them up.

Yours, etc.

John Botwood.

16 de Octubre,
July 26.FRENCH BANK'S OBLIGATIONS*A THIRD PAYMENT TO CREDITORS.

The directorate of the French have decided upon a further payment to their creditors on September 1 of ten per cent. This is the third payment that will have been made since the closing down of the Bank. The statement of account is carried up to August 31. All the amounts which are not claimed or not in deposit as ordinary accounts in the Bank, will be subject to an especial account at a later date. These will not carry interest.

is paid to the security of the capital fund. This point has been entirely overlooked; the collection of current subscriptions is apparently of far greater moment. And however true it may be that the Government ultimately responds for the due payment of the pensions, the parlous plight of its own pension fund for State employes, a fund that La Prensa declared must perforce collapse within eight years unless bolstered up by treasury contribution, it is hardly to be wondered at when serious businesses object to associate with costly experiments of a pseudo-socialistic kind, chaotic in their inception, and most evidently foredoomed to be a costly failure.

CONCORDIA NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 17.

Concert and Dance.

The first concert and dance given by the Concert and Dance Committee was held on Saturday night in the Argentine Social Club. Over 120 tickets were sold, and, as the profits will be given to a Patriotic Fund, every satisfaction is felt at the enthusiastic support given to the Committee. About 80 were present at the concert and 60 remained for the dance, which was a great success. Splendid music was supplied by the Imperial Club Orchestra. The following was the concert programme:—National Anthems played by Mr. R. A. Colls (piano) and Mr. Dutry (violin); pianoforte duet: "Hungarian Rhapsody" of Liszt by Misses Birdsall and Totterdell; quintette, "Sweet and Low," by Messrs. Bentzen, Colls, Spencer, Todd and Williams; song: "Corporal's Ditty" by Mr. R. A. Colls; violin solo: "Souvenir" (Franz Drdla) by Miss M. Kelso; song: (humorous) "Row, Row, Row" by Mr. C. Tedd; duet song: "Larboard Watch" by Messrs. Colls and Williams; song: "In Zanzibar" by Mr. G. W. Neville; violin solo: "Souvenir de Moscow" (Wieniawsky) by Mr. F. F. Dutry; song: "Two Grenadiers" by Mr. T. H. Bentzen; song: Selected by Mr. J. Petty; song: (comic) "P.C.49" by Mr. Williams; song (comic) Selected by Mr. W. J. Helmore. Neither Mr. Petty or Mr. Helmore were able to be present due to unavoidable circumstances. The items on the programme were highly appreciated but special mention must be made of Mr. Dutry's performance on the violin. Acknowledging an encore he was accompanied on the piano by Mr. Colls, and Mr. Dutry fairly excelled himself and well deserved the applause he received. Also that well known song "Larboard Watch" was well rendered by Messrs. Colls and Williams. Mr. Bentzen was not heard to such good effect as on previous occasions. Later dancing was indulged in until near 4 a.m. The arrangements made by the ladies for tea and light refreshments were excellent. A handsome profit it is reported was made and the Committee can feel justified in looking forward to a successful and profitable season.

Tennis.

The new tennis court, the making of which has been undertaken by Mr. H. P. Taylor, whose services are given gratis to the Club, is well in hand and in the near future will be at the disposal of the members. It will be a great addition and will no doubt go a long way towards helping to avoid the long waits which at times have happened when a large number of members turn out for play with only two courts going. The thanks of the club are due to Mr. Taylor for his coming forward and giving his professional services free. The Singles were finished on Sunday. Mr. Williams who was going strong being beaten 6-0 by Mr. Larkby, consequently Mr. G. Neville comes out first with 41 games out of a possible 54.

THE RIVER PARANA

The River Parana continues to fall and although this has been but slightly noticeable of late, the appearance of sandbanks, hitherto unknown, is being remarked upon. Navigation is practically at a standstill, and in some places is entirely impossible. In the Port of Santa Fé the fall of the water continues, and no movement of shipping of any kind has been possible for some days past.

It is suggested that no better opportunity will ever exist for the Government to busy themselves with dredging operations, and at a minimum of cost.

BAHIA BLANCA NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 22.

Masonic Church Parade.

This morning there was an exceptionally large attendance at the service in the Anglican Church, when the English Masons attended in full regalia. Owing to the annual meetings have been held here on the previous day, there were quite a large number of visitors present both from Buenos Aires and other places. The Church Hall was fuller than it has been for some time past, and a very interesting sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Sanderson, the lesson being read by Mr. Chevallier Routell.

Proposed Paper Factory.

At present considerable discussion is taking place with regard to the manufacture of paper from materials brought from the Neuquen district, where the necessary material in its raw state is said to be very plentiful, and could be easily brought up to wherever the factory may be built. It is suggested that the building should be erected in Bahia Blanca, which would form a good centre from which to send the finished material. Moreover, it is not too far away from where the raw article is produced.

In order that speculation in the fiscal lands at Ingeniero White may not be indulged in now that the new law with regard to their sale has been passed, the Intendente has given instructions to the municipal representative there that no one shall be allowed to erect any building on any of the land which is at present unoccupied until after the law has been brought into force.

The local inspector for the boring of the well that it has been proposed to make in the Mayo Park here, is to be Sr. Pronato, who is said to have had considerable experience in this type of work. The boring operations are to be started towards the end of this month.

Daylight robberies are becoming common here now. On Thursday one occurred in a house in Calle Colon at 10 a.m. when the thief was seen and arrested whilst taking money out of a sideboard. Again at three o'clock in the afternoon two men entered a house in Calle Las Heras and took clothes and other things said to value $125. The police are taking active steps to put a stop to the large number of robberies that are constantly taking place here now.

The management of the Race Course here have decided to give the receipts at to-day's meeting to the society known as the Damas Pro-Hospital.

The Department of Health have lately sent some twelve tubes of anti-diphtheria vaccine to the municipal hospital here.

The body of a man was found on the line between Tandil and Azucena recently, death having been due to a stroke.

District Notes.

A good deal of indignation against the government is being expressed at Guaminí in regard to the manner in which the residents are being treated there. It appears that even when there is no rain the town is threatened with being flooded owing to the over flow of water from other parts, and as a preventive against this it was first proposed to make canals to run off the water. It was afterwards found that the funds in hand were not sufficient to finish this work and it was stopped. After this the Intendente, a local man, caused an embankment to be erected around the lower side of the lagoon there and besides using the government money for this work, spent a considerable sum of his own. This was partly successful, but even yet some of the houses in the lower part of the town are standing in water. Now that there is a prospect of a good harvest, the Intendente is to be taken away and another man sent down

OBITUARY

MRS. LUISA SCARISBRICK.

On August 19, the funeral of the late Luisa Scarisbrick took place with the Rev. C. R. Bassett, of Quilmes, as the officiating clergyman. Amongst the deceased lady's friends who sent flowers were:—Mr., Mrs. and Miss Recknell, Miss Howard, Mr. and Mrs. E. Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Thornburn, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. Dobson, Mrs. A. A. Stevens, Mrs. Marrs and family and "all at 509 Mitre, Quilmes."

There were a number of friends at the graveside and with those who sent cards of deep sympathy were included:—Mr. Percy Marrs, Miss Marrs, Mr. Cecil East, W. Pritchard, Miss Percy, Miss Murdoch, Frank W. Steed, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Yonell, Reginald Lee, Mrs. A. A. Stevens, Mr. Herbert J. Dobson, Mrs. Reginald Lee, Mrs. Marrs, Mr. Ernest J. Karvey, Mrs. Frank W. Steed, Mrs. J. Harvey, Mr. Arthur J. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Steed, Rev. C. R. Bassett, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Recknell and Miss Recknell.

JUAN REGINALD JEWSBURY NEILD.

There were a large number of friends of the late Mr. Reginald Neild present at the British Section of the Chacarita Cemetery on Aug. 23. Mr. Neild died at Cordoba at the early age of 34 years and his loss will be deeply felt by his many friends and acquaintances. The Rev. W. H. Spanton conducted the service at the Cemetery. Numerous floral tributes and wreaths were sent amongst which were the following:—

From John Bramwell, Mrs. and Mrs. Geoffrey W. H. Spanton, La Primavera, Compañía Nacional de Tabacos, W. E. O. Haxell, George E. Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cook, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Pearson, J. E. Lies, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Sampson, Miss Lilian Simpson, William Thompson, Hector Bozetti, Mr. and Mrs. Montague Law Wishaw, Mr. A. Faller, E. P. Crane, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Crane, Mrs. Krabbe, Mrs. Williamson and Mrs. Lough.

Amongst those who attended the from La Plata to take charge, and the residents fear that this will make considerable difference to their prospects. As a protest they are proposing to shut up their business houses for some days. Last season it was said that over one million and a half dollars were lost through the threshing machines not being able to get to harvest when it was stacked on account of the condition of roads or the lack of them.

The government of the Pampa are now discussing the question of building a hospital at Santa Rosa.

It is now proposed to create a pueblo to be known as "Mariano Moreno" in the XI section of the Neuquen territory.

Within the last few days two chacareros in Realico (Sres. Rose and Farina) have sold a large quantity of wheat at the exceptional price of $15.30 the 100 kilos to Sres. Mellado and Bridge.

It has now been proposed to build a large prison at General Acha in which are to be interned the prisoners of the Pampa, Neuquen and Rio Negro. This building is to be opened by the beginning of next year, if the necessary funds are obtainable for the work.

In Quemu Quemu the butchers are now selling meat at 40 cents the kilo.

The telephone company at Quemu Quemu are proposing to lengthen their lines from that town to Baron and Villa Mirasol.

In the town of Neuquen the epidemic of whooping cough is said to be very bad amongst the children there.

Large numbers of cattle robberies have recently been taking place in Zapala, and several people of good standing are said to have been concerned in them.

THE WAR SPIRIT

SIGNIFICANT MOVE BY ARGENTINA.

The National Government has presented to the consideration of the Congress a Bill which will cause much discussion, not only in this country, but also among our neighbours. Briefly, the proposed law is destined to facilitate a prompt mobilisation of all the country's available strength. It also provides for the raising of an inventory, renewable every three years, of all available horses, mules, vehicles, harnesses and tools required for the use of a modern army.

The Bill goes on to arrange the rapid gathering together of all these military adjuncts within the shortest possible space of time in the case of a general or partial mobilisation being decreed.

While not calling into question the advisability of being prepared for all eventualities, it is pertinent to ask to whom is this veiled warning directed? Is the world at large to understand that Mexico will not stand alone in the event of an armed intervention, or is it the politest of polite hints to Brazil that, A.B.C. notwithstanding, Argentina will not be caught napping? On the other hand, has the upkeep of a regular army by some of the provinces, in direct contravention of the Constitution, any bearing on the matter?

funeral or sent cards of sympathy were the following:—Montague Law Wishaw, Foster O. Franks, William Thompson, Norman Leslie, Edward W. Jacobs, T. S. Boadle, H. C. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. F. de C. Matitland Heriot, John W. Barclay, J. Kennedy Cassels, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Withington, George T. Crane, Charles Lockwood, Murray Hudson, Claud F. A BRITON'S POINT OF VIEW

Facts and Fiction in the Argentine

By Addison Steele

"You never heard of the foot-and-mouth disease? A wonderful thing. Ah, yes, pills are the best thing, and plenty of them come up to the stables. I'll show you what I mean. Riding—yes they can ride. Some time back they sent German officers over here to teach them, but the Argentine officials took offence and resigned en bloc. — You can't teach them much out here."

Then one was asked to play the piano, and play he did—very well indeed. This revives Perkins, who thought we had struck a debasing society.

The landlady opened the cupboard at the other end of the room and got the whisky bottles. We hadn't ordered any, so we helped the others to drink theirs. All sorts of weird marks were scratched on the bottles, and they explained to Smithers that these were the owners' private monograms. This didn't matter to the camp man, who managed to get through a bottle of his own a night, and anybody else's that was lying about. We could have bought whisky off the landlady but she had run out, which pleased her very much, as the importers gave her ten cents on every cork she showed with their label. I then understood why the Bluebird's pockets were so bulgy, he had brought a few from town. We turned into our respective bedrooms about twelve feeling very refreshed.

I had a large front room with a balcony, and they generally charge extra for a window and balcony in Buenos Aires. There was no carpet. Rugs and carpets are not encouraged for obvious reasons. That is the worst of these Latin countries. A few chairs, the everlasting chest of drawers of semi-yellow colour with a glass mirror on one side and a cupboard on the other went to make my abode of peace. The walls in the Argentine always attract me more than anything else. They are seldom papered, but left in a bluish grey colour, with an artistic flower pattern at each corner stenciled on with paint or distemper. It is all very clean, but it has its disadvantages, especially when you drive in a nail at the wrong place.

There were about a dozen of these holes over my head, where some former boarder had tried to knock up his mosquito net, and if there is one thing more than another that tries the patience of an English visitor, it is the mosquito net. I managed to get off to bed at last, and was just off to sleep, when suddenly the sweet dreamy Buzz of a mosquito came settling close to my ear. I slapped myself severely, but it was no use. They bear charmed lives. I know Smithers says it's a great existence—flying, and buzzing, and sucking the blood of your greatest enemy, when he's fast asleep. There was nothing else to do but to sit up and get a candle and wait for it to come round. If you don't set fire to your net and you don't use bad language, you can consider you've won the game.

We played tennis at the Belgrano ground the following Sunday, and Smithers was highly pleased with its general appearance. I should think if you had plenty of money and a decent position you would go rather well. Unless you know somebody's sister, or somebody's friend, they don't know you.

When you hear in the distance a noise like a penny trumpet, this indicates the coming of the monkey nut seller on his daily round. His barrow takes the form of a model railway engine, where inside the coal box a fire is burning. This is where he roasts them like chestnuts, and as everybody eats monkey nuts in South America, he does a good business. They are sweet and nourishing, and are in great demand by restaurant keepers, where they serve them with your cocktail. The English people are very keen on them, as you observe by the amount of empty shells under the tables. Strangely enough, you get quite a meal at some "confiterias," bars and cafés, where they place before you potato salad, olives and biscuits.

At that moment the milkman made his début. Then we knew we were abroad. Three merry cows with two merry calves all muzzled came lazily on, with the tinkle, tinkle, tinkle of their neck bells.

As we were negotiating the next street, Timber was going to say something to Perkins, when he tripped up over a heap of stones left by untidy workmen. This is one of the great drawbacks to the country; wood and materials are left all over the place—they never seem to finish anything, the roads especially. Talking of roads, there are a very few worth speaking about. Ordinary streets outside the city are laid with small oblong stone cobbles about the size of English bricks; the pavement is made up of square tiles of artistic design, and has the advantage of drying quickly after rain. In nearly every street there are trees planted 6 yards apart, which agreeably shade the houses during the hot summer months.

The market we had just come to was unfortunately closed. However, we could see how the Buenos Aires residents did their marketing. In the centre there was a large open cage like the zoological gardens, full up with meat of every description, sausages, hams, beef and mutton, hanging for the flies—which thoroughly enjoy themselves buzzing from one joint to another. Next to this comes the greengrocer's stall, next the fruiterer's, and last of all the live-stock, in which there is a great variety: chickens, ducks, rabbits, dogs, cats, pigeons, and all things alive, even white mice. At the early hours of the morning, when the people come and buy, the whole scene is full of animation; afterwards it is washed down and all is quiet. Perhaps a few proprietors remain open for the slight evening trade.

As to house styles, I don't suppose there are six places alike in Belgrano. You never saw such a motley assortment, although not exactly motley. There are all shapes and sizes, high walls and low walls, massive doors and no windows, houses where you could not see how the people got in. Then we have a mansion with great iron gates with marble steps—although marble steps are not much considered, as every mean house has steps of some kind of marble. Next to this great building comes a poor man's dwelling, where perhaps a dirty card is exhibited. Ironing done here, or it may be a small dingy drinking den, with some men playing cards or taking wine over a leaden counter. One moment—amongst the rich, the next amongst the poorest, who are, on the whole, better dressed and better kept than the English of the same class. The rich houses are beyond my description; also it would be impossible to describe their imposing grandeur. It would be an education to stroll round and see some of the buildings in this southern clime. I have often tried to find out who lives in these quaint castles, but have never been successful. I know who has the prettiest, and those are the Germans. Smithers says they came over with their shovels on their backs at the time when the Argentine was young. They first of all made mud huts—that's why there's such a lot in Belgrano. Later on, when they got rich by robbing every one else, they got the best draughtsmen to come down to dinner, and after the bad wine they asked them to design something original; hence they got their weird ideas.

February is the gayest month in Buenos Aires, especially for the children, for it spells Carnival, and around this magic word many chapters have been written, but no author has ever been brave enough to write of King Carnival in this city. When the ordinary person thinks of Carnival, they immediately imagine Nice or else they have read the romantic pages of Ouida. It commenced on Saturday morning at sunrise. I was awake by hearing guns, trumpets, whistles, and all kinds of musick coming in at my open window.

We stood and watched them for a few minutes and it was certainly curious to see how the Argentine starts its revelling. The girls were in waterproofs, the men wore pyjamas and, both were soaked to the skin, however they were in their element; mixed bathing may be all very wrong in Europe, but it doesn't come near Carnival in the back garden in Buenos Aires. Everything is forgotten in these hours of merriment, for it's the only time men may dress as women and women as men. Naturally the police must interfere, and in this case they are particularly officious. Before donning any costume, you must first of all get a permit, stating what you are and who you are, and before a carriage goes into the procession, an entrance fee is charged. No water is supposed to be thrown, or squirted in your eyes, as the authorities found that respectable people went to see the masqueraders and, as some of these respectable people came home like drowned rats, they put their foot down, and the police have instructions to lock up anyone discovered in the street with water globes, etc. They did their duty well, for after our ramble round all day, we stood outside the police station and watched them bringing them home like lost sheep, every few minutes and it was very amusing to see how sadly forlorn they came away after an hour's detention with a clean face, which made a miserable contrast to their festive robes. What they see in crowding a coach up with fat and hot women dressed in all colours of the rainbow, is beyond me! how they can pass up and down hour after hour throwing reels of scented paper into faces that nobody knows, is a mystery. They sit like mummies the whole time from 9.30 to 12, and then when they are pushed off by the police who are very cross and very tired, they clap their hands and say what a glorious time we've had. Some go on to the masked ball which is held in nearly every theatre. The gentlemen pay 5 or 6 dollars, and the ladies are allowed free. This goes on for two days, when the following Sunday comes it ends, and a good thing too! Such is the humour of B. A. One evening I felt a continual pain in my left side, I had been feeling rather mean lately, in fact Smithers had made a special cocktail, thinking to do me good. Timber advised the British Hospital, and he said he would get a letter of something. As every British subject is expected to go to the British Hospital sooner or later, I didn't object. I got my introduction and away I went. The doctor as soon as he saw me, said come inside; we will operate on Thursday, and if there are any spare parts you want removing, just let us know before hand, nothing like getting all done at once. However, I went along with my bag, and a spare toothbrush. I was taken to my new home amongst the sick and left in charge of a strong nurse, whom I shall not forget. What is your name? the lady said. Alf. I said.

Alfy what? she returned. I told her to sit down for an hour or so because you will never be able to understand it. Well, we got over that and several other difficult questions, as where I was born, and how I was born, its wonderful how you forget these little things when called upon, she asked me if I could write, my telephone number, the person to be called if anything happened, and what is your religion? was the next question. I told her I was a Bhuddist. Bhuddist, that's not a religion, that's a new kind of soap we use in the Charity Ward, however I didn't argue, so she put me down Protestant. Now you must have a bath, she said sweetly and go to bed. But, my dear lady, I said, I have bathed! You didn't expect me to come here dirty, did you? No, but it's the rule of the Hotel, I mean Hospital.

Then after the bath they gave me some horrid stuff that was even worse than Smithers' cocktail. Nevertheless, I said, good health! and tried to sleep. Of course this was impossible, strange places are not conducive to sleep, so I lay still, letting my eyes wander to the centre screen, where the night nurse sat knitting, or was it reading. She looked a peaceful picture. The man next to me had a horrible cough and once he started, he seldom left off. The other man had been asleep for some time, when he looked at me he groaned. I don't know whether it was I or his leg that seemed to be broken. I felt miserable, away from all my friends. Soon the nurse appeared and spoke so softly to the man with the leg, that I wished it had been I. I must have been bad.

Next morning when the sister came, I managed to hold her attention. Darling I said if you love me, move me to some quiet monastery and let me ill alone—she said you mustn't talk like that, aren't you comfortable here? I explained my objections, so after a while they took me to another room, only occupied by another man. I was happy then. The doctors examined me, and told me Thursday was my Bank Holiday, so when Thursday came, I smoked my last cigarette, and put on the horrible coloured stockings, and went forth like Martin Harvey in the "only way." They laid me low on the smooth white table and all was still. When I awoke I was swearing softly with the sister smacking my face and telling me to be sick if I could. My first words were full of scorn for the language I used, but I would now get out of bed and have a smoke, alas, when I tried I discovered the games they had been playing me, so thinking it a beastly shame, I dropped off to sleep. Some men have told me they have thoroughly enjoyed the British Hospital, and I can believe it, for the homeless fellow out here, it must be a change. However, I certainly can't agree with them, not that I have any complaint, for everyone was very attentive, and gave me everything I asked for in reason.

When I was there the outside world was violently agitated — Smithers, Perkins, and Timber had come to my bedside and told me of the news—There was war in the air, war with Germany, so I cursed my luck that held me in bed during the early part of August. Timber spoke of great meetings of men in the Avenida de Mayo, the shouts of enthusiasm as the late news came up on the sign boards outside the newspaper offices. I lay there alone for no longer did the boys come no longer did nurses sit on my bed and chaff. All was changed, at last! we heard the siren go. It is a noise they have in B. A. which represents important news. Everyone heard it within 3 miles, it consists of a long horrible scream.

Since the time I speak of much has happened. Poor old Timber was killed at Ypres. Smithers has only one hand to shake with, and is at home with his family. Perkins is in his dug out somewhere in the north of France, having a spirky time, and sincerely trusts I don't feel out of it with my little blue paper from Dr. O'Connor.

Mainly for Women

WOMEN AND A WORLD'S FAIR

No. II.

Probably sixty-five per cent of the enormous volume of pro-exposition clerical work was performed by women, quietly, faithfully, without ostentation or applause. Take that force of splendid salaried women in the exploitation department who have handled great masses of publicity matter with neatness and dispatch. Consider those efficient women in the other departments who by sheer force of merit have climbed to positions of authority and importance second only to those of the chiefs. Several of the chiefs ungrudgingly state that they can leave their departments in the hands of their women understudies. Condescend to cast a glance on the humble stenographers and switchboard girls who have kept their tempers under the most trying circumstances.

It would be difficult indeed to measure the value of the unpaid work of the Woman's Board, composed of prominent club, society and professional women of San Francisco.

The interior of the Host building where the welfare of women employees is looked after by the National Y.W.C.A. is the only architectural work of any importance in the Exposition entrusted to a woman architect.

The Poppy Room in the California Counties display possesses decided psychological interest. Here is a woman who did it not because she had to, but because she must, worked from an impulse within and not an impetus from without. Mrs. O. P. Posey, wife of a millionaire mine owner has toiled unceasingly three years and spent a small fortune preparing the contents of her concession, having spent just a year in Boston at a technical school studying jewels and stone and hand-wrought work. She has set in silver and gold Redondo moonstones and flower-stones abalone pearls, amethysts and a rare blue chrysoprase on which she has a corner, having bought the entire output of a Mexican mine which is the only known place in the world where they are found. Mrs. Posey also shows applied Oriental work, Indian baskets, metal filigree work, verses and painting all her own output. Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Parker show a wall exhibition of mounted fish and seaweed. Miss Berta Groth has charge of the educational work, woman's hand-work and art work of 16 counties. Miss Anna Durkee, of the Varied Industries Section, is secretary, general manager and controlling stockholder of the Alaska Garnet Mining and Manufacturing Company. Going to Alaska 7 years ago to investigate a proposition in copper, she heard of a garnet mine nine miles from Wrangell, at the mouth of the Stikine river. She looked over it, liked it, went home and interested fifteen of her women friends in it. Starting with one claim, they now own a mountain and have a million-dollar corporation entirely officered by women. Miss Lottie M. Crafts, for 25 years librarian of the Minnesota University being President. Their camp, a favorite haunt for artists and sportsmen, has model cook and bunk houses for the men employees.

Miss Durkee says the greatest value of their mountain consists in a by-product of garnet-waste which she discovered 'by accident.'

Miss Durkee's accidental discovery came while she was working with a chemist. She noticed that garnets, when melted did not fuse with iron or brass and following this up, found a new use for the waste garnet, of which they had hundreds of thousands of tons. Ground to a certain mesh, put through a certain secret process, with certain special machinery, the waste garnet makes a valuable separating powder, or parting compound, for use in foundry work. This parting compound, which Miss Durkee has patented, takes the place of lycopodium, an importation from Russia, and can be produced at a much smaller cost. The composition of Miss Durkee's parting compound is about twenty per cent alumina, forty-five per cent protoxide of iron and thirty-five per cent silica. Whenever the garnet company can employ women it does so, and Miss Emily Williams was architect for the booth, and Miss Balmer designer for the electroliters.

In Mr. Ingerson's section of "thoroughbred" Arts and Crafts is the overglaze decoration of porcelain, using enamels, of Mrs. H. Elling of Berkeley, and of Miss Dorothea Warren O'Hara; the wood-block printing on chiffon and embroideries of Mrs. Ralph Johnston of New York City and of Miss Laura Mattoon; book-binding by Miss Belle McMurtry; cross-stitch work, using old designs on linen, of Edith Allen Hall; the Burclay baskets, woven from pine needles, maidenhair fern stems and swamp grass, of Mrs. M. B. Clayton, of San Antonio; the basketry and weaving in old patterns from Berea College, Kentucky; the overglaze porcelains of Mrs. M. E. Cherry, St. Louis; the exceedingly modern porcelain of Maude Mason of New York City; the embroideries of Claire O'Rourke; the copper of Miss Palmer; hand-wrought jewelry, book-binding, china decoration and weaving of Mrs. Mary J. Coulter; the exhibit of the Society of Blue and White Needlework of Deerfield, Massachusetts, organized by two wonderful women, Miss Margaret Whiting and Miss E. Millar; and the high fire porcelains of Adelaide Allsop Robineau of Syracuse. Concerning the last—the decoration of porcelain with high fire colored glazes is so complicated a problem, the results in firing so uncertain and erratic, that it is a process impracticable in modern commercial work with its high-priced labor. Such work as Mrs. Robineau's is seldom bought except by the collector or connoisseur. In approaching her difficult task, Mrs. Robineau learned early to throw vases on the wheel, and all the details of glazing and firing of all pieces marked with her carved monogram have been made entirely by her from the throwing to the glazing. Her favorite process is carving in the dry paste, technically called excised decoration. The scarab vase here shown required about one thousand hours' work for carving alone.

The Indiana Woman's Exhibit, in charge of Mrs. Robert H. Strong, shows ceramics, needlework, leatherwork, book-binding, book plates, artistic photography and sculpture; the Portland, Maine, Arts and Crafts displays embroidery, basket-work, copper work and ceramics. Mrs. Stanley Fleetwood of New York City has charge of the exhibit from the Herter Looms of the wonderful hand-woven tapestries and transparent tapestries of Alfred Herter and his associates. Many of the cartoons for the tapestries and much of the actual work is done by women. The Singer Sewing Machine Company's exhibit is a Man Exhibit, in charge of women and with the hint of a world of women's patient acquiescent work behind it, in home, in shop and in factory. In the inner "Art Gallery" alone there must be a million stitches done on the sewing machine, and all that embroidery on the foreign dolls would deceive almost any one into thinking it hand-work.

No woman can pass the Butterick display without a backward glance and were there a penalty similar to that paid by Lot's wife numberless pillars of salt would clutter the aisles. The display on figurines of dresses, hats and lingerie made from miniature patterns cut to scale and correct to the last notch was the idea of a woman and carried out under her direction. She searched the doll shops to match up for each costume all the little accessories which help so much the total effect and even went to manufacturers for advance samples of the latest goods.

Feminine influence is strong in the Palace of Education. Here in a warm glassed-in corner of the United States Children's Bureau organized by Miss Julia Lathrop, Dr. Frances Sage Bradley conducts a Children's Health Conference in which grown-ups become so interested they fairly flatten their noses against the panes; in another corner is a play-room demonstration under Dr. Anna Louise Strong, with the cutest living models; in another corner the Infant Mortality Model consisting of one hundred lighted houses the stork has visited, the lights going out to show the number of deaths at birth, the first week, the first month, the first year. There are also in the Children's Bureau displays of school children's lunches, with their caloric and financial value; Miss Julia Lathrop's statistics on causes of infant mortality showing the staggering ratio of deaths in rich and poor sections of a city; a demonstration of the care of baby in the home by means of doll models; and a case filled with soothing syrups, cough remedies, etc., with analyses to show why they should not be used.

Not far from the little rooms for helping babies to be healthy is the saddest spot in the Exposition, where the story of Child Labor is graphically told in black on white screens so he who runs cannot avoid reading. Here Mrs. Helen Mabry, the eloquent, youthful, pretty woman who has charge of this display and that of the Consumer's League, becomes a flame incarnate when talking of children's rights and children's wrongs.

Miss Louise Brigham of New York City shows all her inventions in the way of appliances and space-saving devices for children such as a two-story play-room swung inside a closet-door and a window balcony which by a motion may be converted from an indoor to an outdoor play-place; also camping outfits, space-saving devices for apartments and artistic furniture made of common packing boxes.

The Smithsonian Institute shows how lovely Woman in savage tribes free from the influence of civilization, has all the industries in her hands; for example, in Borneo she makes spears, plants, cultivates and prepares the rice, dresses the meat and game, weaves from grasses the few clothes worn by the tribe, and cares for toothless youth and toothless old age, while the men go hunting. Not far away from this exhibit are all those type-writing, telephoning, book-keeping and calculating machines which speak so eloquently of modern woman's exemption from labor, "I do not think!" Also nearby is that radio-therapeutic exhibition which shows how Mme. Curie discovered radium "by accident;" and an ardent young man explains to all comers that men, since the accidental discovery, have done much more wonderful things with radium than Mme. Curie. Probably he is right; and man's justification for taking woman's industries and discoveries out of her hands is that he has improved on them. Miss Clays appears to be the only woman capitalist, the only woman who can afford a booth all her own,—a very small one at that—in Liberal Arts. She shows exquisite novelties in Oriental applied art: Chinese embroideries, brocades, lamps, mirrors, baskets.

Over in Food Products, a flour company, a Man Corporation, shows women of all nations making breads and cakes in different languages. It would not appear from this and other exhibits that woman's ancient business of cooking has been entirely wrested from her. Those "darned three meals a day" are still pretty much Woman's Sphere. This building fairly buzzes with femininity behind the counters and in the aisles; yet it took two women to take the one little feminine booth—success to them! They are Mrs. Norman McLaren with her international Pan-Pacific Cook Book of "Savory Bits from the World's Bill of Fare;" and Mrs. F. E. Garritt of San Mateo with her good jam and jelly and cheese pots and very ornamental steamer baskets filled with her goodies.

In the Fine Arts Palace the work of women can stand right beside that of the men and not suffer from the comparison.

In Horticulture a model cannery is conducted by Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Bitting, technologists. Katharine Golden Bitting is far and away the most remarkable woman I have encountered at the Exposition. She is a micro-analyst and has also specialized on biology. She is so learned she makes you quake and so witty she makes you shake! She is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and many of her papers have been translated into French and German.

Elbert Hubbard has said of Mrs. E. W. Ehman that she is one of the big women of America. She started pickling ripe olives on her back porch at Oroville and is now head of one of the biggest industries in California.

Other women represented in the Horticultural Palace are Mrs. T. D. A. Cockerell, who, with her husband, Professor Cockerell of Boulder, Colorado, has developed the red sunflower; Mrs. Myrtle Shepard Francis of Ventura, who has developed a double seed-bearing petunia, all previous double petunias having been pollenized by hand from single blossoms; Mrs. Wright of Oakland, who conducts the business end of the Wright jams and jellies while "husband" supervises the making; Miss Davis, head demonstrator for Hunt Brothers, a woman of unusual ability and a practical psychologist; Mrs. J. L. Cooksley, who makes exquisite flowers in butter for table decorations; Mrs. Marcus of the Artificial Plant Company, who preserves plants and flowers by a process discovered by herself; Miss Florence Manor, who has done modeling and decoration for the Idaho exhibit here and in the Palace of Agriculture; Mrs. Anna Coleman Ladd, designer of the fountain and sun-dial and the architecture and garden furniture for the Massachusetts garden laid out by Stephen Child.

To conclude the writer says: "Our Exposition increases the mutual respect of the sexes for each other; and she mentions hundreds of other things women are doing there and their names and 'Sometimes Art and Nature combine and produce by their joint efforts such triumphs as Lovely Woman and the Exposition.'"

Madame Melba, who has recently returned from Australia, will start as soon as possible a series of Red Cross concerts throughout Great Britain (says a London newspaper). She has already been helping the Red Cross in Australia. Somebody sent her a little bag of farthings from London. The coin is a rarity "down under," so Melba put them up for auction. For the first farthing she wheedled a bid for £100! The value of Madame Melba's offer may be gauged from the fact that five charity concerts given by her have realised a total of £16,000. She has also been paid as much as £1,000 for singing four songs. This was at the Astor house at Clivedon, and the singing was at the rate of £50 a minute.

A remarkable record is that of Mrs. Duffy, Burnley, who has just celebrated her 34th birthday. She has nearly a hundred direct descendants serving in the forces. Her grandfather was a soldier, her father fought at Waterloo, and all her male descendants of military age are wearing the King's uniform.

Land of Lilliput.

Conducted by Egeria

"Recreo," Martin Chico.

August 18, 1915.

My dear Lilliputians,

You will see by the heading of this letter that I am once more in this beautiful Uruguayan country and now indeed it is beautiful. There are no "bichos" to be seen or felt, they have all been killed by the cold spell of weather; and everything in Nature is just reviving after the Winter rest.

A party of five came here on Sunday last, the river was so calm, we had a glorious trip from Buenos Aires, and a fine drive through the Campo to the Estancia. Every season of the year has its own peculiar beauty in the country, and now the ploughed fields, the budding trees, and here and there a green field make the panorama a very diversified one. Ever since we have had cloudless skies with just the morning mists hanging like soft muslin curtains over the transparent river which is ever reflecting the bluest of blue skies. A walk to the River Uruguay was enjoyed in the coming dusk, and later our ears heard nothing but "the trailing garments of the Night, sweep through her marble halls." The marble halls were white with the clear light of the young moon, and after the noises of that noisy Capital of Argentina, the trailing of these garments of the sable queen was music indeed. The sable queen likes her accustomed light too, and the stars seemed to be shining with extraordinary brightness, as if to accentuate the warmth of the welcome extended to us by the Majordomo of "Recreo."

The days since Sunday, how many? Why only three, and they have flown on butterfly wings; they have been as gay and as bright, too, as those of the gay little butterflies which "foil not, neither do they spin." Señor Lorenzo has been the magician for our holiday, he has waved a magic wand, or spread a magic carpet, or done one or other of those things which magicians can do; and he has carried us to that land "where the rainbow ends." Where you know, my dear Lilliputians, there are jars of golden happiness, for those lucky ones who are taken, or who can ever reach that land. When we leave the land of Lilliput we seldom get opportunities to go to the land where the rainbow ends; but to us came the opportunity, and we have found all the jars of golden happiness full and running over; and we have filled our hearts with it, as we have filled our senses with the sights and sounds which make us all physically better and stronger. All those night sounds which make such a chorus in Spring are absent. There are only those mysterious, religious silences, with now and again the hoot of an owl, the bark of a dog, and the falling of the waters from their many sources into the eternal river which inspire the unaccustomed visitor with thoughts and feelings hitherto absent from his environment. And it is not yet the time of birds, although there are many. The Viente-veos, and the Cardinales (always in pairs) never seem to leave the estancia. And now the flowers are all different. There are beds of violets and mignonette, there are antirrhinums, or, as you know them better perhaps, snapdragons; there are jonquils and irises, and in the fields trees laden with the golden mimosa, or wattle-blossom.

We have been to so many places that I cannot tell you of them all in this letter; but I will do so next week. We visited Carmelo, and had tea at the house of a friend of Sr. Lorenzo. The house was so big and quite Spanish, and the patio was full of singing birds, parrots and cardinales, plants, etc. Then we visited the pretty waterfall, and saw a huge hornets' nest. None of us had ever seen such a big one. It hung from a tree like a long mud basket; and the hornets were buzzing very busily around. You may be sure we did not disturb the creatures. They were doing no harm in their natural home. We picked lots of maiden-hair fern and gathered the scarlet verbenas or rather the Lilliputian of our party did so, and then followed a drive to the ruins of the monastery of which I told you something on my first visit here, now nearly a year ago. We had tea outside the old, broken-down church, which looks as if it might be blown down at any time in a storm. We had some excitement on our return journey, because of a young horse which was the leader in our coach. He was of a naturally inquisitive disposition, I think, and wanted to see us, and hear what we were talking about, for he would turn around and look our way, instead of looking ahead and taking us to our destination. Coming home, he turned to gratify his curiosity again, just as we were crossing the river Juan Gonzales, and tangled us up, so that we stuck in the mud, and we had to get out until he was brought to order. But as nobody was hurt, and little damage done, it was as Señor Lorenzo said "nada." One of our party was busy all the time with his camera, and he has some lovely views of our picnics and of "Recreo," and I will tell you about them soon. Another was busy with his gun, and he found sport enough killing the hawks which are only pests, and partridges which are so good to eat when tender and fresh.

To-day we had lunch "al fresco," which is, you know, out of doors. We were in a field by the river in view of the Homestead, and it was all delightful, not even an ant to annoy us. Didn't that "billy" tea taste good? And the chicken and turkey disappeared like magic also the bread and butter and the lemon "dulce" made by a funny little cook who came to Argentina some years ago now, from beautiful, snow-capped Switzerland. She speaks German and Spanish and also English but is much more skilful in her cooking than in her languages, which you will agree with me, is so much the better for us. And after this wonderful lunch, a trip to "Santo Domingo," and more sport, more snapshots, more from those jars of golden happiness. First we drove along the pretty slopes of the river, then Sr. Lorenzo got as many plants of the beautiful maiden-hair fern and others as we could carry, also we all gathered huge bunches, most of it will go to Buenos Aires to-morrow; and then afternoon tea with delicious English scones and marmalade, a feast for the gods! And to-morrow half the party will return to work, the other half and the Lilliputian are to remain in this fairy land for a few weeks, over which this evening a web of grey has been woven by those clues, who guard the weather portals; but through which King Sol sent radiant meshes to bid us remember the coming of the morn when once again everything will be blue and shining and merry and gay. So must I draw the veil over my thoughts, and leave you for another week, as happy as the past one perhaps; and perhaps you will be glad to read of others' happiness and enjoyment. Any way I have tried by my pen-picture to make you share it, which is all I am able to do. This week I send you two little stories, one about a butterfly and the other about a flat-fish, and written by Luey Murray, for a New Zealand paper.

With love from

EGERIA.

THE TRUE COLOR OF A BUTTERFLY.

It flew blithely into the air, and was there ever such a piece of brilliant loveliness?

"Oh, how vivid its colours are!" cried Harold, as he watched it with bulging eyes. "It must feel all one glow, surely, like the fire when it burns so brightly."

But the butterfly smiled to itself as it rose in the sunshine.

Not only were the child's words impossible in the sense that all such colours are, like that on the rose's breast, cool and calm, but it knew also that in its case there was simply no gay hue at all.

Like many a fine lady it liked well to allow people to consider it beautiful, while realising that to the privileged few it was known to be merely a soft dark insect.

Had it told its little history, it might have done so nicely in this manner:—"Long ago I was just drab and plain-looking enough, but because Mother Nature said I was of a kind and generous disposition she worked a pretty miracle on me.

"With her curling-tongs—boys may not understand that expression, but girls will—she twisted my skin into little scales, which catch the beams of light in such a way as to break them into different colours, and so make me appear to be red, purple, gold, blue, or black, as the case may be.

"The peacock she treated in like manner, and he and I, my friends, often enjoy a real good laugh when we hear people rave about our lovely hues.

"Remember, it is the scales (tiny, yet real) with which we are covered that, by breaking up the light, make us appear the gorgeous creatures we do."

THE HISTORY OF A FLAT-FISH.

"I am going to lie down," said little Miss Fish to her companions, one lovely morning, as they basked in a sapphire-blue ocean. "I am sick and tired of trying to rough it like the others. Here goes." And she promptly lay on her side, while her mates at once followed her example.

Time went by. Every day, almost every hour, some mocking fish came up to disturb, or rather to try to disturb, their rest.

"You'll grow so flabby that you won't be able to get up when you want to!" jeered one.

"Like the jelly-fish yonder," taunted another.

"Say, tell us," put in a third merrily, "where did you find and eat lotus under the sea?"

This fish had once swum beneath a pretty row-boat, wherein two young lovers were reading Tennyson's "Lotus Eaters," and he felt proud now of this opportunity to work his knowledge into the conversation.

Our small heroine knew nothing of the verses, however, and she cared less.

"I am going to rest myself," she kept answering them, one and all. "Just you leave me alone, will you? I'll move when it pleases me, but not an inch before."

So presently her advisers gaily left her and her companions to peaceful solitude.

Miss Fish rested for a long, long time. Then one morning she decided to get up.

But—"Why, I can't!" she cried, excitedly; "I can't move off my side! Oh, dear me!"

"I told you so," laughed some fishes, sailing by.

"A tiny wee movement would have saved you from this, you silly," said a second detachment, with less politeness than truth. "No need for what even you would call real exertion, my friend. But it's too late now, I'm afraid."

"Well, lying down is good enough for me!" snapped little Miss Fish, and her fellows echoed her words.

And they lie there on their sides in the midst of ocean's dash and glitter to this day.

But Mother Nature, in whose great, steadfast bosom there is final hope for every deformity or variance in body, mind, or spirit, came imme-

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

Mrs. Angela Rose Canfield, of Warren, first woman Mayor in Illinois, who was elected over two other candidates by a plurality of four votes, has ideals for her little city.

Warren, situated within a half-mile of the Wisconsin State line, is not a bad place at all, she says. She will try to make the city even more attractive than it is during the two years she will oversee its municipal affairs. The first woman Mayor in Illinois, and, incidentally, the second in the United States, is seventy-four years young.

"Young as I certainly am," she said, "I am confident that I have reached years of discretion. I know I can run Warren's affairs better than they have been in the past. That's the chief reason why I wanted to be Mayor—for the effect—for it would have to help to gain self-government for the millions of women who will come after me. I wanted to show all these 'doubting Thomases' that a woman can understand and guide in municipal affairs as well as any man."

Sir James Barrie adopted five children, the sons of Sylvia Du Maurier, daughter of the great novelist, who married Mr. Arthur Selwyn Davies, says the Ladies' Realm. Mrs. Davies was the original of "Grizel of the Crooked Smile," who won the heart of Sentimental Tommy. Gerald du Maurier, the actor-manager, is the boys' uncle, and so, too, was Lieutenant-Colonel Guy du Maurier, the author of "An Englishman's Home," who was killed recently in the fighting at Neuve Chapelle. The famous play-wright adopted the boys on the death of their mother, and has treated them exactly as if they were his own. The sad fate of the eldest, Second Lieutenant George Llewellyn Davies, must have been a great blow to Sir James, coming, too, as it did, after the recent wounding of one of his nephews, and the tragic death of his close friend, the late Captain Scott.

Certain newspapers are mistaken, however, in saying that the young soldier who has just been killed was the original of "David" in "The Little White Bird," and, incidentally, of "Peter Pan." This was the second of the brothers, "Tommy" Davies, who also collaborated with Sir James in "Little Mary"—i.e., supplied the famous "I'll be sick to-night" line, and who received a royalty of a farthing on every performance of that famous "spoof" play.

The attempt of the Post Office in England to employ telephone girls at 22s. a week for night work (for which men have always received 30s.) is being met with vigorous opposition by postal telegraph and telephone employees, both men and women.—Says Votes for Women.

diately to the relief of the little band. Before very long the under eye, which owing to the owner's attitude, always glared down into the water, began to move slowly upwards, till presently it could gaze on the sky as well as did its twin brother.

"Ah, see how grand we are now!" cried Miss Fish in triumph, and her mates echoed her words, as they had done all along.

"You foolish creatures!" laughed their audience, gathering round. "Nature has only taken such pains with you because you are different from the rest of us! What would we do if our eyes were both on the same side, do you think? Yes; Nature knows better than to fancy that she would do us a kindness if she made us ridiculous so."

But little did the contented flat-fish care for these words. The kindness of their tender, great-minded mother, was a very precious thing in their lives.

OUR ILLUSTRATIONS

As the war is prolonged the interest in it grows keener and keener, and the events of the past week have sharpened it. By courtesy of several exchanges we are able to produce this week a number of pictures dealing with various phases of the war. The frontispiece of our illustrated section presents a pleasing picture showing a French cavalry regiment's methods of crossing a deep stream. The horses are driven into the water, to swim across, and the men are ferried over in the pontoons provided by the engineers. For the passage of streams by the mass of an army other means are required than the simple expedient of the French cavalry. In the German advance against the Russians the engineers have had ample scope for their energy and ingenuity. The Russians have destroyed all the bridges behind them, and the Germans are forced to build temporary structures such as that shown, for the passage of their guns and other impedimenta. The ever-popular Joffre is shown in our third picture visiting the advanced trenches of his army in Northern France. We have frequently spoken of the splendid co-operation of the Army and Navy in the operations at the Dardanelles, and this week we are able to give a unique photograph showing the men of the Naval Division leaving the trenches on Gallipoli Peninsula at the moment of a headlong charge against the Turkish positions. A fitting companion picture is that depicting Turkish prisoners captured by the Allies. Although it has never been officially announced, there is ample evidence that British troops are fighting with the Serbians, and the picture showing a heavy Serbian gun being mounted, clearly depicts the unmistakable British "Tommy" at work with the Serbian artillerymen. The last picture is that of the German battle cruiser Moltke, sunk in the Gulf of Riga, during the battle with the Russian squadron. The Moltke was a first-class ship.

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

The splendid concert and programme arranged by Mr. Arthur H. Lavers was given on Saturday at the Victoria Sailor's Home, Calle Independencia. There were present the usual appreciative audience and every item was thoroughly enjoyed. Young Master Burke deserves special mention for his piano playing, but all the other musical items went excellently. Miss Gundrod and Miss Wilkinson both received a full measure of applause.

Mr. Lavers acted most ably as the accompanist of the evening.

The programme was as follows:

Part I.

1. Trio, violin, clarinet and piano, "Overture Junon," Messrs. Oporto, Frontroth and Lavers.
2. Song, "Anchored," Mr. W. Kennedy.
3. Piano solo, Impromptu in A Flat, Master Frank Burke.
4. Song, "They all love Jack," encore, "Barney take me home again," Miss Gundrod.
5. Cello solo, "Mazurka (Witten Lecker), Miss M. Wilkinson.
6. Song, "The last Watch," encore "The Snake Charmer."
7. Violin solo, "Nocturne," (Chopin) Sr. R. Oporto.

Part II.

9. A Musical trio, Messrs. Oporto, Frontroth and Lavers.
10. Song.
11. Cello solo, "The Monk's Prayer," (Lecker), Miss Wilkinson; encore "Romance."
12. Chorus.
13. Piano solo, "Blue Bells of Scotland," Master Frank Burke.
14. Recitation, "The Swallowed Frog," (by special request).
15. Violin solo, "Romance and Bolero (Danela), encore, "Czardas," Mr. R. Oporto.
- Trio, "Idylle," and "Elena," Messrs. Oporto, Frontroth and Lavers.
- God save the King.

BRITISH HOSPITAL

THE DEATH OF MR. DUGGAN.

The Committee of Management of the British Hospital held their usual monthly meeting on August 18, the following gentlemen being present:—

Mr. C. H. Pearson (Chairman), Messrs. Thomas Lloyd, A. G. Thornton, R. de Candolle, J. Dey, Horé Gibson, W. E. O. Haxell, A. M. Wilson, A. W. Boote, G. Lloyd Davies, J. Begg, Rev. Dr. Fleming, Rev. H. W. Brady, and C. Manifold.

Before the business of the meeting commenced, the chairman referred to the loss which the Hospital has sustained in the lamented death of Mr. E. L. Duggan, who for so many years had taken a warm and active interest in the management of the institution, both as Hon. Secretary and member of the Committee. The Secretary was requested to convey an expression of the members' sympathy to the late Mr. Duggan's relatives.

The Hon. Treasurer reported that the expenditure for the month of July had been $25,012.55, making the aggregate for the seven months $161,976 and 85 cents.

The number of patients treated during July was 333, as compared with 295 in the same month last year.

The following subscriptions and donations were received during July:

THE NEW MINISTERS

TAKE THE OATH.

In the "Salon Blanco" of the Presidency yesterday afternoon the newly appointed Ministers of Home Affairs and Justice, Drs. Oliver and Saavedra Lamas, respectively, took the oath necessitated by their appointments.

The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of people, Senators, Deputies and public alike. The President of the Republic accepted the oath of the new Secretaries of State. After the ceremony the new Ministers received the congratulations of their numerous friends.

ST. ANDREW'S SCOTCH SCHOOL

FORMER PUPILS' CLUB SOCIAL.

There was a splendid turn out of former pupils of St. Andrew's Scotch School, Calle Ituzaingo, last evening, when their usual monthly social was held. The energy displayed by Messrs. Drysdale and Rasmussen in making the necessary arrangements went far to make the evening an entirely enjoyable one.

Various musical items were included in the first part of the evening's programme, before the refreshments and these, judging by the vociferous manner in which they were received, gave great pleasure. There was one little fellow and a violin who deserves special mention. Master From is only eleven years of age, and yet without any assistance from the piano he played, and played with a most accurate ear, Gounod's "Ave Maria" and "The Broken Melody," and was most heartily applauded. So were the many other items both applauded and encored. Mr. W. P. Hardy made an excellent chairman and called upon the following ladies and gentlemen, amongst others, for musical items:— Miss Rosita Bell and A. Estela, a pianoforte duet; Liszt's No. 2 Rhapsody, Mr. Victor Reid; song "Until" and as an encore "Sympathy"; Messrs F. and J. Uteda, with a violin and piano interpretation of "Bohemian Airs"; Zarazate and Chopin's No. 2 Nocturne. Miss Briggs sang very charmingly both "Somewhere a Voice is calling," and "In Memory's Garden." Mr. Valentine Porodsky was splendid with his cello solos, and throughout the early part of the evening only time prevented many an encore being taken.

The remainder of the social was occupied in dancing, and as there was a "bevy of perfect beauty" present, the evening passed away only too quickly, and once again a thoroughly enjoyable time was spent, which only made many, who were there last night look more eagerly forward to the next social of the St. Andrew's Former Pupils Club.

On the first Friday in September there will be a members' "Hat" night.

ST. ANDREW'S LITERARY SOCIETY

CLOSING SOCIAL OF WINTER SESSION.

There was an excellent attendance last night in 352 Peru to listen to the programme submitted at the final meeting of the Society for the present winter. The programme which had been arranged by Mr. J. Llewellyn Hawes, organist of St. Andrew's, was of the most varied character, and of the highest quality. The Chair was taken by the Rev. Dr. Fleming. During the interval, tea and refreshments were served to audience and artists.

At the close of the meeting the Rev. Dr. Fleming moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Hawes for all his work and trouble in connection with the programme, to the artists, many of whom had come at considerable inconvenience to themselves, and to the ladies who had supplied the material for the refreshments. He also mentioned the excellent course of entertainment that had been submitted to the Society during the past winter. This was due to the energy and zeal of the Committee, under trying circumstances, and thanks, not only of the Society, but also of the community, were due to them.

The programme was as follows:—

Pianoforte selection, Rachmaninoff's Prelude, Mr. J. Llewellyn Hawes; Cello Solo, Le Reve, Mr. W. Davies; Song, "Song of Hybris the Cretan," Mr. F. F. Bideleux; Duet, Two little Birds, Mr. and Mrs. de Mello; Violin and Cello Duet, Barcarolle, Tales of Hoffmann, Miss E. E. Woodwell and Mr. W. Davies; Song, Loves Coronation, Mr. David T. Neil; Song, Cingalee Love Song, Mrs. de Mello; Song, Sympathy, Mr. F. F. Bideleux; Violin Solo, Arabesque (Carl Bohm), Miss E. E. Woodwell; Song, A Rumanian Tent Song, (Gordon Temple), Mr. David T. Neil; Song, Annie Laurie, Mrs. de Mello.

RED CROSS DANCE

AT LIBERTAD (F.C.M.)

The success which attended the efforts of those who organised Aug. 21st's Red Cross dance at Libertad (F.C.M.) is now a matter of ancient history; unfortunately it has not been possible to record the event until to-day owing to the lack of a night train service between the outlying suburb concerned and the Capital. The following description of the proceedings has been provided by a correspondent:—

As we approached Puente Alsina, we formed a procession of some "twenty taxis" all bent for the same destination, the Midland's station, where we were met by the Locomotive Superintendent, Mr. George Handley, in charge of a special train kindly granted free (which goes to show that the General Manager of the Midland's Railway is also a "sport"). The train left punctually at 9 o'clock.

"Tipperary" and songs of a similar nature were indulged in all the way out to Libertad, where the train was switched off to the Company's principal building, at which the dance was held. There we were met by the ladies and gentlemen responsible for the evening's enjoyment and conducted to our respective cloak-rooms. The principal room, in which the dancing took place, deserves special mention for the artistic manner in which it was decorated with flags, palms, etc. Four large electric lights, one in either corner, neatly covered with shades, represented the Red Cross.

At midnight a cold supper was provided in one of the adjoining rooms and was greatly appreciated. Light refreshments were served throughout the evening. Non-dancers were not left out in the cold, as several of the offices were furnished with card-tables, "cozey corners," etc. At 4 a.m. the first special train left the siding, conveying many of the dancers back to Buenos Aires. Some 40 couples still remaining kept the ball rolling till the second special left at 6 a.m. The whole population of Libertad, with the exception of a few "slackers," were on the platform to cheer us off.

The M. C., the committee and the ladies of Libertad responsible for the function deserve every credit for the excellent manner in which everything was carried out from the beginning to the end without the slightest hitch. Professor Ross' orchestra was everything that could be desired. Little Miss Stickles (aged 5) was neatly got up in the uniform of a Red Cross nurse, and Miss Baby Handley with her basket of flowers considerably augmented the funds of the Red Cross to which the total receipts from the dance are to be allocated.

TELEGRAMS TO BRITISH ISLES

GOVERNMENT REGULATIONS.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs has been informed by the British Government that the senders of telegrams from this country, which have been detained by the censor, will receive compensation in part or in whole for their detained telegrams under the following conditions:—

"That no re-imbursement will be made of less than five shillings."

"That re-imbursement will only be made by a request from the remitters through the administration of the country of origin and that all applications must be accompanied by a written declaration from the sender."

"That for no amount of re-imbursement will reasons be given nor any reason for withholding it altogether."

"That only telegrams to the British Isles are included."

"That all telegrams must conform to the instructions issued by the British Government on August 3 and that re-imbursements will only be made for those sent after July 15, 1915."

EMIR EMIN ARSLAN'S INDICTMENT

POWERFUL ARTICLE FROM THE NEW REVIEW

In a relatively long and able review of the past year of war, the Emir Emin Arslan, in "La Nota," considers the general position. Himself a Turkish diplomatist of experience and widely read, he is well qualified to form opinions on the subject. Among other observations, he says:—"The Pacifists, with characteristic simplicity believed that no man could be found who would be responsible to humanity and history for such a war. The experts likewise assured them, that modern means of defence and the marvellous inventions of science had for ever buried the possibility of a general outbreak. The financiers also prophesied the bankruptcy of every State involved, inside of six months. All these illusions of indestructible Peace have been cruelly deceived, and War, in its sinister reality has shown us three things: A new Germany, which in the full expansion of prosperity treacherously lay in ambush, disguised with perfidious care to assail Europe with its powerful army and formidable fleet.

THE HYPOCRISY OF THE HUN.

"This same Germany, after having systematically opposed in the Peace Congresses the idea of general disarmament, or even of compulsory arbitration, has endeavoured to subdue the world by terror, and not content with having trampled on all conventions, guaranteed by her own signature, has horrified the Universe by waging a war utterly devoid of honour. There is no record since the invasions of the Huns of a war so cruel and so savage as that now waged by the Germans. To the inventions of an implacable science they add the ideas of a delirious barbarism. Unable to astonish the world by their victories they seek to impress it by the horror of their crimes. Their fury bombards undefended cities; atrocities unnumbered have been committed on poor women and feeble aged; they have hurled incendiary bombs from aloft on the unhappy villages; they destroy systematically the architectural marvels of civilisation; they employ destructive gases or asphyxiating and tormenting vapours; and sink with torpedoes the peaceful vessels of neutral States. This return to murderous barbarism, rapine and incendiarism in the midst of Europe, which appeared tranquil and solidified by noble labours, in an age too, when all peaceful triumphs might be expected, is like the memory of the scourge of the vandals, a sinister vision.

HEROIC BELGIUM.

"Belgium on the other hand, has given a splendid example. This little State has inscribed its political morals in letters of blood; has raised its national honour to the greatest heights and placed it on the highest definite level, of conscience, faithful endeavour and human valour. It has in a word, gone to sacrifice to save the world from a Teutonic yoke. It is said that when Cardinal Mercier was in Rome at the last conclave, someone, probably a colleague of the Sacred College, asked him what the Belgians could possibly gain in their sterile encounter with the Germans. Looking fixedly at his questioner, the worthy Prelate replied: "They gain the knowledge that honour is indispensable." A sublime reply. The Belgian people and their King knew quite well that in giving them two hours only to reply to an ultimatum, they were placed between suicide and disgrace. King Albert, interpreting the unanimous will of his people, never hesitated. To leave the Belgian roads open for the German troops would be iniquitous treason. When King Albert pronounced an emphatic "No!" he spoke with the heart of all his people.

THE REJUVENATION OF FRANCE

"The war has revealed an unexpected France, a new France to us and to herself, and never has she given the world a finer spectacle nor had a more glorious page in history.

"For 44 years France endured with calm stoicism the rudeness, the impositions of Germany, and when the war ends and we can read the truth in diplomatic archives, the world will be astounded at the fine example of patience given by this great people, so proud of their traditions. France had not believed in an imminent conflict. Here was manifest her want of military preparation.

THE ADMIRABLE JOFFRE.

"The great soldier reputed impetuous and terrible in the assault, was known to be mediocre in defence, yet he had to fight retreating constantly for a fortnight. Ever retreating the French army reached the banks of the Marne, and then it was that its Chief, the Admirable Joffre, one of the Great Captains of History, said: "Enough; tell the men they must advance or die where they stand."

BREAKDOWN OF GERMANY'S WAR MACHINE.

"Thrilled with enthusiasm, the Republican Army turned on the enemy often fighting one against four, they hurled them back from the environs of Paris. The German soldiers were obliged to hide themselves in trenches and in this pusillanimous posture, for eleven months they have remained, unable to advance a single step. Thus did the famous War Plan of Germany, elaborated during 45 years, break down helplessly. During all that time Germany has been preparing, with laudable perseverance and method, the most powerful army in the world. Thoroughly trained, competent officers and competent classes of men composed that army, whose smallest administrative arrangements moved with mathematical precision. It is not needful to insist in the excellence of the German armament, the efficiency of the auxiliary services, nor the "Kolossal" abundance of munitions. The War Plan was a minute study by all the chiefs of the general staff; it consisted in reducing France to impotence without delay, and it was necessary to succeed constantly and not to give any time for recovery. As the Vosges frontier line opposed impregnable fortresses, the Kaiser's army made their attack through Belgium. All this, including the violation of that heroic land, had been foreseen and provided for in the German War Plan. The enemy had not counted on the reaction of France nor upon Joffre's military genius. The revulsion could not have been hoped for, and under the deadly fire of the enemy, this illustrious commander, after having returned eighty incompetent generals, formed a staff of his own choice.

THE MORALE OF THE FRENCH.

"France did more yet. Undermined by Heweism (anti-militarism), her forces advanced to the firing line with unanimous enthusiasm, and from the first moment all the old military virtues of the French soldier of the First Empire, reappeared. In Civil Order also the transformation of France is also miraculous. All political parties are united in the sacred love of country, and the extremists of the Right and Left, have forgotten their rancour and remember only the danger and the defence of the nation. None of the allied countries has confronted the rigours of war with greater and closer unanimity, but what is above all astonishing is the high morale of the French nation. This land, which was said to be dissolved in the grossest materialism shows itself spiritualised by its prodigious love of justice. Not one French family has shrunk from the agonies of the war, not one citizen of the Republic has rebelled at this mandate of the national conscience. Victory alone must bring peace! Radical transformations have taken place in the French character in this war. With the iron discipline of the camps, the French soldier to-day shows himself an austere and stoic warrior, who uncomplainingly endures the severe rule of the censorship, which weighs upon and imposes science on all. In his book "La Politique Alemana," Prince Von Bulow, Ex-Chancellor of the Empire, has said, "More than once Europe believed France definitely broken and crushed by her military reverses, and more than once also France has risen to her feet, towering before an amazed Europe." Germany is now feeding on her own flesh, the truth of her statesman's words.

THE HONOUR OF ENGLAND.

"And Britain? Britain has shown herself worthy of her traditions. The English of our time are the Romans of antiquity. After Sir Edward Grey had sought by every means in his power to ensure peace, proposing a friendly arrangement of the Austro-Russian Serbian trouble, to the German Empire; after having repulsed with scorn and righteous indignation the shameful proposals made by Germany as the price of neutrality, England never hesitated to join her allies to defend her signature and the inviolability of Belgium territory. The unexpected alliance with France was a mortal blow for Germany, and this alone is enough to explain the ferocious hate which the Germans bear to England. From the moment when the first shots resounded, Lord Kitchener predicted a three years' war, "but," he added, "if needful that it last ten years, England will fight for ten years to ensure the triumph of Right and Justice."

KING EDWARD'S GENIUS.

"The Great King, that man of genius whose name will be held in reverence in the history of his age, Edward VII., is unfortunately no longer here to behold the fruit of his political labours. He is was in effect who raised the first voice in Europe against the German tyranny. Profoundly peaceable, he was obliged to think of war. Edward VII. thought it possible to crush that tyranny without danger to European peace. This is the historic reason of the ententes and cordial agreements formed with France and Russia which had been the traditional foes of Great Britain. He recognised, nevertheless, the possibility of war with Germany, for he, a profound student of men, had seen to the bottom of the soul of his nephew William II. "We may expect anything from him," said he, "for he is not a gentleman." One must render justice to the clairvoyance and foresight of that great King."

INSURRECTION IN ANGOLA

PORTUGUESE CONFLICT WITH NATIVES.

Lisbon, Aug. 21.

An insurrection is reported in Southern Angola, where a conflict has taken place in which twelve Portuguese were killed and thirty wounded but the natives were defeated.

Troops have gone to crush the rising.

COLONEL HARRISON'S OPINIONS

AGREEABLE PREDICTION OF U.S. MILITARY EXPERT.

Prophets have been constantly sought in times of trouble, and the opinion of the prediction by the seeker is generally in proportion to the pleasantness or the reverse of the forecast. In Richard II. the Queen says: "For God's sake, uncle, speak comfortable words." Colonel Harrison, the American military expert, has for some time been speaking words not altogether comfortable, but, it is asserted, singularly accurate as predictions of probabilities. The opinions he has recently set forth in the "New York Herald" are distinctly interesting, and for the Allies increasingly comfortable and optimistic after September. For July he expected: "In the West, no change. French movements begin. Italy: Amplification of the Italian front, engaging a double number of the enemy. Russia: Great German offensive in Poland. In the East: Very slow progress in the Dardanelles, in Armenia, in Mesopotamia and the Black Sea region. Collaboration of the Italians in the Dardanelles.

For the rest of the year, Colonel Harrison forecasts as follows:—August.—In the West: Without change. Expenditure of ammunition increases. The British line reinforced and extended. Italy: Attack on Trieste and Istria (Pola). Russia: The German advance contained (for want of reserves). In the East: Local Serbian attacks. Constitution of the Balkan League; active intervention of Rumania and Bulgaria.

In September.—General violent offensive by the Germans. Tremendous expenditure of munitions. Italy: Junction of the southern line of Italy with Serbia and Rumania, and general assault upon Austria. The Russians advance again on both wings. In the Orient: Final collapse of Turkey; fall of Constantinople; opening of the Dardanelles.

October.—The German offensive held. The Germans themselves begin to withdraw their lines, accelerated by the French attack. Slight detention at the end of the month in the French line from Ostend-Maubeuge-Ardenne-Luxembourg-Metz and Strasbourg. Italy and Russia: Reconquest of Galicia by the Russians; Hungary invaded at three points; flight of the Austrian Government, which takes refuge in Germany; retreat of the Germans from Courland and East Prussia. Orient: Conclusion of Turkish operations. Bulk of expeditionary forces return to the West.

November.—Germans retreat afresh. Their line pierced and broken into three or four fragments. Italy and Russia: Retreat of the Germans from Poland; Silesia abandoned; invasion of Germany.

December.—French armies reach the Rhine. Germany asks an armistice, (which will not, one hopes, be granted).

Colonel Harrison evidently regards the present enormous effort of Germany on all fronts as a sort of "dead lift," the final effort, which, resisted as it is being resisted, can only precede the final gradual collapse of the whole atrocious organisation, leaving Germany exposed to the righteous vengeance of outraged Europe.

BRITISH OFFICERS DECORATED

BY FRENCH MINISTER OF WAR

Paris, August 19.

The French Minister of War after having reviewed the British forces in the north of France conferred upon General Yarde-Buller the distinction of Knight of the Legion of Honour. Colonel FitzGerald, Aide-de-camp to Lord Kitchener, was made an Officer of the Legion of Honour.

Sports and Pastimes

THE TURF

PALERMO

Generally speaking the racing at Palermo on Sunday was disappointing. Not only from the point of view of the general public, who were always selecting the wrong horse to make favourite, but from a sporting point of view also. There was but one really good finish and that when Campesino managed to beat Petit Duc by a head, and a fair finish was seen between Nitrato ex-Americano and Fidelio II. Apart from these events sport fell flat, and there was a "jaded" impression given by the general display and the results. Nitrato and San Simon were the only favourites to get home, if we exclude Smasher, in whose race there was only the minimum of betting. This event, the classic, was a weak affair and practically without interest. Smasher made all the running and ultimately won as he liked; and never gave Mustafá a chance. It was somewhat surprising to see that the latter was fancied as much as Smasher, because Mustafá had no chance over this distance, and cannot be said to be good above 1700 metres, which we believe is his ideal distance.

The first event was interesting if only on account of the fact that La Loca shewed the limit of her capacity. She failed to give the weight to Ermita, who made all the running and try as she would, La Loca could make no impression upon her, although she ran strongly and gamely.

If the race did contain anything of a surprising nature, it was in the utter failure of Broncina to come anywhere and furthermore in shewing how Scheherazade has gone off.

It would be interesting to have some technically sound reason to account for the fact that so many mares, when once "let down" in their training rarely if ever come on again to the fulness of the form they possessed before resting. In this first event Tejuela ran fairly well, but not so strongly as could have been expected.

The fillies' event was won by Cabiria from Gallina Ciega and the favourite Guayabita. The result makes one ask the question, what was the winner doing when last out? She ran nowhere, and in spite of a nice third the time before. Thus when she was out on Sunday she was hardly expected to do so well, because the majority of people thought her third was only a flash in the pan. One lives and learns and the more you learn at Palermo the less likely are you to live. Gallina Ciega was a surprise. She has often been expected to do things but has never done so until Sunday.

Nitrato was installed a favourite for the colts' event, but not by public money altogether. His running was not a surprise altogether, if one remembers what he has done in the past, but Winer's performance did surprise. This colt is steadily improving, and on Sunday put up the best performance that he has done so far. El Es upheld our good opinion of him, by running fourth, although we must say we think T. N. Fernandez could have ridden him better than he did. We must look out for Fidelio, who ran second, as a future winner in a very short time to come.

The going, although on the heavy side, was not heavy enough to favour Ave Cesar. This latter is no great shakes as a piece of horseflesh.

Dosel utterly failed and strictly speaking this is not surprising, considering the amount of work this colt had to do lately. He will win after a rest. This event was the third in which the winner made all the running.

The same thing almost happened in the Premio Mouchette. Petit Duc got away and was only just collared on the post by Campesino. Banderale, although third ran weakly. Querido should not be long in winning again. He did not appear to be in the fulness of good training, and seems to need hardening up, before he can be expected to win.

The event after the Classic ended in a surprise win by Gefé from Matchbox. Sin Humo shewed how difficult he is to ride and to get going, and Arcuri could do nothing better than secure fourth place. Faucheur's exhibition was what might have been expected by a thoughtful public, but in spite of it they installed him favourite even while greeting his jockey with the same and tiresome cry of "Papaleta." It was a listless event.

San Simon had a very easy win over Solicitud in the seventh event, after making all the running. The public made their choice quite accurately, the first three coming in, in exactly the order the betting indicated.

Makaroff, the more he runs the more difficult he becomes, and if he does win again, he most certainly will create a surprise.

The final event of the day went to Penitelo in the hollowest of fashions. Tamarindo was installed a warm favourite and stuck to Penitelo, who made the running, like a leech, until nearing home when he utterly tired and failed to be seen again. Despite his 59 kilos, Walter Scott came along with a great rush at the finish and beat Inspector out of a place.

In this event the winner certainly ran a fine race, and it struck us that the tactics displayed were those which are most likely to favour this horse, whose reputation for uncertainty may be due to the fact that he dislikes being kept back and loses heart. By the way he won on Sunday, he has kilos in hand above the others.

And so came to an end a listless and "weak" day's sport.

Irigoyen, one of the most famous of South American race horses, has gone to the stud. This son of Jardy was sold to Señor Carlos Reyes, the well known breeder, by the Los Cardos Stud. The price paid was $60,000.

LA PLATA

Racing at La Plata on Sunday was most disappointing from the point of view of sport. Nearly all the events ended in processions, and were of a funeral order. The course was heavy and times bad.

Kiddy by winning with 58 kilos up shows that he should never have lost the event the other day when carrying 57. He won in a hack canter by 4 lengths. It is stated he returns to Palermo for the races on Thursday next. He should do well. The day was a cold one, and but few enjoyed themselves. Prices and faces in general were long, which showed that but few favourites got home. Altogether it was a disappointing meeting. The results were as follows:—

Premio ORIGINAL, 1600 metres.

1 Licinio 49, 2 Carabinero 52, 3 Belvedere 52, 4 Focida. Also ran: Floweret, Villemil, Peugeot, and Herb. Won by half a length; 2½ lengths. Time 1.47 2/5. Dividends $23.60 and $4.20, 2 $2.50, 3 $5.50.

Premio OQUENDO, 1300 metres.

1 Kiddy 58, 2 Belgrado 49, 3 Cebada 45. Also ran: Trocatintas, Tower, Diorita, Fine Mouche (4), Ehontée, Isolina II., Monica II. Won by four lengths; 2 lengths. Time 1.27. Dividends 1 $11 and $5.90, 2 $5, 3 $7.10.

Premio ON KO, 1400 metres.

1 Pionono 51, 2 Electro 57 3 Herd 49, 4 Farrista 51. Also ran: Neleo, Menianto, H. Negra II., Monarch, Per Bacco, Jolie Jeu, Macauley, 1. Brava. Won by 2 lengths; 2 lengths. Time 1.23 1/5. Dividends: 1 $25.30 and $5.50, 2 $4.50, 3 $4.50, 4 $4.20.

Premio OCRE, 1600 metres.

1 Capete 43, 2 Divino 44, 3 Pirincho 4 Matille. Also ran: Effusion, Edgardo, El Triunfo. Won by several lengths. Time 1.47. The race was in the nature of a procession. Copete won by some 8 lengths from Divino, who was six lengths in front of Pirincho. Dividends: 1 $6.30 and $3.30, 2 $3.50.

Premio OREGON, 1400 metres.

1 Heressy 52, 2 Poco á Poco 54, 3 Cunbey 53. Also ran: Apiz, 8 de Diciembre (4), Quiroguita, Festolin, C. de Foudre, Cap. Piazza, Quevedo II. Marguerite, Loterie. Won by a length; a neck. Time 1.36 1/5. Dividends: 1 $41.70 and $8.30, 2 $10.50, 3 $24.40.

Premio ORGALTA, 1400 metres.

1 Pitina II. 54, 2 Bayonne 51, 3 Ardilla III. 56. Also ran: Chillar, Tropical, Buril, Real Envido, Ginebron (4), Malambo, Ongara, V. Flowert. Won by 4 lengths; 1½ lengths. Time 1.37 1/5. Dividends: 1 $15.10 and $4.50, 2 $8.40, 3 $3.60.

Premio ORUGA, 2000 metres.

1 Sigfrido 47, 2 Manito de Oro 50 3, Fable 4, Chambrey. Also ran: Nubifer, Condarco, Coquin and Saltarin. Won by threequarters of a length; several lengths. Time 2.13 1/5. Dividends: 1 $11 and $5.90, 2 $4.50.

Premio OCURRENCIA, 2000 metres.

1 Pretty Boy 47, 2 Foragido 47, 3 Sibarita 43. Won by 2½ lengths. Time 2.18 1/5. Dividend: 1 $3.20.

ROSARIO

There were one or two unpleasant surprises for the mass of the G. P. at Rosario on Sunday last, especially in the last event of the day, when Petimetre beat Sunchales by a neck.

They also made a mistake when they selected Mi Nene to beat Lord Bramble at the weights. With a difference of 7 kilos she only just failed by a head to catch the leader.

If Mi Nene comes down to Palermo, which is suggested as probable, she will certainly be worth watching. She is a strong runner and courageous. The meeting at the Hippodrome Independencia was a pleasant one, and good sport was enjoyed, in excellent weather. The results were as follows, and it should be remarked that in the last race Opulento was disqualified.

Premio CORRECTA, 100 metres.

1 Gun 56, 2 Juncal 56, 3 Ganadero 56. Also ran: Paraguay 52, Lucila II. 54, Galupin 49, Espiral 47, Silk Stockings 52. Won by a length. Time 1.4 1/5. Dividends: 1 $10.10 and $3.50, 2 $2.65.

Premio MERRY SINGER, 1300 metres.

1 Ormilla 55 2 Verdi 57, 3 Betrayer 54. Also ran: Culata 55, Dorando 57. Orono 57. Won by a neck. Time 1.22 2/5. Dividends: 1 $5.20 and $3.30, 2 $4.30.

Premio PARLAMENTO, 1200 metres.

1 Tango 56, 2 Galliard 56, 3 Apple Tart 54. Also ran: Nenito 56, Potcholo 55, Blondin 53, Silvano II. 56, Profana 54, Helix 54, Rey Negro 56. Won by a length. Time 1.16. Dividends: 1 $9.40 and $3.55, 2 $7.80, 3 $2.75.

Premio CLAIRETTE, 1600 metres.

1 Everest 50, 2, Sopeton 45, 3 Freyre 44. Also ran: Don Gabriel 41, Gigante 60, Ladkin 55, Galana 51, Galardon 47, Ambicioso 43. Won by 2 lengths. Time 1.40½. Dividends 1 $7.45 and $3.95, 2 $4.90, 3 $9.35.

Premio CORONEL S DOMINGUEZ, 1600 metres.

1 Lord Bramble 52, 2 Mi Nene 59. 3 Cocainera 55. Also ran: Audax 52, The Libel 55, Tric Trac 50, Trinchera 50. Won by a head. Time 1.40 1/5. Dividends: 1 $12 and $4.20, 2 $3.25.

Premio RAPP, 1300 metres.

1 Gallardia 54, 2 Poupoule 54, 3 Socarrona 51. Also ran: Industrial 56, Facundo IV. 56, Marobe 53, Sandstorm 56, Sigomar 53, Suplente II., Darica 55. Won by ½ length. Time 1.20 4/5. Dividends: 1 $7.40 and $3.15, 2 $4.05, 3 $5.70.

Premio PETITE CHOSE, 2200 metres.

1 Petimetre 53, 2 Sunchales 56. Also ran: Macabeo 55, Opulento II. 59, Buton Hole 46, Itaty 49, Royal Nose 56. Won by a neck. Time 2.23. Dividends: 1 $20.30 and $6.85, 2 $3.70.

FOOTBALL

COPA DE HONOR

SEMI-FINAL.

RACING (5) v. SAN ISIDRO (2).

An immense amount of spectators were present on the Gimnasia y Esgrima ground at Palermo on Saturday, to witness the defeat of the League champions in the semi-finals of the "Copa de Honor." The following teams turned out:—

Racing.—S. Arduino; A. Reyes and S. Ochoa; A. Betular, F. Olazar and R. Pepe; Z. Canaveri, A. Ohaco, A. Marcovecchio, J. Hospital and J. N. Perinetti.

San Isidro.—Wilson; Idiarte and Rossi; Badaraco, Morroni and Olivari; C. and J. Fernandez, Sayanes, Marini, and Alzua.

The referee was Señor Alfano.

The game from start to finish was a good one, and free from any unpleasant incidents. It was fast and well contested, and Racing undoubtedly won with their superior combination. Marcovecchio was prominent as a goal getter, but the better game was played by Hospital. Perinetti scored Racing's first goal, and immediately afterwards Hospital put the ball through again. Then San Isidro through Elias reduced their opponents' lead, so that at half time the scores were 2—1 in Racing's favour. Very even play followed, with the superiority on the side of Racing, especially towards the end of the game. Ohaco, Hospital and Marcovecchio scored for them, and Marini for San Isidro. The game came to an end in the defeat of the champions.

SEMI-FINALS.

BOCA JUNIORS (2) v HURACAN (0)

Boca Juniors played the better game on Sunday afternoon, when they met and defeated Huracan by 2 goals to nil. Cola scored first goal from a scrimmage in front of the posts, and Bertolini added number two.

Cola, Alberti, and the two custodians all played well. Señor G. Guassosi refereed for the following teams:—

Boca Juniors.—Zacevich, Lamelas, Ochoa, Frottini, Peralini, Cappelini, Gelom, Bertolini, Cola, Galeano, Fagino.

Huracan.—Paso, Alberti, Palacio, Ciute, Basadone, Laurenzano, Acevedo, Laguna, Santanglio, Salvarridi, Caldera.

FIRST DIVISION CHAMPIONSHIP.

SAN LORENZO (2) v. BELGRANO (1).

Played on the ground of the F. C. Oeste at Caballito on Sunday, a slow game resulted in the defeat of the Belgrano team by 2 goals to 1. The teams were:—

San Lorenzo.—J. Coll, A. Coll, A. Berrat, N. Romeo, F. Monti, J. Monti, L. Gianella, G. Urío, F. Xarau, A. Etchegaray, M. Perazzo.

Belgrano.—J. Reddel, G. Brown, C. Morgan, J. Pena, H. Morgan, H. Cox, F. N. Boyd, A. Young, J. Martin, A. L. Morgan, C. Palmer.

Referee, J. Vaccarezza.
The scorers were Etchegaray and Perazzo for San Lorenzo, and Martin for Belgrano.

Play was even throughout, and Belgrano were exceedingly unlucky in not being able to cry quits, because it is doubtful whether Perazzo's goal was not scored when off-side.

QUILMES (2) v. PLATENSE (0).

The feature of this match played at Quilmes on Sunday was the victory of the homesters, nearly bottom of the league, and with only 9 points over a team in the sixth place with 21 points. Quilmes deserved their win by their superior play, and especially by the brilliance of C. T. Pearson in goal.

Mr. H. W. Lambrecht refereed for the following teams:—

Quilmes.—C. T. Pearson; A. Cerutti and J. D. Brown; H. Reid, J. C. Pollini and P. N. Rowstron; B. Hoare, P. Raggi, J. B. Morgan, C. F. Ginsani and Durante.

Platense.—A. Perez; A. Ansaldo and E. Berti; F. Annaratone, J. Zacheo and A. Felisari; N. Spinelli, J. Colombo, T. Sinigalia, J. Praggio and M. Balmaceda.

John Brown and Morgan were the scorers.

LOMAS (3 PTS.) v. BUENOS AIRES (nil).

The last match of the season, played by Buenos Aires resulted in their first defeat, when on Sunday the following teams met at Lomas, under the command of Mr. Duncan.

Lomas.—Adamson; Brown, Morris, Cribbes and G. Whyte; R. Whyte and Auld; Griffith, Balme, Hunter, McGaul, Flaquer, Clydesdale, Tansley and Rasmussen.

B. A.—Mackern; Mills, Walker, Trillia and Macadam; Mold and Smyth; Wigg, Gahan, McCall, Etchandy, Drysdale, Cox, Bagueriza and Broome.

It was a fine, hard and strenuous match, and the try, the only score, was to the credit of Griffith. Harry Whyte and Adamson played a good game for Lomas, but perhaps Cribbes was the best on the side. Gahan, Walker and Mackern were the best for the losers.

MONTHLY COMPETITION.

The Lomas Athletic Club held their monthly competition on Sunday to the advantage of Mr. R. S. Whyte, who with the aid of his 18 handicap, returned a card of 80, which was one stroke better than Mr. McGall. Mr. H. G. Hickey returned the best gross score by going round in 85. During the afternoon subscriptions were collected for the aeroplane, "River Plate." The list is still open, and those desiring to subscribe are asked to communicate with the Treasurer of the Club.

The following 11 cards were returned as the result of the day's play:—

SECRETARY'S PRIZE.

Play over the Quilmes links was indulged in on Sunday for the Secretary's prize. The prize was won by Mr. J. Y. Stanfield, who with a 16 handicap, returned a card of 78.

The result of the play of the last monthly handicap resulted in a tie between Messrs. Grassick and Hetley and this was played off on Sunday, when Mr. Netley won. The same player also beat Mr. Croker by 5 and 4 in the Kelly Cup competition.

The returns for the Secretary's prize were as follows:—

	Out	In	Tl.	Hp.	Nt.
J. Y. Stanfield . .	48	46	94	16	78

EXPLOSION ON THE RAILWAY

AMMUNITION TRUCK BLOWS UP.

Late yesterday afternoon a railway truck in a siding on the Buenos Aires Central Railway, which was filled with ammunition, suddenly exploded, causing the greatest alarm amongst the persons in the immediate neighbourhood. The truck was standing on a siding just outside Federico Lacroze Station and the ammunition it contained was consigned to Parana for the coming manoeuvres.

Immediately upon receiving the alarm two detachments (Nos. 21 and 29) of the fire brigade were despatched to the sight, where they found the truck in flames, and the fire spreading to other trucks. The explosion caused a most deafening noise, and several windows in the locality were shattered. Considerable damage was done to the railway line. One man Bernardo Zambrano was seriously injured, and at once taken away to the Asistencia Publica. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

UNITED STATES AND BELGIUM

PEACE DELEGATE SAYS AMERICA DID NOT GUARANTEE BELGIUM'S NEUTRALITY.

Previous to his departure for Montevideo Mr. Joseph Wehless, the accredited agent of the Carnegie Endowment Society for International Peace was interviewed by a representative of the "Herald" at the Phoenix Hotel.

Mr. Wehless, it will be remembered, has been travelling through Paraguay, Uruguay and the Argentine, with the view of making a scientific study of the effects of the European war and collecting the necessary data for the publication of a report on the subject. This report will not only deal with the effects of the war, but will endeavour to establish the world's necessity for universal peace.

Mr. Wehless returns immediately to the United States to commence the publication of this work, on behalf of the Carnegie Endowment Society.

There was one point which he was desirous of making clear previous to his departure.

He said, "During my stay in this city I have had to deal with a considerable amount of criticism on the action of the United States in not interfering in the question of the neutrality of Belgium, it being believed in many quarters that the United States were signatories to the convention guaranteeing the neutrality and arranging the neutralisation of Belgium. Now this is not so. Belgium became independent in 1836 and in 1907 I believe it was, she became, under agreement of some 44 powers, a "neutralised" kingdom, which meant that she was to be free from attack and was furthermore to be free from taking up arms on behalf of other nations.

"My attention has been drawn to a supposed treaty signed in those days between Mr. Roosevelt and the then English Prime Minister. I may say that no such document is in existence and furthermore that the United States were not signatories to any convention in respect to Belgium's neutralisation.

"In order to clear up a misunderstanding, which appears to me to be fairly widespread, I took the trouble to obtain copies of the convention signed by the States and extract from them the following:

The Convention is one "respecting the Rights and Duties of Neutral Powers or Persons in War on Land."

It is dated October 18, 1907. In Chapter 1, Article 1, it states that "The Territory of Neutral Powers is Inviolable."

Article 2 states "Belligerents are forbidden to move troops or convoys of either munitions of war or supplies across the territory of Neutral Powers."

"Furthermore a reservation was made by the United States by declaration, in plenary session dated October 16, 1907, (apropos of Convention 1) stating that "Nothing contained in this Convention shall be so construed as to require the United States of America to depart from its traditional policy of not intruding upon nor interfering with nor entangling itself in the political questions of policy or internal administration of any foreign state, nor shall anything contained in the said convention be construed to imply a relinquishment by the United States of its traditional attitude towards purely American questions."

"Now in view of this, how can it be said that the United States has anything to do with the question of Belgium? It definitely points to the opposite."

Mr. Wehless after having pointed this matter out and cleared up an impression which he said had obtained in several circles in South America, said that in the few days of his visit to Buenos Aires he had met with much courtesy and assistance in his task. He liked the Argentine and its people and believed that there was a great future for them.

NEED FOR SANATORIA

Consumption and the British Community

PRESENT MEASURES TO SAFEGUARD THE FUTURE

Elsewhere in this issue is paraphrased a long, important, and eminently sensible article published by "La Prensa" dealing with the widespread measures necessary to fend off the threatened increase of the White Plague in this republic. It is a matter which interests everyone, the government included, and, as the writer of the article justly observes, the scope of the subject is so vast, and the various factors of the problem are so varied in their nature, that mere departmental work is helpless unless supported by individual effort throughout the length and breadth of the land. You can inoculate against smallpox, and, 'pace' the fanatics of the anti-vaccination school, the results in a generation are sufficiently marked to enable one to say that this erstwhile scourge is capable of eradication. You can remove the insidious evil of malaria by prophylactic treatment and the sterilization of all possible breeding places for the anopheles mosquito, and here again results prove the absolute efficacy of the theories of the modern medical schools.

In the case of human tuberculosis, the same certainty does not apply. Inoculation has been tried, with very small success; the cure of tubercular lesions has been accomplished in a very reduced number of cases, usually by lengthy and complete periods—more or less prolonged, of rest in a suitable atmosphere, conditions attainable to the full only by wealthy patients. Hence, broadly speaking, the cure of tuberculosis is still to seek. There is however one ray of hope for those in the earliest stage of the fell disease. It has been proved time and time again that immediate treatment, combined with rest and good food, will in the majority of cases effect a complete re-establishment of the body that through various causes has become affected with the specific bacillus which is proved to be the root trouble in the disease commonly known as consumption or phthisis.

The unfortunate thing is that in so many cases the disease is so slow and so insidious that the patient can continue doing his or her normal work for a long time, even for years, after the existence of the evil has been clearly determined. Hence the patient, especially in cases where money is an object, is tempted to carry on the ordinary routine of life until this becomes impossible. Then he seeks a cure, frequently without result. Now it is quite true, as the writer in "La Prensa" observes, that the question of prophylaxis against consumption is a matter for the whole community, but that does not prelude special and immediate action on the part of certain sections of the community who are perhaps better equipped for the fight than some of their fellows, and it is this special and immediate action that ought to receive the attention of the British community in Argentina. The doctors alone can tell us how many tubercular cases, or persons predisposed to receive the infection, are living and working in our midst to-day, simply and solely because they have no other alternative. In all likelihood the number is not very large, in proportion to the British community as a whole, but, given proper measures, it might be very much diminished and in course of time brought down to vanishing point.

What is wanted is a suitably planned and staffed sanatorium, available for both sexes, limited to those in the earliest recognisable stage of the disease, capably managed, and financially endowed in such a way as to enable the patients to have the best of attention and food at the minimum cost to their purses. A sliding scale of payments would probably be the solution of this part of the problem in so far as the running expenses are concerned, but foundation and equipment must be looked for elsewhere. Admittedly the calls on the purse of the community are many to-day, but one believes that such a sanatorium as is suggested would take far less than is generally supposed, and now that the government are being stirred on the matter, it ought to be feasible for the British community to draft a workable plan, showing its ability to cope with the problem, in so far as its own people are concerned. There are many subsidies granted for far less worthy objects, and the allocation of, let us say $10,000 per annum, would be of real utility in the initial stages. Someone will be certain to hint that it is the duty of the British community to look after its own sick or infirm, but inasmuch as those whom it is desired to help are in the majority of cases Argentine born, this argument would not hold water if brought up in discussion. That there is any likelihood of immediate government action in regard to the question of consumption in Argentina is doubtful, but there can be no doubt whatever as to the certainty that it is one of the great social questions which this country must tackle in the near future. Hence it behoves the British community to follow all mention of the matter in Congress and in the Argentine press as closely as may be possible, proceeding, if means permit, on their own account, until such time as they are to amplify their radius of action through the timely aid of a governmental grant.

SCARE IN CORDOBA

ALARMING INCREASE IN TUBERCULOSIS

Great alarm has been caused among the residents of the city of Cordoba by the statements made by a well-known local doctor in the Provincial Senate.

Dr. Pitt, in an able speech, called attention to the alarming increase in deaths due to tuberculosis in that city. Statistics show that while 426 persons died from this dread sickness during 1912, 616 were registered during 1914, and in the first seven months of this year 352 fatal cases have been reported. This gives the alarming percentage in relation to population of 18.61. Dr. Pitt goes on to show that in the other large cities of Argentina tuberculosis is decreasing while in Cordoba it is increasing at the rate of 2 per cent. annually. As an immediate step towards meeting this serious plague, the speaker moved that a sanatorium should be built by Government.

The statistics referred to are pertaining to the city, and not to the surrounding district such as the hills and Alta Gracia.

DROUGHT IN THE SOUTH

Reports from the South of the Province allege that there, as in the Bahia Blanca zone, there is distinct uneasiness among cultivators by reason of the long-continued and persistent drought. In Pampa Central, where sowing is almost finished, some light rains would be welcome. Generally the impressions of farmers are favourable, and if rain comes in reasonable abundance, the outlook would be considered very hopeful.

B.A. IN DARKNESS

Municipal Council in Default

OVER ITS LIGHTING CONTRACTS

The sad state into which the financial affairs of the Municipality of Buenos Aires have been allowed to drift since the beginning of the year is revealed by the fact that the Compañía Primitiva de Gas and the Compañía Alemana de Electricidad, which have the contracts for lighting the public offices, and buildings, as well as the city streets, have been forced to institute legal proceedings to secure payment for services rendered.

The first step was taken on Aug. 23 when the Municipal Council was duly and formally notified, that in default of payment of accounts owing for seven months, the companies mentioned intended to apply to the courts for an order, failure to comply with which will mean that the two concerns will cut off all light to the Municipality, and leave the city in darkness, except so far as light, bought and paid for by individual tax-payers, may illumine the Capital.

For months the municipal affairs have been going from bad to worse so far as the two companies are concerned. Up to the end of last year the accounts were paid fairly regularly, but since January the city has failed to meet its lighting bills. Up to the end of July the amount owing to the two companies was over $2,000,000. All efforts to secure payment, or to arrive at some arrangement for the liquidation of the debts, have failed. The council has been approached several times and pressed for payment. The best it could do was to make an offer recently to give promissory notes for the payment of the outstanding accounts, with two per cent interest added. This offer was naturally refused by the companies which would have to discount the bills at eight per cent. Furthermore such an offer was a shabby one in view of the fact that the Municipality has never failed to collect its impost of ten per cent of the gross monthly collections of the companies. This impost is collected every three months, and the Municipality has refused to allow the companies to withhold payment, as a partial set-off to what is owing to them by the city. The impost has been collected up to the end of June, and as it amounts to close on $300,000 per month, the Municipality has had the advantage of handling this cash while neglecting to pay its own dues. In the case of the Gas Company the affair is particularly bad, seeing that the Company has been forced, owing to war conditions to pay for its coal double what it paid twelve months ago, while at the same time it has not been able, under the terms of its concession to increase the price at which it supplies gas.

The two companies have evidently had enough of municipal procrastination coupled with incompetent administration, and grasping conduct, and they have determined to assert their rights. Unless they are paid, or some equitable and satisfactory arrangement for payment is made, they will secure from the courts the justice which apparently a bankrupt municipality cannot, or will not give them.

"CONFIDENCE" PLOT

JAPANESE ROBBED OF $ 3,000

A Japanese resident, Mr. Muta Jamasiro was the victim of an impudent theft on Saturday morning in a café at the corner of Lamadrid and Almirante Brown.

The proceeding had a strong resemblance to the hoary confidence trick, and is a warning not to play cards with strangers. This good advice does not seem to have reached Mr. Jamasiro, who was invited by three affable strangers to have a drink, and subsequently to play cards. Unfortunately he accepted, and they then proposed that as all were perfect gentlemen that they should place large sums on the table. They themselves placed something like money, and poor Jamasiro put down $3000. It did not stay there long before being snatched up and the table upset, while the rogues fled through the door, vainly pursued by the victim. The police are looking, but not too hopefully, for the abusers of guilelessness and good faith.

BAND - MASTER MURDERED

TRAGEDY IN TUCUMAN.

On Wednesday afternoon the city of Tucumán was suddenly excited by the report of the murder of Sr. Gaspar Signorelli, the leader of the famous municipal band, at the hands of one of the ex-musicians of that body named Juan Porcio.

This band was not only one of the attractions of the city but had become famous throughout the interior, for its music. At one time, just previous to Sr. Signorelli receiving the appointment of conductor, the present head of the municipal band of this city, Sr. Malvagni, was its leader. The details of the crime which is exciting the city are as follows. On Wednesday afternoon at 5.30 p.m. the whole of the Plaza Independencia was crowded with people who had congregated to hear the music which was due to commence at that hour. The bandmen were in their places awaiting the arrival of their leader, when a newsboy brought word that Signor Signorelli had been assassinated in Calle Las Piedras just as he was leaving his house. On hearing the news all the bandmen left their stand and ran to the scene of the crime, followed by a great number of persons, who were as yet ignorant of the cause of this apparently strange behaviour. On arrival at the scene of the tragedy the body of the murdered man had already been taken into his house by the orders of the police. A witness and a friend of Signorelli's stated that the murdered man had many enemies amongst the musicians of the district owing to a number of injustices which had caused a considerable amount of misery. One of the sufferers was the murderer Porcio.

It is stated that want and misery had driven him temporarily insane and that he waited outside the bandmaster's house to speak to him. Hot words arose and Porcio drew a knife with which he stabbed his enemy again and again and even when the latter had fallen dead he continued to hack at the body. He was detained by a passing civilian and handed over to the police. Immediately afterwards the murdered man's wife and family arrived upon the scene. Medical examination exposed 19 wounds nearly all of which were fatal. The motive of the crime is unknown, but it is stated that Porcio was driven to the deed by injustices and that he was an excellent musician who had held a position in the band for many years. Some time ago the local papers of Tucumán made several and various accusations against the deceased, which at the time excited attention.

Sr. Signorelli was previously in Salta before becoming the leader of municipal band at Tucumán. The case is exciting the greatest interest and excitement.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

IMPORTANT CATTLE SALE.

Messrs. Pradere Bros., have just sold to La Blanca, one thousand steers at the record price of $250. These steers have been fed near Quequen, and will be costing the purchasers well over thirty cents per pound dead.

Señor Guillermo Petersen, has resigned from the local Directorate of Frigorífico Armour.

The well-known consignatarios, Sres. Raul C. Etcheverry and Co., are in treaty and anticipate closing the business, within the day for the sale of 5,000 novillos selected from a mob of 7,000, at $250 each. This price is based on novillos giving 740 lbs. of clean meat.

An important sale of cows is announced a local Frigorífico having paid $180 each for over 500 head to select from 1,100.

Mr. S. W. Burgin, left by Sunday's boat, to be present at the opening of the Sociedad Rural Uruguay, where he has consented to judge various classes of poultry and dogs.

Messrs. Law and Compton who were judges at the Palermo Show, left by last night's boat for Montevideo, where they will judge at the Agricultural Show.

Mr. Thomas Bett, has returned to the camp after being present at the successful auction sale of the produce from Cabaña "Santa Narcisa," General Belgrano.

OPENING OF ENGLISH PORTS FOR THE INTRODUCTION OF ARGENTINE CATTLE.

This Government has on many occasions moved in trying to influence the home Government in again opening certain ports for the introduction of this country's live-stock. It has been officially announced that at certain ports cattle from this country will be received into quarantine, where they will be slaughtered under the old regulations which allowed about fourteen days for slaughtering the shipment. Since the war began many new factors have to be considered such as the great rise in the price of cattle and the excessive fletes demanded for the conveyance of live-stock to Europe. The more economical freight in shipping dead, will make competition on the hoof, impossible for some time at least. The decree takes effect from September 21.

AGRICULTURAL PROSPECTS IN SAN LUIS

CONDITIONS FAVOURABLE.

"Most favourable" is the report received concerning the agricultural and farming prospects in the most important districts in the Province of San Luis. Prices are firm for cattle and stock. In Villa Mercedes market sellings show the following good prices:—Oxen $180 to 200, half-breeds $122, cows $135 to 155, young oxen and heifers $38 to 75, sheep $13. The agricultural prospects are also reported to be equally as promising, and in districts such as Villa Maria alone more than 100,000 hectares of land are already under wheat, barley, oats and flax. Last year sowings were but small. Although rain is required, it is stated that they are in excellent condition. Wheat in the districts north of El Mono, Naschel, Renca and Concoran is reported to be in better condition than in many other parts of the country.

POULTRY BREEDING

MR. BARGMAN REPLIES TO MR. HARDY.

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—As regards Mr. Hardy's letter of Saturday last, it would take a longer time than I have at my disposal to deal fully with this gentleman's remarks, but there are a few points on which I may perhaps comment.

Mr. Hardy apparently holds that poultry breeding could go on perfectly well, even without the work of those who make their living by it. This argument hardly strikes me as sound; and it must surely be admitted that the professional has as much—if not more—right to criticise, than an amateur, no matter how thoroughly the latter may have studied the subject.

Mr. Hardy is incorrect in saying that I "entirely agreed" with Mr. Lambe, my wording being that I agreed with him "on many points," and I purposely refrained from commenting on any individual exhibit.

With regard to the Black Orpington Cockerel, to which Mr. Hardy refers as winner of the first prize at the "Royal Counties Show," held at Nottingham on the 29th June last. At this Show, the first prize was won by a bird exhibited by Mr. Bacchus, and catalogued at £1. If this bird was sold in trio for £50, it would seem that the trio was made up during the declaration of awards and the auction; and as such a procedure is entirely contrary to the rules of any show, I cannot conceive the possibility of it having been followed in this case. Perhaps Mr. Hardy would kindly confirm the title, place and date of the show he has in mind, especially as I cannot trace any trio class in the award list of the Royal Counties Show.

It certainly seems strange that a bird originally catalogued at £1 should subsequently be sold in trio for £50.

Mr. Hardy agrees that the poultry industry in Argentina is in its infancy, but adds that many children of today know more than the adults of former years. True, but Mr. Hardy surely cannot contend that the many years of practical experience of the British poultry farmer are overshadowed by the theoretical knowledge possessed by the amateur breeder in Argentina, no matter how complete the latter may be. Theory sometimes fails against practice.

However, personally I shall be happy to accept Mr. Hardy's invitation to visit his stocks of Leghorns and Rocks, when no doubt some nice birds will be viewed, though I can hardly anticipate seeing some of the best I have ever met. As for Mr. Lambe accompanying me, I cannot say; I knew he is a very, very busy man, but if he can spare time, I am sure he would be pleased to accompany me.—Yours, etc.,

DONALD C. BARGMAN.

ROSARIO DE SANTA FÉ

SLACKNESS IN THE PORT.

The port of Rosario Sta Fé is said to become daily slacker. An absolute paralysis is said to be creeping over it. Ships are few in the cereal trade, and the arrivals in cargo also compare badly with last year. Only almacén requisites are coming from Italy, and these in small quantities while from the U.S. a small quantity of agricultural elements only are noted. The bulk of arrivals are ships with coal, either British or American. So great has been the falling off that it is estimated that by the end of the year the port dues of Rosario will have diminished to the extent of $4,000,000 as compared to last year.

THE SUGAR HARVEST

A POOR OUTLOOK.

A careful study of the possibilities of this season's sugar output from the province of Tucuman has been made and which, as published, reveals the fact that the weather has seriously affected the harvest and as previously reported in these columns the prospects are none too bright. To begin with, the cane itself has been severely damaged by frost, which has not only considerably reduced the amount grown, but has caused what there is of it to be of a much inferior quality than usual. In general, the cane is impoverished. The last amount produced, on the latest estimates, is 17,000 kilos per hectare. Last year the amount was 32,000 kilos. Again the available produce from the cane is only six per cent.

The total harvest is estimated at 135,000 to 140,000 tons, while last year it amounted to 330,000 tons. So far as Tucuman is concerned in this harvest, there is but 90,000 tons available as against 278,000 of last year.

June 1 of this year showed stock on hand of 102,000 tons, of which 90,000 tons was refined sugar and the rest milled sugar. This amount is included in the 235,000 to 240,000 tons of this year's produce and as the average consumption is 210,000 to 220,000, it will be observed that this year's stock in hand will amount to about 20,000 tons, which is approximately only some 10 to 15 per cent above the consumption.

Sugar exportations from August 1, 1914, to August 1, 1915, have been 106,000 tons and the price between 150 to 160 pesos loaded and at the mill. Here is another point of interest concerning sugar prices. Before the war prices in Cuba ruled around 35 cents gold and to-day have risen to 120 cents gold, which is a rise of some 400 per cent.

With the exclusion of Russia the world's production of sugar is estimated at 15,300,000 tons and the consumption at 16,900,000. Thus the supply is some million and a half tons below the consumption. There is a further consideration necessary. Germany, Russia and Austria, will not be sending supplies to the open market this year, thus will the demand still further increase above the supply.

Some little time ago a tax of one cent per kilo was put upon the exportation of sugar, with a view to a return of $1,800,000, but this amount will not be realised and again, apart from the poor harvest if a note is taken concerning the alcohol tax, it is possible that the same thing may happen with sugar as with alcohol and thus further reduce the export. One dollar per litre is the alcohol tax and the result of it shews a reduction of output from 35 to 17 million litres in 20 years.

Such taxes as these are a serious impediment in the way of natural development. The comment is freely made, that the wrong moment has been chosen for this sugar tax and that it will do much to jeopardise the future welfare of the trade.

ALONG THE B. A. P.

(By Our Special Representative.)

In Southern Cordoba, probably more than in any other part, the prevailing draught has retarded the bread; but the beneficial rain of last week has gladdened the hearts of the agriculturists, who now see favourable prospects. The rainfall, which was accompanied by very mild weather and lasted for the greater part of the day, was generally recorded as about 40 mm; and was considered as having saved the wheat in many parts of this zone. The earlier sowings appear to have "come away" all right, but later sowings on such a dry seed bed and no moisture to promote the growth have languished till the recent rain. I inspected many large areas which were beginning to show the beautiful green bread out of a very "cloddy" and badly handled class of soil. I asked the proprietor how the land had been worked, and he said no less than three harrowings had been given, but he recognised that the ground had been left very rough, which in this particular case was a somewhat light sandy class of soil, and without any clay or adhesive matter would have been very easily pulverised by "rolling." My friend admitted that better results which would have been obtained by pulverising and at the same time forming his soil, which retains the moisture and does not permit the draught to penetrate so freely. The question of expenses incurred by the extra "working" evidently did not meet with my friends' approval, though I hold that by harrowing less and passing a wide roller instead, the increased cost would be far counterbalanced by the improved crop, and better levelling of the soil, which is left shamelessly rough on many properties. Grass in the generality of cases was very bare, and many estancieros were giving a supplementary ration of alfalfa hay to the breeding stock. Several good mobs of steers were to be seen at various points, on very good pasture, which had evidently been thoughtfully reserved for the better fattening of these now most valuable animals. Considerable areas are still unfortunately under water, though nothing in comparison with what one sees on other lines in the Province of Buenos Aires. The roads leading to the stations appeared to be generally in very good condition, while the large number of motor cars at many stations testify to the general popularity of this means of locomotion. All grades of motors appear to be represented, though from private inquiries the light and ever reliable little "Ford" appears to be a very popular and handy car for the camp man. Agricultural prospects are very encouraging in this zone, and all storekeepers and others depending on the harvest anticipate favourable prospects.

Good Demand and Satisfactory Prices

SALES FOR AUG. 19

FIRM DEMAND FOR BULLS

Auction sales commenced yesterday with the products from La Josefina, the property of Señor Pedro T. Pages, and as the sale list shows, realised most satisfactory prices. Following the entries of Sr. Pages, came the San Blas lot, now for a number of years recognised as embracing many of the most celebrated strains of Shorthorn blood, possible to bring together. This lot also met a very firm trade, the top price being secured for "Umpire," which passed to the ownership of Sr. Lopez Lecuba, at the handsome figure of $17,000. In affecting this notable sale Don Eduardo Bullrich demonstrates his exceptional abilities as an auctioneer in trying to effect the most advantageous sales for his clients. The forenoon sales concluded with the lot from San Blas. Sporting events distracted a certain part of the attendance in the afternoon, but this in no way was prejudicial to the bull sales which fortunately for sellers, continued with unabated confidence and enthusiasm, and some very good prices have to be recorded. The preparation and quality of the Retiro bulls, the property of Suc. Narciso Vivot, was very favourably commented on, and most satisfactory prices were realised, when brought under the hammer.

CONCURSO HIPICO

The interest in the affairs of the Sociedad Rural Argentina were increased yesterday afternoon, by the addition of several interesting sporting events. The first of these, the Premio Equitation, was decided in favour of "Hongroise," a six year old horse, the property of Señor M. Peña and presented by Cesar Peña. The second prize was taken by "Presidente" an eight year old horse, the property of Señor H. Peleson, and presented by Hector Peleson. The third was "York," a five year old, belonging to Major Fauché, and presented by Oscar Maldonado. There were 11 competitors, all of whom competed in the Show trials. The prizes were given for show trotting, galloping, and the like. The second contest was a steeplechase, consisting of eleven jumps (water jumps included) also, for animals presented by members of the Hurlingham Club, the Sociedad Rural, Jockey Club, Club Hipico Argentino, and resulted in "Pistola" securing the honours, second "Aviador," third "Indio."

The winner was presented by Lieut. Acuña, who received much applause. Time 1.5. "Pistola" is a nine year old. Fernandez Bazan presented the second an eleven year old, the property of Capt. Righetti, and "Indio," eight years, was presented by Lieut. Trotz. The event was enthusiastically received.

Judges: Messrs. Manuel Ocampo, Parravicini, Hasperg and Dr. Anchorena; Secretary, Molina Campos; Timekeeper, Carlos Campos.

SALES FOR AUGUST 20.

BIDDING BRISK

At yesterday's auction, bidding was brisk, and values were well sustained. The principal Cabañas to be represented in the ring were: San José, the property of Señor Bernardo Wirsch; San Juan, belonging to Señor Leonardo Pereyra. The products of both these establishments were entrusted to the Messrs. Bullrich, while a considerable part of the large consignment from El Dorado, the property of Señor Alberto E. Castex, were disposed of before lunch. The latter consignment were in the hands of the Messrs. Iriondo, who were unfortunate in taking over the ring just as a considerable part of the public were leaving for lunch. Notwithstanding this unfortunate disadvantage, very satisfactory prices were obtained, especially for those animals sold after lunch. The bulls from El Dorado were well brought out and shown to advantage in the ring. In the afternoon the attendance of interested spectators was very large, and bidding was brisk. One of the features of the afternoon sales was the spirited competition for Sanquhars Vulcan Santa Ana, the property of Señor Pablo Spinola, which was claimed, amidst applause, by Messrs. Nicolas Bruzzoni and Sons at the handsome price of $13,500. Trade throughout was firm and most satisfactory from a seller's point of view.

The following is the complete sale list:—

SALES FOR AUG. 21.

The commencement of the sales on Saturday was marked by a tendency on part of the buyers to have their animals cheaper, and consequently trade was somewhat slower and bids more difficult to get. The demand improved somewhat as the sales proceeded, and expositors were quite satisfied with the prices realised. The most noteworthy lot to pass through the ring was the very level, well-brought out lot from Cabaña Azcuenaga, which property has for a considerable number of years earned a very high reputation, not alone for its high class animals, but also for their excellent preparation. The afternoon sales were well attended despite the rain, and a good selling trade was experienced.

MORE EXPEDITIOUS SELLING.

English judges are yearly brought here to demonstrate the English ideals of the various classes of domestic animals imported from that country. Not only is the adoption of English systems of benefit in this direction, but could also be advantageously adopted for the disposal of the animals at auction. There is no gain-saying the fact that most excessive expenses are incurred due to the time the animals are retained in the yard, while the most valuable time of many business men is wasted waiting for certain animals or lots to enter the ring. The salesmen may not be directly to blame for this state of affairs, but that does not alter the fact that some more expeditious system is urgently required for the more rapid disposal of the animals at auction. Why not have two rings and submit different classes of stock, thereby enabling interested parties to attend both rings as circumstances require?

SALES FOR AUG. 23

At yesterday's sales no lots of conspicuous merit were presented, but trade has to be quoted firmer than any of the preceding sales. Estancieros appeared to have been waiting for a good class of camp bulls before operating, and in consequence a very firm demand was experienced. The attendance was not nearly as large as at the previous auctions, but every one round the ring appeared to be interested in the acquisition of bulls.

The following is the complete list of yesterday's sales:—

SALES FOR AUG. 24

LARGE ATTENDANCE: FIRM PRICE

The sales were well patronised by a large concourse of interested spectators; and competition for all classes of bulls was animated. The better quality animals would possibly be relatively cheaper than the general run of animals presented at yesterday's auction. Messrs. P. and G. Hughes, La Inca, secured the very satisfactory average of $3311 for 13 bulls sold. This was a very level lot, of well bred bulls and deserved the satisfactory trade they experienced.

The following is the complete sale list:

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

THE BANKRUPTCY LAW

(La Prensa.—August 19).

Despite numerous promises, says "La Prensa," the legislative committee of the Chamber of Deputies has not brought forward the proposed reform of the Bankruptcy Law, and it will be a great pity if this matter is delayed for yet another year. Two reasons call for an alteration in the existing system, continues "La Prensa;" the deficiencies of the actual legal protection afforded to trade, and the chaotic condition of our jurisprudence, which is a perpetual check on the rapidity of action that ought to characterise this class of judicial procedure. Acting in strict accordance with logic the law promulgated in 1902 abolished the judicial tutelage of the old code, replacing it by a meeting of the creditors, to whom, under certain conditions, the management and liquidation of the debtor's affairs is entrusted. The judge presides over the meetings, but his intervention is confined to seeing that the conditions of the law are duly met.

Nevertheless, this legislation, from which much was expected, has not satisfied the hopes of its promoters, practical experiment proving that there are deficiencies, latterly much increased owing to the number of bankruptcy cases before the courts, and it is just these deficiencies that commerce wishes to see removed. Moreover the interpretation of the terms of the law are by no means consistent, various courts interpreting similar cases in a divergent manner, and this too must be corrected. The government favours the reform, and the idea has been generally supported in the chambers, yet, says "La Prensa," revision is still withheld. It is time for the Chamber of Deputies to move in the matter, bearing in mind the important interests involved through delay, and the legislative committee will do well to bring forward its report, which was said to have been almost completed at the end of last year.

THE MINISTERIAL CRISIS

(La Nación.—August 19).

There is as yet nothing definite known with regard to the new ministers of Justice and Finance. "La Nación" states that there are several rumours floating about the government house, but none of them have been confirmed. Dr. Carlos A. Aldao, mentioned as a probable candidate for the post of Finance Minister, declares that he has not had the refusal of the portfolio. According to "La Nación" one of the most likely candidates for either post is Dr. Julio Botet, Attorney General of the nation, though which post will be offered to him is as yet doubtful. What does appear probable is that this gentleman will be raised to cabinet rank. He is said to be a close friend of Dr. de la Plaza, and also shares his politics, in common with the governor of the province of Buenos Aires. In this connection "La Nación" recalls the fact that he was appointed national interventor in the province of San Luis during the latter part of Dr. Figueroa Alcorta's term of office, and that during his discharge of this duty he showed himself a clever politician.

"La Nación" hints that the question of choice between the two posts now vacant ought not to be a difficult matter, since the Attorney General of the nation ought to be just as ready to administer the department of Finance as that of Justice. Indeed the former will probably fall to his lot since it is said that Dr. Botet is averse to signing the document which appoints Dr. Figueroa Alcorta to the Supreme Court.

DOWN WITH THE SPARROWS?

(La Prensa.—August 20).

Señor Onelli, the well-known Director of the Zoological Gardens, has addressed a note to the Municipality drawing attention to a flaw in the local equivalent of the Wild Birds Protection Act. It relates to the sparrow, and points out that whereas this bird used to be sold for food in the markets, the present prohibition protects it, strings of small birds being now rarely seen owing to the heavy penalties attaching to their sale. The idea of the measure was to prevent the undue slaughter of the insectivorous birds, in view of their benefit to agriculture, and quite by accident the European sparrow, who feeds solely on grain was included in the prohibition.

The sparrow is admittedly a great destroyer of all seed crops, and though it is true that as yet he has done comparatively little damage here, this is merely because his radius of action only extends to within about a hundred kilometres of the Federal Capital. Señor Onelli states that there are places near La Plata and Buenos Aires, where it is absolutely useless to sow small seed crops, since the sparrows eat up all the harvest. Moreover the cheeky and pugnacious Cock-Sparrow, has easily made his place in the sun by the simple process of ousting the insectivorous birds such as horneros, ventevras, urracas, calandrias, zorcales, and other indigenous specimens, a proceeding that renders it doubly essential that he should be suppressed. As a means to that end Señor Onelli suggests that small birds be again sold in the markets, with their feathers on, in order that they may be easily recognised as sparrows. Trapping and netting them would keep down their numbers, and give the native birds an opportunity to breed once more in the neighbouring camps.

WORKMEN'S DWELLINGS

(La Prensa.—August 21).

The Government recently laid before the Chamber of Deputies a proposal dealing with the construction of workmen's dwellings in accordance with Law 7102, which establishes that so much per cent of the takings at the races held on working days is to be allocated to this end. La Prensa adds that the Government has in hand $2,870,590.95 ready for this work, which is to be entrusted to the Municipality, since that body is said to have ample land available for such construction. Undoubtedly the project reaches the Chamber somewhat late in the session, and it is more than likely that it will not come up in turn, owing to the fact that the subject is far more complicated than at first sight appears. The very question as to where the new buildings are to be put cannot be solved off hand, distance and hygiene having to be taken into consideration.

Then someone over and above an architect must be consulted, says La Prensa, if the new homes are to be healthy, yet the Municipality systematically despise the advice of hygienists, and nevertheless they are to have the charge of this most important work which ought to be carried out with especial care in order that it shall not only be successful, per se, but also serve as a strengthening bond between classes. It is not enough to make "cheap houses for workmen"; they must also be adequately designed. Not like our schools, which in many places are exceedingly badly built. La Prensa concludes by saying that this matter is deserving of very thorough attention, and hopes that this will be remembered.

THE SOLUTION OF THE CRISIS

(La Nación.—August 21).

H.E. the President has got over the difficulties incidental to the acceptance of the portfolio of the Minister of Justice and Public Instruction by the nomination of Dr. Carlos Saavedra Lamas. There are two reasons that make this appointment acceptable, says La Nación. In the first place Dr. Lamas was the official apologist of Dr. Figueroa Alcorta in the Chamber, whilst, secondly, he belongs to the conservative party in the Province of Buenos Aires, even though he has not been a very pronounced party man, but rather a free-lance. Only on special occasions, such as the memorable 25th of January (when he supported Dr. Alcorta's closure of Congress by force) has he come out definitely on any particular topic. A studious man, of formed intelligence, it is to be hoped, continues La Nación, that deserve the way he broke up the Budget Committee, he will be a useful addition to the Cabinet in his new sphere. Incidentally he has some acquaintance with the theories of education, and published a dissertation on the results of a study of the subject in Europe.

Dr. Oliver, who takes up the portfolio of Finance, is a theoretical student of finance. A text book of his is in use in the University, and his reputation on the various financial committees has always been marked by the exhibition of deep knowledge of the subject. The times may call for something more pronounced, for other qualities that are more individual in a Minister of Finance, but the fact of his competence leads one to hope that these qualities will show themselves in course of time. Politically Señor Oliver is neutral, and Dr. de la Plaza concludes La Nación, deserves praise for the clever way in which he has appointed two cultured and distinguished men to the vacant posts, without favouring any of the various parties that are bidding for public opinion.

LIQUIDATING THE CRISIS

(La Nación.—August 22).

In an interview with the new Minister of Finance, Dr. Oliver, "La Nación" has elucidated some very sensible opinions relative to the much-talked of 'crisis,' and its gradual elimination. Whilst stating that he has naturally formed his opinion as to the merits of the various proposals relative to governmental interference in matters such as the mortgage situation, the liquidation of personal indebtedness, and the mobilization of the conversion funds, Dr. Oliver believes that the first necessity of the government is to discuss and dispose of these various schemes, since the crisis, in his opinion, is more or less a state of mind, a moral phenomenon, a fictitious crisis in short, seeing that the country has all its sources of activity in full tide of production, with a firm demand for its products, as the state of the bank balances clearly shows. It is only among the speculators, those who bought property merely to resell at a profit as rapidly as possible, often without even taking possession of their purchase, that the limitation of credit has spelt disaster. The workers, those whose camps and other properties are being exploited, find no crisis to speak about, nor do they see the need for any special action on the part of the government. Hence all these schemes, in the opinion of the new Minister, ought to be decided upon without delay, being accepted or rejected definitely, since their mere existence is a weight on the market, helping to maintain illusions that hinder rather than help the wiping out of unsound business. Help agriculture, and expand agricultural credit, but leave on one side the proposed reform of the monetary system and other allied schemes. Argentine currency Dr. Oliver believes to be perfectly sound, and any brusque change is to be deprecated.

THE CATTLE SHOW

(La Nación.—August 20).

The success of the Cattle Show, says La Nación has this year been something extraordinary. Had anyone prophesied twenty years ago that the cattle trade of this country would have reached such a height in so short a time, he would have been regarded as a dreamer. Yet the delegates of the Royal Agricultural Society declare the Argentine show to be of a class that would do honour to any country, and the native breeders are naturally proud, both of the praise and of the fine lot of animals that occasioned it. There have been many sacrifices, many difficulties attendant upon the raising of the Argentine herds to their present standard, but the results are there and are bound to have a beneficial effect on the future. At the same time, adds La Nación, the work is not ended, but is rather at its beginning.

All the world is seeking our products, and the outlook is in every way promising. The National Government, through the Minister of Agriculture, says that it will help breeders, and repeats these promises every year at the opening of the show. Yet up to the present these speeches have been but empty words, and despite the essay on veterinary pathology to which the Minister treated his hearers on Sunday last, the actual protection of the cattle from disease becomes less and less customary. Dr. Calderon, says La Nación, was pleased to reveal the existence of ills for which the Government is the only person really responsible. If, as this gentleman said, the herds of the country are all affected with tubercular disease, why should the Government take the frigorific statistics only as a means to judge the state of the cattle, when it is well known that but a thirtieth part of the herds pass through their hands? The Cattle Show was not the place to make such startling declarations, based on imperfect statistics. Bovine tuberculosis does exist here, and La Nación does not maintain the contrary. But the same terrible scourge is common in England, France, Germany and North America. All these countries have studied the question scientifically, and have decided against extreme measures. Why then should Argentina see fit to take an opposite opinion, concludes La Nación.

THE SCOURGE OF CONSUMPTION

(La Prensa.—August 23).

"La Prensa" returns to the charge against the White Plague, in a powerful leading article, declaring roundly that what is wanted is not so much a special "campaign" as a continuous policy of attack on the part of the public, the authorities, and private charity. It is however to the crowds themselves that one must look for the major portion of the effort required. Governments can do little or nothing unless in this matter they are ably seconded by the masses, and however large may be the sums spent by any country on anti-tubercular measures, the results will be negligible unless the people themselves take the matter up with decision, and education is one of the principal, though not the only factor, in the vast programme that effective effort demands. The general health of the community must be one of the main objectives, especially among the poorer classes, whilst at the same time the war against the germ must be carried out implacably. Fresh air, pure water, light, space, personal cleanliness, good food, reasonable labour; all these points must be borne in mind. For the essential idea is to strengthen humanity to resist attack in its natural surroundings.

In France and in Italy, consumption gains rather than loses ground. In England alone is it diminishing to any extent, and that is due, says "La Prensa," to hygienic measures rather than to direct attack. In Germany, the country wherein the chief efforts have been directed to stamping out the germ, the progress has not been quite as good. What is beyond dispute is the need for educating the multitude as to the proper precautions to be taken against infection, and until the public collaborates heartily with the authorities little real and permanent good can be accomplished. This will certainly not be brought about by the projected special commission which has been suggested to the Chamber of Deputies, composed of distinguished gentlemen doubtless, but without any special preparation or aptitude for the great work involved. Once that commission is appointed, concludes "La Prensa," there still remains the need for carrying on the campaign against infection, poor food, bad habits, and so forth, and in the meantime, to paraphrase the words of Galileo, consumption continues to increase!

THE U.S.A. IN ARGENTINA

(La Prensa—Aug. 24.)

Very few years have elapsed since the United States first took an intelligent interest in South America, remarks "La Prensa." North America, absorbed in its own progress, ignored what was going on in the south, and not until eminent diplomats and important visitors declared what they had seen, did the bandage fall from the eyes of the United States citizens. Then came the business invasion, in the shape of committees and delegations of industrial and commercial bodies desirous of putting trade on a permanent footing. All these considerations, says "La Prensa," have moved it to take up the theme anew, reproducing certain extracts from the "New York Sun," which begin by declaring that the idea that Argentina is a backward or uncivilised country is absurd; the city of Buenos Aires is evidence to the contrary. And it must be remembered that owing to its lack of fuel Argentina can never become a manufacturing country.

This language, continues "La Prensa," was unknown in the United States five years ago, and of itself shows the vast strides that have been made in the comprehension of this part of the world by the North. The same may be said of the remarks dealing with immigration and capital, twin keys with which to open the treasure house of South America, as the "Sun" puts it. If the United States can invest its surplus capital in the development of South America in a similar way to that which has characterised European action, then repeated profits are assured. But there are difficulties in the way, namely, the ignorance of American exporters as to the habits, customs, and languages of the people with whom they would deal. Talk like this, says "La Prensa," is touching the wound on the spot, and goes on to say that the psychological moment for the American trader in this Republic has arrived, provided that he realises that this country needs something more than a purveyor of immediate wants. Reciprocal interests are required if the new ideals of continental fraternity are to take on actuality.

LOANS TO GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

(La Nación—Aug. 24.)

The greater part of the numerous projects before the Government, says "La Nación," will probably have to be held over till next session, owing to the delays caused by diffuse and digressive debates on side issues. The ordinary session, according to official rumour, will not be prorogued, and, in order to avoid the inconvenience of repeated delays, it is imperative that both Chambers co-operate with a view to ratifying those projects on the programme which call for urgent despatch. Amongst these, says "La Na-

PUBLIC SERVICES IN DEBT

(La Prensa.—August 25.)

A company supplying lighting service to the Municipality has threatened to cut off the supply if the latter does not pay the sum due for six months service, a matter of a million dollars or so. In Municipal circles, says "La Prensa," the threat is put down to the lack of success that attended a recent attempt to raise the price, and it adds that whilst admitting the fault of the Intendente in letting such arrears accumulate, the procedure of the company is equally worthy of blame, and deserves the strictest censure, since the right to collect payment is quite distinct from the public services rendered, seeing that these latter have nothing whatever to do with personal differences. The courts are open to the company if it seeks judicial aid, and the courts are also empowered to fix the interest that ought to be paid for any delay in settlement of accounts, but this mode of action is a very different thing to threatening a cessation of supplies. This would mean the rescission of existing contracts, the consequences of which would weigh on the company and on the Municipality with equal force.

Moreover the 1907 contract between the Gas Company and the Municipality is, says "La Prensa," quite a rara avis of its kind. The original concession had elapsed; the works and their appurtenances ought to have become the property of the town; yet the Municipality gracefully chose to forego its rights, and prorogued the concession. The facts of this case have not been made public, and "La Prensa" thinks that now would be an opportune time to do so, in order that the public might see how its rights are safeguarded. The threats of the company have done nothing to improve their rights; they have merely served to show that the Municipality is practically in a state of moratorium, at the same time throwing on the latter the onus of showing how its accounts have come to fall so dreadfully in arrears. In short the whole matter calls for investigation, and the question as to whether the dues charged for lighting actually cover the cost of the service ought to be settled once for all, together with many other things directly connected with the economic administration of the Municipality.

"La Nación" is the question of loans to the Government employés. The project deals with some slight modifications of the law already existing which places the Government employé in a precarious position by debarring him from compromising his credit with ordinary moneylenders. It has been proposed in order to assist the personnel of the Government, and to protect them against usury, to authorise the Banco de la Nación to advance such sums as they may require, proportionate to the amount of salary earned. This measure, which "La Nación" characterises as opportune and beneficial, has already been sanctioned and only awaits the official seal to become operative. If passed over to the next session, the delay will place the Government employés in a very grave position. To the increased cost of living must be added the further aggravation of a reduction of 10 per cent. on salaries, which the Government have found it expedient to levy in furtherance of their policy of economy.

In common justice, says "La Nación," the Chambers should at once sanction the modifications to the law re "embargo" of salaries of the officials, and enable employés to avail themselves immediately of the benefits of the measure, and thus extricate themselves from a position of extreme difficulty into which they have been forced by the Government itself.

THE MONETARY CIRCULATION

(La Nación.—August 25.)

The suspension of gold deposits in the legations, followed as it has been by a fall in the exchanges, shows, says "La Nación," that the exchange market has been artificially stimulated by the law closing the Caja de Conversión, a law originally intended to prevent a drainage of gold and a consequent attenuation of the paper currency. Practice has shown the inutility of this law, since the emissions provided thereby have not been required, whilst the money lies in the banks, still further embarrassing a situation that is already sufficiently complicated. This concentration of currency has led to exceptional pressure on the market, and government intervention in matters that ought to have been left entirely free to trade has led to unstable rates, owing to gold being tied up and drafts monopolised by the government thanks to the legation deposits.

As things stand to-day exports outweigh imports very heavily, yet exchange rates make it appear that the conditions are just the reverse, and it is also stated that this balance of trade does not rightly correspond to a country owing dividends, and is also a reason which mitigates against the importation of capital, the while floating capital is being withdrawn by the nations that have in the first instance supplied it. Granting this, says "La Nación," this money ought not to be retained here by force, but ought to be allowed to go ere its retention brings about other difficulties, and the whole situation suggests that a revision of the laws dictated on the outbreak of the European war is advisable. As things are to-day, the emission of notes against the legation deposits has flooded the banks and the market the while the retention of the gold has upset the exchanges and through them the whole routine of commerce.

ARGENTINE DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

NEED FOR REORGANISATION.

Vigorous comment has, from time to time, been made in the native Press of the country concerning the necessity for a reorganisation of the Argentine Diplomatic Corps in foreign countries. It has been pointed out that more initiative, greater and firmer efforts are required when representing a country such as the Argentine, not only to accentuate the prestige of the nation, but to more definitely represent the progress it is making.

It would appear that the authorities now intend to study a project of diplomatic organisation, but without definitely deciding at present the form that this reorganisation will take. A decree appertaining to this matter will shortly be forthcoming.

SALE OF FOOD STUFFS

REDUCED PRICES FROM GOVERNMENT SCHEME.

The sale of the articles of consumption and of prime necessity is being carried on in the new markets established by the Government with considerable briskness. In Calle Herrera 742, the first market opened some time ago, followed by those in Calle Linia and at Constitucion. Bread, meat, milk, vegetables, birds, eggs and fruit are being sold at prices equalling 10 per cent. less than the current prices in the open market. The price of meat is as follows: beefsteak 55 cents a kilo, veal 70 cents, loin 80 cents. Of mutton the price is 45 cents a kilo. Bread 24 cents a kilo and eggs 50 cents per dozen. A large consignment of oranges from Corrientes is due to-day.

Shortly the markets will include the sale of fish from Mar del Plata at greatly reduced prices.

IN THE OFFICE CHAIR

"Verboten!"

Ultra patriotic Germans—and where is the unpatriotic German?—are seeking to eliminate, eject, excise, erase, and utterly efface from the Dictionary of so Good German Words all the accursed expressions borrowed, in moments of misplaced trustfulness, from the Base Briton, the Guileful Gaul, the Ruffianly Russ and the Intriguing Italian. This may make the language poorer, but what matter? They will at least live or perish (probably the latter) among their native ungs, achs, schlaects, schlicts, schafsts, snorts, hissings, explosions and gutterals. There are, however, difficulties in the way. Take the word Schnurrbarbe (which is in the moustache or bigote line). Schnurr is good German, and might acclimatise itself in Scotland by becoming civilised and forswearing its sanguinary habits, but, barbe is undoubtedly French. La Barbe, the beard, see Gasc's exercises, Ahn's drivelling compilation of alleged French Grammar or Chardenal. What then, is to do? Why, the judgment of Solomon, of course. Hew Agag in pieces! Cut the word and its ships and throw barbe out among the rejected British, French, Italian and Russian words, while the patriots fix up some sort of a jury rig to take its place. But to think that the sacred whiskers of the Allmostwonderfullest should be contaminated by a word half French—what an insult! Help, ye professors!

A persuasion against hatred.

It is not desirable to cultivate a deliberate hate towards the Germans, just a strong distaste, a certain loathing; they will give us all necessary assistance, and we acquire a fixed persuasion that they are sons of Perdition, men of Moab, accursed Edomites, uncircumcised Philistines, bloody and deceitful Doegs, men of Harosheth of the Gentiles, whose horsehoofs shall be broken in their prancings. This is the proper spirit to chasten them in for their good, and one should wait with patience the moment when the smiting of them shall be greater than ever previously. King David, who was a stout soldier and a tall man of his hands, had got the thing fixed up absolutely right. He referred to his Huns thus: "When the wicked, even mine enemies, came upon me to eat up my flesh, they they stumbled and fell." They were his enemies, consequently most certainly "the wicked." This is the spirit of the Ironside trooper. And the Hun likewise naively observes that as the Arabic was torpedoed she must "have been a warship." Do not let us hate them, but cultivate the above defined disposition. It will do just as well, or better. In the meantime the Admirable Crichtons of the Berlin Press have raised an unanimous chorus of yelps in denials. Denials that the Moltke is sunk; denials, for fear of the United States, that the Arabic was deliberately murdered by their assassins. This last proceeding is, unfortunately for them, justified in the same breath by the Hamburger Nachrichten, whose slaving and rabid fury does not permit it to remember either reason or policy. They are quite at home on this sort of work, and the denials are of about as much value as those of the Louvain, Dinant, and Aerschot horrors.

WELCOME RAIN IN SANTA FE

The notices which are being received from the agricultural regions of Santa Fe, after the recent rains, are extremely encouraging, especially those concerning the state of the seedings. Both in Rosario and Santa Fe considerable animation reigns, and most optimistic opinions are being expressed. The occurrence of frost at certain places along the Central Argentine Railway has retarded in some degree the growth of the wheat, which is stated to be advantageous in view of possible eventualities, which the wheat might have to suffer from the weather when sprouting.

BOASTFUL OR MYOPTIC?

FRIDAY, August 20, 1915.

Insincerity is the lifeblood of diplomacy and politics, consequently it is difficult to say whether Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg's speech before the Reichstag yesterday was delivered "for home consumption only" or whether it was intended to be an exposition of the belief which lay within him. In either case the address was not without interest for the peoples of the Quadruple Entente.

The German Chancellor informed his audience that Germany is in a condition to continue the war successfully, that she can face the future with confidence, and that the Governments of the countries at war with the Central Empires are concealing the truth from the world. Certainly, we should have been surprised had any statement in the Reichstag indicated that Germany was not confident that she could pursue her campaign with success; nevertheless, we feel that Bethmann-Hollweg was swayed by a desire to please the German people rather than to give a plain survey of the Imperial view of the trend of events.

It is not necessary to point to any success which has fallen to the allied arms to emphasise the gradually strengthening position of the Quadruple Entente. We frankly admit that were that the only evidence on which it be possible to base conclusions, the outlook from the point of view of the allies would be less bright than it actually is. The war has now been in progress for more than twelve months; the German armies are still entrenched in Belgium and Northern France; moreover, the Russian offensive has given place to a prolonged retreat. The most easily satisfied member of the community could not pretend that, surveyed superficially, the picture is a pleasant one. We prefer, however, to place German achievements side by side with German intentions; Germany's resources with those of the Entente; and, after having done so, we can only express the opinion that not even an anti-Teuton bias is responsible for our conviction that the march of time will see the breakdown of militarism and the complete rout of its exponents. The reasons for this view are apparent to all. While Germany's plans had been in preparation for a period of forty-five years, her present antagonists were unready for war. The whole success of German strategy was dependent upon the rapidity with which success could be gained. Time is the Entente's great ally. The dash for Paris was abandoned; the crushing of France has not yet occurred; furthermore, although the Russian General Staff has ordered a retreat from Poland and Galicia, it has not witnessed the rout of its armies. In effect, Germany has to commence again at the point at which she arrived in August of last year. Is she sufficiently strong to do this with success? We think not. Every day that the war lasts adds considerably to the obstacles in the path of the Teuton. Sir John French's "contemptible little army" has been succeeded by a nation in arms; the ill-prepared French forces are now a powerful army supported by the enthusiasm of an organised people; Russia's failure in the East has been compensated for, to some extent, by the pressure of the Italian armies on Austria's south-western frontier. Meanwhile, Germany's losses in men, munitions, and money increase from day to day. Even though it be admitted that the allies are paying dearly for every slight success gained, it must be remembered that their resources are greater, that they have larger reserves of men, and that they control the seas. Under these conditions, time, as we have said, must be the deciding factor. And time is Germany's greatest enemy.

SOUTH AMERICA AND U.S. TRADE

Saturday 21

In certain ill-informed quarters the idea seems to prevail that the United States trader, chock-a-block with orders from the European markets, and faced with a tide of ever-increasing prosperity in his own country, has decided to let the South American trade go by default, for the time being at any rate. One hears of dissatisfaction on the part of Argentine firms with the American insistence on cash payments, the while Americans are reputed to be equally dissatisfied with the scant profits and long delays that import business in Argentina implies at the present time. All this may be perfectly true, but though it is evident that the Yankee trader no longer expects to come down here with a couple of cases of samples and return in a month or so with his orderbook bulging with fat commissions, to those who look a little below the surface it is equally evident that the American commercial attack has not weakened, but on the contrary is now being carried out on lines that are far more efficient, and may be far more deadly to its rivals than the big drum methods of a year or so ago.

One is impelled to these reflections on studying the official organ of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, entitled "The Nation's Business," the mid-June number being especially illustrative of the new spirit that characterises America's commercial outlook on the Latin-American field. The issue consists of two parts, one of which is entirely devoted to the Pan-American Financial Conference, the various discussions that were held, and the definite results of the meeting. The other portion is more general in its matter, but the outstanding feature of the whole publication is the "dead seriousness" of the tone adopted by men of the highest financial and commercial standing in the United States when discussing South American affairs. Gone is the old idea that this is a Tom Tiddler's Ground, where gold and silver are to be had for the gathering. In place of this undue optimism, founded on sand in the shape of breezy generalities that were often glaringly inaccurate as a presentment of local conditions, one observes a determination to lay a sure base for a future trade that shall be both permanent and expansive. The terms of the Arbitration Treaty made between the Chamber of Commerce of Buenos Aires, and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, are likely to have a very far-reaching influence on future relations between the United States and Argentina. Briefly summarised, it may be said that this document provides for mutual and amicable settlement of all commercial differences that may arise between individuals, on the basis of the findings of a joint committee. And when once this innovation has got to work it will undoubtedly remove one of the prime factors of distrust between traders on both sides of the Equator. The American shipper fears claims for goods that are not in accordance with sample or specification—in the eyes of the consignee—whilst the latter is equally doubtful of being able to obtain a just rebate or concession should the merchandise he has ordered and paid for turn out unsuitable to his needs.

Viewed in the light of known facts, Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg's optimistic discourse before the Reichstag is absurd. It may serve the useful purpose of heartening the German people and of persuading them to vote unlimited war credits. On the other hand, it is just possible that the rapid advance in the East may have temporarily blinded the Chancellor to the greater truths; but whichever assumption be correct, we insist that the address is a perversion of facts and that the truth will be realised by Bethmann-Hollweg and his Imperial Master before many months have passed. Germany has had her opportunity and has failed to utilise it to the fullest advantage. That opportunity will not come again.

This is however but one point among many. The question of transportation, of improved postal facilities, including parcel post and money order services, of fomenting financial interchange through the medium of improved banking facilities; all these are points to which America is evidently giving very serious and skilful attention. There is every reason to fear that the British trader is not sufficiently awake to the danger that awaits him. He is above all things else a conservative in his methods, and he cannot or will not understand that owing to the vast influx of profit to the United States that has characterised the last twelve months, that country is now in a position to handle many matters connected with overseas trade in a manner that was impossible, literally impossible, two years ago. The growing preponderance of New York influence in the money markets of Europe is bound to react, if it is not already reacting, on the exchanges between what one may term subsidiary countries, such as Argentina and Brazil, and the old world. Direct Exchange between Rio de Janeiro, or Buenos Aires, and New York, would have been scoffed at, and rightly, in 1913. Even the passing of the Federal Reserve Law, with its clauses allowing the establishment of branches of American banks abroad, would not have had any great effect on the existing conditions of South American trade. But, given the huge balances that the New York Money Market is piling up, and the increased volume of exportation from South America to the northern Republic that has resulted from the war, direct exchange becomes not only feasible but even profitable, per se. Without going into technicalities one may be allowed to state categorically that this change will eventually be a great factor in favour of the American exporter, and this is the point that the British trader does not appear to have taken into sufficient account.

One fact is gradually becoming more and more prominent in the commercial upheaval that attends the present war, namely the complete revulsion of pre-bellum trading conditions that is bound to ensue on the cessation of hostilities. Leaving aside the German and Austrian threats of a vast avalanche of cheap products flung on the consuming markets of the world at any price para hacerse de dinero as the liquidating draper remarks on his signs, it becomes clearer and clearer that competition will be keener than ever on the part of the industrials all the world over. Semi-virgin markets, if the phrase be permitted, such as South America offers, are certain to be inundated with advantageous offers. The Baudin Mission was evidently an intelligent attempt to put France well to the front at the time when the Huns shall be swept from the metallurgical regions of that country, whilst America, equally keen to enter the field in force, is certainly not relaxing one atom of its energies directed to the same end. And if British traders imagine that because the seller of cheap soaps, manicure sets, candy, and pop-balls has returned to "God's Own Country," loudly proclaiming that there's no money in South America, and that his superficial observations are being acted upon, he is lulling himself with false hopes. America is not asleep, nor is she despondent, in so far as the South American trade is concerned. Are we equally ready to meet her with success in the commercial lists?

ITALY'S DECISION

SUNDAY, August 22, 1915.

For the second time in three years Italy is at war with Turkey. The campaign of 1912 resulted in a complete victory for the Italian arms without there being any necessity for the invasion of Turkey proper. That of 1915 however will see the Italian troops as comrades in arms of men from France and Britain; moreover the course of the war will be largely affected by events which must take place on land contiguous to the Dardanelles.

The intervention of Italy in the struggle in Eastern Europe is of the utmost importance; indeed, we regard the event as being of much greater significance than is generally supposed. Viewed from the least satisfactory standpoint, the coming of Italy into the conflict involves a large addition to the allied naval and military forces at the Dardanelles and on the Gallipoli Peninsula. In our opinion, however, it also foreshadows an upheaval in the Balkans.

Many months have elapsed since we suggested that Italian and Balkan intervention in the Great War would be simultaneous. The opinion was based on the assumption that Italy would assist the Entente against the whole of the Tonton Alliance and that the interests of the Balkan States in the future of Turkey in Europe would not allow them to stand idly aside. Italy however contented herself with declaring war only against Austria, and the spread of the conflagration was deferred for a time. What prompted her to take such a step can be merely a matter for speculation. Possibly she wished to test the strength of her Austrian adversary before committing herself to heavier liabilities; or she may have been influenced by the advice of her General Staff which, it has been stated, was against embarking on adventure in the Dardanelles. In our opinion however Italy's delay in opening hostilities against Turkey was determined by a desire to await a settlement of the Balkan problem. While the future of Macedonia and Albania was the subject of heated discussion and none could say with any certainty of being accurate what the final attitude of Turkey's neighbours would be, there appeared to be every reason why Italy should stand aloof from a venture which did not guarantee her any real gain. The recent sitting of the Serbian Skupstina, the return of M. Venizelos to power, and the anti-German attitude of Rumania however seem to have dissipated the clouds which obscured the situation. If the statements made in the cablegrams of the past week can be relied upon, then Serbia has yielded to the pressure brought to bear upon her by the representatives of the Quadruple Entente. The result of her decision must necessarily be far reaching in its effects, for not only does it satisfy the demands of Bulgaria, but it also gives Italy full guarantees of a footing in Albania; moreover, it removes the last great obstacle to Rumanian intervention—a hostile Bulgaria.

While we admit that to don the mantle of a prophet is a task fraught with danger, we are sufficiently optimistic to express faith in the imminence of the great change in the course of events in the Near East. The addition of forces from Italy to those of the Allies already in the Dardanelles area will be of the utmost value, but more important still would be the application of pressure on Turkey's northern frontier by the armies of Bulgaria. Turkey is not sufficiently strong to detach any large body of men from the Gallipoli Peninsula and the Caucasus to defend Adrianople; therefore the contest could barely resolve itself into a question of whether Constantinople should be taken by one of the armies of the Entente or whether the Sultan and his advisers should sue for a separate peace. Either event would witness the downfall of Turkey in Europe.

A MISMANAGED MUNICIPALITY

TUESDAY, August 24, 1915.

It is high time the Municipal Council of the City of Buenos Aires set about reconstructing itself, and putting the affairs of the municipality in proper order. For a year or more conditions have been going from bad to worse, and at the moment everything seems to be in a state of hopeless muddle. The case reported in our news columns this morning of two companies being forced to take their claims for payment on account of lighting before the law courts, is striking evidence of what can only be described as a scandalous state of affairs. The companies in question have not been paid for months, and apparently all their efforts to get their accounts liquidated, or compromised in some business-like manner have failed. The consequence is that the Council is to be brought before the courts like some petty defaulting tradesman, and its shame is to be publicly paraded, because it has neither the decency, nor the sense of justice which should characterise such a body.

The worst feature of the particular case referred to is, in our opinion, the fact that the Municipal Council has regularly insisted on the fulfilment by the companies of their obligation to pay promptly the imposts which the Council is in a position to levy. In ordinary trading operations it is customary, when conditions become difficult, for parties having contra accounts to waive all, or portion of the mutual obligations. Under such arrangements it would be most improper for one party to insist on payment while at the same time he refused, or was unable, to make his own contra payments. Apparently, however, the Municipal Council has no scruples. While refusing to meet its own obligations, or while unable, through mismanagement, or incapable financing, to pay its just dues, it nevertheless greedily insists on the payments due to it from the other parties.

The unfairness of such a policy is aggravated by the fact that while the non-payment of the imposts would entail no direct loss to the Municipality, which has not outlaid any money to earn such revenue, the non-payment of the lighting bills entails on the two companies, considerable direct loss represented by the amounts already spent by the companies to earn what is due to them. The attitude of the Council is so obviously unfair and indecent that we doubt if the courts will hesitate a moment to declare their emphatic opinion that such conduct is dishonest.

What concerns the general public is not, however, the particular case of these two lighting companies, although they are necessarily seriously interested, especially if the companies carry out their determination to plunge the city in darkness in default of payment of their just claims. What is more important is the question of why the affairs of the city should be in such a state that the Council cannot meet its debts promptly? The inevitable reply will be: The Crisis. Our answer is that there should be no crisis so far as a well-managed municipality is concerned. We are not aware that the Municipality has suffered any serious revenue through the conditions which have existed during the past eighteen months. That these conditions have affected the city's finances to some extent is obvious, but that they have done so to an alarming extent, or to such a degree as to throw the city into bankruptcy we do not believe.

In any case it was, and still is, the imperative duty of the Council to meet such conditions, and at all costs protect its good name and credit. What, for instance, has it done in the way of affecting the economies of which we have heard so much talk for months past? In what direction has it endeavoured to live within its reduced means, and eliminate from its administration of city affairs waste, and extravagance? There has been no retrenchment in the staffs,

THE RESTORATION OF CONFIDENCE

WEDNESDAY, August 25, 1915.

When asked recently what was, in his opinion, really wrong with the commercial situation in Argentina, a leading bank manager replied tersely, "Want of Confidence." There can be no doubt that in this answer is to be found the true statement of the economic position of the Republic. Confidence, or optimism, and depression or pessimism, are really merely fashions, or better still, they may be described as epidemics. When a "boom" is on, everybody is optimistic, and everybody becomes pessimistic just so soon as the "boom" has passed. It does not matter whether the "boom" benefits them, or the depression injures them, the mass of the people are affected in spirit just the same. For proof of this statement we have only to consider the thousands of salaried servants of commercial concerns whose positions are generally not in the least affected by the alternating periods of buoyancy and depression which characterise all business in any part of the world. These employes talk prosperity or gloom without being touched by either to any appreciable extent, and their talk is merely a reflection, not a result.

Argentina has a history made up of fluctuation between wonderful prosperity and appalling depression. Through one of the latter eras she has undoubtedly passed. At the bottom this depression has consisted of nothing more than a reaction from the preceding period of great optimism and prosperity. The country's resources have not seriously been affected, and in fact in many directions while everyone has talked and felt depression, conditions have really been better than they were in the times when it was fashionable to be optimistic. In the rural industries, for instance, and they are the mainstay of the country's prosperity, prices and supplies have never been better than they have been during the past eighteen months. There has been no serious shortage of cattle, and prices have been steadily rising until to-day phenomenal records are

To those who study conditions closely, there is evidence on every hand of a rising tide of confidence, and an awakening from the lethargy and stagnation which have made the past eighteen months a period of which the people will presently be speaking as one of economic nightmare. Some authorities do not hesitate to pronounce the country to be on the verge of a "boom," and they predict that an early closing of the war, which has affected Argentina rather mentally than physically, would bring about an era of prosperity such as the country has never seen. It cannot be said that so far as business conditions in the Capital are concerned there has as yet been any noticeable improvement, but it is clear that there is a definite tendency towards an amelioration of the stagnant spirit which has pervaded all commerce for well nigh two years. The cities follow closely the trend of affairs throughout the country districts, and as conditions in the camp have improved considerably, it is safe to say that before very long those conditions will show a marked influence upon commerce and general trade in Buenos Aires. Confidence is rapidly returning, and gathering momentum and volume with every day that passes.

and we defy anyone to point to a single economy. The new regime has certainly shown great activity in a number of unessential details, but in the broader, bigger affairs of real administration along careful lines, it has reproduced only the faults of its predecessors, and none of their virtues. The result is that to-day the city's affairs are in a worse state than ever they were, and a remedy, other than the occurrence of the fortuitous "boom" for which the Bumbles in office hope, seems impossible.

AMERICA AND GERMANY

THURSDAY, August 26, 1915.

In view of what has happened during the past six months in the relations between the United States and Germany, or it might be more correctly stated has not happened, it is a matter of very great difficulty to forecast what is likely to occur in the near future. The country that quickly went to war over the sinking of the battleship Maine in Havana harbour has seemingly tolerated with remarkable patience, if not complacency, a dozen affronts to her dignity and prestige at the hands of Germany, and if we are to believe the American press the United States should more than once have accepted as a sufficient casus belli occurrences of greater importance than the destruction of the historic battleship.

We have the pronouncement of such a paper as "Leslie's Weekly" that the sinking of the Lusitania was more justification for a war than the destruction of the Maine represented. On top of this colossal crime have occurred the deliberate torpedoing of vessels flying the American flag, and the loss of lives of American citizens in such circumstances as those attending the sinking of the liner Arabic. Every such occurrence has provoked an exchange of Notes in which the Government of the United States has shown a determined front, followed by a contradictory quiescence of spirit. In view of what transpired after the Lusitania horror, for the perpetration of which Germany was able to present a plausible justification, alleging that the vessel was armed and carried munitions of war, it would have appeared inevitable that the destruction of the Arabic must have led to an immediate declaration of war.

In the case of the Arabic Germany can plead no justification other than the pursuance of her policy of destruction of everything British, regardless of the declaration of President Wilson that in following out this policy she must not jeopardise the life of a single American citizen. The destruction of the Arabic with the attendant loss of American lives, can be construed in no other light in the United States than as a direct pronouncement by Germany that she has no respect for American opinion, and is prepared deliberately to flout it. The situation is just that of a bully having been dared to continue his bullying and then having struck in defiance of the threats of what would happen to him did he continue. Up to the moment of writing there is no substantial indication of what the United States will do. There is a report that the army and navy have been placed under orders for immediate action, but the decision still rests with the diplomats. President Wilson is reported to be considering the urgency of an immediate cessation of diplomatic relations with Germany, but it is added that he would not necessarily consider such action equivalent to a declaration of war.

From the point of view of the Allies there is no desire that the United States should go to war. As a matter of fact their interests are best served by the United States remaining ostensibly at peace with Germany. Under such conditions, and by reasons of the superiority at sea of the Allies, the United States contributes more to their success by supplying them with munitions, food-stuffs, cotton, and other necessary commodities, and by according them moral support, than she could do by actually declaring war. In the latter event she would be impotent, at least for some considerable time to render them any material assistance. There would be nothing for her first-class navy to do, and her army, from a military point of view, would be equally useless. At the moment practically all her military strength on a peace basis is required to handle the Mexican situation, and like Britain it would take her many months to raise, train, and equip an army for service on the Continent.

But apart from these material con-

LEGATION DESPATCHESKITCHENER ADDRESSES SPAHIS IN ARABIC

The following telegrams have been received by His Britannic Majesty's Minister at Buenos Aires from the Foreign Office, London:—

August 20 (6.40 p.m.)

Lord Kitchener has just returned from visiting French Army at invitation of French Government. Accompanied by Monsieur Millerand he passed down the whole line. Everywhere enthusiastic reception. Above all British Orders he wore medal of Franco-Prussian War, and was evidently moved at being with the French army again. At one spot he came face to face with Cavalry Division whose General saluting him was recognised at Baratier of Marchand Mission. Both greatly pleased, held long conversation. Lord Kitchener addressed soldiers, including Spahis, astonishing the latter by speaking Arabic. At dinner, proposing his health, Monsieur Millerand said the enemy was seizing and exaggerating ephemeral incidents and prophesying among his adversaries the dissensions which he desires. He tries to excite among neutrals and even belligerents tendencies towards pacific manifestations. "Marshal, if you only see France of the armies, remember that the rest of France is of the same spirit." Lord Kitchener said that the splendour of the armies of France surpassed even their magnificent reputation, and he assured them that Britain to the uttermost effort was with them and our heroic allies. It was understood at a long interview with Monsieur Millerand and General Joffre that important questions were settled.

THE ARABIC CRIME.

August 20, 7.45 p.m.

White Star Lines announce that passenger steamship Arabic, on voyage from Liverpool to New York, was torpedoed about latitude 50.49, longitude 8.29. She was torpedoed without warning on starboard side, about 100 yards from stern, and sank about 10 minutes later. Total number on board, 424. Latest reports say eight passengers and 25 crew missing, but further reports are awaited from Queensdown.

Considerations there is a strong moral reason why the United States should definitely cast in her lot with the Allies. She is the greatest of the neutral powers, and it ill befits her dignity, and does not add to the respect in which she is held, for her to submit to repeated insults. We believe we are right in stating that the majority of the American people are with the Allies in sympathy. We know that the United States has straight and strict views on international law and usage, and that the statesmanship of the country is entirely opposed to Germany's free disregard of all the canons of civilisation. We also know that the United States is not lightly disposed to enter into war, or to become involved in European affairs, and that a peculiar repulsion to fighting Germany arises from the fact that the German influence in the States is large and influential, but nevertheless it seems to us, after honestly endeavouring to clear our minds of all bias, that there is no course open to the Northern Republic save that of declaring war against Germany. Had the United States Government remained silent all along; had it not practically dared Germany to repeat her offences, then perhaps we might have been able to say that the United States was not called upon to engage in the struggle. As things are, however, the United States is committed, and out of self-respect and for her national honour, she is bound to step in. In the expressive language of the country she is now called on "to make good," or for ever to hold her peace.

HIGH PRICED NOVILLOSHERD OF $1000 AT $250 EACH.

As an illustration of the remarkable prices being obtained now for fat steers, a deal was made on Saturday with a certain Frigorifico in which, the quantity was one thousand and the price $250 each. In the last two or three years there has been a jump of about $100 in the value of this class of beast, for not so long ago the sale of an individual at $200 caused a tremendous sensation, whereas the last records are $300.

SALE OF STEERSANOTHER RECORD.

What is probably the best lot of frigorifico steers ever presented for sale at the Liniers market was that sold yesterday by Messrs. Estrugamou and Co. for the magnificent price of $390 apiece, this is the highest amount paid for steers in any market, and is an advance of $90 on last week's highest bid.

The lot was composed of 54 first class steers, the product of the "San Carlos" estancia, property of Mr. Edmund B. Perkins, and after keen bidding were purchased by the Frigorifico Smithfield.

MEAT EXPORTS

La Plata Cold Storage Company advise despatch by Highland Glen for London of 2,273 carcasses of mutton, 864 carcasses of lamb and 11,139 quarters of chilled beef.

The Smithfield and Argentine Meat Company have sent to London by the same steamer 1,068 fore and 1,087 hind-quarters of chilled beef and to New York, by the Verdi 1,295 each fore and hind-quarters of beef chilled.

Las Palmas Produce Company reports despatch by Highland Glen to London, of 1729 carcasses of frozen mutton, 1641 of frozen lamb, 203 frozen fore quarters of beef, 1999 fore and 2968 hind quarters of chilled beef.

By Verdi to New York, the same Company sent 152 each fore and hind quarters of frozen beef and 1449 each fore and hind of chilled beef.

The Sansinena Company advises that they have shipped by the Highland Brigade for Liverpool 4459 quarters (375 tons) of frozen beef.

By La Negra they despatched to Liverpool 4678 quarters frozen beef (417 tons) and to London, by the Highland Warrior, 4709 carcasses of frozen lamb.

La Blanca Company report despatch by Highland Warrior for London of 4,400 carcasses of mutton and 3,541 quarters of chilled beef. By La Negra for Liverpool the same Company has sent 12,719 quarters of frozen beef.

The Las Palmas Produce Company sent 16,814 quarters of frozen beef to Liverpool by La Negra. To London by Highland Warrior Las Palmas Produce Company shipped from La Plata 1,274 carcasses of frozen mutton.

THE WOOL SEASONGOOD PROSPECTS FOR THE SECOND SHEARING.

According to the latest information received there is every promise of a satisfactory termination to the coming shearing season.

The "estancieros" consider that the prices paid in the central wool market are very good, and for good class wool of the second shearings the price has risen to $14.

Shearing is about to commence, but the amount of wool expected on the market during September will only be small, and the large sales will not commence until October.

In the South buyers are showing much activity in their purchases, and in Ayacucho several small lots have already been sold at $12.

EXPORTATION OF CEREALSTHE WEEK'S SHIPMENT.

During the past week ending Thursday night, the official figures for the export trade of the Argentine are as follows:—

Wheat to the amount of 15,471 tons have been shipped of which quantity 9,552 tons were for Brazil. Maize shipments equalled 118,384 tons, including 52,475 from San Lorenzo and 37,645 from Buenos Aires. Flax amounting to 12,615 tons were exported of which 11,520 were from Buenos Aires, most of which was shipped to the United States. Oats 2,158 tons nearly all for England. Flour 1,022 tons and barley 7,195 tons.

The wheat exportation totals for the year are 2,363,102 tons. Maize 2,428,695 tons. Flax 721,717 and oats 491,340 tons. It will be remarked that but a very small amount of any of these commodities are destined for the British Isles.

CAMP NOTES

(By Our Agricultural Editor.)

The Palermo Show, that great annual event, especially for all camp men, has already been reported in these columns, and many of the principal exhibits have changed ownership at very satisfactory prices. The opening sales for imported bulls, held last Sunday, by the Messrs. Bullrich, when the consignments of Mr. Donald MacLennan and Mr. Robert Duncan, met a very firm trade, clearly demonstrated that this season's bull trade would be very animated. The bulls bred in the country and which were fortunate in winning prizes at the Show have also participated in the good trade. The price of $60,000 realised for the Champion could not be considered otherwise than a most satisfactory price for a young bull, considering that this animal is not fully matured and the attendant risks to run before it reaches maturity. The reserve Champion acquired by the Messrs. Vivot, was also a great Shorthorn, and his progeny are likely to fill many honourable posts at future shows, as he has gone to where they know how to bring out a bull, and utilise him to the best advantage. It has been quite noticeable this year the success which has attended those properties who realise that it pays best to have competent men to show their animals to the best advantage.

The rumours about foot and mouth disease having made its appearance do not appear to have been well founded, or the disappearance of some bulls from their stall may have been the means of checking the spread of this disease, which fortunately has not caused owners and buyers of pedigree animals the trouble experienced in former years, when this disease passed over practically all the animals within the grounds.

The horse sales, especially the heavy draught classes, have been somewhat disappointing to sellers, and prices were only fair. Considering the firm demand for all classes of heavy draught horses for export, I was hopeful that heavy draught stallions would be in demand, but such is the vicissitudes of prognostications in this Republic. The light-legged varieties did not appear to be any more fortunate, and only moderate prices were generally realised.

The demand for all classes of sheep appeared to be firm, while the record was broken by the sale of the Champion Lincoln ram, which was an exceptionally good specimen of the breed, and likely to prove a profitable investment for its purchaser, as blood will tell.

THE WORLD'S CROPSFAVOURABLE REPORTS FROM THE UNITED KINGDOM.

New York, Aug. 25.

Broomhall's report states that throughout the United Kingdom the weather is very favourable for harvesting which is now progressing. The yield is of excellent quality but short in quantity. New wheat will be moving shortly. In France the weather is now more favourable but want of labour is against successful harvesting. Both quality and quantity are disappointing and importations will be important. From Germany it is stated officially that wheat is a good average with liberal reserves, rye is a bare average while the average of barley and oats is large. Potatoes 50 million tons. In Russia the weather is severely against harvesting therefore the quality is lowered. The winter return is generally good, while spring crops are improved except in the districts where prospects are greatly lowered. The arrivals are large and prices lowered, practically nothing being exported from Hungary. The official report concerning the yield of wheat is 50 million. Broomhall says that this estimate is excessive. A large quantity has already been contracted for. The Balkan shipments over land have commenced and ideal weather continues. Practically no wheat has been offered for export, and prices remain high. Italy's harvesting is disappointing, and importations are on a liberal scale from Scandinavia. In Finland there is a moderate improvement in the prospects of the crop over last year's. Spain's yield is disappointing, but the official statement is that the wheat yield is 20 millions larger than last year.

GERMAN OPINION OF THE STATES

(To the Editor)

Sir,—A Dutch friend of mine who has quite recently visited the Rhine Provinces tells me that he found on all sides and amongst all classes, feelings of absolute contempt and disdain for the Washington Government. The common belief in Germany is that arising out of the conglomeration of races in North America, with conflicting interests, there cannot exist that which the German calls solid patriotism, and that, consequently, the Wilsonian Cabinet may be kicked, cuffed, or fooled to any extent with impunity.

President Wilson is regarded by Germans as a Sunday School politician whose motto is: "The Lord will provide," and who may therefore be safely ignored.

Yours, etc.

CH. L. CRAUSTOUNY.

THE LOTTERY HABIT

The Chances Against Winning

A POPULAR FALLACY EXPLODED

The majority of Britons arriving in Argentina are at some time or other lured into purchasing lottery tickets.

In course of time, most people cease to tempt fortune; others, however, extend their purchases over a period of years.

The following little sketch, contributed by a business man who shields himself behind the initials "P.P.C." possesses distinct interest in that it shows how bad a bargain is made each week by the unsuspecting gambler who does not trouble to calculate the odds. Few racing men would accept the terms laid down by the lottery.

THE LURE OF THE LOTTERY.

"How much would you have to-day, if, instead of buying lottery tickets every week, you had placed the money in the bank?"

Smith shot this question at me as I was buying a "quinto" from a one-armed man in the street. Smith I may mention is one of those aggravating individuals who are for ever launching searching questions, the answers to which they already know, and which they intend to inflict on you whether you are interested or not. I had no idea how much I spent on the lottery, and was on the point of saying so, when he forestalled me.

"You don't know," he said. "Well I'll tell you. You would have had £100,—about twelve hundred dollars."

"Rot," I said.

"One hundred pounds," he repeated. You have been here seven years and have played regularly, to my knowledge. You haven't played heavily, it's true, but you've played steadily. Let's put it at 15 dollars a month, say £15 a year for seven years, £105. Now during that time you once took out fifty dollars."

"You seem to know all about it," I said.

"It would be funny if I didn't know about it. All Buenos Aires knew about it. You went about telling everyone, as if you had done something clever."

"Well, what if I did," I replied, somewhat nettled.

"Nothing," said Smith. "Suppose though I took it into my head to go to the races and were to lose a thousand dollars. You might probably think I was a fool. If however I went again the following Sunday, and came home bragging to you that I had an exceptionally good day, because I had won fifty dollars, you would not only think I was a fool, you would know I was. That is exactly what you were doing."

"Any way," said I, to change the subject, "if I have lost that money it went in such dribblets that I never missed it."

"My dear boy, you might just as well have saved it up till you had £100 and then thrown it into the fire."

"Nothing of the kind. You forget the fact that during all that time I've had a run for my money. I've had the chance of taking out—

"Taking out what," asked Smith.

"The 'grande'" I replied.

"Let's have a look at that ticket for a minute. Now let's see what it says. Here we are. There is one prize of $80,000."

"That's the little boy I'm after," said I.

"Well let's reckon up your chances of winning it. Now there are 25,000 tickets. If you select a certain number, and keep on buying it every week, there is a probability, almost amounting to a certainty, of that number taking out the 'grande' once in every 520 years. Looks as if you would have a fairly long run for your money, doesn't it? Let's take it another way. Imagine a field on which there are spread 390 chessboards. Let us further imagine that a single drop of rain is about to fall within the area covered by those chessboards. Would you bet five shillings that you could guess not only on which board, but on which square of the board that drop of rain will fall? I don't think you would. But presuming you made the bet once, and lost, would you be fool enough to keep on betting five shillings every week on the same proposition? That is precisely what you are doing every time you buy a lottery ticket when there are 25,000 issued."

"You are still overlooking the fact," said I, "that there are other prizes besides the 'grande.'"

"Let's examine them," said Smith, consulting the ticket. "Here we are. After the first prize of $80,000 we drop away down to $10,000. One prize of $10,000! Your chances of taking out either one of those two top prizes, are 2 in 25,000, or in other words, there is a probability of your ticket taking out one of those two prizes once in every 260 years. After the 10,000 prize we come to 2 of 5,000. There is every—

"Oh, stow all that," I broke in. "At least you'll admit that I have 1 chance in 10 of doubling my money."

"Wrong again," said Smith. "Although it distinctly states that it is illegal to cobrar more for this ticket than its 'valor escrito' which is $3.15, I saw you pay $3.50 for it. If it takes out a termination you get back $5, which means to say that having won a wager in which the odds were 9 to 1 against, you are content to receive odds of 7 to 3 on. To win $1.50 you have had to stake $3.50. Waiving aside the other prizes, you should have received back something like $30. However you appear to be quite satisfied with whatever you get. Now let's step in here for a minute. This is where I buy my cigarettes. Manuel who runs the place, also sells lottery tickets."

"Ah, good morning, Manuel." My friend here wishes to ask you a question or two. He wishes to know," continued Smith, before I could interrupt, "how long you have been selling lottery tickets."

"Seven or eight years," said the man.

"How many tickets do you expose for sale every 'jugada.' My friend wants the information merely to settle a little argument."

"I get 50 tickets," said Manuel. "I could sell more, but I can't get them. They're all apportioned out to the different Agencies."

"Now, this is what my friend wishes to ask you. How many times, in those seven or eight years, has any one of the tickets sold by you taken out the 'grande.'"

Manuel hesitated.

"I see you don't like to give the information away," said Smith. "Well, I'll make a guess. During all that time not one of your tickets has ever taken out the 'grande.' I'll go further and say that not one of your tickets has ever taken out as much as $10,000. Am I correct? Come, it won't go any further."

Manuel looked at us questioningly for some time, smiled sheepishly, and then nodded.

"Many thanks, Manuel, that's all my friend wanted to know." Adios."

"So you see," said Smith, when we were once more in the street, "our friend Manuel has been selling 50 tickets every week for seven years and hasn't sold anything worth having yet. Of course every 'jugada' one or two of his tickets take out a termination, or termination and "suerte," which is what they call the lowest possible prize. I may mention that Manuel himself never plays. He knows the game too well for that. If he is left with a ticket on his hands on the day of the drawing, he sends his boy into the street mighty quick to try and get rid of it there."

Common sense tells him that his assured commission on that one ticket is safer business for him than his chance of taking out the 'grande' with it. On his commission, and that extra charge which you and others are willing to pay, Manuel has been able to buy a snug little house and a small piece of terreno. Still, he is a deserving chap, and if as you say, you don't miss the money, and intend keeping on at the game, you might do worse than help him towards acquiring another little piece of land I know he's got his eye on."

"Smith," said I, for I had been thinking the thing over, "I don't know whether your figures are right or not, and I don't care anyway, but if that lottery man is right when he admits that in all those years he's never sold a single prize of any size at all, I'm convinced. I play no more. From to-day onwards, I'll put a big black cross against the lottery."

"Good," said Smith, "you should have done it years ago. The lottery is what the Yanks would call a 'skin game,'—you stand to lose all the time. Now if as you say you don't miss the money I can tell you of something in which you can invest a little of it at least. You won't take out any prizes, but every time you 'play' you'll get back more satisfaction than if you had taken out the 'grande'—that is if you are serious in what you say about that "big black cross."

"I am serious," said I. "What is it."

"The little 'Red Cross,'" said Smith.

MURDERS BY SUBMARINE TO CEASE

Bernstorff's Assurances to Washington

CONCILIATORY ATTITUDE OF BERLIN PRESS

Arabic's Destroyer Believed Sunk

Washington, Sept. 1.

It is announced that the German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, has informed the Secretary of State that Germany accepts the principle that the German submarines shall give notice to steamers before attacking them, and that aid should be given to non-combatants, provided the vessels do not attempt to escape or to attack.

The communication was delivered orally.

Mr. Lansing replied that it could not be taken into consideration unless made in writing.

PRO-SUBMARINE ARTICLES IN BERLIN PRESS.

New York, Sept. 1.

A telegram to the United Press from the Berlin correspondent, Mr. Ackerman, says that the most significant feature in the situation between Germany and the United States is the appearance of articles laying stress upon the value of Germany's submarine war on British merchantmen.

The articles are apparently inspired, as they carried statistics relating to the number of boats sunk and their tonnage. It is argued that Admiral Von Tirpitz's submarine blockade has proved a success.

Whether these articles had their origin in a group of officials who oppose any change in the German submarine policy is unknown, although it is felt in Berlin that what had threatened to be a crisis has now passed. Official circles are still somewhat uncomfortable in anticipation of the next American Note, in view of what was considered the bluntness of the last communication from Washington.

The officials of the German Admiralty have not fully accepted the theory that the submarine that torpedoed the Arabic has been sunk by a British warship. The Press is refraining from lengthy comment on the subject; but all the newspapers print the report that President Wilson has cancelled his vacation plans because of the German-American negotiations.

CONCESSION TO THE STATES.

New York, Sept. 1.

A telegram from Berlin says that it seems to be settled that the German Government will accede to the desires of the United States and will issue orders for the suspension of the attacks by submarines on merchant shipping.

BERLIN PRAISES PRESIDENT WILSON

New York, Sept. 1.

A telegram from Berlin says that the "National Zeitung" in a long article gives warm praise to President Wilson. The paper deplores the stand the President has taken against German methods of submarine warfare; but it gives unstinted commendation to his patient diplomacy. It compares the President with Messrs. Roosevelt and Bryan, to the great disadvantages of the two last, whose political methods it condemns.

Murderers Sunk?

RUMOURED END OF ARABIC'S DESTROYER.

London, Sept. 1.

Rumours are current in London that the German submarine which sank the Arabic has herself been sunk by a British patrol while trying to torpedo the British steamer Nicotian.

The last-named vessel arrived at Liverpool on August 24, from New Orleans.

Another rumour which is circulating in Liverpool is to the effect that the submarine was not sunk but was captured.

So far these rumours have not been either confirmed or contradicted by the Admiralty.

CONFIRMATION BY U.S. AMBASSADOR.

Washington, Sept. 1.

The official despatches of the Department of State show that the United States Ambassador in London, Mr. Page, has reported that on the day following the destruction of the Arabic a German submarine was sunk near the scene of the disaster.

Three Months' Piracy

RESULT IN LOSS OF 68 BRITISH STEAMERS.

London, Sept. 1.

In the quarterly report issued by Lloyd's Agency it is stated that during the three months ended August 12 the British merchant marine had lost through submarines or mines 68 steamers of a total displacement of 180,713 tons, and nine sailing ships.

Miners Still on Strike

WILL NOT RESUME WORK UNTIL AGREEMENT IS SIGNED.

London, Sept. 1.

Although the miners' strike in South Wales is virtually over there are still about 40,000 men who refuse to return to work until the agreement arrived at has been signed by all parties concerned.

GENERAL RESUMPTION TO-MORROW.

London, Sept. 1.

The terms of the settlement of the Welsh coal dispute were accepted at a conference between the miners' delegates to-day. Despite this, 42,000 colliers are still idle, having struck work in protest against the delay in signing the agreement. A general resumption of work will take place to-morrow.

An "American" Citizen

GERMAN BARON ARRESTED AT ALEXANDRIA.

London, Sept. 1.

Further particulars concerning the arrest at Alexandria of a German agent state that the person in question was Baron Otto von Gumpenberg who had been employed in rousing the Arabs of Tripoli against the Italians and in doing the same with regard to the Egyptians against the British. He was found on board a Turkish sailing vessel which was stopped by a British cruiser, being the only passenger. The Baron protested that he was an American citizen and produced a passport to prove his statement. The British officers however conveyed him to Alexandria where he was identified.

Trouble in Somaliland

NATIVES DISTURBED BY TURKISH PROPAGANDA.

Rome, Sept. 1.

A despatch from the Governor of the Italian colony of Benadir reports that all is quiet in Italian Somaliland, the Ascaris being faithful and obedient to discipline.

In British Somaliland, however, there have been some disturbances fostered by Arabs who are the agents of Turkey.

Spain Aroused

GERMANY REFUSES SATISFACTION FOR SINKING STEAMER.

Madrid, Sept. 1.

It is reported from Bilbao that the crew of the Spanish steamer Esadara, which has been torpedoed by a German submarine, have landed.

The German Government refuses to give any explanation of this attack. The Madrid newspapers call upon the Government for energetic action.

Zeppelin Raiders

RETREAT FROM EAST ANGLIAN COAST.

London, Sept. 1.

Several Zeppelins were observed to-day off the East Anglian coast. A squadron of British aeroplanes at once went in pursuit and compelled the enemy to retreat. One of the Zeppelins is believed to have been injured by the fire from the British flotilla.

German Incendiaries

DESTROY ALGERIAN HARVEST.

Paris, Sept. 1.

A despatch from Algeria reports that in many places the harvest had been destroyed by fires caused by incendiaries. The authorities there have set on foot an inquiry and believe that the fires were due to individuals in the pay of Germany who were trying by this means to bring discredit on the French Government among the natives.

Cholera in Germany

BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN CAUSED BY RUSSIAN PRISONERS.

New York, Sept. 1.

According to a despatch from Rotterdam, the cholera which has appeared in several parts of the German empire is believed to have been introduced by Russian prisoners.

In future, the Russian prisoners are to be disinfected before they are interned, and those in the concentration camps will be subjected to special treatment.

Instructions have been issued to the population as to the precautions to be taken in order to avoid the malady spreading.

It is believed that there is no fear of an epidemic breaking out in the empire.

Zinc Coins

FOR USE IN BELGIUM.

Paris, Sept. 1.

A telegram from Amsterdam says that owing to the scarcity of nickel in Belgium the German Governor there has ordered coins to be made out of zinc.

MENACE TO RIGA AND VILNA

Fall of Friedrichstadt Believed Imminent

GERMANS CHECKED AT VARIOUS POINTS

Russian Army Captures 5,000 Teutons and Many Guns.

New York, Sept. 1.

It is reported from Berlin that according to the latest despatches from headquarters the fall of the city of Friedrichstadt is imminent.

Experts consider that the capture of this stronghold will seal the fate of Riga and Vilna.

5,000 TEUTONS CAPTURED.

Paris, Sept. 1.

According to despatches from Petrograd, the Russian forces in Eastern Galicia which counter-attacked and drove back the Austro-German forces on the Strypa captured 5,000 prisoners and thirty guns.

GERMANS CHECKED ON THE STRYPA.

London, Sept. 1.

Telegrams from New York re-transmitting news of German official origin respecting the campaign against Russia admit that the advance of the Teuton armies on the banks of the Strypa, in eastern Galicia, has been checked by the furious counter-attacks of the Russians, and the invaders have had to fall back upon the second lines of reinforcements which had fortified themselves in case of some such reverse. This check, although a partial one, has had the effect of detaining the advance of the rest of the line.

ALL GERMAN ATTACKS REPULSED.

Petrograd, Sept. 1.

An official communiqué issued today by the War Office reports as follows:—

"In the Riga region on Monday night the enemy assumed the offensive from the railway to Gross Ekau and Neuhut northward. This offensive was held in check.

"Up the river Missa northwest of Friedrichstadt an attempt by the enemy to cross the Dvina was repulsed on Monday and the Germans who had crossed to the right bank were thrown back under cover of artillery fire of hurricane intensity. There were further German attacks on Sunday and Monday nights upon the Russian bridgehead, all of which were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

"On the right bank of the Viliya we assumed an offensive which developed successfully on the 30th. Between the Viliya and the Niemen we continue to hold the enemy's offensive.

"On the upper Bobr we again repulsed attacks by the enemy in the regions of Lipsy and Sidra in the course of Sunday and Monday.

"There has been no essential change on the front between Grodno and the Gorodok district. On Monday in the Gorodok region we repulsed two enemy attacks, and in the region of Vladimir Volynsky we took about 200 prisoners, repelling the enemy's attacks.

"On Sunday, east of Sviniechy in Galicia, after a prolonged lull, the Austro-German troops made a series of energetic attacks along the whole front. This offensive was preceded by a very violent fire from both light and heavy artillery. The attack was particularly fierce to the north of Zloczow in the region of Pomorzany and in that of Zboro, as well as in front of the river Strypa. During Sunday and Monday the enemy made eight separate attacks between the railways leading from Owar to Tarnopol and to Czorkow. All these attacks were repulsed with such heavy losses to the enemy that in some districts he was compelled to make a precipitate retreat.

"Thanks to our counter-attacks we had great success along an extensive front, capturing thirty guns, twenty-four machine guns and about 3,000 prisoners, half of whom were Germans."

KAISER'S CONGRATULATIONS TO GERMAN ARMY.

London, Sept. 1.

A message from Berlin reports that the Kaiser has sent a telegram of congratulation to the German army operating in the east on the devoted bravery and endurance displayed in the capture of Brest-Litovsk. The Commanding officers also are complimented for the great marches and fighting achievements of every section of the army.

Burning of Brest-Litovsk

GERMAN JOURNALIST'S STORY.

New York, Sept. 1.

According to a telegram from Berlin, the special correspondent of the "Vossische Zeitung," who is with the German troops on the eastern front, gives a description of the burning of Brest-Litovsk, picturing the scene as one of ghastly and senseless destruction. He says:—

"The entire space between the outer forts and the centre of the town is a waste of ruins upon ruins.

"In the market place I encountered a scene of chaos. The factory district is filled with blackened heaps of masonry and a jumble of debris, in the midst of which crumbling chimneys belched forth smoke and flame.

"The railways tracks were covered with the ruins of demolished cars, while cattle wandered near by. The principal church stood with its blue dome and glittering gold cross destroyed.

"A newspaper despatch from Petrograd says that the evacuation of Vilna is being continued, and the inhabitants are leaving the city in thousands.

"Refugees from the Kovno district who have reached Petrograd tell of their homes having been reduced to smoking ruins by the Russian soldiers.

"The despatches also state that feverish energy is being displayed in the manufacture of munitions. The students of the technical schools have been included in the ranks of the munition workers.

"The question as to whether the Germans intend to advance upon Petrograd, beginning with the seizure of Riga as a naval base, is discussed. It is pointed out that the equipment of the German army operating in Courland indicates preparation for a campaign on an extensive scale."

Russia's Finances

HEAVY BURDEN CAUSED BY WAR

Petrograd, Sept. 1.

The Finance Committee of the Duma has presented a Bill for extending the rights of the State Bank to issue paper money.

The report of the Committee discussed the problem of meeting the war expenditure, stating that the amounts needed are so large that all possible sources of revenue must be used, including taxation, internal credit operations, the issue of paper money and foreign loans.

The report stated that the estimated war expenses came to 7,242 million roubles (9.46 roubles are equal to £1). Other expenses are estimated at 2,847 millions. Revenue from ordinary receipts were estimated at 2,796 millions, while credit operations up to the present have yielded 4,181 millions, leaving over 3,000 million roubles yet to be provided. The Government must prepare the ground for another important loan on foreign markets to pay for material purchased abroad; but in view of the agreement with Russia's allies no doubt was entertained as to success.

The report adds that in the whole financial history of Russia she has never for a moment delayed in paying her creditors.

Regarding the proposed development in the issue of paper the report said that compared with other nations Russia held the greatest gold cover for her paper money, with the possible exception of Britain.

The Minister of Finance in supporting the report of the Committee said that in spite of the exploitation of internal credit to a degree hitherto unprecedented, amounting to more than three million roubles, Russia possesses immense reserves of savings, of which the Government intends soon to make use, increasing the number of savings banks and simplifying and facilitating their use.

1,100,000 Russian Prisoners

SAID TO HAVE BEEN TAKEN IN FOUR MONTHS.

New York, Sept. 1.

Berlin reports that it is officially announced that since the Teuton offensive on the Dunajec river began on May 2 up to the present 1,100,000 Russian prisoners have been captured, their losses in killed and wounded amounting to 300,000 men. Full particulars of the booty taken from the Russians have not yet been published.

MUNITIONS FOR RUSSIA

HEAVY ORDERS PLACED IN THE STATES.

New York, Aug. 28.

The Russians have placed large orders for munitions which have begun to be forwarded.

The factories are working with feverish haste to fill the Russian Government's orders which have been paid on account.

Several vessels are ready to sail for Russian ports as soon as their cargoes are complete.

SUPPLIES FROM JAPAN.

New York, Aug. 28.

Tokio papers, commenting on the sending of great quantities of munitions and war material to Russia, say that they entirely approve of such action, and that the Russians must be helped as much as possible.

As to the proposal to send troops, it is plainly declared that the proposal is fantastic. The Russians do not want unarmed men, and when they get the arms they can organise all the armies they require.

It is certain that the Government has not proposed to send troops which would be completely absurd.

WILL RESIST TO THE LAST

Serbian to Face Army of 700,000

VON DER GOLTZ IN COMMAND

New York, Aug. 31.

Despatches from Nish declare that the Serbians are prepared to resist the Teuton offensive to the last.

The latter will advance with an army of not less than 700,000 men including several divisions of Bavarians.

The Commander-in-Chief will probably be Marshal von der Goltz who will return from Constantinople for the purpose of taking over the command. He will be accompanied by several Austrian princes and Turkish chiefs.

INVASION, OR NO INVASION?

New York, Aug. 31.

The London diplomatic correspondent of the "Evening Mail" says that it would be fulfilling the malicious intentions of the Central Powers to accept the present military demonstration on the frontiers of Serbia and Rumania at its face value. Its purpose, under the most favourable circumstances, must be more political than military. The expense suggested by the German plan to break through Serbia and Bulgaria to Constantinople, even if the attempt proved successful, which is decidedly improbable, would be out of all proportion to the military value of the achievement. Any fresh attack upon Serbia would certainly recreate the Balkan League; and such a contingency as bringing into action against the Teutonic Powers of over a million and a quarter men German diplomacy cannot possibly have contemplated.

It seems most likely, as a trustworthy authority remarked yesterday that the latest military move by the Austro-Germans was intended as a sinister support of the political projects which their agents are assiduously advancing at Sofia, and a further menace against Rumania who is steadfastly rejecting the alternately coercive and conciliatory advances of Germany to obtain the transport of munitions into Turkey.

The Rumanian army would certainly co-operate with the Balkan States in resisting invasion of Serbia; and Bulgaria, with her army of 600,000 men, will render a vigorous account of herself.

Swiss Imports

AGREEMENT WITH THE QUADRUPLE ENTENTE.

Rome, Aug. 31.

It is officially announced that the question at issue between Italy and the Swiss Confederation in regard to the importation into Switzerland of cereals, alcohol and other goods has been settled in a friendly manner.

The Swiss Government admitted that Italy and the other Powers of the Quadruple Entente had good reason for the action they took in prohibiting the despatch to Switzerland of goods which unscrupulous traders sent to Germany or Austria.

The terms of the agreement reached have not been published; but it appears that Switzerland and the Powers of the Entente will jointly proceed to the designation of an international commission which will keep a watch over the manner in which the goods imported into the Swiss Republic are dealt with.

Under these circumstances the Italian Government has taken off the embargo on the exportation into Switzerland of grain, alcohol and drugs.

M. Des Plantes, the Swiss Minister in Rome, has called on the Italian Foreign Minister, Signor Sonnino, to thank him for his valuable assistance in the solution of the problem.

DECIDING CAMPAIGN OF THE WAR

About to Commence in Flanders

TRANSFER OF GERMAN ARMIES FROM POLAND

Turks Driven-back on Gallipoli Peninsula

New York, Sept. 1.

Communications from Berlin state that it is fully expected there that the Germans will take the offensive in the West before the winter sets in.

By that time the General Staff estimates that a large part of the forces of the Empire will have been transferred to the north of France and Flanders.

The operations are to be conducted by the Kaiser in person, and there will be several commanding officers who are at present in Poland and Galicia.

It is stated that troops are already on the way from the East to the French lines.

In German military circles it is fully anticipated that this will be the deciding campaign of the war.

Pegoud Killed

END OF "LOOPING THE LOOP" EXPERT.

Paris, Sept. 1.

It is announced that the famous French aviator Pegoud, who has been serving in the Military Aviation Corps since the commencement of the war, has been killed. No details have yet been given as to the manner in which this well-known aviator came by his death.

(Note—It will be recollected that Pegoud was the first man to appear before the British public in the performance of the sensational feat of "looping the loop" in the air).

ALLIES' MONEY RESOURCES

ENERGETIC MEASURES BY FRANCE AND BRITAIN

Paris, Aug. 27.

M. Ribot has instructed M. M. Octave Homberg and Ernest Vallet to leave for New York as delegates on Monday, to confer, together with the British representatives, on the best means of obtaining French and British credit balances and to stabilise Exchange Rates.

M. Ribot has published a decree requiring travellers leaving France to declare how much coin, over the sum of fifty francs, is in their possession and obliging them to exchange the excess for paper.

At Marseilles a Swiss named Schweitzer, has been arrested on a charge of exporting money to the value of thirty millions to Germany, through Switzerland.

THE BRITISH COMMISSION.

London, Aug. 27.

It is announced that Lord Reading, Sir Henry Babington Smith, and Sir Edward Holden are about to proceed to New York to confer with American bankers on exchange business.

DELIBERATE THEFT

WARSAW BANKERS INTERNED BY GERMAN BRIGANDS

Amsterdam, Sept. 1.

It is reported that thirty bankers of Warsaw who declined to accept promissory notes have been arrested and interned in Germany.

PEACE OR ANNEXATION

REMARKABLE MANIFESTO BY GERMAN SOCIALISTS.

New York, Aug. 28.

Advices from Rotterdam give reports from Berlin that the German Socialists will shortly issue another manifesto declaring that they will give the government all their aid to finish the war, which they consider an indeclinable duty in view of the attitude assumed by the enemies of the Central Empires.

The signatures of the document say that further continuation of the war is solely due to a desire to smash Germany and that a time may come when the German Socialists can no longer oppose the annexation of the territories conquered by the German armies, the only means of lightening for the nation, the damage it has received. They say if peace is made now Germany will annex no territories but, if the war continues, annexations are inevitable.

NO DESIRE FOR PEACE

ALLIES' VICTORY ONLY POSSIBLE SETTLEMENT.

London, Aug. 28.

In this Capital it is believed that all efforts for peace at present are fruitless.

It can only be possible when the Allies have obtained a definite and assured victory.

NO THOUGHT OF PEACE

DETERMINATION OF THE BELLIGERENTS.

New York, Aug. 27.

Communications from The Hague state that for the moment there is no thought of commencing any effort whatever in favour of peace, because it is considered all such effort would be wasted. It appears evident that the belligerents intend to continue the struggle and that all persuasions to suspend hostilities would be in vain.

PESSIMISM IN STOCKHOLM.

Stockholm, Aug. 27.

Considerable pessimism is evidenced concerning the question of peace and the Government is abstaining from any mention of it. The papers also make no reference to peace, probably due to the orders given by the authorities.

"MODELS FOR OTHER COUNTRIES"

GERMANY'S BELIEF IN HER WAR ORGANISATIONS.

New York, Aug. 27.

Berlin reports say that at a meeting of the Budget Committee of the Reichstag, speakers of all parties including the Socialists, heartily acclaimed the achievements of the various war organisations which were, they asserted, models for the imitation of all other countries.

The Disease Spectre

BERLIN RESIDENTS WARNED OF CHOLERA DANGER.

Zurich, Aug. 31.

A telegram from Berlin reports that the Chief of Police of that city has published a proclamation warning the public of the danger of cholera. He states that cases have been discovered on the Oder and Spree rivers, and advises the population to boil the water before using it for drinking purposes.

Journalist Condemned

RUSSIAN NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENT TO BE EXECUTED AS SPY IN VIENNA.

Bucharest, Aug. 31.

It is reported that Dimitri Sancheski, correspondent of the newspaper "Novoe Vremya" of Perograd, has been courtmartialled in Vienna, and found guilty of espionage, being condemned to death by hanging.

Ghent Raided

SUCCESSFUL ATTACK BY ALLIES' AIRMAN.

London, Aug. 31.

A telegram from Rotterdam announces that an aviator from one of the Allied armies raided Ghent and destroyed by means of bombs the aerodrome established by the Germans in the vicinity of the city. A number of German soldiers also were killed and wounded.

German Agent Arrested

ACTION BY EGYPTIAN AUTHORITIES.

New York, Aug. 31.

A telegram from Alexandria reports that the British authorities in Egypt have arrested a German agent named Cumpenberg who has been particularly active in inciting the Arab tribes, especially in Lybia, to rebellion. In his possession were found documents of great importance implicating several members of the Grand Mussulman Committee of Egypt which, during the Italian campaign in Cyrenaica, lent its influence and sent aid of all kinds to the Senussi of Kufra, Italy's enemy.

Another "Scrap of Paper"

GERMANY'S VIEW OF THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

London, Aug. 31.

A despatch from New York to the "Daily Telegraph" says that according to the Press of the Southern States of America, those States favour the Allies. One of the leading papers declares that if by any chance Germany were to prove the victor in the present fray, the United States would be attacked before five years were over, and that as Germany has so strong a footing in South America, the Monroe Doctrine would be regarded and treated as a "scrap of paper."

POLAR PAINTER DEAD

New York, Sept. 1.

A telegram from Vienna announces the death of the celebrated Hungarian Polar explorer and painter, Julius Payer.

Turks Reinforced

FOR STRUGGLE AGAINST THE ALLIES.

London, Sept. 1.

Despatches from Athens state that the Turkish forces on Gallipoli peninsula have been strengthened by the incorporation of contingents of reservists. Various regiments have been despatched from Constantinople; and now that good relations have been established with Bulgaria it is probable that the troops garrisoning Adrianople will also be sent to the peninsula.

TURKS RETIRE

ALLIES' OFFENSIVE ON GALLIPOLI PENINSULA.

New York, Sept. 1.

A telegram from Tenedos announces that the Allies have renewed the offensive, attacking the enemy at various points.

The Turks have retired slightly.

JAPANESE AID

POSSIBILITY OF ITS USE IN THE DARDANELLES.

Paris, Sept. 1.

The "Petit Parisien" publishes a telegram from its correspondent at Rome containing the gist of an interview with the Japanese Ambassador at Rome, M. Hayashi, whence it appears that Japan may co-operate with the Anglo-French troops in the Dardanelles.

The correspondent however says that the Ambassador declared that he was not in a position to say much about the movements of the Japanese troops. Discussing the part played by Japan in the war, the Ambassador said:—

"We have not ceased to collaborate with our Allies to the extent assigned to us. The world will be astonished when it knows what we have done, are doing and are willing to do."

"The Russians are nearest to us and we can be most useful to them; but you may rest assured that the greatest desire of Japan is to assist in every way the sacred cause of civilisation."

THE HOLY WAR

ASSIDUOUSLY PREACHED IN TERRITORIES OF QUADRUPLE ENTENTE.

New York, Aug. 26.

Information from various sources states that in consequence of orders from Constantinople the Ulemas are preaching a Jihad in all the territories occupied by Powers of the Quadruple Entente.

These activities are specially noticeable in Lybia and in Egypt. Orders, money and threats have been sent by the Turkish Government under the influence of Enver Pasha who hopes good results and that the Allies will have to send troops to their African possessions to quell the insurrections.

Reports of the attitude of the chief of the Senoussis are conflicting, but telegrams from all sources agree that the Holy War propaganda is not making proselytes and the isolated risings are being crushed by the measures adopted by Britain, France and Italy.

BLOCKADING THE TURKS

FRENCH OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Paris, Aug. 27.

"Le Journal Officiel" publishes the declaration of a blockade of the entire coasts of Asia Minor and Syria from the Isle of Samos to the Egyptian frontier. The blockade has now been made effective.

GERMAN ULTIMATUM TO RUMANIA

Again Alleged to have been Despatched

BALKAN PROBLEM STILL OCCUPIES EUROPEAN DIPLOMATS.

ROME, SEPT. 1.

THE "GIORNALE D'ITALIA" PUBLISHES A TELEGRAM FROM ITS CORRESPONDENT IN SOFIA DECLARING THAT AN AUSTRO-GERMAN ULTIMATUM DEMANDING PASSAGE FOR MUNITIONS TO TURKEY HAS BEEN PRESENTED TO THE GOVERNMENT OF RUMANIA.

BULGARIA'S BARGAIN

Turks Evacuating Ceded Territory

TREATY NOT YET CONFIRMED FROM BULGARIA SOURCES

London, Sept. 1.

Advices from Turkish and German sources declare that a Bulgarian agreement with Turkey has been secretly concluded.

A belated despatch from Sofia to the "Morning Post" dated Saturday, says that according to information from Adrianople the Turks are preparing for the evacuation of the territory ceded to Bulgaria, demolishing the forts on the right bank of the Maritza and pulling down the doors and windows of the barracks at Karagatch. The Bulgarian occupation of the territory ceded will follow soon.

Serbia Gives Way

RUMOURED CONCESSION TO BULGARIA.

Paris, Sept. 1.

"Le Matin" publishes a telegram from Athens which announces that the Serbian Government has informed Greece of its intention to accept the proposals of the Quadruple Entente in regard to concessions to be made to Bulgaria.

FAMINE IN TURKEY

Sofia, Aug. 26.

Well founded reports show that famine is making fearful ravages in Turkey. Some regions are utterly desolated and the inhabitants are fleeing in crowds to seek sustenance in other districts.

The excessive military demands have produced so great a labour shortage in agriculture that there is scarcity of produce in Constantinople itself.

The situation grows worse as the Russians entirely command the Black Sea and have cut off all supplies of provisions and fuel.

FLIGHT FROM THE TURKS

New York, Aug. 27.

The Navy Department announces that the cruiser Chester has sailed from Beirut with 540 refugees who have fled from different parts of Palestine.

Essad Pasha Defeated

New York, Sept. 1.

A telegram from Athens reports that an engagement has been fought in Albania between the Mirdite tribe and the Turkish troops commanded by Essad Pasha. The encounter, which took place at no great distance from Scutari, resulted in the Pasha's troops being all killed or taken prisoners by the Mirdites. The fate of Essad Pasha is unknown.

The news was transmitted from Scutari to the commander of the Italian forces occupying Valona.

NEARING A SOLUTION

BALKAN MINISTERS VISIT BRITISH FOREIGN OFFICE.

London, Sept. 1.

It is expected here that the diplomatic representative of the Powers forming the Quadruple Entente will soon be able to show success for their work in the Balkans.

A call at the Foreign Office to-day by the Bulgarian Minister was followed by visits from the Ambassadors of the Entente and the Serbian Minister.

DISAGREEMENT IN THE CABINET.

Paris, Sept. 1.

A telegram from Sofia reports that the members of the Bulgarian Cabinet have failed to come to an agreement as to the reply to be given to the proposals of the Quadruple Entente.

KAISER'S KULTURED ALLY

MASSACRES THOUSANDS OF ARMENIANS

Rome, Aug. 26.

All the dailies comment extensively on the news of massacres of thousands of Armenians now taking place in Turkey.

The Catholic organs are horrified at the new phase of anti-Christian persecutions and that the Papal Chancery is soliciting the good offices of the United States that it will interpose its influence to save the unfortunate Armenian populations.

Italy's Secret

NO INFORMATION AS TO OPERATIONS AGAINST TURKEY.

Rome, Aug. 31.

The military authorities preserve an impenetrable silence as to the operations to be entered upon against Turkey. The news as to the landing of Italian troops in the territory of Smyrna and of the movements of Italian squadrons in the Aegean must be accepted as mere rumours.

That energetic action will be taken by Italy against Turkey is beyond doubt; but when and at what point the demonstration is to be made is at present a secret.

5,000 Turks Captured

RUSSIAN VICTORY IN THE CAUCASUS.

Petrograd, Aug. 31.

It is officially announced that in the recent fighting in the Caucasus the Russians captured 5,000 Turkish soldiers and 84 officers with twelve guns and large quantities of war material.

TWELVE TURKISH GUNS TAKEN.

Petrograd, Aug. 31.

An official despatch issued to-day reports:—

"Along the entire front in the Caucasus there have been only minor engagements and changes.

"During the recent fighting up to August 22 we made prisoners 84 officers and 5000 men, while our cavalry pursuing the Turks on the roads to Boutak sabred over 2000 of them. We also captured 12 guns and a quantity of material."

TURKISH VESSELS SUNK

Petrograd, Aug. 27.

An official report from the Caucasus coastal region states that

"On Wednesday our scouts crossed the Arkhave River and destroyed a Turkish blockhouse, by attacking it with hand grenades. One of our motor boats, accompanied by a torpedo boat, sank two sailing vessels with their cargoes.

The Track of the Hun

WILFUL DESTRUCTION BY RETREATING AUSTRIANS.

Rome, Sept. 1.

The Austrians are treating the towns that they evacuate in such a manner as to show that they have not the slightest hope of recovering them.

At Pieve Livinallongo the Austrians bombarded the hospital where the women, children and aged had taken refuge and killed many of them.

In the Sugana valley the Italian troops purposely did not occupy a village abandoned by the Austrians in order that it might escape bombardment; nevertheless the Austrians dropped about a hundred shells on to it.

At the present moment Piezzo is paying the penalty for the occupation by the Italians of the surrounding heights although they have not entered the town.

CHIVALROUS FRANCE

ORDERS M. GILBERT TO RETURN TO INTERNMENT.

Lausanne, Aug. 30.

The "Nouvelle Gazette" of Zurich pays a tribute to the spirit of justice of the French Government which has instructed Lieut. aviator Gilbert to return to his internment in Switzerland, whence he had escaped. This had produced the best impression. The Swiss Ministry has formally thanked M. Millerand for the French Government's courteous and chivalrous action.

Carpentier Injured

MISHAP TO FRENCH BOXER-AIRMAN.

Paris, Aug. 31.

The champion heavy-weight boxer, Carpentier, who is serving as military aviator met with a slight accident on alighting recently, but will soon be able to return to the front.

READY FOR WINTER

ITALY'S STEADY PREPARATION

AUSTRIANS WELL HELD

New York, Sept. 1.

The correspondent of the "Evening Sun" telegraphs from Rome that a high official said to him:—

"We hold every important peak dominating the Adige valley section. The Germans might throw half a million men down the valley, but we could hold them off with ease for months.

"Besides, winter is approaching, and by December military operations in the Alps will be out of the question. Before the spring England, France and Russia will be keeping the Austro-Germans busy elsewhere.

"Weeks ago the Government contracted for large supplies of wool, and every weaving and knitting factory in Italy is now engaged in turning out heavy clothes for the winter campaign, extra heavy garments being made for the troops in the Alps on the Trentino frontier.

"On the highest peaks structures are being built in the shelter of the rocks and heavily provisioned, the War Office anticipating that many positions on the summits will be shut off from the outside world by heavy snows."

ITALIAN ADVANCE

HUNGARIANS EVACUATE PREDIL

Rome, Sept. 1.

A despatch from the front announces that the Hungarian military authorities are evacuating Predil and transferring their quarters to Brascho in view of the Italian advance in that region.

Italian Aerial Activity

AUSTRIAN STRONGHOLDS BOMBARDED.

London, Sept. 1.

The Milan correspondent of the "Daily Chronicle" states that the Italian aviators are displaying remarkable activity, ascending from stations established on Lake Garda.

A flotilla of hydroplanes subjected the Austrian stronghold at Riva, at the upper end of the lake, to a devastating hail of bombs, while another flotilla of aeroplanes on the Isonzo paid a third visit to the enemy's extensive aviation headquarters at Aisovizza, completing the havoc already wrought there. The Italian airmen rained 120 large bombs upon the camp crumpling up the principal aircraft sheds, setting afire the benzine depots and destroying all accommodation for the machines.

The aerial crews returned to their base unscathed despite the heavy firing to which they were subjected.

In addition to this, the Italian aviators bombarded the besieged city of Roveretta to such effect that they forced the Austrian garrison and the civilian population to abandon the town.

ITALY'S ARMY

STRONGLY REINFORCED BY RESERVISTS.

Rome, August 27.

Information which is arriving from the Provinces states that in all military districts the operations of incorporating new contingents of troops from the various classes of reservists is proceeding with great activity and perfect regularity. All those who are presenting themselves for service are doing so with the greatest enthusiasm. With the incorporation of these new elements the army staff will be in a position to send reinforcements at any time to all parts that they may be required.

KITCHENER'S ARMY MORE DIVISIONS FOR FRANCE

London, Aug. 26.

Mr. Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions, has declared that the British army which is now being actually organised will be of a numerical strength and power unprecedented hitherto.

He says that Britain has put forth great efforts to provide such an army as circumstances demand and in a very short time the success achieved by the Minister of War in that gigantic task will be evident.

NEW DIVISIONS FOR FRANCE.

London, August 26.

Mr. Lloyd George's speech has been received with enthusiasm in all circles as setting forth the potentialities of the British army now in training.

It is stated that many new divisions perfectly organised, disciplined, trained, and equipped under thoroughly competent officers will leave for France very shortly.

62 FRENCH AIRMEN RAID GERMAN SHELL FACTORY.

Paris, Aug. 26.

An official report says:

"A lively exchange of artillery fire took place last night, also fighting with grenades and bombs in the Artois district in the vicinity of Souchez and Neuville.

"Around Roye the enemy's artillery and our own were very active yesterday in the Argonne.

"At Laflillemoate yesterday there was severe hand-to-hand and bomb fighting, but nothing important from the remainder of the front.

"During the day a French aviator threw bombs on the railway station at Offenburg, seventeen miles from Karlsruhe. There is an important railway junction at this point of the Grand Duchy.

On August 25 a squadron of four groups, or in all sixty-two aviators, flew over the heights of Dillingen, where is an important shell and armour plate factory. It lies north of Saarlories in Rhenish Prussia, thirty miles S.E. of Treves. They dropped with great precision over one hundred and fifty bombs of large size.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF ALL FACTORIES FOR MANUFACTURE OF WAR MATERIAL.

London, Aug. 27.

A Royal decree is published placing all private factories at present in use for the manufacture of army and war material, under Government authority.

Mr. Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions has full powers to act as he thinks best and to organise the means of production until projectiles are accumulated in such quantity that no possibility of shortage need be feared.

APPROVAL OF THE PRESS

London, Aug. 27.

The Press publishes and applauds the Royal Order, placing all factories of munitions under State control throughout the war and authorising the Minister of Munitions to organise production.

All the papers declare that these means will produce excellent results.

ASQUITH'S DIFFICULT TASK

London, Aug. 27.

The question of Nationalisation of the Mines is the subject of comment everywhere in the Cabinet.

It is believed that Mr. Asquith is firmly convinced of the necessity for the reform, but he will encounter intense opposition in many quarters.

FIGHTING GAS BY FIRE SIR HIRIM MAXIM'S UNIQUE DISCOVERY

London, Aug. 29.

By means of an invention of Sir Hiram Maxim, the British army is arranging to fight the German gas attacks by fire. The inventor in explanation says:—

"German gas of one atmosphere pressure is two and a half times as heavy as air. On escaping into air it quickly becomes mixed with it so that when it reaches the trenches it is less than one per cent. heavier than the surrounding air.

"That is extremely light but quite strong enough to prove fatal in most cases as we find that air with one-thousandth part of chlorine is capable of harm.

"It occurred to me months ago that if fire could be produced between our trenches and the gas, the rapid upward movement would take the chlorine along with it, and it proved quite true.

"The bombs I made were thrown by hand, but I found that to throw any distance they must be quite small and could not be thrown as far as I wished. I delivered 100 to the Government for experimental purposes. A few were tested and it was found the effect of the fire would be greater farther away. They were therefore designed in a simpler and larger form.

"My firm has designed a machine throwing them with great accuracy to a distance of 300 yards, which will be quite far enough. By this means, a fire of any size can be produced, and if the fire be large enough the gas must be dissipated; it cannot be otherwise.

"The first bombs designed involved the use of petrol, but the consumption would be so large that it might produce a shortage. We have therefore found by experiment another liquid which does just as well, costs only half and is unlimited in supply."

GERMANS COURT - MARTIALLED

INDIGNANT PROTESTS AGAINST HAND-CUFFS.

London, Aug. 28.

Trial by Court Martial at Chester is reported of three German officers who escaped from Duffryn camp on August 14.

They indignantly protested against being handcuffed when captured and passed in view of their comrades, of British soldiers and civilians. This was degrading to a German and should only be done to criminals. The escaped prisoner of an enemy country who wished to rejoin his army was not a criminal.

The Tribunal made no reply to or comment on these protests and judgment was deferred.

NEW ZEALAND'S BUBGET

50 PER CENT SUPERTAX ON ENEMY'S GOODS.

Wellington, N. Z., Aug. 27.

In introducing the Budget of the New Zealand Government, the Minister of Finance has announced to Parliament the proposal of a super-tax of fifty per cent to be in future imposed on all goods, imported from the countries hostile to the British Empire.

LIEUT. ROTHSCHILD WOUNDED

London, Aug. 26.

From Tenedos it is reported that Lieutenant Anthony Rothschild, son of Baron Leopold de Rothschild, has been seriously wounded in the fighting at the Dardanelles.

GERMAN "TRUTH"

SIR EDWARD GREY REFUTES STORY OF ANGLO-BELGIAN AGREEMENT.

London, Aug. 26.

All the Press publish a circular by the Foreign Minister, Sir Edward Grey, in which he flatly contradicts the German Chancellor's assertions respecting a secret agreement between Britain and Belgium.

Referring also to documents published in Germany on an alleged conversation with a British Military Attaché, Sir Edward Grey says that no such matter is known to the British Government nor is there any knowledge of it either at the War Office or Foreign Office.

The German publication was the first notice of the affair which the British Government has had.

He adds emphatically that no Convention nor agreement existed between the British and Belgian Governments.

BRITAIN'S GIFT TO ITALY

25 AMBULANCES SENT TO THE FIGHTING LINE

Rome, Aug. 30.

The arrival of 25 ambulances sent as a gift from Britain and a sign of sympathy and friendship to the Italian Army, has given occasion to a great Italo-Anglo manifestation in which the military and civil authorities, the local authorities and an enormous crowd of people, took part. The British officers in charge were greatly pleased that Signor Nathan, late Mayor of Rome, now an officer of volunteers, was sent to Modane to meet the ambulances.

These will at once be sent up for use to the fighting line.

ALLIES' AIR RAID

150 AVIATORS VISIT GERMAN TERRITORY.

Paris, Aug. 27.

Confirmation is forthcoming that 150 French, Belgian and British aviator last night made a flight over the six railway stations and the factories of the towns of Ianbausan, Essey, Divoir, Nornach and Mulhouse, and dropped numerous bombs. The damage done is stated to be of great importance. A number of officers and soldiers were killed and wounded.

CAUSES GRATIFICATION IN PARIS.

Paris, Aug. 27.

A most excellent impression has been caused in all circles on receipt of the news of the raid made by the allied aviators over the cities in the Grand Duchy of Baden. Information concerning it is yet fragmentary but the enemy are known to have suffered heavy losses.

TRANQUIL SOUTH AFRICA

MANY OF BOTHA'S TROOPS GRANTED LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

London, Aug. 30.

Reports from Capetown state that the South African situation is again quite normal.

General Botha has given leave of absence to many of the troops whom it is not necessary to maintain on a war footing, as the enemy is quite broken and can by no means gather any force capable of taking the field.

AN ANXIOUS ADMIRALTY

BRITISH SUBMARINES IN THE BALTIC.

Copenhagen, Aug. 26.

The increasing number of British submarines which have found their way into the Baltic and their daring has caused considerable anxiety to the German Admiralty. Trawlers are being equipped with guns for protection.

WAVE OF PATRIOTISM

SWEEPS ASSEMBLY OF NOTABLES IN RUSSIA.

Petrograd, Aug. 30.

An assembly of notables and important persons is notified from Moscow, where they have assembled to discuss the future and the state of the country. A strong feeling of patriotism pervaded the meeting, and speeches were made in praise of the Tsar, the army and the Cabinet.

It was unanimously resolved that the war must continue till the last extremity, in accord with the engagement made with the Allies, and that all propositions of peace from the central Empires must be rejected.

It is added that the act was of remarkable importance, in view of the strong representation of the Russian nobility. A great crowd surrounded the meeting hall and widely cheered the delegates as they entered and left the building.

FLIGHT FROM POLAND

"PERSECUTED" PEOPLE'S FEAR OF GERMAN RULE.

London, Aug. 27.

Despatches from Petrograd say that quite four and a half million of Poles have fled from their homes in the region occupied by Germans. They are travelling East intending to seek refuge behind the Russian lines. Interminable processions of old men, women and children are traversing the plains east of the Vistula, following the march of the army in order to escape the terrors of German rule. These poor people have lost all that they possessed and their plight is pitiable and terrible in the extreme. Many have fled to the forests and deaths from hunger are numerous as the whole country has been laid waste.

It is added that the Germans are making great efforts to prevent the exodus of the Poles, making all manner of promises but the people prefer the miseries of flight and are following the armies of the Czar. It is believed that the Germans will issue ordinances similar to those which they have enforced in Belgium to prevent the flight of the natives.

RUSSIA'S CROPS

ABOVE AVERAGE OF LAST FIFTEEN YEARS.

London, Aug. 30.

The "Daily Mail" Petrograd correspondent quotes the Minister of Agriculture as stating that, not only are crops better than in 1914, but greatly above the average of the last fifteen years.

The total yield is estimated at two billion bushels of which 571 millions are wheat. In the fifteen years before 1914 the average was only 478 millions. Only in the regions of Vilna and Grodno, largely occupied by the Germans, are the crops deficient. Siberian crops are below average but the abundance of East and Southern Russia offset the deficiency.

RUSSIA'S DEJERMINATION

Petrograd, Aug. 26.

During the visit of Mons. Jean Cruppi His Majesty the Czar conversed with him for some time, assuring him: "France may count on my unconquerable determination to fight until we obtain a definite victory."

INTERCESSION SERVICES

ORDERED IN RUSSIA.

Petrograd, Aug. 27.

The Holy Synod has fixed a period of three days, beginning on September 8, as a time of National Prayer and Intercession. Consequently the Minister of Interior publishes a notice requesting that people will during that time forbear entertainments, the playing of music, festivals or banquets, although ordinary business or work may go on as usual.

OVER SUBSCRIBED!

Aeroplane "River Plate" Fund

ANGLO-ARGENTINES' GIFT TO BRITAIN

END OF A MONTH'S CAMPAIGN

Funds sufficient to purchase the River Plate Aeroplane have now been raised. The amount has already been over-subscribed; moreover, there is still more to come as many subscription lists are outstanding.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. PRUDEN.

The news of the successful conclusion of the campaign was first conveyed by Mr. A. G. Pruden, chairman of the British Society, to THE HERALD. "We have raised the amount necessary for the purchase of the aeroplane," he said, "and the fund is now oversubscribed by about four hundred dollars.

"Thank the British community on behalf of the British Society and say that we are more than grateful to them for the splendid result achieved.

"As you know, only one month has elapsed since the appeal was issued, and the response has been excellent."

On being asked what the Society intended to do with the surplus, and whether or not it was intended to purchase a second craft, Mr. Pruden intimated that nothing had been settled. "Give us time to cool down," he remarked, "we have had an exciting time to-day."

In conclusion, Mr. Pruden added, "We think the reason for the spontaneity with which the innovation has been supported has been due to the nature of the appeal. This aeroplane gives every subscriber a personal interest in the Great War. Each one can, and probably does, feel that this is a direct blow at the enemy."

How exciting a time the officials of the British Society had during the "last lap" may be gauged from the fact that contributions in large and small amounts were being received in the British Society's offices from early in the morning until six o'clock at night, with scarcely a moment's pause.

At five o'clock there was a shortage of some $800, but this sum was more than realised during the next half-hour.

By six o'clock the fund had been over subscribed by $400!

The result is very gratifying; all the more gratifying by reason of the fact that there has been no delay in raising the amount required. British subjects from all parts of the country have responded splendidly, and several, when handing in their donations, have expressed their willingness to give again if further help was needed. But such additional help was not required. When so many take part the burden is lightened and it is calculated that 1500 to 2000 British residents in Argentina have contributed something.

The first appeal was published on Aug. 2, and yesterday, Sept. 1, a record in the number of donations was established.

The British Patriotic Fund, Montevideo, Aug. 24, 1915. Captain Marshall R.N.

H.M.S. Edinburgh Castle, Dear Sir,—On behalf of the above Society and Mr. Marston of Rosario de Santa Fé, we are forwarding you the following for distribution amongst the ship's company, and we trust you will accept the gift as a mark of our appreciation:—

800 lbs. cabbages, 50 lbs. tomatoes, 50 endive, 300 lettuces, 43 celery, 50 bunches radishes.

Wishing you success, we remain, yours very truly,

(Signed) E. M. MOOR. For the British Patriotic Fund,

H.M.S. Edinburgh Castle. Aug. 24, 1915.

E. M. Moor, Esq., Dear Sir,—Will you kindly express to the members of the British Patriotic Fund and to Mr. Marston our great gratitude for their kindness in sending off this magnificent gift of vegetables for the ship's company.

I need not tell you how welcome such a gift is to men who have been on shore once in the last nine months.

With very many thanks for your kind wishes, believe me, yours very truly, (Signed) J. B. MARSHALL, Captain R.N.

THE TRANSANDINE ROUTE

SNOWSTORMS RENEWED.

It had been hoped that with the approach of milder weather, rail communication with Chile could have been resumed by the clearing of the snow-blocked lines, which have been impassable for about three months. Unfortunately a renewed fury of snowfall has necessitated the suspension of the work of removing the snow, and for the present nullified the efforts of the working gangs.

On the other side of the Cordilleras, it is understood that at least 39 kilometres of the permanent way are snow buried, and much of the rest of the line requires careful examination and repair.

Even though the Argentine portion of the international route be speedily in running order, conditions on the other side of the Andes are likely to make rail communication a matter of some weeks distant yet.

Mainly About People

Mr. Ernest Gibson returned to Buenos Aires from England this week. Messrs. Mullally and daughters leave to-morrow for Trelew on the s.s. Argentino.

The engagement is announced of Miss Jeanie Sinclair, of quinta "San José," Quilmes, to Mr. Roland J. Buck, of Horsham, Sussex.

Mr. J. F. A. McKittrick has forwarded a parcel of literature to "The Herald" for the use of the sailors of the Fleet.

Mr. Middlebrook, Manager of the Frigorifico La Blanca, and Mrs. Middlebrook returned to Buenos Aires by the s.s. Vestris after a visit to the United States.

Mrs. C. R. Tobitt, Master Leslie Tobitt and Miss Mabel Tobitt are among the saloon passengers due to arrive by the Nelson liner Highland Rover to-morrow.

Mr. M. M. Venter, of Comodoro Rivadavia, intends returning South at the end of the present month, after a residence of some weeks in Buenos Aires.

Mr. M. Roberts of the Mission Evangelica San Fernando, F.C.C.A., desires it to be known that he can be found at that address and will always be glad to be of service to any Welsh friends.

The wedding is to take place on September 8 in Buenos Aires of Miss M. Arnoll, who is at present staying in Villa Mercedes, and Mr. C. A. Mason, of the engineers department of the Pacific Railway. Mr. Mason leaves here on Tuesday night for Buenos Aires.

Col. W. B. Palmer states that the Salvation Army Territorial Congress will take place in Buenos Aires from October 14 to 20 inclusive. The hall of the Society "Margherita di Savoia," in Salle Independencia 2540, has been secured for the Sunday night meeting, Oct. 17, and the Prince George's Hall for the Wednesday night meeting, Oct. 20.

DAY BY DAY IN BAHIA BLANCA

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 29.

Mr. Hurst, of the firm of Messrs. Dreyfus and Co., left here on Friday night for Buenos Aires in order to leave by the Corinthic for England, where, if he is passed by the doctor, he will volunteer for active service.

Two other volunteers are leaving during the coming week. Mr. T. B. Rac goes up to Buenos Aires on Monday night en route for England, and Mr. Foot, of the Pacific Railway, is departing with his family on Tuesday.

Mr. Migotti left here for Buenos Aires on Saturday morning.

Mr. P. Hardcastle has been down here for a few days on business and left again on Friday night by the Pringles train.

DAY BY DAY IN CORDOBA.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 23.

Miss Doris Robinson expects to leave Cordoba during the present week for a holiday in Buenos Aires.

Mr. Arthur S. Gibbs, representative of the Argentine Tobacco Company, of London, England, spent several days in this city last week.

The news from the Cordoba hills of the death of Mr. Jack Nellid has been received here with the deepest regret by the many friends of the deceased.

Mr. McDonald, from Devoto, Buenos Aires, was a visitor in town last week.

Mr. Roland Hunt, from Buenos Aires, spent a day in Cordoba the past week, on his way to the Capital.

The banquet given to Mr. E. W. Marks in celebration of his coming marriage with Miss Minnie O'Farrell took place at the Hotel Roma on Saturday night. The following invited guests were present: — Messrs. A. Ancherlone, Harry McCulloch, Jas. O'Connor, Walter Williams, Antonio Centanaro, E. Luna, N. Cuello, J. Bernardi, Severo Denes, A. Martinez Diaz, J. M. Garcia, E. Garcia, V. Vergara, R. G. Barbosa, J. Campesi, S. Cuso, H. Della Porta, and Rodolfo Valdez.

The Rev. and Mrs. Sugden, who arrived in town last week, have left for Tucuman, where church services will be held. The Rev. Sugden will conduct the services at the English Church hall on Sunday, September 5.

The next knock-out tennis tournament at the Cordoba Athletic Club will take place during the month of September.

The many friends of Mr. Jack Perkins are pleased to see him back in town once more.

Mrs. Kenneth Struthers expects to spend the next three months at Alta Gracia.

Mr. V. R. Sadleir, who has been absent from town some days on a business trip to the Capital, returned to town on Saturday last.

A "kitchen tea" was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Sadleir in San Vicente, in honour of Miss Minnie O'Farrell, who is to marry on August 28. Among those present were Mrs. G. E. Morton, Miss Florence Morton, Mrs. L. G. Babb, Mrs. Boyd, Mrs. Struthers, Mrs. George Lang, Miss Mayne and Miss Phyllis Symonds.

Mr. Norman was a visitor in town from Pilar on Tuesday.

Y.W.C.A.

A JOINT SOCIAL.

Wednesday, Sept. 1.

Last evening the Young Woman's Christian Association extended their hospitality once again to their brother association, and a most enjoyable evening resulted.

After a long absence Miss Shepherd was the conductress of the proceedings and as she expressed herself at the close of the musical programme, as surprised at the social progress made and the pleasure it gave her to be able to thank the persons who had given their aid, if she had only known of the many pleasant social evenings arranged by the Association during her absence, she would have understood, as did all present, what progress had been made and what pleasurable evenings had been jointly spent by the Y.W.C.A. and the Y.M.C.A.

Last night commenced with a light and voluntary musical programme at which Miss Mier and Miss Kenworthy opened the proceedings with a piano-forte duet and a very necessary encore. Mrs. Chantrell sang a song and was requested to sing another which she did and then Mr. Adderley told a fishing story entitled "The Sandwiches" or perhaps better the sand which was not.

Two songs "The Little Grey Home in the West" and "Rose in the Garden" by Mr. Hazleton concluded the first and musical part of the programme. Afterwards followed games in which all joined and plenty of amusement was caused by the varying humours of these. The result was very much as usual, that all and sundry voted the evening a pleasant one, perhaps even more pleasant than its predecessor.

MENDOZA NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 27.

Red Cross Dance.

A successful dance was recently held in the Gran Hotel, Mendoza, the organizers being Mrs. Burrows, Miss Mayne and the Misses Pettygreave. Among the British community diverging views existed as to whether it was quite legitimate to arrange for pleasures of the nature of a dance in time of war, but the ladies persisted in their endeavours and ultimately succeeded in surmounting all opposition, the results being most gratifying and far in excess of all expectations. The product reached the handsome sum of $700 which will be remitted to the British Red Cross Society for the relief of the needy. The attendance at the function numbered 100, many well-known Argentine families assisting.

Engagement.

The engagement of Miss Nellie Henderson of London, to Mr. Jack Last has just been announced.

Departure of English Volunteers.

Messrs. Wilfred Vignoles and Leslie Williams took their departure from Mendoza yesterday to volunteer for active service at the front. They will proceed to England by the steamer Highland Piper. To-day Mr. J. Last leaves for home; he will join the Flying Corps.

Obituary.

The news of the sudden death of Mr. James Noakes, which occurred on the night of August 20, in the San Antonio Hospital, was received with pained surprise. Mr. Noakes had resided in Mendoza for a number of years and his loss is mourned by a large circle of friends. The funeral was largely attended.

News in Brief.

Visitors: Among the visitors to Mendoza during the past eight days may be mentioned Mr. W. H. Orr and Mr. J. L. Brown, both from Buenos Aires.

Departures: Mrs. Webster accompanied by Miss Henderson, leave for the Federal Capital to-day for a week's holiday.

English Church, Calle Perú.

The committee advise that the Rev. Cyril Moore, the Camp Chaplain at Junin, will visit Mendoza early in September and that the usual services will be held in the Church Hall on September 5.

CONCORDIA NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 24.

Weather.

Rain fell heavily on Saturday and as it has been very badly wanted it was most acceptable. Everything now has a brighter side and the entry of Spring does not appear to be far off.

Football.

To say that there has been a football season in Concordia would be flattery. Matches have been played but in a number of cases players failed to turned up. The fact is there has been no league this year due to the disappearance of the League Cup (at the hands of a member of the Committee, so it is reported). Little or nothing has been done to regain possession of the Cup. A strong supporter of the game has said that next year things will be on a different basis as some influential gentlemen in the town are taking the matter in hand. There is plenty of sound material in Concordia and good games have been given to visiting teams from Buenos Aires. The Salto (R.O.) men have done better this year. Whenever they have visited Concordia they have taken the points and generally show superiority, plainly

SEAMAN'S MISSION

Wednesday, Sept. 1

Why there were not more persons present at the excellent concert given at the Seaman's Mission last evening, it is impossible to say, but the enthusiasm of the audience for the excellent programme—each and every individual item—provided by Miss Emily Lett who arranged the evening, was quite beyond all question.

When such amateur talent comes forward, as Mr. Ellis Griffen, Mr. Morrey Jones and Mr. Huppler a concert of no mean calibre can be expected and such was the case last night.

What small breakdown there might have been in the arrangements owing to colds and illness were responded to in a most generous manner by Miss Dorothy Stuart Small and Mr. Brady, while last but not least came Master von Wassener from San Isidro.

The only lady on the programme was Miss Small, who strictly against all orders was generous enough to come forward and delight her audience with her piano solos from Chopin and her songs, light and dainty productions of an eastern character, which thoroughly pleased her bearers. Naturally she was encored and therefore pleased the more. Both her last two songs were strangers and quaint and so were all the more entertaining.

Mr. Morrey Jones was great on his banjo and whether more appreciated with his songs it would be impossible to say.

Mr. Ellis Griffen was just as inimitable as ever which can be summoned up in the word splendid with a capital S. Mr. Brady was in better voice than for some time and was enthusiastically encored and little Master Van Wassener was a surprise to many who have not had the good fortune to visit San Isidro concerts.

It was in general a good concert and a jolly one and Miss Lett and Miss Small deserve every congratulation for what they did. Everyone knows the capacity of Mr. Huppler as an accompanist and to him much of the general success was due.

The programme was as follows:—

Pianoforte solo: Mr. Huppler.

Song: "Somewhere a Voice is Calling" Rev. H. W. Brady; encore: "Sincerely."

Banjo solo: Rev. Morrey Jones.

Song: "Happy Land," "A Naughty Little Twinkle in her Eye," Mr. Ellis Griffen.

Song: "Here's a Health unto His Majesty," "Johnny Ludlow," Rev. Morrey Jones.

Dance: "The Hornpipe," encored, Master Van Wassener.

Part II.

Song: "Jack Briton," "Up from Somerset," Rev. H. W. Brady.

Songs: "Accidents," "That's all," Mr. Ellis Griffen.

Song: "Dumblie Dum Derrick," "Mountain o Morn," Rev. Morrey Jones.

Miss Stuart Small sang a Japanese song and a recitation from light opera as the concluding item of the programme.

proving that the friendly matches to which the Concordia Clubs have been accustomed to this year have not improved their play.

Langosta.

Last week end a large "manga" of langosta reached Concordia, settling in the northern part of the town, where much damage has been caused. Strange to say the southern part has scarcely been affected. The "chacareros" feel the visit more than any one and are selling off as much as they can their vegetables in order not to lose the whole profit on their season's work. Plenty of work has been done to destroy the pest but although a large number of dead is recorded the damage caused to trees, vegetables, etc. would make one believe that it is not worth while to kill any.

FIGHTING CONSUMPTION

The Need for Sanatoria

BRITISH COMMUNITY'S DUTY

A Correspondent writes:

In a recent issue of your paper, statistics were given regarding the alarming increase of tuberculosis in the City of Cordoba, whilst in your publication of 24th August, a long and interesting article appears under the above heading. The writer wisely remarks that Governments can do little to combat the White Scourge without the energetic support of individuals and the intelligent co-operation of the masses, but before either can be looked for, it rests with the few to dispel the apathy with which the majority regard the fight being waged. Ignorance accounts largely for the indifference of attitude, for so little cognizant is the man in the street of the ravages effected by tuberculosis that, even at this hour of the day, he will ask when the subject is brought up "And what is tuberculosis—and why all this talk about it?" In Europe, for some years past, the battle with consumption has been fiercely fought, but in Argentine the "powers that be" are only awaking to the fact that here, too, more energetic steps are necessary to combat the spread of the disease, and it is the duty of every resident in the country to loyally support any measures the Government may adopt towards that end.

Your contributor points out that it ought to be feasible for the British community to draft out a workable scheme for a "suitably planned and staffed sanatorium, available for both sexes, limited to those in the earliest stage of the disease, capably managed and financially endowed in such way as to enable the patients to have the best attention and food at a minimum cost," and who with a knowledge of conditions prevailing in the Hills of Cordoba will deny that such a place is urgently needed, not only for sick but to safeguard the healthy and stay the spread of the disease? Individual effort has lately brought into existence a small Home for a maximum number of six people, and it is hoped that it will do service until the British community awakes to its responsibilities—with anticipated better times. Through lack of funds, the Home in question falls far short of what it ought to be, but its aim is as described by your contributor, and when the time comes it will be handed over gladly to a Committee of Management for enlargement and improvement. At present, patriotism absorbs all spare cash, but it is hoped that soon the time will come when the raising of a Fund for the endowment of a Home may be successfully attempted.

Some years ago, the British Hospital tried to start a Convalescent Home in the La Cumbre, San Esteban District, but public opinion was against its establishment because its presence would spoil the Hills for holiday-makers. Thus the scheme fell through, but, unfortunately, the number of arrivals in search of health did not decrease, so, now, thinking people realize that the lesser evil would have been the Home. Of course, it is admitted that a more advisable course would have been the establishment of a Home in Cosquin where Sanatoria already exist, thus confining the disease to one District, but meantime, as numerous sick people continue to go higher up, the only safeguard to the public is a place distinctly for their reception. The attempt towards this end is purely philanthropical, and while it is anticipated that the Home will meet a need, it is hoped that, as indicative of the public fitness, the limited accommodation will not be unduly taxed.

Hopes of Governor of B.A.

EX-PRESIDENT APPOINTED TO SUPREME COURT

The Senate, during the session held on Saturday, approved by a small majority of the appointment of Dr. Figueroa Alcorta, ex-President of the Nation, to the vacancy on the Supreme Court of the Republic.

This nomination has been the cause of a storm of indignation and protest which has spread all over the country from Jujuy to Tierra del Fuego.

The Argentine Press, with few exceptions, has taken up the attack; the students of the Capital and La Plata have organised mass meetings and one and all have denounced not only the nominee but also the nominator, who is no less a personage than the Chief Magistrate himself. In the face of all this opposition it is indeed surprising that Dr. Figueroa Alcorta himself has not rejected the appointment.

The causes of this campaign are many and varied. The person who broke the Constitution by forcibly closing Congress should not, it is held, be given a seat on the Bench whose primary duty is to safeguard that self-same Constitution. A more serious and stronger cause for apprehension, lies in the fact that the nomination of Dr. Figueroa Alcorta is believed to have been made by the President at the instigation of the Governor of Buenos Aires.

It is no secret that Don Marcelino Ugarte desires to succeed to the Presidency, and it is asserted that to obtain the goal of his ambition, he is prepared to use every means at his command. However, it is generally believed that the chances of Don Marcelino ever sitting on the Presidential chair are small. His influence extends over only two Provinces, and with the example of Buenos Aires Province before them it is not likely that the other States will meekly submit to a victory for the Ugarte ticket.

The triumph obtained by the Radical member on the occasion of the election of Vice-President in the Chamber of Deputies last week is a sign of the times not to be ignored. It proves that in so far as concerns the Lower Chamber the Ugarte domination is at an end, and it is to be hoped that the present majority in the Senate will soon be overpowered.

A significant fact is that Dr. Villanueva withheld his vote.

The blue and white band of office no doubt looks tempting, but Don Marcelino is urged to remember Juarez Celman, the year '90!

TRIP BY URUGUAYAN PRESIDENT

CIUDAD DE MONTEVIDEO AS YACHT.

The magnificent new river steamer, Ciudad de Montevideo, which arrived yesterday left last night for Montevideo where it was intended to embark the President of Uruguay who is taking a trip with several prominent gentlemen to Paysandú and Salto. Among these who left by the steamer were the Uruguayan Minister in Argentina, Dr. Weigel Muñoz, and Sr. Nicolas Mihanovich with the committee of the excursion. This vessel is expected to be absent from her usual run about five days.

days, it is expected of every individual in the country, without distinction of nationality, that he take up the battle-cry against the scourge, tuberculosis, and fight it "to the death," on behalf of the sufferers, with every means in his power. The call to the fray has been sounded in nearly every land, and no thinking, humane person may avoid the ranks.

"SPARE" PRESIDENT

Election on the Senate

DON BENITO VILLANUEVA APPOINTED

Yesterday's session of the Senate was an occasion of profound importance as the election of "Presidente para la Acefalia" had been arranged to take place and the result was looked forward to with the greatest interest. The result of the voting was at first a tie between Dr. Benito Villanueva and Dr. Davila. The former was in a majority of one, on a second vote being taken and is therefore the successor to the Presidential Chair in case of any unforeseen event depriving the Republic of its present Chief Magistrate.

There was a quorum from 3.40 onward, and twenty-four senators voted. Don Benito Villanueva thanked the Chamber for the honour conferred upon him. The evening Press hails the result as a defeat of the bloque, saying that it is not Dr. Davila who has been defeated, and whose high personal character alone made the figures obtained possible, but the Vidal-Ugarte Combination.

INDEPENDENCE CENTENARY

TUCUMAN SEEKING "THE NEEDFUL" FOR FIESTAS.

Dr. Ernesto Padilla, Governor of Tucuman, yesterday visited Dr. Oliver, Minister of Finance, on the important subject of obtaining funds to defray expenses at the forthcoming Centenary festivities which are to be worthy of the hundredth year after the Oath of Independence.

Congress has the matter under consideration, and its assent is necessary to the granting of resources.

Another question, that of the Obras de Salubridad in Tucuman, was considered and discussed. On the financial side of the scheme the Governor of Tucuman held that his Province should not be required to pay interest on moneys advanced in connection with the works. The Minister of the Treasury's opinion is not recorded.

OFF FROM ARGENTINA!

IMMIGRATION FIGURES FOR 1915.

The Immigration figures for the first seven months of the current year have been published, and shows a steady stream of departures from the country. There is not any occasion for alarm, however, as the deficit amounts to less than 50,000. Still, the tendency is at present outward, and not inward. Undoubtedly the war is both directly and indirectly a principal factor in this, as great numbers of all nationalities have left for military service.

The figures for August were: Arrivals 2300, a very small figure; departures 11,200; deficit 8,900. In August, 1913, the figures were records, for there entered 15,415 immigrants, and 12,889 left, balance for the country 2256. From January 1 this year until July 31, 23,620 immigrants have reached, and 72,977 have left the country; deficit 49,357.

In the first months of 1913, the official figures show a total entry of 177,764 immigrants, and a balance in favour of 46,187, as only 131,581 left.

The feature has its compensations, and undoubtedly when the current of immigration again sets Plate-wards it will be in the nature of a tidal wave.

CHILDREN HELD TO RANSOM

Daring Operations by Kidnappers

ALARM IN BUENOS AIRES

Considerable anxiety is felt in a number of the principal families in Buenos Aires as to the safety of their children. Owing to the disappearance of the children of wealthy parents in Brazil and Chili, who are abducted by an organised band of men who hold the little ones to ransom, it is feared that these men may have members of their gang operating in Buenos Aires.

Lately abductions have occurred in Rio de Janeiro which have terrorised the population and caused the greatest consternation and excitement. One of the younger children of the Minister Ayarragaray was stolen from his nurse, Señora Saavedra, and held to ransom some little time ago, and now information is forthcoming that the latest victim of an attempt is Dr. Leonardo Pereyra Iraola, a National Deputy, and an exceedingly wealthy man.

One day, Señor Iraola, his wife and children were visiting a local agricultural show, and the deputy wishing to inspect certain of the buildings, left his wife and children for a few moments. Shortly afterwards a man approached and politely spoke to Señora Iraola, saying that her husband wanted the youngest child to join him to see something that would amuse him. The unsuspecting mother would have allowed her child to accompany the stranger, but the little one himself refused and commenced to cry, whereupon the man retired. A few minutes later Dr. Iraola returned to his wife and was astounded to hear of the incident. All the efforts of the police failed to discover the stranger, and for a time the exhibition was in an uproar.

Dr. Iraola is rousing the police to action, but the uneasy feeling still exists in the Brazilian capital, and has furthermore infected this city.

TROUBLE IN RIO GRANDE

SERIOUS FEARS OF POLITICAL OUTBREAK.

The state of political affairs in Rio Grande is becoming more alarming as the elections approach and so serious is the outlook that fears of a revolt are entertained.

The trouble has arisen through the proposed election of Marshal Hermes de Fonseca to the National Senate. The latest telegrams from Salta containing information from the Rivera frontier are sufficiently alarming concerning the manifest unrest. A large number of people have already left camp driving with them their cattle and horses, which are the first to suffer in the rigours of a revolt. Suspicious movements of bands of men have been noticed and General Galarza with a strong detachment of troops is in Rivera, with strict instructions to preserve order. On Saturday last the President of the Republic and his Ministers held a conference with the military chiefs.

The revolt is naturally against the Government, but is directed chiefly against the influence of Senator Pinheyro Machado, whose brother Salvador has been acting Governor at Port Alegre in the absence of Sr. Borges de Medeiros.

The mobilisation of the state troops has been carried on with great rapidity.

Information from Libres confirm these serious reports and state that Señor Joao Francisco Pereyra da Souza is at the head of the revolutionary movement and that the whole country in this region of Rio Grande is under arms.

The government have full confidence that they can deal with the matter.

WAR HEROINES

In a recent article by Mary MacDonald Brown, on "A Malady of Public Taste" taken from a London Daily, and which appeared in my column, the lady begins by asking, "Has the War affected the heroines of fiction? Five or six recently published novels picked up at random answer the question in the affirmative. And Miss Brown herself affirms that the "interesting" heroine who is not beautiful, so popular before the war, has been almost completely ousted by "faultlessly beautiful" and "preposterously beautiful" heroines who are not mentally or psychically interesting.

I do not wish to argue the point with the well-known writer of this article. Those books which she says she "picked up at random" may contain heroines who are "silly and incompetent," "weak and ignorant," "thick-skinned and complacent" or "sentimentally romantic"; but I think perhaps the lady is in error in her first assumption that the war is responsible for such heroines. And I base my assertion on the fact that one novel of the six, at least, was written before the war, many months before the declaration of war or the causes which were said to be responsible for that declaration. Miss Alice Grant Rosman wrote her book "Miss Bryde of England" in the effort to secure a big prize of some hundreds of pounds, offered by a well-known London publishing firm; but which prize was won by the writer of "The Lure of the Little Drum." The judges, however, were so impressed with the excellence of Miss Alice Grant Rosman's book that it was decided to publish it and terms were entered upon between the authoress and the firm.

The writing of the book was finished some months before a decision was made in April, 1914, to publish "Miss Bryde of England" in August, 1914; for the authoress and her family, being personal friends of mine, I was told the glad news of the book being accepted for publication before I left London last year in May. So in one case it may be accepted as proved that the heroine has not received her qualities as a result of War. She may be "preposterously beautiful" as a change from the many previous interesting heroines who are not beautiful; and she may be pathetic because of being "unusually thick-skinned and self-complacent"; but the War, although responsible for so much that is more reminiscent of the middle ages than of the Twentieth Century, is not responsible for "Helen."

I believe the war is responsible and will be responsible for a different sort of heroine. We read about them in our daily papers, and I fancy the next batch of novels, written as well as published since the War will portray heroines of flesh and blood and soul. There will be no necessity for authors to give us imaginary heroines; they may give their imaginations a rest, and draw their heroines from life. The war is, although no woman would choose such an ally, the best ally her sex could have. It is truly a sacrifice of blood that is to redeem the soul of womankind. Not knowing the time when those other novels were written, I cannot say that their heroines have not been conceived since the European conflagration; but considering the direction in which writers' imaginative powers are likely to go, it is hard to believe that the heroines of the other five novels, taken indiscriminately, should be such poor specimens of womanhood. And two of the writers are men! If these men and these women wrote their books while the thrilling deeds of other men and women were electrifying the world around them, it is

KITCHEN MAGIC

After hearing that my hints for the Kitchen are being found so useful the following article on "Kitchen Magic" taken from the "Ladies' Home Journal" must interest:—

While many labour-savers represent considerable money outlay. I have found that several of the most helpful devices in my kitchen cost a shilling each or less. At my preparing-table I use every day the little glass measuring-cup holding half a pint, or one exact cupful. It has ridges indicating half, third, and quarter, and, as it is transparent, I can easily see and measure accurately instead of guessing with a common china-cup. Then there is the triple measuring-spoon, or three spoons riveted together, each a "standard" teaspoon, half-teaspoon and tablespoon, so that I can measure easily without picking up and laying down each one. Near them hangs a new egg beater operating on the turbine principle, which is lighter, has fewer parts and beats more rapidly than the old style beater.

Then I have several devices helping toward better sanitation. One is a glass dish-cover consisting of a crystal disk with parallel rings moulded in it. This cover fits any bowl, pitcher or jar with a circular mouth. When I lay away a bowl of gravy or an open jar or pitcher of cream I place this disk as a cover which keeps the air out and prevents odours in the refrigerator. Another device is a stopper for opened milk bottles. It is made of aluminium, is easily fastened or removed and has an opening through which the milk can be poured without removing the whole cap. A third device which makes for refrigerator neatness is a white enamelled egg-holder. This is a little tray with twelve openings to hold one dozen eggs so that they will not become broken in a bag, or roll about, keeping each egg visible as well as preventing breakage.

Every time I work at my sink I am glad I have a faucet soapdish. In many kitchens tin soapdishes are tacked to the wall or ledge, are hard to clean and unpleasant looking. My dish is of heavy, retinned wire, hung by a handle to the faucet so that the drippings all fall into the sink, and there is no dish to wash nor splashing on the wall. Then there is my paper dish-rag, which I find more sanitary than a cloth or rag. It is firm and cleans well; I merely burn this safe to presume that they are unpresentable beings, very much like their own heroines indeed—"silly and incompetent," "weak and ignorant" and even "sentimentally romantic"—but nothing more, unless the stringing of sentences and words on a chain, with about as little care as a small maiden bestows in weaving her daisy chain, be counted as a virtue unto them, the result merely of a County Council education. The C.C. did its best evidently with the material at hand.

"A Malady of Public Taste" indeed! The Public Taste is not ill, except with nausea at being served with such literary dishes may be, it has too much starched common-sense since the war. It finds more palatable the saying of the woman into whose mouth the authoress put the words, "If life were longer, I would devote as many hours to my body, as I now do to my mind; but I had to make a choice and my very love of beauty makes me turn to that which does not fade." This heroine may be faultlessly beautiful; but the reader is allowed to clothe her with loveliness, a reflex of the beautiful soul which is not allowed to fade, a string of words is unnecessary.

and use another after a few weeks' use of the old one.

Placed also near my sink is my invaluable wooden plate-scraper. Many women carelessly use some pieces of silverware in scraping soiled dishes. This scraper looks like a thin paddle, the size of a hand, and is made of fine hardwood. I use it for scraping soiled dishes, removing food fragments from utensils and pots, and it does more to lessen the labours of dishwashing than any one other article.

Three more labour-savers are grouped near my stove. One is a rack for baked potatoes, which has wire pins sticking up at intervals. Instead of putting potatoes in the oven in any position I stick a potato on each pin, place the rack in the oven, and the potatoes brown evenly and need no turning. The extension cover adjusts itself to the opening of any pot or pan. It looks like a conical candle-snuffer, and, owing to the space it allows between food and cover, is excellent in any cooking in which grease and steam are present. The large double fork mounted like a pair of scissors is excellent for picking whole vegetables or eggs from boiling water, or I use it chiefly to draw hot pans from the oven, or move heated dishes about, as it lessens danger of burned fingertips.

Every woman knows the usual unpleasant method of cleaning metals like brass and copper. I have a new polishing cloth which is a large square of feltlike material; this is so impregnated with chemicals that the cloth need only be rubbed briskly over the tarnished metal to develop a good lustre.

My novel nutmeg-grater also saves me scraped fingers. This little machine is a revolving perforated drum worked with a small handle. The nutmeg cannot fall out and is much more easily grated than in the old way. An orange-peeler is an old-shaped, pointed piece of metal, with a hole in the handle, which deftly slips the peel from an orange. The pineapple-snips which hang near it look like a pair of scissors with tiny scoops at the points. With these I can cut out each "eye" so there is little wasted juice. In season the strawberry huller does good service by nipping out the hulls without staining my fingers, and the corn-scraper cuts each row of kernels readily so that the pulp is prepared for cooking.

While not strictly a kitchen device, the little glass combination service for an invalid's tray is efficient as well as attractive. This consists of a tiny flat sugar-bowl, a small pitcher and a butter-plate, of pressed glass and so made that they "nest" together. The sugar-bowl is at the bottom, the pitcher fits on it and the butter-plate covers the pitcher and holds a pat of butter. It saves space in preparing food on a tray and is quaint enough to tempt any appetite.

In the great war at the beginning of the last century the public was asked to subscribe, not merely for relief funds, but for the actual raising of forces. And by no means everybody subscribed even for that. Dean Ramsay, of Edinburgh, reckons as the best of his stories of the old ladies of Montrose the one concerning the maiden lady who was canvassed for funds to organise a volunteer corps for the King's service. "Indeed," she replied, "I'll dae nae sic thing; I ne'er could raise a man for myself, and I'm not gaen to raise men for King George."

Major-General Thomas Fraser, who has published a volume of recollections, was sent out on secret service to the Russo-Turkish war. He tells a story of an old lady whom he met in the train as he was setting out on his journey. She had forgotten to bring her footstool and she asked Sir Thomas whether she might have his "small box" as a footstool. "I knew," Sir Thomas says, "that if anything happened it would make no difference to either of us where the box was in the carriage; so I let her have it. The 'small box' contained sufficient detonators to blow up any town we might be travelling through!"

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

"The Divine Rosa of Luxemburg" ended a fiery career recently—being shot by the Germans because she declared the soldiers of her country were being maltreated. Her death is said to be a tragic climax to a life of strenuous revolt. Among the workers of Europe she was known as "The Divine Rosa" and is thus described:

She was one of the women workers of the Red International, and was playing her part in permeating the world-movement of revolutionary socialism with the feminine spirit. She ranked with such as Josephine de Gros, a world-famous revolutionary artistocrat; Maria Rygier, the heroine of the Italian students and workmen; Soledad Villa France, the beautiful Spaniard and lover of Francisco Ferrer; Vera Figner, the Russian political martyr; and many another. Shaw Desmond has given us a striking picture of Rosa. "A dainty little creature," he calls her, "with masses of dark hair, and a retiring almost diffident manner. Rosa Luxemburg, the Divine Rosa, is actually the flaming torch of German Socialism, whose speeches are reported in the Press of the world, who is feared and loved and hated by the authorities in a breath. Ponderous officials with ponderous notebooks always foregather wherever Rosa is to be found, ready to take her down or take her up at a moment's notice, for underneath that winning exterior is concealed one of the cleverest brains in the movement. Such a fragile little thing, who dresses in white frocks like a schoolgirl, with the innocent smile of a child. In a moment this shrinking little thing has changed into an electrical being who magnetises her audience with those dark eyes and fine white hands of hers. Her voice is like a violin—now pleading, now declamatory—with an undertone of fierceness running through it which brings to mind one of the battle psalms of the Bible. A terrible little creature."

A description of the "White Hall" hospital shows the work of women. The women have painted the doorways, scrubbed the floors and attended to the decoration entirely, and in addition there is a special staff which is constantly employed in making shirts for the wounded soldiers who will shortly be occupying the wards of the hospital.

The special work-room where the shirt-making progressing daily is lined with businesslike shelves, which are piled with garments for the fighters from the front. The nurses sit round the businesslike tables at their patriotic sewing, and very smart they look in their special uniforms. The women belong to the Order of St. John, and have had years of skilful tuition in nursing, and are fully qualified to nurse cases of the most critical nature arriving from the battlefields across the Channel.

This is not the only case of women becoming house painters and decorators for the benefit of the wounded since the war began. Somewhere in France there is a smartly-equipped hospital which was made fit for occupation entirely by women, who left London at the invitation of the French Government to do this work.

The hospital, which stands on a hill about 17 miles from certain trenches where the fighting has been very fierce, was at one time a convent, but had not been occupied for ten years. Its owner presented the building to the French Government, and the military authorities immediately saw its possibilities as a hospital provided someone would undertake the work of renovating and the like.

It took weeks to clear the walls of cobwebs and dust, and the women worked early and late to get the place in hygienic order. The hospital is now regarded as one of the finest in France, and it is equipped with the newest appliances science can provide.

Land of Lilliput.

Conducted by Egeria

"Recreo"

Martin Chico.

My dear Lilliputians,

I take it for granted you are with me in spirit in this lovely corner of the Uruguayan Republic, and I feel sure you want to know how we pass the time still. Although when I wrote to you last I seemed to have told you of so many things, that there was nothing more left to do or to talk about. But the resources of "Recreo" are many when there is such a majordomo as Señor Lorenzo. He thinks of all sorts of way in which to extract more of that golden happiness from those jars of which I told you last week.

On the evening before half of our party left for Buenos Aires, he arranged that a peon who sings and plays the guitar very well, should entertain us while we dined. The peon was delighted to sing and play, and the Spanish love songs and dances were very pretty and we enjoyed them all, although some of them were weird, and we didn't understand the words. But neither do we (or most of us) when we go to the Colon. Still music is independent of words — or should be, although some words are music! And the day before our friends bade us adieu, we had a real picnic — not afternoon tea, but lunch in the most delightful spot, amongst wild scrub, amidst which we discovered a charming spot, and facing the river Uruguay. Was ever chicken so delicious, cakes so light or tea so refreshing? Everything was the food for the gods — nectar and ambrosia. — For food taken with deep draughts of fresh air is very specially fine; and the Lilliputian of our party now dally asks for another picnic.

Have you all seen the cows milked? This is another treat and surprise for the Lilliputian. And then the golden butter! She of course is mystified by this, because she does not understand the process; but it is good to see the big pats of yellow butter, which tells of the richness of the grass on which the cows feed. Another day when walking to the river beach, we discovered banks of maidenhair fern within easy reach, and in five minutes a walk from the house takes us to this spot where we can get as much of this pretty decoration as we wish; and the table and rooms look dainty with bowls of fern, violets and mignonette and this is especially pleasing when flowers are scarce at the end of winter. And we are busily pressing some maidenhair, to take back to Buenos Aires, when the inevitable day for returning arrives.

And now I must tell you of another picnic — the last for some time, because just as we had finished our lunch, the rain fell in torrents and it will take some time before the water dries up sufficiently for an enjoyable "al fresco" meal. We took quite a new road to us — that which I understand eventually ends at Montevideo. And we turned into an estancia called "Carufa" one of the prettiest spots in the country. We camped on a hillside; beneath us we heard the murmuring of water, which is I believe a river; but just then looked like a brook; the timid voices of the sheep, with the continual cry of their lambs, broke the silence, which was very intense; for a thick haze veiled the fields giving warning of the approaching storm. And soon the silence gave place to the roar of thunder and rain, the latter blotting out the harmonies of the fields and sending every living thing to shelter. We climbed into the coach — the men-folk underneath, and finished our lunch with cups of hot tea in defiance of the elements. We were not waterproof altogether even in and under the coach; but we were weatherproof, which I am sure you will agree with me is better.

To-day while writing to you, everything is bathed in dewy sunshine, for the sun is shining brightly as if it would drink the very breath of its earth-child, which rises in warm currents, telling of its copious libations from the cloud-cups of yesterday. And in return the sun is lending a most glorious variety of colours to the yielding child, to render her attractive for the outpour of the wealth of the coming clouds; and the birds are cooing, and whistling, and warbling, as if they, too, are rejoicing in the beauties of Nature, and so unconsciously adding to them. There is another beautiful estancia near "Recreo." It is "Martin Chico." And one gloriously fine day we drove there. The drive was one of unmixed pleasure, and when nearing the estancia it was through long groves of eucalyptus trees whose never-to-be-forgotten perfume scented the air. What happiness it is to visit when in the country, for the welcome ever seems to be more sincere and deeper than in the city. Such a hearty greeting from Majordomo Perrott and from Mrs. Perrott and such delicious tea and home-made cake! And then the stroll over the estancia near the homestead of course! The gardens are beautiful, and hyacinths, polyanthus (or should I say polyanthi?) pansies, roses, candytuft, sweet Alicia, and other Old World flowers grow quite as luxuriantly in this new world of America. And as the date under the name on the front balcony is "1869," this garden is not so very young either! Then in the fields were great trees laden with the golden mimosa, and weeping-willows guard the waters at the end of the eucalyptus avenues. The Lilliputian who was with us asked if the willows were crying, when she heard talk of the "weeping-willows," and I think she puzzles her little brain about the matter still. Perhaps you all know why these trees are so called. And her joy to pet a little motherless lamb, and to be told that one is coming to "Recreo" for her to gambol with; and to feed the wee chickens, just out of their shells a day or two; and to play with other children who spoke English. The whole visit was a delight to her as to her elders.

I spoke of the work of the elves in my last letter to you; but the printer made it read "clues." You must have wondered what I meant. The elves are Lilliputians, too, I believe, who make you other Lilliputians very happy sometimes; for only Lilliputians can understand the Lilliputian elves, and the elves love children because they can go with them to the land of make-believe, but when the Land of Lilliput is left, the land of make-believe is left too, to the elves and fairies, and those other Lilliputians who come after. But the camp is no land of make-believe. It is real and beautiful, and those who help to fill those jars I told you about last week with golden happiness, are not elves, but real people, who love all the beautiful things here and try to give some of their store of human kindness and human happiness to others. I wonder could you enjoy my story better, if you could see some of these pretty spots where we are so enjoying life? I will ask Mr. Editor if I may send some photos for the paper, and then you can see for yourselves how true all I tell you is.

Although, when one is happy, and life seems far removed from trouble and care, from war and even rumours of war, as I am here, still when the mail arrives, one is taken mentally into the midst of those awful things that are going on in Europe. Who is there, even in the Land of Lilliput, who has not read about some of the many terrible happenings to the human beings who, unfortunately are in the midst of them? Just recently I heard the story of a poor Australian student. He was a violin student in Vienna — of course you all know now where Vienna is! — and came from a place called Newcastle in New South Wales. When war was declared he was imprisoned with another man who was suffering of consumption, and they were locked up together in a small cell for many months, the cell having a very tiny window which did not give them enough fresh air, and consequently the sick prisoner got worse, and the well prisoner got sick. After many appeals to be released, the poor young student was let out, by which time he was so fearfully weak, however, that he could not walk. After many attempts to get the young fellow away from the foreign land, now so hostile to everything British, he at last succeeded in getting permission to leave, other prisoners of war, also, interceding on his behalf, and when I heard about him he was in England, but so ill that the doctors think he cannot possibly live, he is so tubercular or consumptive, having caught this terrible disease from his cell-mate in Vienna.

Another story about a Lilliputian is that of a little English girl, only eleven years of age, who, after hearing how the little girls and boys of Belgium had been treated, was determined to do something to help in the Big War; so she got her mother as enthusiastic as herself, and soon she was walking about London with a broad red ribbon worn over her shoulder and round the body were the words "Join the Army and become one of the heroes of the day. Avenge the murder of little girls like me." And numbers of men decided to join the army and do something to help, too, even to give their lives for their country and so avenge the murder of those other Lilliputians, and the little girl, whose name is Muriel Phillips, escorted her recruits to a sergeant who enrolled them as soldiers.

And another little story for you is about birds in the trenches. A writer at the front sends the following little bit of chat about the feathered tribe in the trenches:—

"We have," he says, "a favourite black bird who sits up in the trees above us and answers when the men whistle to him, no matter how heavy the firing may be. The crop of grass inside this dug-out is growing very long and white, but otherwise there are few signs of spring yet. I see plovers flying overhead here sometimes. I was amused to watch two old magpies the other day. They wanted to cross over from this side to the German lines, but every time they started to leave the row of poplars just below my shelter there would be a crack from some rifle, and back they would turn, and perch again to chatter about it, until they had picked up courage to make another try, and then the same thing would happen all over again."

The conduct of the magpies we can understand: they are always meddling some birds. But why blackbirds should care to linger so near the lines is not so apparent.

And now "adios" again for yet another week.

With love from

EGERIA.

SOME WOMEN AND MANY THINGS

Now that thousands of refugees are settled in Britain, we are reminded of the benefits conferred by the refugees who found at various times a home in that land of freedom. Ox-tail soup, for instance, is a dish which we owe to the French Huguenots who fled to England in the reign of Louis XIV. after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. In those days, evidently, just as now, the domestic economy of Frenchwomen was far superior to that of Englishwomen. Before the Huguenots arrived, butchers had been accustomed to sell to the fellmongers their ox hides with the tails on them. The Huguenot women astonished at such waste, enriched their stock pots with rejected ox tails. This soup was tried by Englishwomen, and approved of in English households, and has since then figured in our cookery books.

Queen Mary is wonderfully faithful to her old friends, and, without any flourish of trumpets, she has given £500 for the erection of a "Bricka Lift" in the Clergy Home of Rest at Margate, an institution in which her late governess was interested. Madame Bricka was the Queen's medium of intercourse with the middle-class world. For instance, when "tango teas" were the rage in London hotels the ex-governess attended them for the purpose of giving an unbiased report to Buckingham Palace. During Madame Bricka's final illness the Queen visited the flat in Earl's Court every Saturday, and nothing pleased her more than to have a chat upon things domestic in the kitchen with the invalid's cook-general, a typical Cockney, who treated Royalty with a good deal of freedom.

One of the most surprising results of the war is the large number of grey-haired women of fashion whom one now sees both in London and Paris. This, the "World" has discovered after some investigation is not due wholly to personal distress or patriotic motives. The truth is that the best hair dyes hitherto have been made in Germany. The supply has been cut off by the war, and the women fear to take the risk of producing some weird effect by changing their dyes. If you put one sort of dye on the top of another, it is said that the conflict of chemicals may produce anything from sea-green to spontaneous combustion. So grey is becoming a fashionable colour.

Every week, generally on Fridays, a Royal courier may be seen at Victoria Station, London, checking packages, weighing in the aggregate anything between half and a ton, of comforts for some regiment at the front. These comforts are collected or made in one of the Royal residences. Queen Alexandra never misses sending a bundle. Princess Victoria supports her mother's efforts, and most of the work in Marlborough House is done under her personal supervision. Moreover, many of the articles are made at her own expense by the girls' working guilds with which she is associated.

The daughter of Colonel Deport, the inventor of the famous 75 gun, is a nurse in one of the French military hospitals. The soldiers call her "La fille du 75."

Gwydyr Castle, the seat near Betws-yeddy of the Marquis of Lincolnshire (known in Australia as Lord Carrington, Governor of New South Wales), is to be sold "as it stands." One of its treasures is a screen worked by Mary Queen of Scots.

Women porters are being employed experimentally on the Great Central Railway in England. It is thought that they will not find the work at the country stations too heavy, and they may also be employed in assisting women passengers at the bigger stations.

LA FORESTAL LTD.

ONE OFFICIAL'S HUN INTERESTS

"Deutsch La Plata Zeitung" of August 27 contains a report of a meeting held at the German Club, Buenos Aires, to consider the question of helping Germans in need in the Capital. From a German point of view, or from a humanitarian point of view, of course the object of the meeting is laudable, but the only thing about the report which interests British people is the fact that Mr. A. H. Simon, of the Cia La Forestal Ltd., is named as Acting-President of the Committee formed at the meeting.

Mr. Simon is a German. He is also Chief of the Maritime Department of the Forestal Company, as stated in our article of July 29. As a German he is at liberty to help his fellow-countrymen, but the Company whose Chairman of Directors can stand up in London and talk about his patriotism, and incidentally make the assertion that all Germans, except technical experts, had been dismissed from the company's service, should consider the question of disclaiming that it is a British concern.

DISOWNS HERR SIMON.

The following letter was received yesterday with reference to an article which appeared in Sunday's issue of "The Herald":—

(To the Editor.)

Sir, — Referring to your issue of yesterday (Sunday) and to the paragraph headed "La Forestal, Ltd.," I beg to let you know that there is evidently a mistake in the publication made by the German paper you quote, in mentioning Mr. A. H. Simon as belonging to the Forestal Company.

Mr. Simon is not a member of our staff.

Yours, etc.

General Manager.

HORSE SHIPMENTS

ACTIVITY IN MILITARY REQUIREMENTS.

Large shipments of horses to Europe are leaving the port during the present week. On Thursday the steamer Highland Brigade is to leave for Liverpool with 200 picked animals. On Friday or Saturday the steamers Globe and Queen will sail with loads of 550 and 520 horses, all for La Pallice, Rochelle, and intended for the use of the French army. The s.s. Hortensius left yesterday with 140 mules for the West Indies, and in the ensuing week other ships will leave with horses for England and France.

DEPUTY KILLS DEPUTY

FATAL DUEL IN CHILE.

Quarrelsome legislators or would-be legislators who appeal to arms in disputes, are not by any means extinct. Some of their encounters are farcical but a sufficiently serious one has just taken place in Chile. The customary cause "Cherchez la femme" was lacking and the fight has evidently resulted from injured 'dignidad' or the appropriation of benefits or profits. It was in fact caused by the question of who should appoint a "Jefe Político" to the City of Tomé. So inveterate were the principals that pistols were discarded and heavy revolvers selected. The parties were Deputy Guillermo Bahamonde, a member of the Radical Party, and Deputy Leon Inco. They met with two seconds apiece, and the usual Asistencia detachment at El Salto outside Santiago. Twenty-five paces was the distance measured and in the course of the first rounds Deputy Bahamonde was badly wounded by a bullet in the left side. He was removed to Hospital in a dangerous condition and last night's papers record his death. Thus do the members of a Congress set an example of disobedience to the Laws.

NATIVES IN RIVADAVIA

FEAR OF A RISING.

According to the latest reports, considerable alarm exists amongst the populace of Rivadavia on account of their fear of a rising of the natives of the district. Rumours of the unsettled state of these parts have from time to time been current, but the latest telegrams contain the information that the fear of trouble has lately considerably increased. Help from the provincial authorities has been requested, and it is further more stated that there is a strong desire to request the National Government to send troops to the district to cope with the disturbance.

The aggressiveness of the natives is most marked, and their late ill-treatment of engineers and workmen in the Chaco and in Salta has given rise to the present alarm.

COLLECTOR--INSPECTORS

ALLEGED UNIFORMED THIEVES.

La Razón states that a scandalous state of things exists at Avellaneda (which it may be recollected, is regarded by its Intendente as an exceptionally moral community).

The Fiscal Inspectors are, it is declared committing all sorts of outrages and "indiscretions." A concrete instance is given of a jeweller's traveller who was detained by an Inspector because he had not his patente with him. He subsequently wished that he had no samples with him either as these honest officials going thorough his stock, helped themselves liberally to recuerdos of the occasion. The unfortunate traveller protested but in vain, nor have his complaints to the police produced any result and the thieves remain in possession of their booty with absolute impunity. There is little difference between the conduct of these officials and that of Luigi Vampa except that the latter was a professed bandit and the former are inspectors with an official status.

MUNITIONS BY ZEPPELIN

GERMANY'S CLEVER SOLUTION. OF TURKISH DIFFICULTY.

Amsterdam, Aug. 27.

It is insistently stated that the Germans are establishing a line of aerial navigation between Austria and Turkey. A dozen Zeppelins are said to have made several voyages, transporting a hundred tons of machinery for ammunition manufacture to Constantinople as well as great quantities of projectiles. Germans declare that Turkey can thus be provided with all necessities of war in spite of the Allies' vigilance.

BOER LOYALTY TO THE EMPIRE

Real Causes of the Recent Revolt

THE OBJECTIONS TO GERMAN RULE

Lessons of 300 Years Ago

(BY D. M. BRESLER.)

The following interesting article has been furnished to THE HERALD by Mr. D. M. Bresler, a Boer colonist in Neuquen, who fifteen years ago was bearing arms against the British forces in South Africa.

Mr. Bresler, who claims to know intimately the feelings of his fellow-countrymen, throws new light on the cause of the recent revolt; and, at the same time, severely criticises German rule in South Africa.

The loyalist views expressed in the article, as well as the survey of German history during the 17th century, should be of distinct interest to HERALD readers.

Some months ago I was so bold as to predict that the Boers were proudly merging into a loyal unit of the British Empire and I still maintain the same opinion, though I confess that I could not foresee at the time that German intrigue could brew (and Germans are good brewers) out of the Botha-Hertzog political crisis in the South African Union, a so-called armed demonstration which was a natural preliminary to a rebellion. But like the Johannesburgers in 1896 who failed to come to Jameson's relief at Doornkop in time, so Maritz failed to bring the much needed ammunition to De Wet in time. However it be, the result would have been the same for the evidence of so many rebels and loyalists shows that there was no idea of a rising against the Empire—it was against Botha and his 1st lieutenant Smuts.

With regard to General Botha, Mr. Editor, I agree with all you say, and he has played his part as Prime Minister of the Union in the way that will satisfy the most sanguine loyalist, but, as a Boer I tell you that had General Botha gone to reason personally—as he did at the time of the Rand trouble—with the armed demonstrators, there would have been no rebellion. Botha knew that the rising was against him, but like the Reformers in 1899 took refuge behind the Union Jack.

Now I hope I have a right to believe that Boer loyalty generally had undergone a very severe test. Remember: Germany at the time was driving the Allies before her. There was a strong two-year old feeling against Botha, whom an increasing Boer section wrongly or rightly was considering as feeding his conciliation policy too strongly and neglecting (in fact treating with contumely) the traditional rights vouchsafed at the Peace of Vereeniging, and corroborated in the Constitution of the Union. And thirdly: The movement was fostered by De Wet, Beyers and (as is believed by many) also General De la Rey—all of them leaders dear to the Boer ideal. When I read your article on General Botha I thought I had a right to remind you that I was right with regard to South African loyalty, and more so after the test applied through German brewery.

Don't please for one moment think that Boers prefer German domination in South Africa to British. In Argentina, I know a Hollander and a Boer who left Cape Colony for German West Africa, they remained there and prospered but left and their reasons for doing so were: that they could not put up any longer with the domineering spirit of the German officials. Another instance: In April 1901, about the time I was made a prisoner of war in the O.F.S. there was a rumour in the Boer ranks that Germany would likely send an expeditionary force via German West Africa to assist us. Naturally there was unfeigned delight at the news amongst us Boers, but what surprised us was that the Germans (of whom there were several in almost every commando) displayed no delight over the news, and imagine our surprise when one of them—Knothe to wit—openly declared that if the report be true, it were preferable to make peace with the British and help to drive the Germans back after which we could again continue our fight with the British because under German administration he did not care to remain in South Africa, he'd prefer to emigrate to America or some British Colony where a man can live in freedom, and not in bondage like in Germany! As I have heard this opinion expressed by so many Germans in South Africa, in Chile and other parts I am surprised that Germans to-day in S. Africa are so loyal to the Vaterland under the Prussian regime. Probably the fact that it is a national struggle explains why every true-born German sides even with Wilhelm II. A German said to me the other day "We dislike the Kaiser as much as you Boers do, but the fact is that we are not fighting for the house of Prussia to-day; we are fighting for our commercial existence and principally against England. Whether we win or lose the Kaiser must go, it is his fortune to-day that the war takes a commercial importance; if not Germany would have made peace long ago."

Maybe Mr. Editor you or some of my acquaintances would like to hear what forecasts or opinions I may have with regard to the European conflagration, but I regret that I am not in a position to venture into that field conscious of my weakness to form an idea that may be of any interest to your readers. To conclude I may add something in the hope that it may not be inappropriate to take a short look in to the past and refresh our memories of events that happened 300 years ago when warlike passions took possession of the Germanic nation and their rulers, and lit up the whole of Europe for thirty years; and the saying strikingly illustrated, that whatever mad pranks kings choose to play, the people must pay the piper. I have no doubt that the Kaiser's aim is that all should be ultimately prosperous and happy; but they must learn to seek their prosperity and happiness in his way, and not in their own, and it is on that point to-day the same as three hundred years ago that we disagreed, and are prepared to shed our blood and treasure to be at liberty to seek our prosperity and happiness in our own way.

On the 23rd of May, 1618, certain deputies assembled in arms at the German Emperor's palace in Bohemia, forcibly entered the room where the counsellors were sitting, dragged two of them to a window and flung them down a height of eighty feet, but a dung hill on which they had fallen, saved their lives. This incident was the commencement of the 30 years' war, which was brought to a conclusion by the Peace of Westphalia on the 24th of Oct. 1648.

In this war the whole of the German Empire, Sweden, Denmark, France and Austria were directly involved while in the ranks of Wallenstein were found, besides German and Frenchmen, also Scotchmen, Irishmen, Cossacks, Croats, Poles and Hungarians.

It began as we know as a contest for liberty of conscience—Protestants against Catholics, but it ended in a confused medley of elements: German Catholics and German Protestants fighting side by side against Swedish Protestants, French Catholics and German Protestants. As one historian puts it: "Commenced with noble purposes and distinctly marked designs, it became a mere blind melee perpetuated by the obstinacy of men who did not know how to conclude an affair once begun, and directed by the cunning of other men who wished to fish in troubled waters."

The result of the war of thirty years was most disastrous to Germany, it had cost such an enormous price, hurried so many hundred thousands to their graves and occupied like now the thoughts of all the statesmen of Europe. Sweden obtained the duchy of Pomerania, the town of Wismar in Mecklenburg, the Archbishopric of Bremen, the Bishopric of Verdun and five millions of thalers. France obtained as her share the full sovereignty of Upper and Lower Alsace, the bishoprics of Metz, Toul and Verdun, and a number of minor properties. The Netherlands and Switzerland were recognised as independent states. This so-called religious war inflicted great horrors on Germany. Some historians reckon that the half, and others that two-thirds of the whole population perished in it. The atrocities which were committed were unexampled. "The famine," says one writer, kept pace with the pestilence. Wheat was sold, more times than once, for three pounds 18s. a bushel. Guards were posted to protect the newly buried from being devoured. . . . The face of the earth was ruined for want of agriculture; and every animal eatable was so greedily searched after that the beasts of prey missed their daily food."

"Ah, God!" says an old chronicler, "in what a miserable condition stand our cities! Where before were thousands of streets, there now were not hundreds. The burghers, by thousands, had been chased into the water, hunted to death in the woods, cut open, and their hearts torn out, their ears, noses, and tongues cut off, the soles of their feet opened, straps cut out of their backs; women, children and men so barbarously and shamefully used, that it is not to be conceived. How miserable stand the little towns, the open hamlets, there they lie, burned, destroyed; so that neither roof, beam, door, nor window is to be seen. The churches? They have been burned, the bells carried away, and the most holy places made stables, etc., etc."

Now history repeats itself, and it is so coincidental that the spark which set Europe ablaze three hundred years ago, started in the same quarter of Europe as that which caused the present conflagration.

Sweden at the start, did not participate in the quarrel, but when she did, she carried off the laurels of the war in behaviour and valour, and against the brutal generals of Ferdinand II. namely Tilly and Wallenstein, but what did Germany after all give her after bearing the whole weight of the war?

"Called in originally to assist the German Protestants, the Swedes found themselves, after years of hard fighting and the loss of their great King Gustavus Adolphus, all at once deserted by the very men for whose liberties they had been shedding their blood, and regarded as aliens and intruders whom it was expedient to get rid of as speedily as possible." Then however France interposed in the affairs of the Empire, and eventually enforced the reward due to Sweden. There are rumours of Sweden again going to the aid of Germany, and in the face of what happened in the past, how they were eventually bereft even of what was their due share after the 30 years' war, one wonders how they forget past behaviour. I feel sure that Germany's worst enemies to-day do not wish her the same fate she experienced after the 30 years' war, neither do we for one moment imagine that she desires to bring that on any of her adversaries, although reports as to the portions of Belgium and France occupied by her forces go to show that there is no difference between the behaviour of the legions of Ferdinand II. under Tilly and Wallenstein and those of Wilhelm II. under Von's (please supply the names of any of those brutes that destroy churches and slay women and neutrals), and one can't help to hope that mindful of the devastation and ruin which such a war brings in its trail that every one taking part in the fray will leap at the first opportunity to make peace with honour.

REJOICINGS IN THE REICHSTAG

New York, Aug. 29.

Advices from Berlin state that the fall of Brest Litovsk produced great rejoicings in the Reichstag. Many deputies made eulogistic and patriotic speeches, acclaiming the victory and expressing the opinion that the Russians cannot renew the offensive with any probabilities of success.

Meeting at the Phoenix Hotel

Addresses by British Minister & Mr. Warden

An important meeting of the local branch of the Royal Colonial Institute was held at the Phoenix Hotel on Aug. 26, under the Presidency of Sir Reginald Tower (H.B.M. Minister to the Argentine) for the purposes of hearing read the report of Sir Harry F. Wilson, to listen to most encouraging remarks upon the year's working, to bid a hearty farewell and quick return to certain departing members and incidentally for the purposes of sociability and fraternity.

Proceedings opened with the singing of the National Anthem in which every one present joined with fervour.

SIR HARRY WILSON'S REPORT.

Mr. E. Millington Drake then read the following report from Sir Harry Wilson, K.C.M.G., Sec. to the Royal Colonial Institute, to the Honorary Secretaries in the different parts of the world:—

"My last quarterly communication to you on the 19th March, 1915, was of a more brief character than usual, owing to the full statements of the Institute's work published in the 'United Empire.' I now take the opportunity of giving you a comprehensive report upon what has happened at the Institute during the last three months.

"Lt-Gen. Sir J. Bevan Edwards, who has for the past five years been Chairman of the Council, and has done so much to promote the interests of the Institute in various ways, retired from that office at the Annual Meeting, and received the signal compliment of being elected a Vice-President by the assembled Fellows. During his tenure of office our membership has grown from 4,450 to over 10,000, and great strides have been taken towards the fulfilment of the Institute's aims and objects. Sir Bevan Edwards has been succeeded as Chairman by Sir Charles P. Lucas, for many years one of the Permanent Under Secretaries at the Colonial Office, and a well-known leading authority on Colonial History, whose ripe experience, gained during many years of public service, will be of great value to the Council at a time when the Institute is developing fresh activities in so many directions.

"You will have observed from the Journal, that for reasons of health, Mr. Boosé has retired from the position of Secretary, and has accepted the newly created appointment of Travelling Commissioner. He will devote his whole time to increasing the membership of the Institute and to the establishment of Local Committees and Branches both at home and overseas—a task for which his experience gives him unique qualifications. At the Council's invitation, I have succeeded him as Secretary of the Institute, and at the same time have become Joint Editor of 'United Empire,' with Mrs. Archibald Colquhoun. I am sure that I shall not ask in vain for your kind co-operation and assistance in performing the duties which are now laid upon me as Secretary.

"At the Annual Meeting of the Institute, which was held on the 20th April, the Council was granted authority to purchase from the South Eastern Railway Company, on favourable terms, a property consisting of five houses adjoining the Institute in Craven Street. For this purpose a loan of £20,000 is being raised with the Commercial Union Assurance Company, Ltd., at 4½ per cent. on the security of the existing building, £15,000 of which will be required for the purchase, and £5000 will be drawn later on as required for any alterations of the property. The transaction is not yet complete, but it is hoped that possession may be obtained in a few weeks' time. This purchase will afford an opportunity for the much needed extension of our premises, but nothing will be probably done in this direction until the conclusion of the War. The possession of the houses in question gives the Institute a commanding position in the island site, on which our building stands, and, in the opinion of our Surveyor, considerably enhances the value of our present holding on Northumberland Avenue.

"A full report of the proceedings at the Annual Meeting will be found, as usual, in the Year Book of the Institute, the publication of which has been somewhat delayed owing to the changes in the Staff above mentioned. A short summary of them was included in the May number of the Journal, and I would particularly draw your attention to the weighty speeches of our President, Earl Grey, and of our late Chairman of Council, Lt-Gen. Sir Bevan Edwards, both of whom dealt with matters of great importance to the Institute. I would also refer you to their remarks upon the necessity of increasing our membership both overseas and in the United Kingdom.

"The council has taken the important step of sending one of its members, Mr. Harry Brittain, on a mission to the United States of America, where, partly owing to the War, pro-British feeling is at present strongly in evidence, and where very large numbers of British subjects permanently reside. Mr. Brittain, who has an intimate knowledge of the United States, and was one of the founders of the Pilgrims' Club, (of which he is the President on this side of the Atlantic) has met with gratifying success. At the time of his departure we had only two Corresponding Secretaries in the United States—at New York and Chicago. Since his arrival, with the assistance of these two gentlemen, Mr. Alleyne Ireland and Dr. G. Cooke Adams, who have thrown themselves most enthusiastically into the work, he has materially increased our membership, which was practically confined to New York and Chicago, and has recommended the appointment of Honorary Corresponding Secretaries in Boston, Los Angeles and San Francisco. He has addressed meetings in these and other cities, and has laid the foundation for a large extension of the Institute's work in both the Eastern and Western States.

"The activities of the Institute connected with the War have gone on continuously, and have been reported in successive numbers of the Journal 'United Empire.'

"The Journal still presents, as far as possible, a faithful and connected picture of the leading events of the War in Europe as well as in other parts of the world. The co-operation of many well known writers has been obtained, and their contributions have admittedly been of great interest and importance. I would specially draw your attention to the various well-informed papers on the subsidiary campaigns in which the British Empire is engaged, and to the series of articles entitled 'Kindred Societies. Past and Present,' which has attracted considerable notice, and is of permanent value. The Council feels much satisfaction in the retention of the services of Mrs. Colquhoun in connection with the Journal, which was the creation of her distinguished husband, its late editor.

"As announced in the July number of 'United Empire,' the Council has taken another new departure which is expected to have far-reaching results. To quote the words of the editorial note in question, 'The main, if not the whole, burden of the lecture work of the Institute has so far fallen upon Mr. Garrison; and, while retaining his services for the Popular Lectures on Empire subjects, in which he has achieved such remarkable success, it is now proposed to broaden and deepen the basis of our educational efforts.' It is hoped to accomplish this by linking up to the Institute the 'Imperial Studies Movement' connected with the University of London; and Dr. A. P. Newton of King's College, to whose energy and ability the movement owes much of its satisfactory progress, has been appointed 'Organiser of Imperial Studies Lectures for the Institute. Active operation will be commenced in the Autumn by the delivery of lectures by highly-qualified experts in several University centres, beginning with Bristol.

"Mr. Garrison, our Official Lecturer, has addressed over 100 meetings on the subject of the War in different parts of the country, and his audiences at the Royal Albert Hall and the London Opera House were exceptionally large. A considerable amount of money has been raised in this way for the various War Funds, and the enlistment of numerous recruits has also resulted from these meetings, for which Mr. Garrison's services were given gratuitously.

"The War Services Committee, of which Mr. Coleman P. Hyman is Honorary Secretary, has done useful, if unobtrusive work, in introducing to the military and civil authorities Fellows and their friends arriving from overseas and desiring employment. A large number of commissions in the Army and various other appointments have been obtained by the efforts of the Committee and its Honorary Secretary.

"The Voluntary Assistance Department of the War Office continue to occupy two large rooms placed at their disposal by the Institute; and it has been the means of enlisting over 10,000 men for special trades required by the Army. A letter of cordial thanks for the accommodation and assistance given has been received by the Council from the Chief Recruiting Staff Officer of Scotland Yard.

"Owing to the War, it has been resolved by the Council not to renew for the current year the Monograph Competition which is open to candidates of all ages, and which includes a prize of One Hundred Guineas and a Gold Medal, together with the Life Membership of the Institute. The same procedure has been adopted in regard to the Essay Competition for University Students, but the School Competition has not been dropped, and has met with an exceptionally good response from educational authorities in all parts of the Empire. As you are aware, the subject selected for the present year's competition is 'The probable influence of the War upon the relations between the Mother Country and the Dominions.'

"A meeting of the Joint Committee of the Royal Colonial Institute and the Victoria League was held on Tuesday, July 6th, when subjects of interest to both bodies were discussed. This Committee has also the benefit of an informal association with the Over-Seas Club and the National Patriotic League of Britons Overseas, owing to the presence of Mr. Evelyn Wrench, who represents both these institutions, as well as being a member of the Council of the Institute.

"I am glad to be able to report that, in spite of the exceptional conditions created by the War, the increase in the Membership of the Institute which has been such a marked feature of recent years, shows but little diminution. Up to June 30th no less than 631 Fellows and Associates were added to the roll, and almost every post which arrived in Northumberland Avenue brings letters from new candidates and enquirers.

"In conclusion I have to thank you, on behalf of the Council, for the efforts you have made, and are making, to assist them in the great work, and to express the hope that you will use your best endeavours to increase our membership in the future as you have done in the past. At this great and grave crisis in this history of the Empire, the co-operation of all its parts, which was so gloriously evidenced in the military and naval operation of the last twelve months warrants an ever-brightening hope for that Closer Union of the Mother Country and the Dominions which it is the main object of the Institute to foster and achieve. (Applause).

There were a considerable number of members present and their appreciation of what Sir Harry Wilson had said was fully manifest.

Sir Reginald Tower then called upon Mr. W. Warden, the Hon. Secretary of the local branch of the Institute to address the meeting.

Mr. Warden said that recently they had been deluged with pamphlets from the Patriotic League of Britons Overseas, also from the Overseas Club and the British Empire League which were all doing good patriotic work. What he wanted to point out was that the Royal Colonial Institute, which co-operated with all these Societies had been established for nearly half a century doing the excellent work of uniting Britons overseas and it was therefore 'The real MacKay.'

Every loyal Briton should feel, that to belong to it, was a privilege and should associate himself with an Institute carrying on the various activities referred to in Sir Harry Wilson's report.

Dr. Parkin's words well described the ideal of the Institute, 'The Colonial Institute was founded and lives upon intense conviction. It stands for the great central idea of a 'United Empire'; its full realisation we believe will be for the good, not only of our own race but, of the whole world, one third of whose population lives under the shelter of the liberty, safety and justice of the British flag.'

Those words were spoken before this great war and how much more significant were they to-day, when the spirit of self-sacrifice had shown itself in the heart of the Empire and in all parts of the Empire and beyond the limits of the Empire? The Britons in South America had done, were doing their share by sending volunteers whose lot was formerly cast in Argentina, Brazil, Chili and Uruguay.

Words failed to describe the spirit of patriotic self-sacrifice. Historians would describe the part that Britons had taken in the great war, as the most glorious page in the history of the British Empire.

Some splendid men had gone from Argentina and members honoured four of their Fellows who had fought and died for them and the Empire: Harold Percy Clarke, C. René Harrow, J. H. A. Wailer, and S. H. Cripps.

"What more can a man do than lay down his life for his friends."

Mr. Warden then read a letter from one of the Fellows, R. H. Austin Sparks, (to a friend, Mr. Baxter) who like many other volunteers was pluckily fighting for the justice, liberty and rights of humanity.

This letter, among other things, said:—

"To make things clear I must tell you that since last writing you I have been attached to the Royal Flying Corps as an Artillery Observer, one's job being to range big guns—through the medium of 'wireless' on to enemy positions.

"At 5.30 p.m. on the 10th instant I went over the enemy's lines at an altitude of 6500 feet or so, and about 7 p.m. the machine was hit by an 'Archie' (shell from anti-aircraft gun) they had been pasting us the whole time we were on their side, which amongst other damages knocked the petrol tank to bits. It was a high explosive shell, and a fragment caught my leg. We commenced planeing towards our own lines, but were falling rapidly, which resulted in our crossing the "Hun" trench line pretty low. These gentry being opportunists turned loose a very hell of machine gun and rifle fire which was not improving. However, we got over to our own side, but the machine being more or less out of control made a bad landing, hit a cow, then a hedge, and finally capsized on to a deep sunk road.

"I was slung some distance and landed in a battery emplacement of the Canadian Division. The Huns started sending over shrapnel to the spot where we fell. (Some joy ride.) The greatest piece of luck, though, was not catching fire up in the "blue" after being hit. In the Flying Brigade one gets "war" full and plenty. My personal damage is of little importance. I am supposed to be suffering also from "shock," but that's piffle, and I am looking forward to going back to my job.

"Are there any Britishers left out yonder who are of an age to serve?"

"Don't fret about the outlook. It's uphill and likely to last some time yet, but we'll fix them. The spirit of the troops is wonderful and they're keeping very healthy."

SIR REGINALD TOWER

Sir Reginald Tower, who followed, said that he had but a remark to add. Sir Harry Wilson had addressed his report to all the Secretaries of the Royal Colonial Institute, in the world, but had addressed those concerning the 621 new Fellows to one person only. Everyone knew what Mr. Warden had done in gathering in Fellows for the Institute. (Applause) Since his (Sir Reginald's) return from England he had had no opportunity of telling how he had received an invitation from the Institute to a dinner in London. At this dinner Dr. Parkin proposed the toast of "The Dominions Beyond the Seas," and it was at the time that he used the words that Mr. Warden had quoted. Prince Alexander of Teck, who had just about then received the appointment of Governor General of Canada in place of the Duke of Connaught, a position which he had not yet taken up owing to his services being demanded elsewhere, replied on behalf of the toast, after which he (Sir Reginald) was called upon. He had explained how he did not know the Dominions Beyond the Sea, but could speak of three or four years' experience in Buenos Aires, a dominion beyond a dominion of the seas.

Sir Reginald told his hearers how they would blush if they only knew what he had said of them, and said that the applause with which his remarks had been greeted was even greater than he had expected.

The British Minister, in conclusion, referred to the Fellows who were leaving, three of whom were present amongst them last night. He hoped for cheery news from them and wished them "God speed and good luck." Everyone knew what Mr. Darbyshire had done, and would continue to do to keep up the reputation of the British Nation, and he would be welcomed back with the others with every heartiness. Then would be the time for a meeting to arrange a celebration to all those who had gone and to all those who were doing what they could. Sir Reginald hoped he would be present, and that it would be a worthy celebration. (Loud applause).

MR. HENRY DARBYSHIRE

On the Chairman calling upon Mr. Henry Darbyshire, that member asked "Sir Reginald, have I to talk? (cries of Yes). I came here for a smoking concert and to meet my Fellows. I can't talk, but I can tell you this, why have we only got a miserable 600 of new members, why not 6000, because I have roped in some 24, and not one of them have ever gone back on me. I got one member with the aid of a poker. (Laughter and cries of "name.") It is quite true isn't it Mr. Secretary? And this member would now tell you how proud he was of being a Fellow if he would only own up. (Laughter). Now if all would do the same thing as I have done, we should not have a new membership of a miserable 6000, I mean 600. (Loud laughter). I mean it. There should be nothing in a cypher, but don't let it come before, but after the others. Everyone at home is working for the Empire, and we are helping the Empire too. There are plenty of men in this country and in Paraguay. Dr. Stewart, I roped him in when over there, and tried my best to get him to become a life member, but he was not on to that. He is 80 years of age, and preferred to pay his subscription year by year. (Loud laughter). Now if all you Fellows would get Fellows and fellow Fellows we should double our membership in no time and it was in the noble head of our noble Secretary that that came out of. (Laughter). I met a man in Entre Rios, who would not join because he said we were all swells. What with Sir Reginald Tower and Mr. Henry Darbyshire—. . . (loud laughter). But we must get rid of that feeling, that swelled feeling and—I really have no more to say. (Loud applause and laughter).

MR. W. A. McCALLUM.

Mr. W. A. McCallum, replying for those who were going away, returned his thanks for all the kind things said of them. It was sufficient to be a member of the Institute, sufficient honour, without additional kindness. Mr. Darbyshire had said all that could be safely (loud laughter) said about getting new members. The speaker re-thanked all for their good wishes.

MR. A. G. PRUDEN

Mr. A. G. Pruden spoke of the success with which the aeroplane, the River Plate, had met. They had now $18,000, and before the end of the month would have their total, and if persons did not subscribe now, they would be too late. He thanked Sir Reginald Tower and Mr. Warden for the great assistance given.

MR. B. GWYN.

Mr. Basil Gwyn spoke of the Cigarette Fund, and said that they wanted addresses and more addresses. Subscriptions which were already over $1200—could be sent with addresses to himself at 278 Balcarce.

Mr. Millington Drake then proposed the singing of "For they are jolly good fellows," and the meeting closed with "Auld Lang Syne."

ARGENTINE CONSULAR SERVICE

IMPORTANT CHARGES.

The President of the Republic yesterday signed a decree of reorganization of the Argentine diplomatic and consular service. The decree provides for the promotion and transference of officers according to merit and length of service. The details of the decree have not yet been officially made public nor have the legations in foreign countries been notified of the change, but it is possible to give some of the promotions and changes brought about by the new law.

Sr. Alejandro del Carril is promoted from a consul general of the second class to the first class and goes to Asuncion, Paraguay.

Sr. Theobald Checchi goes to Odessa as consul general of the third class, instead of the fifth class which he held previously.

Sr. Saguier, recently appointed to Rio de Janeiro, leaves a vacancy of the first class in Rotterdam, which position will be filled by Sr. William MacCarthy, lately in England.

Messrs. Arthur Healy, Carlos Carrasal, Vidal and Romulo Casal become consuls of the third class and Sr. Torromé is appointed consul general of the first class in Liverpool and Sr. Aramburu to a similar position in Southampton.

THE COLON SCANDAL

A MISMANAGED SEASON

COMMENTS BY THE MUNICIPALITY

Interesting and instructive is the report of the Municipality on the results of the past season of grand opera at the Municipal Theatre, more generally known as the Colon. Without wishing to lay undue emphasis on the fact, it may be said that the report bears out almost in its entirety the criticism expressed in these columns a month or so ago. Briefly, the impresarios are charged with studying their own personal profit to the detriment of the public, and it is declared that many operas were staged without sufficient preparation, and that the subscribers were practically forced to pay extra for performances that ought by rights to have been included in their subscription in the shape of "first nights." The artistes, with a few notorious exceptions, were not up to the advertised level of the theatre, the orchestra and the chorus were at times depleted to such an extent as to detract from the value of the spectacle, and generally the theatre was not managed in accordance with its tradition and the terms of the concession.

This, of course, only bears out what everyone interested in things theatrical knows already. Given the great "clou," Caruso, with a few other stars of well-deserved fame, the management were "out for the dollars," to use an expressive Americanism. A well covered subscription list ensured against loss, and the policy appears to have been summed up in an attempt to get in ready money as quickly as possible by the sale of every available seat in the house. That the Press were badly treated goes without saying. Admittedly in a season such as that of the Colon, some discrimination must be shown by the management if it would avoid having its profitable seating accommodation filled by "deadheads." But inasmuch as the true critic does not as a rule expect to have guaranteed to him a seat for every performance, whilst he has a right to demand entry on such occasions, first-nights and so forth, when special interest attaches to the show, the management have been very short-sighted in their behaviour. There is a well-founded opinion that similar tactics will be tried next year, but it is to be hoped that this municipal exposé will prove effective. In so far as the Press is concerned, it may be trusted to look after its own interests, but in other matters the Municipality will be well advised to tighten the bonds. The evergreen question of the re-sale of seats was a scandal during the past season. The management, when but a few operas remained to be produced, declared that they knew nothing about it and instituted an active "investigation," thereby apparently believing that they could throw dust in the eyes of the authorities. Next year, one understands, there will be closer control of the box-office by the Municipality, while the artistic side of the organization will also be followed very closely by an honorary committee of well-known gentlemen interested in opera. This is all to the good. What the musical public now awaits with anxiety is the promised series of symphonic concerts billed for September and October. Under the direction of M. Messager they should be good, but—qui vivra verra.

A WINTER CAMPAIGN

GERMANY CLAIMS TO BE EFFICIENTLY EQUIPPED.

New York, Aug. 27.

From Berlin it is stated that the German Army and Naval Departments announce that they hold a sufficient supply of woollen garments, shawls, underwear, socks, gloves, fur and skin coats as protectors for all the requirements of a winter campaign.

AFFRAY IN LA PLATA

PUBLIC EMPLOYEES STREET FUSILADE

An unpleasant light is thrown on some aspects of social life in La Plata by an occurrence which took place on Aug. 27 in broad daylight in a public place. The affair is the more discreditable as the persons concerned are or should be, so far removed from the type of mere "Ché boys" that they were considered competent to hold public office.

One is Tomas Andrade and the other Ramon Isel, of the Registration of Properties, both young men of respectable position. Having quarrelled violently at a Social gathering on Aug. 27, the "conocidos" met next morning about 11 in the Plaza San Martin. The language on both sides was exceedingly strong and free and Isel losing any self-control he ever possessed, struck his opponent a violent blow with his fist. The latter being like all young gentlemen of any pretensions to social standing as well as all ruffians, provided with a revolver, instantly drew and hastened to sacrifice his opponent to his injured "dignified." His aim was even worse than his intention so that Isel, having also the usual loaded weapon also drew and returned the fire wounding his adversary in the stomach and intestines. His condition is desperate. There is another brilliant example set to the public by Public Employees.

COLISEO THEATRE

CIRCUS NELKY.

The inauguration of the equestrian and variety circus at the above theatre was attended with great success. The Coliseo Theatre was packed to its utmost, and the great majority of the audience consisted of the juvenile element, who were well catered for in the programme. The clowns were all extremely comical, and special mention must be made of Szedt and Borella, who kept the audience amused for twenty minutes with humorous patter. The performing dogs of Sta. Emerita was a clever number, as was also the six ponies belonging to Sr. Nelky. This turn was one of the best, and was only equalled by the magnificent African Lion act, in which Sr. Nelky showed a complete mastery over some of the finest specimens of wild animals ever seen in a cage. Quite another kind of turn was that given by Mr. Max Norton, the human aquarium, who drinks fifty glasses of beer with the greatest ease, following it up with the swallowing of live frogs and fishes, all of which he returns unharmed and whole to the tank from which they came. An original act was that of the Four Buckleys, who, after some smart juggling, introduced a novelty in electrical creation, which we are sure has never been seen here. The whole show, in fact, is well worth a visit, and both grown-ups and children will find it to their interest and amusement.

CATTLE FROM ARGENTINA

MAY BE LANDED IN ENGLAND.

London, Aug. 28.

The Minister of Agriculture has published an order, to take effect on September 21, after which date subject to the inspection of the Veterinary Authorities, cattle on the hoof from Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil may be disembarked at Cardiff or at Avonmouth.

The beasts will be killed at the port of arrival. This order will remain in force until three months after the war.

HELP THE AGED!

BRITISH AGED AND INFIRM FUND

DEFICIT ON YEAR'S WORKING

A deficit is reported in the year's past working of the British Aged and Infirm Fund. Unless the public cover the amount $1,868.02—pensions will have to be reduced. The following appeal has therefore been issued by the Chairman of the Committee, Mr. James Begg:—

"Revenue.—Owing to the many calls on the community, receipts have fallen off somewhat and a choice had to be made between reducing the amounts voted to the old people or incurring a small deficit. The Committee decided not to decrease the grants but to trust to the generosity of the community to cover the shortage of income over expenditure for the year, amounting to $1,868.02 cl— it would have been cruel to have reduced the pensions during such a bitter winter.

"The rule we have laid down is that the expenditure should not be allowed to exceed the income, but the Committee hopes that the community will 'see them through,' for several reasons.

"In the first place, the amount is so moderate that a very small general donation will square the accounts, and every one who can, would undoubtedly rather give a few paper dollars than have one poor old person left unaided.

"Secondly.—It would have been really cruel to increase the hardships of the aged poor by reducing their allowances.

"Thirdly.—Although other calls are numerous and great our old people must be attended to; they cannot be entirely neglected because of the war.

"Fourthly.—The sufferings of a few old people may seem a small matter compared to the prevailing pain and grief, but each individual suffering is as great in degree as that of one million persons—the point I wish to make is, that it is, after all, only by alleviating each separate case that the pains of humanity can be lightened.

"The general meeting will take place during September, and the Committee hopes to be able to announce at the Meeting that the deficit has been wiped out and so save the new Committee from the painful obligation of cutting down the pension list; such a very little is required that it would be a shame to the community if such a course had to be adopted.

"Please send your donation as soon as possible (no matter how small it is, it will be gratefully acknowledged) to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. F. P. Simpson, 750 Moreno."

BANQUET TO DON MARTIN GIL

As a testimonial of the high esteem in which he is held by all sections of the community (Germans answer for themselves) especially among highly cultured and intellectual circles, Don Martin Gil, the eminent astronomer, whose weather predictions are of marvellous correctness was entertained to a banquet at the Ateneo Nacional on August 26. Many gentlemen connected with the universities, literature, science and art were present. Dr. Dardo Rocha who presided, Señores Eliseo Canton, Ernesto Quesada and the President of the Ateneo Dr. David Peña with very many others with numerous ladies. Dr. David Peña proposed the guest of the evening in a felicitous and eloquent speech which was much applauded. Sr. Martin Gil who was much gratified replied in a polished and scholarly address and sat down amid a perfect ovation of applause and vivas!

RED CROSS DANCE

AT THE PLAZA HOTEL.

A most brilliant and successful dance was held at the Plaza Hotel last evening in aid of the British Red Cross Funds, which was organised by Mrs. Robert Bowen, assisted by Miss Boote, Miss Lisouski, Miss Baillie, Miss Gallacher, Miss Morrison, Miss Caminos, Miss Hardie, Miss Gibson, and Miss Boyd, and several gentlemen.

The function was, apart from its immense success, a social gathering such as has rarely been seen amongst the British community in Buenos Aires, and the organisers may well feel flattered with the result of their efforts. There were some 497 persons present amongst whom were the following:—Misses Bowminster, Boyd Scott, Vera Scott, Liskowski, Egaña Isabel Egaña, Dolan, Deuton, Luisa Dixon, Stella MacLoughlin, Hirst, Boote, Cowes, Bridges, Lena Cowes, Caminos, May Bridge, Moore, Vera Moore, Ocantes, Elena Cabo, Clutterbuck, Bulman, Browne, de Sosa, Helena Smart, Harding, McGregor, McGaul, Melida McGaul, Aquilo, Baillie, Campbell, Cribbs, Woch, Lalanne, Morgan, Elsie Morgan, Rodman, Gibson, Esther Gibson, Maude Gibson, David, Lazos, Vignoles, Goodliffe, Connie Goodliffe, Heale, Mujica, Maquire, Dodds, Lisowski, Simons, Barues, Gildea, Kitching, Boddy, Stockdale, Ward, Peard, Aphia Peard, Dorothy Boyd, Derk Levin Tagle, Gorgales, Viola Ritching, Avelina Kitching, McMillan Boyd, Cappi, Gorgolas, Crawford, Chantrell, Jacobs, Harris, Luisa Harris, Ethel MacGaul, Emila MacGaul, Isabel Roberts, Bonorino, Miro, Rivadavia, Spraggan, Celia Spraggan, M. and T. TRAGEDY ON THE THAMES

SIXTEEN TRAINING SHIP BOYS DROWNED.

London, Aug. 30.

An officer and sixteen boys of the training ship Cornwall have been drowned in the Thames near Purfleet while engaged in boat practice. A tug ran into and sank the boat.

VICTORIA SAILORS' HOME

SATURDAY NIGHT'S CONCERT.

An excellent concert was arranged by Mrs. F. P. Hansen which took place at the Victoria Sailors' Home on Saturday. It was unfortunate that neither Mr. Victor Reid nor Mr. Ernest Gough could appear, both of them being ill. It fell to Mrs. Herald and to Mr. Stanley Parker to fill their places and thoroughly well did they do so. Encores from a good audience were frequent and Mrs. Herald was untiring in her successful efforts to please. Miss Beatrice Tabor, Miss Lucy Grater and Miss Minnie Purdue were recalled on each occasion as was Mrs. Hansen and Mr. Parker.

Mr. H. W. Crispin is an excellent accompanist and was by no means easily worked and his playing did much to make the concert the success it was.

The programme was as follows:—Piano solo, Star Dust, Master Frank Hansen. Duet The Belle of the Earber's Ball, encore, Why are they laughing at me?, Misses Beatrice Tabor and Lucy Grater. Recitation, Brier Rose, encore, Kittens and Baby, Miss Minnie C. Purdue. Song, The Bandolero, and Nita Gitana, Mr. Stanley Parker. Duet, Trust her not, Mr. and Mrs. Herald. Song, The Nightingale, and Songs of Araby, Mrs. Hansen. Recitation, How young Hokev enlisted, and The Nut, Mrs. Herald.

Part II.—Piano solo, In the Night, Master F. Hansen. Song, My little wet home in the trench, and Sister Susie sewing-shirts for soldiers, Mrs. Herald. Recitation, The well of St. Keyne, Miss Minnie Purdue. Song, Somewhere a voice is calling, and Poor wondering one, Mrs. Hansen. Song, Maid of Malabar, and The Trumpeter, Mr. Stanley Parker. Duet, Oh you beautiful doll, and Tipperary, Misses Beatrice Tabor and Lucy Grater. Recitation, The old crock, and The cruiser, Mrs. Herald. God save the King.

IN AID OF RED CROSS FUNDS

DANCE AT THE ITALIAN HALL, QUILMES.

A highly successful function in aid of the Red Cross Society was held at the Italian Hall, Quilmes, on Aug. 30.

The early part of the day was dedicated to the children, for whom were provided a cinematograph entertainment and a dance. The evening "bill" was filled with a dance and Bridge Drive.

Nothing could have been better than the arrangements made, and the success which attended the efforts of the ladies and gentlemen organisers was exactly what one has become accustomed to expect at Quilmes, whose entertainments in aid of patriotic or other funds have always met with such an excellent response.

The hall was beautifully decorated and the floor in perfect order.

Mrs. James Dey, Mrs. Pite, Mrs. Lovett, Mrs. Ross, Mrs. Steed, and Mrs. Driver were responsible for much of the evening's success. No estimate of the amount by which the Fund would benefit was possible, but some 300 to 400 tickets were sold, and success assured.

Miss Ross presented two prizes for the Bridge competition, and Messrs. George Brown and company, and Mrs. Dey provided others.

Mrs. Lovett, assisted by Mrs. Bate, Miss Rouse, Miss Cater and Mrs. Dalrymple were other ladies who took upon themselves the burden of making the function a success, and who are to be congratulated upon the success achieved.

Messrs. Gath and Chaves gave an unlimited supply of sweets and dainties for the children, which further assisted in the general enjoyment.

OVER-AGE EX-VOLUNTEERS OR EX-TERRITORIALS

(To the Editor.)

Sir,—In the River Plate Republics there must be a number of Britishers who are over the prescribed age limit for active service, but who, having had some years of volunteer or territorial training, would be useful in the preliminary drill training of recruits for Kitchener's army.

It is only through the good offices of our British Press in the River Plate that some idea could be obtained as to what number of men there are here, coming under this category—willing to serve. I would, therefore, invite an expression of opinion through your columns, to, if possible, obtain some concrete idea of what number of men who have had military training, there are over the age of 40 but under 50.

If present indications of the progress of the operations in Europe offer any criterion, the time may possibly come when the services of such men would be acceptable.

Yours, etc.

AN OVER-AGE WOULD-BE VOLUNTEER.

CHILDREN IN FAIRYLAND

The hall of the American Church on Aug. 30, was packed with little folks at the fortnightly cinema matinée. The splendid programme was given without a moment's hitch or delay from beginning to end. To say that the children were delighted would be putting it mildly. They were rapturously enthusiastic. One of the most notable and beautiful of the films was "A Day in the United States Military Academy." It showed most elaborately in every detail the drilling and working of the cadets in Uncle Sam's great school at West Point. All the films were so good that it would require a description of every one to do justice to the occasion. The next matinée will be on the afternoon of Saturday, September 11.

PRO-ALLY PROPAGANDA IN URUGUAY

"POR LA CIVILIZACION."

The 13th number of Por la Civilización has now been issued. Its circulation is rapidly increasing and now extends over Uruguay, Paraguay, Brazil, Argentina and Bolivia.

The introductory article "Socorriendo a los Pelgas que Sufren" is an eloquent eulogy on the initiative of the local British Patriotic Committee in appealing to Uruguayan estancieros to donate steers and cows in aid of the Belgian refugees in the United Kingdom. Interesting results of this appeal up to date are given. Some £10,000 worth of beef is being shipped at present, and from reports to hand the final result bids fair to reach the magnificent value of £30,000—a proof that Uruguay with its population of slightly over a million is one of the most generous countries in the world. A great tribute is paid to the Hon. Secretary of the British Patriotic Fund for the thorough manner in which the appeal was organised and worked.

"Los Alemanes en Estados Unidos" gives interesting statistics respecting the German population in the United States. There are 8,282,618 Germans in that country. Of these 3,911,847 were born in the United States, 1,869,590 are of German extraction and 2,501,590 emigrated from Germany. British nationality counts with 10,037,420; Italians, 2,151,422; French, 1,357,169; and Russians Poles, 1,707,640.

This number of Por la Civilización bristles with short but extremely original informing articles, drawn from authoritative sources—a striking contrast to the second childhood effusion of local German "kultur" which are simply an insult to the discerning intelligence of the shrewd calculating Latin-American.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

August 24.

News in Brief.

The Honorary Secretary of the Cordoba Athletic Club has received a copy of the bye-laws of the Lawn Tennis League of the River Plate from Harry F. Prescott, Hon. Secretary and Treasurer of the League.

The work on the new Central Argentine Station is progressing favourably. The portion under construction is now being plastered outside, and the interior work is well advanced.

Chief of Police, Colonel Gonzalez, has resigned his post, and Colonel Belisario Villegas has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

A new Plaza is being projected to be situated in front of the Hospital de Clinicas.

Dr. Juan F. Cafferata, National Deputy, arrived in town to-day from Buenos Aires.

Football.

The most important football match played on Sunday was between the first division teams Belgrano and General Paz Juniors, the former winning a close and interesting game by 2-1.

The General Paz Juniors scored the only point in the first half when Petit kicked a goal from a foul committed by Everdich near the Belgrano goal.

Eight minutes after play started in the second half Lazcano passed to Figueroa who shot a pretty goal. 12 minutes later Alonso beat Paz with a sharp corner shot. This was the last goal of the day.

Many games were played in the second and third divisions.

Circus Comes to Town.

The Jockey Club Circus has arrived in town and are doing a good business on the lot at the corner of Santa Rosa and Sucre. The "6 Merry Girls," English Acrobatic Dancers, are one of the best items on the bill. The animal part of the programme has been seen here before when Keller's circus played here.

New Dique San Roque.

The Legislature have passed the decree to build the new San Roque Dam, at a cost of $5,458,080. Engineers A. Gonzalez, Jorge Duclout and E. Gavier have prepared the plans for which they are to receive 2-12 per cent. of the total cost namely $136,452.00.

Surprise Party.

A very pleasant surprise party was held on Saturday night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Babb, in General Paz, the following being among the "surprisers":—Miss Doris Robinson, Miss Phyllis Davis, Miss Bessie Hughes, Mrs. Talbot, Mr. Arthur Hughes Wright, Miss Phyllis Symonds, Miss Gladys Symonds, Mrs. Baxter, Miss Gracie Baxter, Mr. and Mrs. F. Lindemann, Mr. and Mrs. Walters, Mr. Charles Davis, Mr. Castellanos, Mr. Schultz, Mr. Brigstocke, Mr. Scriebler and Mr. Prince. Dancing was enjoyed until the "wee small hours."

A WORD ABOUT THE NEW TRENCH RUBBER SOCK

The continued reports from the Front of the discomfort our brave defenders were suffering by standing in the Trenches for hours on end in deep water and oozy mud, suggested to us that Rubber would help to alleviate the discomfort and subsequent suffering.

The wearing of two pairs of woollen socks simply meant that more dampness was retained once the socks became saturated with water. What was required was something to prevent the water getting to the foot.

It is very thin, therefore takes up but little additional room in the boot, and keeps the foot warm and perfectly dry.

The method of wearing the Sock is to put an ordinary woollen sock next the skin, then the Trench Sock over this, and a second woollen sock on top of the rubber sock.

With a pair of Trench Rubber Socks inside his boots the soldier can stand water for hours without experiencing cold feet or the slightest dampness.

The Football League.

The position of the various teams in the first division of the football league at present are:—

	P.	W.	L.	D.	P.
Pacific	8	6	2	0	12
Portenians	7	4	2	1	9
Olympic	6	4	2	0	8
Argentines	8	4	4	0	8

Items in Brief.

An illuminated address is to be presented to Sr. J. M. Arrechea on his retirement after thirty years of service in the custom house here. It is to be signed by all the principal firms in Bahia Blanca, and will be accompanied by a present of a dinner service.

Last week in the district of Tandil a stock breeder named Sr. Salaberry, received news of the theft of some of his cattle and with his two sons and men went out after them. Finding four men driving out a herd of 35 heifers, who instead of stopping when called on to do so, fired on them with their revolvers, they in return started to shoot at the robbers with revolvers and carbines. One of the thieves was killed. The rest however managed to make good their escape and have not since been arrested by the police, although Sr. Salaberry and his men have been detained until after the inquest on the body of the one killed.

The commission of public works have decided to suspend the limit fixed by the law for the constructions on the Pacific Railway at Port Galvan, Lujan branch, Cuyo branch and the Guatraché and Remeco branches.

Street improvements are still being carried out in various parts, trees are being placed on the sidewalks in Calle Donado and La Plata, and in the plaza the concrete pavement greatly improves the walks there.

A decree has been signed by the Government of the Republic appointing Señor E. Elordi, Governor of the Territory of Neuquen. This is the fourth occasions on which Sr. Elordi has occupied the position.

The market for oats is again very slack the present price being $5.60. There is scarcely any demand at all for barley as none of the merchants are buying this at present. The last price quoted was $6.70.

A Sailing Vessel under Steam.

An uncommon sight was seen at Bahia Blanca on Thursday, that of a sailing vessel approaching the port without any of her sails set and smoke apparently issuing from her mainmast. The ship is a Danish schooner, four masted and besides her sails she has a 240 horse power engine driven by crude oil, astern, as well as a donkey boiler amidships. Her boats are carried aft, and the bridge is amidships. When the wind is fair she is propelled by sail but when it is otherwise the engine is started astern and she is driven by her propeller, and can thereby attain a speed up to seven knots. The crew on deck only consist of four men, as the sails can be hoisted and rigged by means of the steam winches, which are also used for the working of the cargo. The vessel has one hold running the whole length of the vessel with three hatches and carries 700 tons when loaded. Her ballast is water, which is contained in three tanks and when light she only draws eight feet. She is able to carry forty tons of fresh water besides her oil supply. Her name is "Hjalmar Sorensen" and her home port Nykjobing, Denmark. She was launched only six months ago, and is the first ship of this type that her owners have possessed. The exhaust from the oil engine goes up the mainmast and is given off some twenty feet above the deck. When the engine is not in use the propeller is disconnected. The accommodation on board although limited as to space is quite sufficient and very comfortable and clean. The Captain has his wife and child with him as passengers.

Sports and Pastimes

THE TURF

SUNDAY'S RACING AT PALERMO

Ocurrencia has lost !

It is a somewhat extraordinary tale that we have to tell of Sunday's racing at Palermo, and its sad results. Chief interest centres round the Classic event, the Premio Rivadavia, for which Melik, Packoy, Ocurrencia, Capullo, Gontran, and Palanta were entrants, and as was only natural, Ocurrencia was again the great attraction. For the first time in the parade she passed down along the public enclosures, and it must be said although seemingly well enough, she gave, immediately, the impression of just a shade of listlessness and was sweating slightly. However this in our opinion did not affect the result of the race, which Melik won a head from Packoy, with Ocurrencia only third three-quarters of a length behind !! It was a most amazing result, and one which we can definitely say should never have taken place. No horse in its racing career is entirely free from errors of judgment on the part of its jockey. So far as Palermo is concerned perhaps they are more free from these when Torterolo is in the saddle than with any other jockey, but our firm opinion is, that yesterday it was Mingo's mistaken tactics that lost the race. Over confidence had something to do with it no doubt, and bad luck too (such luck as a jockey of Mingo's calibre should have eliminated) also played its part in this way. At the start Gontran got away with Packoy following, then Capullo, Palanta, Ocurrencia and Melik. After running 500 metres, Palanta passed into third place and Melik came ahead of the favourite, who was lying some eight lengths behind the leader. This to our minds was a mistake, Ocurrencia should have been a little closer. On coming round Belgrano bend, and for quite 200 metres of the straight, Ocurrencia was shut in, and this was the bad luck referred to above. Fast as Ocurrencia is she could not expect to slide away from such strong runners as Packoy and Melik in the same way she could with some others, and in the last distance give them a couple of lengths and a beating, for this is exactly what it would have come to. Torterolo had to pull out and then when he got going he was too late. Here especially it was that we suggest he was over confident and relied too much on Ocurrencia's finishing powers. She "came" alright when she got through (perhaps with not quite the same power as usual), but could not get up, and so, we have to record a defeat by three-quarters of a length. Not an inglorious defeat, because if one reckons what it means to pull out 700 metres from home, when a dead last, and try to catch Melik who was some four lengths ahead, one can realise, that Ocurrencia ran well enough and was not ingloriously defeated. But a defeat is a defeat, and in Ocurrencia's case we regret we have to record it. The time was only average time, and Ocurrencia herself has beaten it when only in a common canter, so it is quite palpable something was wrong, and what that was we believe we have accurately described.

It was a magnificent race and a gruelling finish, and although Melik won, the honours were Packoy's, who did all the hard work and stuck to his task in a remarkable way. There is one other point to be noted which tends to confirm our opinion of Ocurrencia's running, and that is that she was a full length and three quarters behind Melik, when they passed the betting board opposite the paddock stands, and yet in the distance from there to the finishing post she gained over a length. So she was not disgraced, and we believe next Sunday's race for the Jockey Club Stakes will prove this. The first event brought a horrible shock to the public, when Ermita lost to Sincera. The former was backed as though the race was a foregone conclusion, but she lost and once again Sincera scored a surprise win, and though not another $134 touch, she paid out handsomely enough.

The second event was a popular win for the debutante Pas-si-Mal from Mandolinata and Primera Pura. Murana on the latter was fined for not keeping a straight course, but it had no effect on the result. Pas-si-Mal is a nice Diamond Jubilee filly, and her victory was a most convincing one, but was not so good as that of Faruco in the next race, who won in a hack canter by three lengths from Juez de Raya and General Godly, with the favourite Fidelio running fourth. Furthermore this winner's time was considerably better than Pas-si-Mal's, and so we may expect to hear from him again very soon.

Campichuelo scored in the fourth event, and it is not uninteresting to notice that on Thursday he ran nowhere with 1688 tickets, and Navarro, and yet was well backed in fact had nearly 10,000 winning tickets on him for this event. Petit Duc was a hopeless failure and ran like a pig, losing ground all the time at the finish, to such an extent that one could hardly believe it possible. However such are the mysteries of the turf, and such the game.

Gefe proved himself once again by scoring a nice win over Full Hand in the sixth event, with Valenton running third. It was only interesting from the point of view of the winner's clean running, and even yet we don't think Gefe quite at the top of his form.

With Rotterdam out of the way, Last Reason was the only paper winner of the seventh event, which he secured from Tresor by three-quarters of a length in good time. Incidentally he brought the public their second win of the meeting, but only slightly assisted in putting matters straight, and with Dijital winning the last race from Lusitano, an event that the public had only a suspicion of, it cannot be said that they had a good day. Alsacia's running in this race was a surprise to many, who expected her to beat Dijital at equal weights, and it does not seem that the talent have yet got into their heads how good Dijital is. Kick II. was not in condition.

MONDAY'S RACING AT PALERMO

"Problematically interesting" was yesterday's meeting at Palermo, but little else. The public got it in the neck even worse than on Sunday, and the only favourite to score for them was Bolin in the seventh race. The two classics, as horse races, were not of much interest except as problems, which the public did not solve. The Premio Rio de la Plata was won by Diamant in hollow fashion from Andrade, and with Lauzun the favourite third. Cardoso on the latter did not ride a race of judgment, he went forging ahead and beat himself when it came to the struggle. Lemá rode a good race on the winner, who was so far neglected (and reasonably so on past performances), as to pay $19.55. The Asteroide people certainly got a nice little scoop for their patience.

The point in the other classic was the failure of Chaica and the very easy way in which Gosse the winner, after lying a good last all the way round, came through the lot at the finish and made hacks of the field. Another point was Arene's feeble performance in coming in dead last. Neither of these classics were deserving of the name, and there were more interesting races on the programme.

After his win on Sunday, Campichuelo was made favourite for yesterday's first event, but could only manage to run third to Banderalo, who won fairly easily from Zio, in the good time of 1.37 1/5. Beethoven did not put up a good race and the same, but even more, could be said of Palo Errao, considering his second to Campichuelo on Sunday. Chiribiribi made the running, only to fade away when the effort was made.

In the Premio Normando the running of Peñas Arriba was a great disappointment to many, but we incline to the view that so far as this horse is concerned it would be better to ignore the event. Without question he could have been been more prominent. The race was won by Deyanira, a reasonable candidate from Rumbosa and Encore, with Espinita, most unreasonably a favourite, running fourth. Rumbosa ran the best race she has yet done, but she is really not much good, nor is the winner, and we still think Peñas Arriba the best filly in the race.

A fearful public shock was witnessed with Pandillero winning the colts' race. Aluvion, a great tip, had a real hard try to score, but without avail. Englander must be beginning to think he is out of luck, it is quite some time since he had a win. El Es put up a good race and will yet run into first place. So neglected was the winner in the betting that he returned the handsome figure of $114.40 and apart from this his time was quite reasonably good. Strap, the favourite, surprised many by his sorry exhibition, and was not seen during the race. The winner got away first with a long lead and could not be caught. Duc de Rovigo ran fourth.

In the fourth event La Loca was once again beaten by a head, this time by Brigola, and it was the four kilos that did the trick. La Loca's loss was a nasty jar for the public especially following upon Pandillero's win. There was little to interest in the event except the finish, which was thoroughly well contested and Brigola can be called lucky to have won.

The two classics then brought further shocks to the public so that it was something of a relief when Bolin's number was hoisted, as the winner of the seventh event. It was a near thing and he only just managed to catch Rotterdam on the post after an exciting race, led as far as the populars by Stagno, who then gave up trying and was not even placed at the finish. Red Jacket, nicely in at the handicap, ran third. San Paulo was palpably not out for anything but a trial gallop, as his heavy shoes indicated, but despite this he ran fairly well, and may soon again be adding fresh laurels to those already gained.

Walter Scott at last scored again when it came to the running of the last event. This time at the expense of Prologo by three-quarters of a length. Royal Drop the favourite, ran a good last, and shewed once again that he is no use against decent horses. Podesta made the running from Prologo, and Walter Scott as usual brought up the rear, but at the distance he had the race well in hand, and won easily. Blanco rode a good race, certainly a better one than did T. N. Fernandez on Prologo. So ended a most disastrous day for the talent. The results were as follows :

SUNDAY'S RACING AT LA PLATA

The two particular points of interest in the racing at La Plata on Sunday was the win scored by Buri in the second race, and the complete and utter failure of Kiddy to even get placed in the last event. This race was won by Periwinkle, who turned on an amazing amount of speed at the finish and won with ease. If Periwinkle was capable of this, how is it that he had not won at times, when even more favoured than on Sunday? And Kiddy? Perhaps his journey to Palermo and back upset him, but carrying the weight he did on Sunday he has won by four lengths from a similar field, and again has put up two seconds better time on a heavier course when a winner by several lengths! However, there you are, and there you are likely to remain, in blissful ignorance and incomprehension of such peculiarities.

The day was a good and sporting one, as were the majority of the prices. The results were as follows:

Premio Paco, 1,000 metres.—1 Bonci 47 (J. M. Pena), Saqueador 47, 3 Cebada 48.

Also ran: Guerra, V., Chief, Mal Palo, Sajonia, Isolina II., Apiz, Quiriquita, Jolie Jeu.

Dividends: 10.00 and 3.80; 5.80; 4.20.
Won by a length and a half. Time 1.2 4/5.

Premio Pagaré, 1,300 metres.—1 Buri 53 (S. Caro), 2 Primauté 51, 3 Galleguita 54.

Also ran: Ardilla III., Moizo, Weyman, Chillar, Icelandic, Don Paul, Doncry, Bayonne, Iberia, Ongar.

SUNDAY'S RACING AT ROSARIO

Generally speaking the results of the races at the Hippodrome Independencia on Sunday afternoon, were in favour of the public, and a good day was experienced. La Bulliciosa, a HERALD selection, paid the best price of the day in the last event bringing in $21.40 a ticket. The meeting was free from any unpleasant incident and racing took place under excellent weather conditions and before an unusually large crowd of spectators.

The greatest surprise the public experienced was the failure of Afufo in the second event, and it must be said she ran a very poor race. Apple Tart was another excellent HERALD win and paid $10.10 when a winner by a comfortable half length from the favourite Borrachin.

The results were as follows:

Premio MAGO, 1200 metres.—1. Yankee II., 4 yrs. 56 ks., C. Alvarez, $3.85 win and $3.20 place; 2. Jellicoe 52, $25.15 place; 3. Juncal III. 56.

Also ran: Cascajo Boy 56, Galupin 52 and Gala Day 50.

Won by 3 lengths. Time 1'15" 1/5.

Premio MARGOT, 1400 metres.—1. Tripailao, 55 ks., O. Suarez, $7.95 win and $2.40 place; Diabolina 52, $3.10; 3. Afufa 50, $2.15 place.

Also ran: Sigomar 56, Sotto Voce 55, Verdi 54, Dinita 54, Colla 52, and Culata 51.

Won by 1 1/2 lengths. Time: 1'27 1/2.

Premio MARISE, 1300 metres.—1. Apple Tart, P. Barraza, $10.10 and $3 place; 2. Borrachin, $2.55 place; 3. Nenito $2.60 place.

Also ran: Marco Antonio II., Blondin, Papagayo, Don Clorindo, Avelina, Espiral, and Hélix.

Won by a length. Time: 1'22".

Premio REMATE, 1200 metres.—1. Flashlight, 5 yrs, 54 kilos, J. Bagú, $8.40 and $3.85 place; 2. Miruca 51, $2.90 place; 3. Vogler's Melody 49.

Also ran: Galardón 53, Lingera 50, and Pantomima 50.

Won by three lengths. Time 1'14"

Premio MARTE, 1400 metres.—1. La Gordetti, 4 yrs., 51 ks., P. Claverie, $11.55 and $3.60 place; 2. Duna 47, $3.20 place; 3. Vinicio II. 51, $3.05 place.

Also ran: Gigantea 60, Ladkin 55, Galana 50, Ambicioso 45, and Ormilla 44.

Won by a head. Time: 1'26" 1/2.

Premio MASCARITA, 1600 metres.—1. Trac, 53 ks., O. Oliva, $12.60 win and $5.20 place; 2. Audax 55 ks, $3.45 place; 3. Formosa 57.

Won by 2 lengths. Time: 2'7" 1/5.

A HINT FOR PALERMO

FAMOUS AUSTRALIAN JOCKEYS DISQUALIFIED.

Recently disqualifications affecting two of Australia's prominent jockeys, J. Killorn and W. Black, were recorded. At Flemington Linrose ran unplaced in the Iramoo Welter on July 3, and then won the Gooparle Welter four days later. She was ridden by J. Killorn in each race, and the stipendiary stewards, after an inquiry into the filly's alleged inconsistent form, disqualified that rider for three years. The owner and trainer, F. Foulsham, was exonerated from blame. Killorn has given notice of appeal to the V.R.C.

Subsequent to Sheila's Pat's win at Moorefield, a few days later, the A.J.C. stipendiary stewards decided to go into her running at Warwick Farm the previous Saturday, and the outcome was the disqualification of that filly, P. D. O'Brien (lessee and trainer), and W. Black (jockey) for two years each. Black has given notice of appeal, and presumably O'Brien will take a similar step, if he has not done so already.—"Referee."

BUENOS AIRES L.T.C.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING.

At the Phoenix Hotel on Aug. 27, the 24th annual general meeting of the Buenos Aires Lawn Tennis Club was held, with Hr. H. H. Woodgate in the chair.

Mr. H. Waite, the Secretary, was called upon to read the notice concerning the meeting and also the minutes of the last general meeting, which were approved. The 24th annual report was taken as read, and approved.

The agenda comprised the election of President, Vice-President and Secretary, Treasurer and three members of Committee in place of those retiring.

Mr. Waite proposed the re-election of Mr. H. H. Woodgate as President, which was seconded by Mr. A. Pero and carried with acclamation.

Three names, those of Messrs. A. Fero, J. C. Gallegos and C. Manifold, were duly proposed and seconded for the Vice-Presidency, and a ballot being taken resulted in the election by 22 votes of Mr. J. C. Gallegos.

Mr. H. Waite was unanimously and with acclamation re-elected Secretary, and Mr. R. W. Cassels Treasurer, Mr. Gibson signifying his inability to continue in that office.

Messrs. D. E. Cerboni, James Begg, W. Russel, A. Pero, R. Leslie and G. Capdepon were the members proposed and seconded for the three Committee vacancies, which on a ballot being taken resulted in the election of Messrs. D. E. Cerboni 31 votes, R. Leslie 29 votes, A. Pero 23 votes, and Messrs. James Begg, W. Russel and G. Capdepon as "suplentes." The meeting then closed on the usual vote of thanks one also to the scrutineers, Messrs. W. A. Mackinlay and E. D. Norman.

B. A. LAWN TENNIS CLUB

LADIES' GENERAL MEETING.

With Mr. H. Waite in the chair, the ladies of the Buenos Aires Lawn Tennis Club met to elect their Committee and a Secretary. By ballot the following ladies were elected:—Miss M. C. Goni, Mrs. Mackenzie, Miss Capdepon, Mrs. Woodgate, Mrs. Knight and Miss Thompson; Mrs. Keen and Miss Norman as "suplentes." Mrs. Mackenzie was with acclamation and unanimity elected the Secretary.

The meeting closed with the usual vote of thanks.

FOOTBALL

V.D.E.S. v. BELGRANO DAY SCHOOL.

The Villa Devoto English School and the Belgrano Day School met at Belgrano, on Saturday, the result being one goal all.

Play was even at the outset, both forward lines attacking in vain, till Llew. Williams scored Devoto's first and only goal. Both sides pressed in turn until half time arrived with the score:—Devoto 1, Belgrano 0.

Ten minutes from the re-start James sent in a low shot, which went into the corner of the net. Each team tried hard to get the winning goal, but nothing further was scored. Extra time was played with the same result. Thus ended the game a draw—1 all.

QUILMES v. KIMBERLEY.

The following teams met at Quilmes on Sunday when after a fairly good game the result was a pointless draw.

Quilmes.—C. F. Pearson; A. Cerutti and Levanti; W. Wilson, J. Pollini and H. Reid; B. Hoare, P. Raggi, J. Morgan, C. Guisani and E. Durante.

Kimberley.—F. Diez; S. Florentino and J. Pianaroli; A. Spigardi, C. A. Couch and C. Aguirre; R. Caviglia, M. Garcia, A. Perez, P. Boide and E. Pianaroli.

Referee: A. Guzman.

The play perhaps was mostly in favour of the home team who were decidedly unlucky in not scoring. But their shooting was none too good and to this must be laid the blame of their failure.

Kimberley played a good game both Caviglia and Pianaroli being prominent. Raggi played well for Quilmes.

RIVER PLATE (3) v. BELGRANO (0).

Played on the ground of the first named club on Sunday this match resulted in a victory for River Plate team as expected. They have throughout the season played well and only lost one match. The teams were:—

River Plate.—C. Isola, A. Chiappe, A. Lanata, H. Simons, C. Garcia, A. Elli, R. Fraga Patrao, A. Risso, A. Ameal, N. Rofrano and H. Rivas.

Belgrano.—T. Reddel, G. Brown, C. Morgan, J. Peña, H. Morgan, H. Cox, F. N. Boyd, C. Oliva, A. B. Cullerne, A. L. Morgan and C. Palmer.

Referee: Mr. Gil.

The scorers were Chiappe from a penalty kick, Ameal from an excellent pass by Fraga and another similar goal by the same player from a pass by Rofrano.

For Belgrano G. Brown played an excellent game.

B. A. HURLING CLUB SPORTS.

A good day's sport was indulged in at Saenz Peña on Sunday when the annual sports of the Hurling Club were held. All the arrangements were excellently carried out by Mr. M. E. Ballesty, the secretary, and resulted as follows:—

200 Yards Flat Race.—1st, R. Mullen; 2nd, J. E. Gleeson; 3rd, J. Nally.
80 Yards Backward Race.—1st, J. M. Costa; 2nd, J. E. Gleeson; 3rd, P. J. Ballesty.

Pucking the Hurling Ball.—1st, T. Mullany; 2nd, S. O'Riordan; 3rd, P. Harte.

440 Yards Flat Race.—1st, J. E. Gleeson; 2nd, P. J. Kelly; 3rd, S. O'Riordan.

Cigarette Race, 100 Yards (for ladies and gentlemen)—1st, P. J. Kelly; 2nd, P. J. Ballesty.

Blindfolded Race (with paper sack on head).—1st, J. M. Costa; 2nd, S. O'Riordan; 3rd, S. Leyden (h.)

Mile Race.—1st, Aristides Pagliere; 2nd, P. J. Kelly; 3rd, S. O'Riordan.

Potato Race.—1st, J. M. Costa; 2nd, S. O'Riordan; 3rd, V. Berra Pagliere.

80 Yards (for young ladies).—1st,

Anita McCarthy; 2nd, Alicia Moloney; 3rd, Lola Ford.

High Jump.—1st, Joseph Gibbons; 2nd, P. J. Ballesty.

100 Yards Flat Race (for boys and girls under 10 years.—1st, Catalina Smith; 2nd, J. Harte.

GIMNASIA Y ESGRIMA (3) v. HISPANO ARGENTINO (1).

This match played on the ground of the former at Palermo on Sunday, resulted in a win for the home team. Señor Cursach refereed the match, which was played between the following teams:—

Gimnasia. — J. Sagastume, A. Apraiz, A. Reparez, J. Bertani, A. H. Malfino, J. Pedacci, C. Aguilar, C. F. Fraola, M. Hiller, L. M. Acosta, L. M. Darrichon.

Hispano-Argentino. — A. Cabellero, L. Otin, E. Caramés, A. Voglino, R. Montenegro, A. Lopez, M. Martinez, A. Martin, G. Dannaher, L. Gianetto, V. Roldan.

The game was well contested and fast, and Pedacci had the good fortune to secure all three goals for his side. Dannaher was the scorer for the losers.

LAWN TENNIS

QUILMES AMERICAN TOURNAMENT.

The American Tournament arranged by the Quilmes L.T.C. was played on Sunday, and after an enjoyable day's play it was won by Miss Percy and Mr. East with best score of 55. Miss Peckwell and her partner played good tennis, and although on the scratch mark looked at one time as though they would be the winners. The full scores were as follows:—

	Won.	Hcp.	Nt.

PACIFIC RAILWAY

STROKE COMPETITION.

On the Railway Links at Saenz Pena on Sunday, a stroke competition was indulged in, with the result that Mr. J. G. Bryans returned an excellent winning card of 80. Even in the gross he only played one more stroke than Mr. H. Nichols, who went round in 97. Only nine cards were returned, which shows that several of the players got into difficulties, which was probably due to the strong wind blowing. The cards returned were as follows:—

	Tot.	Hcp.	Nt.
J. G. Bryans	98	18	80
A. E. Gostling	103	18	85
J. Bauer	111	24	87

SAN ANDRES II. v. LOMAS II.

While the club's first string were contesting their match at Lomas the second teams met at San Andres, and exactly reversed the results of their first team, by Lomas winning by 9½ matches to 8½. It was in the foursomes that San Andres were the stronger and pulled themselves out of the fire. The result of the day's play leaves these clubs with a win each, so that to decide the matter a match will have to be played on neutral territory.

Sunday's score at San Andres was as follows:—

Lomas II.	S. Andres II.
T. Johnson ½	H. L. Kidd ½
H. K. O. Martin 0	H. D. McMaster 1
A. H. Gibson ½	R. McCrum ½

SAN ANDRES v. LOMAS.

A match between the above clubs took place on the Lomas Club's links on Sunday, and after some very level play, the visiting club won by 9½ matches to 8½. The singles were most evenly contested, and finished with the scores 6 all. The result of Sunday's play had no effect upon the inter-Club championship, which had already been won by San Andres.

The scores in the match were as follows:—

B.A. CRICKET CLUB

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING.

The annual general meeting of the Buenos Aires Cricket Club was held on August 26, under the chairmanship of Mr. H. C. Thompson. The business included the adoption of the Annual Report and Accounts and the election of officers for the coming season. Some 23 members were present when these matters came up for discussion.

Sir Reginald Tower was unanimously re-elected the Hon. President of the Club, and Mr. Thomas Lloyd seconded by Mr. T. G. Broome, proposed the re-election of Mr. H. C. Thompson as President. This motion was unanimously accepted amidst acclamation. The election of Vice-President was proceeded with, and Mr. H. C. Thompson proposed Mr. Thomas Lloyd, which Mr. Percy Grant seconded. Mr. Lloyd proposed Dr. Stetson, but on no seconder coming forward, Mr. Lloyd was unanimously re-elected amidst applause.

Mr. T. G. Browne was unanimously re-elected captain, and a vote of thanks was offered him by the President for his past services. Mr. Sheridan proposed the election of the old committee en bloc, with the exception of Mr. H. D. Williams—who had volunteered for the front—and proposed in his place the name of Mr. H. D. Lett. The motion having been duly seconded, the resolution was unanimously adopted.

It was proposed that the second XI. captain should be elected by the members of his own XI.

The decision was arrived at that the B.A.A.C. should enter for the League Championship to be played during the coming season.

The President, Mr. H. C. Thompson, then drew attention to the accounts which showed a balance in the bank of $361.72, and explained that this was somewhat misleading on account of the fact that there had been a loan of $1657.95 to the Club by the Treasurer. It was necessary that this should be wiped off. Some discussion followed, but Mr. Colpas Clark, the Hon. Treasurer, desired that the matter rest as it was at present, and that the Club arrive at a stronger financial point before worrying about it. After some further discussion of ways and means, the President drew attention to the concert to be held on September 7, at the Swiss Hall, and invited the co-operation of all members in making it a financial success.

The meeting then concluded after a proposal (unanimously accepted) had been made that a letter of sympathy should be written to the New South Wales Cricket Association in the loss they had sustained in the death of one of the world's most famous cricketers and batsmen, Mr. Victor Trumper, whose early decease the mother cricket club of the Argentine deeply regretted.

OLD JUNINITES AT THE WAR.

The above photograph of four old Juninites will doubtless prove of interest to "Herald" readers. Reading from left to right the figures which compose the group are:—

1. W. A. Chapman (late Assistant Manager of the Coach and Wagon Dept. Pacific Railway, Junin) Royal Flying Corps.

2. J. Haslam, (late of the Locomotive Shops, Pacific Railway, Junin) Petty Officer, Royal Navy.
3. J. Betteridge (late of the Locomotive Offices, Pacific Railway, Junin) Army Ordnance Corps.
4. (seated) P. W. Redfearn (late accountant, Pacific Railway Offices, Junin) Royal Engineers.

Mr. Chapman is well known in Argentine sporting circles, having played rugby, soccer, tennis, golf, hockey and cricket. He took part in the Inter-Railway Sports in 1910, when the Pacific Railway won the Railway Cup with ease. He is now attached to the Fourth Flying Squadron, and once trained, will doubtless prove a great success.

Mr. J. Haslam, too, has been connected with Rugby and Association football and other branches of sport. He was also a prominent number of the team which won the Inter-Railway Cup at Caballito in 1910. Although he has not long left Junin, he has risen to the rank of Petty Officer in the Royal Navy, where he is training for submarine work.

Mr. P. W. Redfearn, another sporting man, was an enthusiastic golfer and cricketer, and supporter of all kinds of athletics in Junin. He is at present attached to the Royal Engineers.

Mr. Betteridge is with the Army Ordnance Corps in London, and though not as widely known as the others which form the group, is well known in Junin.

A large number of "Old Timers" from Junin are serving with the colours, but it is difficult to obtain information concerning their movements.

Among those already on active service are:— H. A. Parsons, C. N. Chadwick, R. G. Kendall, E. Smithers, A. Mordecai (all in France), J. H. Theyer Barton (Egypt), S. P. Tindle and R. M. Rankin (East Africa), and many others.

Among those who are still in England preparing for active service are:— 2nd Lieut. P. J. M. Richardson (R. E.), 2nd Lieut. Cyril S. London (S. Staffs Regt.), 2nd Lieut. Dunlap (R. E.), 2nd Lieut. A. J. Read (Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry), D. E. Langdon (Public School Corps), S. R. C. Fraser (Public School Corps), H. Merriman (Public School Corps), J. Campbell (Public School Corps), J. Clark (R. E.), F. W. Farnish (R. E.), etc., etc.

Agricultural & Pastoral

CAMP NOTES

(By our Agricultural Editor).

The weather during the week has been most favourable both to camp and town folk alike, and for the first time for many years it has proved a boon to the Sociedad Rural Argentina. It is understood that the gate receipts are far in advance of the most sanguine expectations.

There is every prospect that prices will be good for this season's clip, and an advanced sale is reported of 400,000 kilos at the handsome figure of $14 the ten kilos. Buyers are said to be busy outside in the camp trying to get growers to sell forward, though it would seem to me, that to exploit the central markets will be the wisest plan.

Conversing with a well-known estanciero from the Chacabuco district the other day, he informed me that he had been offered the remunerative price of $270 per head, for a thousand head of Durham novillos that he has about ready for killing. Consequent on the present firm demand and the high values ruling at the Mataderos market, he refused the offer, preferring to hold for a while longer.

For years past it has been the custom for people requiring camp bulls to await the sales of the "palenque" cattle at the Palermo Show, in the hope of picking up some cheap bulls, but on many occasions they have sorely disappointed. Those who have hung back this year have been equally served, as the bulls sold yesterday brought very good prices, and in fact in some cases values in comparison were higher than those paid at the sale of the pedigree "galpon" animals. The first "palenque" bull into the ring yesterday afternoon fetched over $4000, while very many passed the three and two thousand dollar line, before the hammer fell. Perhaps it is only fair to say that the bulls in this section this year, are a very great lot.

Figures paid at the Mataderos market some ten days ago were considered exceptional, so much so that a contemporary waxed eloquent over the fact that $310 was secured by a certain salesman for a few steers and prophesied that it was doubtful if ever that figure would be beaten, and felt sure that if the feat was accomplished it would be by the same salesman. A few days ago steers were sold by the Messrs. Estrugamon at $390 for 54 animals sent into market by Mr. E. Perkins, and on Thursday last Messrs. Guillon sold a couple of Aberdeen Angus cross steers at $400, thereby holding the record for the mataderos market. This does not constitute the world's record for fat steers as the "Standard" of yesterday informs its readers. Our contemporary comes out with the startling head lines, "A World's Record Sale," which is absurd and untrue. To prove this assertion, I quote the following extracts from the market reports appearing in "The Scottish Farmer," of July 24: "At the Ayr market on Tuesday, late prices were easily maintained. Cattle: Cross bullocks made up to £45 15s; heifers £27 15s.; Black polled bullocks to £43 15s. At Perth on Monday heavy bullocks made up to £48 12s. 6d., and handy weight cattle were £26 to £24; cows to £40 10s. At Coupar on the same day the highest price for bullocks was £51; heifers to £42; and fat cows to £28 5s. At Edinburgh on Tuesday, bullocks sold to £48 10s.; cows to £35 10s., and at this sale 16 cattle averaged £41 each." It is almost needless to say that the figures obtained at Mataderos on Thursday work out at about £35.

Mr. J. Rawes, the popular partner of the firm of Messrs. J. and J. Rawes, importers of pedigree live stock, arrived in Buenos Aires last week looking quite his old self, and was present at the judging of the pedigree Shorthorn classes at Palermo. The Messrs. Rawes have imported some very fine specimens of the breed this season, and in referring to some of them our contemporary the "Penrith Observer" of July 27, says:

"Messrs. John and Isaac Rawes, Stainton, sent their last consignment of 27 shorthorn bulls from Penrith Station on Wednesday evening for South America. The animals, some of which scaled upwards of 25cwt., were undoubtedly the best out of the three shipments which Messrs. Rawes have sent this year to the Argentine. The consignment consisted chiefly of Scotch-bred bulls with the exception of six, which were bred in Cumberland and Westmoreland."

The boom experienced a few months ago in the horse trade appears to have cooled down somewhat, as horses for the moment are not in nearly so firm enquiry. Several of the stronger houses still continue shipping, though not so heavily as heretofore. Rumours are current that a very large draft somewhere near 30,000 rejects from the British lines in France will shortly be placed on the British market. This will undoubtedly cause a slump in prices recently paid for second class animals, though good quality heavy draught horses will always be wanted, and likely to meet a good trade; only they are getting more difficult to find in this Republic.

The Messrs. Rivero Bros. "Sanquico," Rocha, F.C.S., have received by the s.s. "Barbary," the remainder of the animals selected and purchased by Mr. Harry Blunt, during his recent visit to Great Britain. One exceptionally good Shire mare goes to strengthen the "Sanquico" stud. Three Shorthorn bulls combining the most desirable strains; and purchased at long prices, are now in the "embarcadero." Two pens of Lincoln ewes, bred by Messrs. J. H. Dean and Sons, and which were first and third at the last Royal of England Show, are very favourably commented on by the home press. Four Lincoln rams bred by Mr. F. Ward, Quarrington, are also included in the consignment, while one boar and three gilts, of the Large Black breed, have been brought by Mr. Blunt to the order of Mr. Melville, of Drabble, F.C. Oeste.

A contemporary in Uruguay has been trying to discover why cattle values were lower in that Republic than in the Argentine, and the following opinion was given by the manager of the Frigorifico Uruguayo. "In the first place, owing to the superior breeding of Argentine cattle, they yield a larger percentage of meat, and a corresponding lesser weight of bone; in the second place to better transport facilities available in the Argentine, against the long delays frequently experienced in Uruguay before the cattle reach the slaughter yards, thereby causing a very serious shrinkage in weight." This authority also explained that the Argentine freezers could utilise 80 per cent of their animals as "chillers," while similar establishments in Uruguay could only class 40 per cent as "chillers" the rest having to go as frozen meat. This meant that a lower value had to be accepted on the European market.

To win last year's Championship in the Shire classes and again repeat the success this year with another horse and to buy, prepare, and parade the Percheron champion stallion this year, is truly a great record, and

EXPORTATION OF LIVE CATTLE

OPENING OF THE ENGLISH PORTS.

The latest telegrams from England report the decision of the Board of Agriculture to re-open certain ports for the reception of Argentine cattle and sheep. The conditions are somewhat changed from first notices, as the latest resolution specifies that the animals must be slaughtered within four days of their arrival. This time is somewhat short, but will prevent congestion at British ports. Congestion there may be, in other branches of imports or exports, though the excessive freights demanded for deck space will be quite a deterring factor, for this trade assuming any proportions, while the high prices being paid by the freezing company's will make competition very difficult, especially the latter as can land the dead meat so much cheaper on the English markets, than shipping live. This decree has been expected for some time, in well-informed circles, while more than one strong English firm attempted to place contracts here for the supply of a certain number of live cattle to be shipped monthly. These contracts were offered to several of the strongest houses here, but these understanding the possible rise in cattle values, declined to make any offer. If such houses here declined to make any contract or offer, some months ago, they are more likely now to adhere to their former decision, considering the present high values ruling for all classes of fat stock.

DISTRIBUTION OF SEED

1,500,000 KILOS OF WHEAT FOR MENDOZA.

Engineer Vallejos, the Government expert, charged with the business of distributing the wheat to the agriculturalists of Mendoza, which distribution is in the nature of a Government loan, had an interview with Dr. Calderon, the Minister of Agriculture, yesterday afternoon, for the purpose of furnishing the Minister with details of the result of his work in Mendoza. Señor Vallejos explained that an amount of 1,500,000 kilos of wheat for sowing had been distributed by him, and that some 20,000 hectares of land had in consequence been placed under this commodity.

Everything had been done, and the distribution made in a most satisfactory manner.

more especially so when the exhibitor has only three nominations, and a feat not likely to be equalled for a long time to come. A most noteworthy point is that these animals were purchased at previous Palermo Show sales, and afterwards prepared for future show by Mr. Harry Blunt, Manager for Messrs. Rivero Bros., "Sanquico," Rocha, F.C.S., to whom all honour is due for this unique record.

IMPORTED PEDIGREE SHORTHORNS

MR. JOSEPH SHEPHERD'S SELECT CONSIGNMENT.

Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich have fixed Friday, September 3, as the sale day for a very important consignment of Pedigree Shorthorn bulls selected in Great Britain and imported to this country by Mr. Joseph Shepherd. This gentleman's name is a household word in English live-stock circles, whilst his extensive connection all over Great Britain and Ireland, amongst the leading breeders, places him in the position of being able to secure the cream of Britain's production for this Republic. Mr. Shepherd has through his local representative, Mr. Adam Machattie, been the largest exporter of horses from this country, since the outbreak of the war, and has by the grand quality of his importations, combined with straight and honest dealing made good with many of the leading estancieros of Argentina. It may not be out of place to remark that this extensive connection has been built up through the business like methods at all times followed by Mr. Machattie, who is ever ready and willing to devote his time and experience with a view to giving satisfaction to his customers. The twenty bulls catalogued for next week's sale comprise many notable animals, several of which cannot be passed over without some reference. "Linkfield Conqueror," is a very deep fleshed roan bull, a typical padre de Cabaña, and looks all over a stock bull. He was two years in succession, 1st prize winner and Champion at Elgin, besides winning innumerable prizes in strongly contested classes at other leading North of Scotland Shows. "Sanquhar Christmas Gift" is a beautiful young red bull, not yet two year old having been calved on December 25, 1913; and, as his pedigree shows, combines the best blood for which the Messrs. Law are world-famous. This bull is from the celebrated Uppermill Rachel family, got by the great breeding and show bull "Sanquhar Dreadnought," which gained Championship at the Royal Northern Aberdeen, Championship at Elgin, and Championship at Nairn, also second to the Champion at Royal and Highland Shows. The grand sire "Hawthorn Champion," left many celebrated winners, and his stock have been much sought after. Sanquhar Christmas Gift, is a good red bull and highly bred, as the foregoing references will prove. "Rocelli," is a deep fleshed dark roan, with a very good back and nicely rounded about tail head. "Red Rufus," this bull has the makings of a great sire, as he is very good on his back, deep fleshed, and handles very well, while his pedigree is also exceptionally good.

"Gladiator" possesses a very nice coat, and is altogether a very good stamp of the breed, at his age, being remarkably well grown. "Ronald" is a very well fleshed level sort of bull, and boasts a lot of undine blood in his veins, which ought not to be overlooked by those looking for this

THE NATIONAL SHOW

Thursday, Aug. 26.

To date 574 Shorthorns have been sold, giving a total of $2,188,900, a considerable sum in these times. This season's Shorthorn sales have been very well attended, and not a single animal has been withdrawn from the ring for want of competition. Yesterday's sales were commenced with the Herefords, when Cameronian 44 realised the handsome sum of $12,000, being claimed by Messrs. Aramendia Bros., at this satisfactory price, for their property in Uruguay. Many of the better quality animals were purchased for Uruguay, where the Herefords are favourably known for their hardiness. Towards the finish of the sale prices fell considerably, very little interest being shown by the public for the more ordinary specimens. In the afternoon the Aberdeen Angus had their turn of the ring, when very fair prices were realised. That lot of nice level, well brought out young bulls from Tatay, the property of the Samuel B. Hall Coy., were the first to be put up for auction. These animals were splendid specimens of the breed, and admirably shown by Mr. William Forbes, though their youth and smaller frames were adverse to their sale, as buyers of bulls in this Republic too frequently look for something that fills the eye in preference to quality. The winner in the younger class realised $1400, while the older bull and winner of the second ticket in the old class changed hands at $1500. This bull was reserve champion at Rosario, and both were sired by Burma, a very nice specimen of the breed, imported by Mr. George Campbell, who has imported so many winning sires at this year's shows. The Cochico lot were possibly more keenly competed for than any other, as their animals had the advantage of age, and more attractive to the public, being well grown. The first prize animals in the older class was sold for $2100, while the winner in the two-year-old class made the satisfactory price of $1400, which is a very good figure for an Aberdeen Angus sire, bred in the country. Several other lots passed through the ring experienced only a fair inquiry. To-day's sales will comprise the milk breeds, and Palenque bulls, while a clearance is expected to be effected by Saturday afternoon, of the remaining animals still within the show grounds.

RECORD SALE

A TRIUMPH FOR THE ABERDEEN ANGUS.

At Mataderos yesterday the record established the previous day was broken by the sale of two Aberdeen Angus bullocks at the record price of $400 each. These animals were along with others consigned by Messrs. Carlos Guerrero from his estancia La Primavera, and sold at this most satisfactory figure by the well-known salesman Messrs. Rodolfo Guillon and Coy. This notable achievement will go a long way towards popularising the Aberdeen Angus in this Republic, where their supremacy as beef producers is comparatively unknown. This triumph is a very fitting tribute to the perseverance of the Messrs. Guerrero, in utilising the "Blacks" in the improvement of their beef cattle, than whom none are better nor equal when quality of meat is considered.

famous strain. "Red Prince," this is another very well bred bull, being sired by the famous "Prince Matadore," bred by Mr. W. Duthie, Collynie, "Tullyhogue Volunteer," is a nice fleshed red bull "Oliver," is a compact sort of bull, and a nice dark roan colour. Besides the already mentioned bulls, this consignment also comprises many very nice quality youngsters, whose pedigrees embrace most notable strains. This important sale is announced to take place on September 3, at 2 p.m.

SHORTHORN JUDGE INTERVIEWED

TRIBUTE TO ARGENTINE BREEDERS

(By Our Special Commissioner)

For the past eight years it has been my privilege to witness the judging of the live-stock classes at Palermo, and, naturally, the most important section, that of the pedigree Shorthorn cattle has claimed most of my time at the show-ground. Since 1907, each succeeding year has seen a big improvement in the quality of cattle exhibited, but undoubtedly there has never been such a fine show of really first-class cattle as were paraded this year. From first to last, the bull classes were well filled and, although some were numerically stronger than others, nevertheless quality abounded in one and all; while throughout there was a complete absence of that big "tail-end" experienced in former years. Female classes, though not so strong in numbers as on former occasions, abounded with quality and many of the heifers shown were a credit to both breeder and the country. I could fill columns of the HERALD were I to deal individually with the exhibits, but such is not my intention, what I want to convey is what told me during a half-hour's conversation with him. First and foremost, it might not be out of place to mention that the Rural Society have at last followed the course so strenuously advocated over a year ago by the BUENOS AIRES HERALD, and petitioned the Breed Societies of Great Britain to select the judges for this year's exhibition. The Royal Agricultural Society of England has well and faithfully carried out the important trust reposed in it, inasmuch as the visiting judges this year have given universal satisfaction in all the different classes of live-stock.

MR. A. W. LAW, THE SHORTHORN EXPERT.

But more particularly has this been so in the case of Mr. Law, though this is hardly to be wondered at when his career as a breeder, judge and business man is taken into consideration. He has been associated with the care and breeding of Shorthorn cattle all the days of his life, and, apart from owning one of the best herds in Scotland at the present time, he was for many years manager of the famous Sanouhar, Mains of Sanouhar, herd. During his 40 years' show-yard experience he has exhibited the champion at the Royal of England, Highland, Aberdeen and principal County shows; while for four years in succession he took the coveted prize at Aberdeen for the best group of 4 Shorthorn cattle. In making a speech at the last draft sale at Mains of Sanouhar last October Mr. William Duthie, the world-famous Shorthorn breeder, in referring to Mr. A. W. Law and his brother, said:—"Gentlemen, it affords me great pleasure to see such a representative attendance of breeders here today at this sale but it does not surprise me. The Messrs. Law have not only made their name famous as breeders and judges, but they are both good sportsmen. They never hesitate to give a good price for a good animal, therefore it is no wonder that they breed good cattle."

Such an expression of opinion coming from a prominent Shorthorn breeder like Mr. Wm. Duthie, was a guarantee in itself that breeders here in Argentina were to get both fair play and good judgment, and it is safe to say that Mr. A. W. Law has given entire satisfaction in his awards and, what is more, placed his cattle as well as any other judge who has ever visited these shores—and far-and-away better than a great many.

After he had concluded his work at Palermo I asked him if he would care to give me his impressions of the cattle that had come under his notice, and on ascertaining with what object I sought them he said:—

"I am delighted to be able to say, through the columns of THE HERALD, that I never expected to see such a quantity of first-class cattle as have been paraded before me. Mind you, for many years past, it has been my wish to come to this country to see for myself what your breeders have been doing with all the fine cattle they have imported from Great Britain. Naturally, I fully expected to see a good display amongst the Shorthorns, but candidly speaking, I never for one moment thought to judge amongst such excellent quality. Argentine breeders have displayed both pluck and energy from the outset, and, in their determination to secure the best that Great Britain could produce with a view to the improvement of their herds, they have not spared their banking accounts. I have always taken a lively interest in the doings and happenings in this country on account of the enthusiasm shown by its breeders in their profession of live-stock breeding.

"When I term it a profession, I mean to convey to you that it is not anybody with plenty of money that can become a successful breeder. It calls for a man, or men, with brains as well as money, and they must be sportsmen at the same time: as to be a good breeder and exhibitor one has to be a good loser as well as a good winner. You've guid cattle here and you've guid men to breed them: mair power to them, they're gran chaps. There's na one of them but it's a pleasure to shake hands wi' and talk to. Man they're gran fellows and ye might just tell them so from a humble soul like myself. I wish you could print it in braw Scotch. It's a pleasure to hae met them."

It was quite an easy matter to see that the visiting expert meant every word he said and he mentioned that in one way he regretted to have to go away to judge at the Uruguayan show, as it prevented him from accepting the many kind invitations extended him to visit several of the leading breeding establishments and see something of what he described in his own words: "A magnificent country. Just think of a young country like this producing such a fine show of cattle. It's simply marvellous. I cannot get it out of my mind, and never will."

Questioned as to the different classes judges by him, Mr. Law replied:—"Men you've asked hut two minutes wi' me, but it's as many days you'll want if I were to tell you all I'd like to. There's one thing I will say though. I thought I'd found a champion after the 6th class in bulls came before me, but I was mistaken. After witnessing the parade in class 8, I just thought to myself how I'd like to take a dozen of the wee bullies back wi' me. To see such a grand lot of low-legged cattle, with such backs and fore-ends and with such great compass in rib, and so far away from the home o' the breed was a sight seen ne'er to be forgotten."

"When I stood before the nine bulls paraded for the championship I almost fancied I was back again at Collynie in the days of Scottish Archer. It just wanted Mr. William Duthie to complete the picture. There was no getting away from the Collynie blood. I only wish Mr. Duthie had been present to see the descendant from his herd that so easily won his place as champion at Palermo. I've heard a lot about "Americus" and other of the Argentine champions but the Palermo champion this year is a grand calf, a great promising bull. A good handler with grand back and fore-end great compass of rib good in his lines and with plenty of true breed character."

"Mind you, the reserve to him was also a well-grown good bull and, had he been more correct in his back would have been a former. They're two bulls that could enter any show-ground in the world. But there's a score or more great typical bulls I've got in my minds eye but I've no catalogue and I couldn't tell you their names or who they belong to."

"After witnessing such a parade of males, it was only natural that I expected great things from the females, and in this I was not disappointed in so far as quality was concerned. But the classes were not so strongly contested, more especially in number, though the champion, reserve and prize-winners in their classes were a credit to many mair o' our ain breeders at haem."

Mr. Law said that in his opinion some breeders were inclined to spoil the horn and general appearance of the head by interfering with the growth by weighting the horn when the animals were young. The question of weighting a horn to get a desired curve, or straightness, called for expert attention and great discretion had to be employed. The distinct downward point on the end of horn noticed by him in several instances was sufficient to spoil the winning chances of any otherwise really good animal. "I am always willing to give points to a good head and horn," said the visiting expert.

Notwithstanding his short stay in the Republic, our visitor managed to find time to run up by train to estancia "Tatay," Parada Tatay, F.C.C.A., the property of Mr. Samuel B. Hale Pearson, and he expressed himself as highly delighted with all he saw there. "It was an eye-opener to me to see such fine drafts of cattle running in the open fields," said Mr. Law, "and to see them in such grand condition at this time of the year. I could hardly believe that they had been running out the whole winter. Why, they were even looking better than our housed cattle at home do at the end of winter. I saw both grand Shorthorn and Aberdeen-Angus cattle, and I feel sure that Mr. Pearson is breeding on the right lines. If some calves of both breeds that I saw do not make a name for their breeder at some of your future shows I shall be very much mistaken in my judgment. Another thing that impressed me greatly was the typical modern dairy established on the estancia. Everything hygienic, scrupulously clean and every care taken to prevent contamination. In the homestead itself, I felt I was back in Scotland. I never expected to sit before such grand log fires as those burning in the rooms, and more as because I have not seen any in the city of Buenos Aires."

Speaking about the Palermo show-ground, the judge remarked that it was undoubtedly a long way ahead of anything to be seen in Great Britain. "The Royal of Dublin is the only ground that comes near it," said Mr. Law, "and that because every thing there is so rural, big displays of agricultural machinery, dairying requisites and so forth, and in these you are lacking at your show."

"There is one thing your breeders do not lack here though, and that is good cattlemen, good showmen, skilled grooms if you like to put it that way. Here, as in Great Britain or elsewhere, the breeder is forced to look to his men to bring his animals into the show ring in the best possible condition and show them to advantage. I am convinced from what I have seen at your Palermo show that in certain breeding establishments in this country there are men just as expert in their work as you will find anywhere on the face of the globe, and it is extremely pleasing to me to find out that very many of them are Scotchmen who have learned their business in the Highlands."

"And now in conclusion, I would like you to do me a favour. Will you, in the columns of THE HERALD, thank the exhibitors and the public generally for the splendid manner in which they have treated me and my decisions. I cannot adequately return thanks for the handsome manner in which the officials of the Rural Society have treated me, neither can I find words in which to fitting describe the pleasure afforded me in meeting such a fine lot of enthusiastic breeders. The generous treatment meted out to me on all sides has fully recompensed me for any sacrifice I have had to make in coming out here, and, should I be afforded an opportunity after we have emerged successfully from this present terrible war, I hope to pay another visit to this young but glorious and prosperous country."

THE HEREFORD JUDGE INTERROGATED.

Mr. James Compton, who has spent some 35 years of his life among the breed, and who for many years so ably managed the celebrated herd of Captain Ileygate, from which came that great stock bull "Cameronian," now serving in the herd of Sr. Leonardo Pereyra, was the gentleman asked by the Royal Society of England to come this year to Palermo to make the awards in the pedigree Hereford classes, and right well did he perform his duties.

Spoken to by me the day after he finished judging, Mr. Compton expressed himself as both agreeably surprised and disappointed. "I saw some typical white faces," said the judge, "but for the life of me I cannot see why the classes, generally speaking, were so numerically weak, especially in females. Some grand sires have come to this country, and I should have thought the breed would have been quite as popular in some parts of Argentina as it is in North America. But I see now, or rather judge from what I have seen, that it is not. This is essentially a Short-horn country.

"Yet, as I have told you, some splendid specimens of the breed came under my notice at the show. The champion bull, for instance, is a typical stock bull, well-grown, well-furnished, with good top and rib, grand quarters, grand depth at heart and a great fore-end. He was, however, closely followed by the bull that I gave Reserve to, and had this animal been better furnished it would have been mighty difficult to separate them. As it was, it was no run-away win for the Champion. The classes for older bulls were much stronger than the younger ones, but still I came across some promising youngsters.

"I was rather disappointed with the females. They were weak in numbers, and also in quality, taken as a general lot, though there were some individual exhibits of great merit, some of the heifers being nicely topped and boasting breed character."

Dr. Compton expressed himself as simply astounded at the wonderful display made by Shorthorns, and spoke in highly eulogistic terms of the appointments generally at Palermo. Taking time by the forelock he managed to make three trips to the camp. First of all he visited estancia "El Inca," Bonifacio, F.C.S., the property of Messrs. P. and G. D. Hughes, where he told me that he saw an interesting lot of pedigree Shorthorn cattle being bred under most natural conditions. "I was surprised to see cattle in the open fields in winter time in such splendid condition, and to find the cows calving out and with calves at foot in the long grass rather stunned me. I have never seen cattle reared in such natural conditions before, and it should give them rare constitutions.

"I was specially interested in my visit to Mr. Leonardo Pereyra's estancia," said the Hereford expert, "for I bred and sold (to Mr. P. Hughes) 'Cameronian,' his stock bull, and I also bred his sire and dam, and his grandmother, and the latter was indeed a grand cow. 'Cameronian,' though now 12 years old, looks fresh and well, and fit to work for some time to come. Mr. Pereyra has an estancia to be proud of, whilst his herd of both Shorthorns and Herefords in both quality and quantity, would be hard to beat in any part of the world.

"Another visit that afforded me a lot of pleasure was that paid to Mr. Hale Pearson's estancia, and I was particularly struck with the herds of reds, whites and roans, and the Aberdeen-Angus cattle. I also saw some splendid horses here, and in my opinion Mr. Pearson is utilising both his brains and money to good purpose.

"I don't think I can tell you much more about my visit. It is my first time away from Great Britain, and it has been most interesting and instructive to me. I would like to express my thanks through the columns of THE HERALD to the Rural Society, and all those who have been so kind and attentive to me. I have been asked to judge at the Montevideo Show, where I trust to see a big display of my favourite breed. Good-bye."

A CHAT WITH THE ABERDEEN- ANGUS JUDGE.

A renowned breeder of the blacks is Mr. George Cran, and he expressed himself to be as being generally disappointed with the display made in such a grand beef breed as the Aberdeen-Angus. He said that he never expected to see huge classes, but he certainly hoped to find the quality better in a country where breeders and feeders should by now have been educated to know the value of the breed.

"Individual exhibits there were quite typical of the breed," replied the delegate from the Royal Society, "and the champion bull was quite a good specimen, level in flesh, with smooth sweet bone and a good head, but not as well brought out as he might have been. The champion female was a good typical short-legged beastie, well-fleshed up in her thighs, with good underline, straight on the back, well covered with nice mellow flesh, and boasting plenty of character. The winner in the yearling bull class is a promising youngster and likely to be heard of again. I really think there was a bigger tail-end in the black cattle than in any other breed exhibited at the show. It hurts me to say this, but nevertheless it is true."

Recognising the fact that Mr. Cran, who is regarded as a leading breeder in his native country, was not anxious to talk about the display made at Palermo by his favourite breed, I questioned him concerning the Clydesdale horses, a section which he also ably judged. He was not favourably impressed with the exhibits generally that came under his eye in this section either, or that was certainly what I gathered from what he had to say.

On being pressed for an expression of opinion he ventured to remark that the champion stallion was an outstanding winner. "He's a stylish horse," said the judge, "with a grand top and nice flinty bone, but I should have liked to have seen him better in the ankles and feet. Speaking candidly I think the breed merits more attention than is evidently devoted to it, and should I come here again I trust to see a truer and better lot. By the bye, I should really say that the champion mare is a rattling fine female, it's a pity that there were not more of her quality in the stallion classes."

Mr. Cran said it was a privilege, nothing less, to be permitted to see such a fine lot of Shorthorns at any one Show, and it spoke volumes for the enthusiasm and energy shown by breeders of the red, white and roan.

COMPETITION FOR MILK COWS.

The Sociedad Rural Argentina, has organised a competition for milch cows. The milking trials will last eight days, three of preparation, and five for the test. The Sociedad Rural have carefully studied, this question and many different classes are open for the better classification of the different competing breeds. They also pay a daily gratuity for each competing cow, so as to enable the small farmer to compete and popular-

THE LOCUST SCOURGE

APPEARANCE OF THE PEST IN IN THE NORTH.

From Northern agricultural zones comes the report that the locust has made its appearance and commenced its depredations just at the time when everything was reported to be doing well, when crops had been favoured with rain and warm weather. The fact of this appearance of the locust once more brings the problem of effectively treating the scourge before the Agricultural Department of the Government. It is stated efficacious measures are simple enough if carried out on a large and general scale, but to attack one or two odd places where the pest appears is insufficient and the question is one of systematic destruction.

The experts state that measures against the locust when in a flying state are not half so valuable as when in an earlier stage of development and they appeal to the Government to take the necessary steps. Barriers and pits have already been constructed in many places, but at present only defensive measures have been taken and to deal with problem in a proper manner it is essential that any attempt to really benefit must be of an offensive character.

TUCUMAN SUGAR HARVEST

SMALL CROP REPORTED.

From Tucumán it is reported that at the termination of the sugar harvest some of the ingenios inform the Government that they have ground 1,630,500,000 kilos of cane, obtaining 87,770,000 kilos of sugar. The entire output is rather under 110,000 tons.

If the state of the ingenios is bad, that of the cane growers is worse as the weaker of them are faced with urgent need of credit or ruin. It is calculated that there are about 2,500,000 tons of cane in the province of which a million are in the hands of strong capitalists.

Dr. Padilla is expected to be able to make arrangements with the Governor of the Banco de la Nación.

SHOTS AT THE RAPIGO

ROSARIO EXPRESS THRICE FIRED UPON.

Some idiot with firearms has been in the habit, for it amounts to that, of firing at the Rosario express, and this has happened three times in the last month on the stretch between Baradero and San Nicolas. This atrocious proceeding has always been noticed at the same place, and it would not appear impossible for the Provincial Police to take effective action against what are evidently criminally foolish, or deliberately murderous attacks.

ise this most praiseworthy competition and its attendant stimulus to the dairy industry here, which in other parts of the world has been the forerunner of many closer settlement schemes, so urgently required in this Republic.

STOCK SHOWS.

The 9th Annual Show, organised by the Sociedad Rural de Rafaela, is announced to take place on the 5, 6 and 7 of September, when the following gentleman have consented to act as judges:—

COAL FOR THE ENEMY

Mr. Sutherland's Protest

THE "T. R. THOMPSON" CASE

THE MOST SENSATIONAL "TRADING WITH THE ENEMY" CASE WAS FIRST BROUGHT TO LIGHT BY REVELATIONS IN "THE HERALD" ON NOVEMBER 27, 1914. THAT CASE—IN WHICH THE SUNDERLAND STEAMER T. R. THOMPSON WAS INVOLVED—WAS SUBSEQUENTLY, THE SUBJECT OF A STRONG CAMPAIGN BY "THE HERALD" AND ITS VIGOROUS CONTEMPORARY, "THE TIMES OF ARGENTINA."

AFTER A SERIES OF CHARGES, SEMI-DENIALS, AND OFFICIAL INTERVENTION, THE "T. R. THOMPSON CASE," AS IT BECAME KNOWN, WAS PRACTICALLY FORGOTTEN BY THE LOCAL PUBLIC. IT HAS NOW BEEN DRAMATICALLY RESURRECTED.

FROM CORRESPONDENCE FURNISHED TO "THE HERALD" YESTERDAY, IT APPEARS THAT MR. R. W. J. SUTHERLAND, UNTIL RECENTLY A DIRECTOR OF MESSRS. AMARAL, SUTHERLAND AND Co., (MANAGER OF THE ANGLO-ARGENTINE COAL COMPANY, LTD., OF CARDIFF), WAS CALLED UPON BY THE CARDIFF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO EXPLAIN HIS ACTION IN REGARD TO THE SALE OF THE T. R. THOMPSON CARGO TO THE GERMAN COAL COMPANY (D.K.D.)

MR. SUTHERLAND'S EXPLANATIONS OF HIS OWN ACTION WERE DEEMED SATISFACTORY. APPARENTLY, HOWEVER, HIS ATTITUDE TO THAT COMPANY OF WHICH HE WAS FORMERLY A DIRECTOR, HAS NOW BECOME SEVERELY STRAINED, AND HE HAS TAKEN STEPS TO DISSOCIATE HIMSELF PUBLICLY WITH THE POLICY OF THE COMPANY WHICH HE ASSISTED TO CONTROL.

TO THIS END HE HAS FORWARDED COPIES OF CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN HIMSELF AND HIS COMPANY TO "THE HERALD" AND TO "THE TIMES OF ARGENTINA."

THE ESSENTIAL PORTIONS OF THAT CORRESPONDENCE APPEAR IN OUR COLUMNS TO-DAY.

The following letter, dated May 25, 1915, was addressed by Mr. R. W. J. Sutherland to the Anglo-Argentine Coal Co. Ltd.:—

"You will undoubtedly remember that on November 4 last I wrote you the following letter:—

From private information given to me and which I also read myself, I understand that one of the steamers consigned to the Anglo-Argentine Coal Co., Buenos Aires, recently discharged coal for the Deutsche Kohlen Depot. There was other information supplied which it is not necessary for me to refer to.

It has always been supposed that the Deutsche Kohlen Depot has been subsidised and run to a certain extent for the German Government. I may further mention that it has been known for some time that the German cruisers in South America have been supplied with coal from Buenos Aires, and as a Shareholder in the Anglo-Argentine Coal Co., I think it my duty to inform you that I dissociate myself entirely from any transaction of coal supplied that possibly might be made by the Deutsche Kohlen Depot to the German cruisers, which coal might in the first place be supplied by the Anglo-Argentine Coal Company. I do not assert that the coal has been supplied in this way but I refer you to what is known above, and I think that before any coal is supplied to the Deutsche Kohlen Depot that it should be known for what purpose it is required.

I may here say that other large firms have been approached for coal through third parties but have first made enquiries as to what purpose the coal is required. My only object in writing this letter is to suggest that very strict injunction should be given on this point and further, that if anything is found out I have put it on record that I was not a party to it.

"This letter demonstrates that I had nothing whatever to do with the transactions referred to below, not having taken part as Director or Manager of your Company for some ten months previously owing to a serious illness. My reason for sending you the letter was, that having a friend in the Monmouth, I know from letters received from him that the particular squadron of which the Monmouth formed a part had cut off the supply of coal to the German Squadron, which Squadron, you will remember finally sank the Monmouth and Good Hope. I feared that this German Squadron would obtain coal from Buenos Aires and I desired that no coal should by any means be supplied by your Company to the Germans which had left Cardiff for your depot at Buenos Aires.

"You will notice in my letter that I referred to your having supplied the German Coal Company with coal becoming known, which fact, was afterwards published in consequence of the Captain of the steamer refusing to deliver your coal to our enemies.

"The deliveries you made were made public by the BUENOS AIRES HERALD, Times of Argentina and Fairplay.

"I was further justified in my fear of being connected with your Company's action by statements in the Times of Argentina, dated December 7, 1914, and referred to in Fairplay of January 14, 1915.

"I call your particular attention to the paragraph from Fairplay as follows:—

We have been informed that a German lawyer engaged in the case openly remarked that the coals so received will be placed on board German cruisers as soon as convenient or impossible.

"During the early part of this year I was frequently asked to give a personal explanation in regard to this transaction by friends in London, Manchester, etc., and among the many incidents that took place I will mention one: Having to see some friends in London, I was requested not to enter their office until I furnished them with a personal explanation regarding the supply of coal made by your Company to the German Coal Company.

"It became clear to me that it was necessary to place on record, for the sake of my four boys, the fact that I was not in any way connected with the foregoing supplies of coal. I therefore consulted my Solicitor in February, and received advice to wait until you had sufficient time to combat the most detrimental remarks in the above quotations about the conduct of your Directors.

"In consequence of the above-printed statements and, I believe, of the action of the British Consul at Buenos Aires (it was reported at the Cardiff Docks) that your Company was called upon by the British Admiralty to render an explanation of your action.

"After your interviews with the Admiralty you received a letter from them which your Secretary is credited with having stated exonerates your Company from any blame in the matter.

"I have therefore waited since February, as already stated, in order to give you sufficient time to publish in the Buenos Aires Press the letter you have received which exonerates you, as it would take three to four months before it arrived out and the paper reached here.

"Up to the present you have not to my knowledge done this.

"You can readily understand that it is my name and personality that will suffer in this transaction and for a matter that I had nothing to do with and I cannot allow myself to be branded as a Director of a concern that during one of the greatest struggles in the history of the Country supplied its enemies with coal.

"I repeat that my name is the only British name mentioned in the English papers in connection with the supply and although your Directors naturally prefer to hide behind the name of the Anglo-Argentine Coal Company, Limited, yet my name of Sutherland is the only British name published. You are aware that your two principal Directors and Proprietors, Mr. D. A. Thomas, of the Cambrian Coal Company, and Mr. T. J. Callaghan, of L. Gueret Limited, have no sons, (neither has Mr. Amaral, but being a Brazilian subject the matter does not affect him) and whatever investigations and recriminations are made after the war is ended, finish with them.

"During the recent visit of Mr. Amaral, I asked him why he had made the supply referred to and his reply was that he had, he thought, taken every precaution and when he made the sale he advised you by letter of the sale of a cargo to the German Coal Company, which letter arrived about ten days after the T. R. Thompson had sailed from Cardiff. Mr. Amaral stated that you took no steps to advise the British Government of this cargo being en route for the enemy's Coal Company. Of course had you done so, he says the steamer could have been intercepted and the coal prevented from reaching the Germans.

"Personally I think that immediately you received a letter stating that you had a cargo on the way to such dangerous enemies as the German Coal Company, especially a cargo of coal, your Directors should have informed the British Admiralty forthwith and not have allowed the matter to be exposed only from the loyalty of the Captain of the T. R. Thompson.

"I should like here to state that it is my intention to give my share of the profit on these German transactions to one of the Red Cross Societies.

"Mr. Amaral added that he left Buenos Aires on November 17 and had nothing to do with your further sales of coal to the German Company, one ex the Diciembre mentioned in Fairplay of February 4.

"After perusal of the above you will readily see the necessity I am under for calling upon you to furnish me with a copy of the letter you have received from the Admiralty exonerating you from the transactions referred to so that if at any time my sons or myself are connected or blamed for it they, as well as I, will be in a position to refute the charge. This is the more important now in view of the increasing and justifiable bitterness held by all Britishers throughout the world towards the German nation."

To this the Anglo-Argentine Coal Co., Ltd., sent the following reply, dated June 2:—

"We acknowledge receipt of a very long letter from you in the matter of the T. R. Thompson, which was considered by our Directors at their Board meeting yesterday.

"You are fully aware, from information which we learn you obtained from Mr. Amaral when he was in England, and from inquiries which we find you have caused to be made, that His Majesty's Foreign Office was fully satisfied with the bona fides of our action in the matter you write about, and if we could have obtained evidence substantiating the information which was given us as to statements made by you to members of the Chamber of Commerce, we should have taken steps against you to protect our interests.

"You say that the extraordinary letter which you have written to us has been written by you in the interest of your children; but we believe it to have been written with a view of trying to assist your defence of the action which is being brought against you by Messrs. Amaral, Sutherland and Company, Limited, for your serious breaches of your agreement with them.

"In the circumstances, we do not propose making any further reply to your letter than to say that we must ask you, if you desire to continue this correspondence, to do so by your Solicitor to our Solicitors."

Mr. Sutherland then despatched a further letter, dated June 10, to the Company:—

"In your letter you inform me that His Majesty's Foreign Office were fully satisfied with the bona fides of your action, but owing to the publicity given to the fact of your Company having made a supply of coal to the German Coal Company, which supplies according to information published, were not confined to the T. R. Thompson, and owing to the fact that my name is unfortunately connected with the affair, I again ask you to please furnish me with a copy of the letter which is reported you have stated to have received from the Government. Please note that I am not disputing your word as to the Government being satisfied, this is not the point at issue. The point at issue is, that I wish to make it as publicly known, the fact that I had nothing to do with the transaction as it was as publicly known that mine was the only British name in connection with the affair.

"I have very clearly stated to you that I cannot hide behind the name of your Company, and have to think of others who bear my name which does not apply to your two principal Proprietors.

"With regard to your reference to the Chamber of Commerce, you are probably aware that I was asked to give personal explanations by a large number of the Members of the Chamber, and further I was asked by one of the Members of the Committee of the Floor Control, to write a letter to the Committee expressing my willingness to attend their meeting and give a personal explanation as regards my personal position. Your remarks evidently therefore refer to the explanation that I was compelled to give, that I had nothing whatever to do in selling coal to our enemies. It is for this purpose, which has continually arisen, that I wish to receive a copy from you of the letter above referred to from the Government, as I apprehend that the commercial world will judge your statement as to your bona fides in the same light in which it will judge your having made the supplies.

"With regard to your statement that I have not written you in the interest of my children, but to assist my defence in an action brought against me by the firm of Amaral, Sutherland and Co., Ltd., which I founded and established, I wish to say, in the first place, that I cannot help thinking that your opinion of British law must be very peculiar if you imagine that such a matter as the present subject is likely to affect another matter which has nothing to do with it. However, as you think that the publicity which is going to ensue of the present matter will affect judgment in the other, I will ask the Court to leave the present subject entirely out of their minds, as I do not wish this matter to affect the judgment of the Court for what you term the serious breaches of my agreement with Amaral, Sutherland and Co., Ltd. Fortunately, I am in a position to prove by an official document that I commenced to take up my present position in December.

"I refer for a moment to your remark that I am not continuing this correspondence in the interests of my children. I only wish to add that recently, when two of my sons in their preliminary nomination for Sandhurst College to be trained as officers for the British Army, the fact of their name being Sutherland, and from Cardiff, was at once brought up and their connection with the supply of coal by your Company to the German Coal Company. I am sure that this fact alone will prove beyond a doubt the necessity that I am under of again asking you to place me in a position that I may exonerate you from the transaction, which, in so doing, exonerates myself.

"Your last paragraph asks me to communicate with you through a solicitor. I cannot see that there is any legal point at issue. My request is a personal one and one which any reasonable Board of Directors would immediately accede to. I am sorry that I have been so persistent, but you will see that it is a matter of necessity."

The Company did not accede to Mr. Sutherland's request, but sent the following letter on June 15:—

"We beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 10th inst., and in reply can only confirm what we wrote you on the 2nd instant. We omitted to advise you in our last communication that our solicitors are Messrs. Vachell and Co., Cardiff Docks."

The final letter in the correspondence was, on July 9 last, from Mr. Sutherland to the Company:—

"It is evident, I think, judging by your request that I should communicate with your Solicitors, that you do not thoroughly comprehend the purport of my letters and I therefore repeat that I have asked you to supply me with a copy of the letter you state you have received from the Foreign Office with regard to the supply of coal you made to the German Coal Company, ex the T. R. Thompson. You are aware, however, that according to published reports, you have supplied coal ex other steamers so that if the letter from the Foreign Office refers to the case of the T. R. Thompson only, it would not be satisfactory to me from my point of view as it is my name that is connected with the whole affair.

"I may say that your opponents are reported to have stated that your excuse for making supplies is, that they were the repayment of loans. This would not cover me even if it were true, and you know as well that you have made an actual sale of coal to the German Coal Company to supply them with Welsh Coal since the war began. My authority for this is Mr. Amaral who made the sale and advised you of it. I have asked you to kindly furnish me with the letter referred to, and I have pointed out to you that I am not able to hide behind the name of the Anglo-Argentine Coal Company, Limited, and have to bear the brunt for years and my sons after me, for a transaction done by you with which I had no connection. You must not expect me to allow the matter to be hushed up, and I am determined to make as widely known as possible that I had nothing to do with the transaction.

"I should like to add that as recently as May the 27th, the following appeared in the Times of that date:—

"Some resentment is felt that American coal was carried in British bottoms for delivery here to a German Coal Company which coal-

THE VICIOUS WELSH

Attacked by "La Razon"

LUDICROUS AND UNJUST CHARGES

"La Razon," while admittedly one of the most widely circulated journals in the Capital, is far from being the most reliable.

Not long ago, a number of Welsh settlers in Chubut announced their intention of transferring their allegiance to Australia. They took the step, it was alleged by "La Razon," as a result of the extensive propaganda by Australian emigration agents.

Chubut settlers, however, in the course of communications to THE HERALD, stated that the unsatisfactory state of the Argentine land laws was solely responsible for the departure of the younger generation.

The next step in the controversy was taken by "La Razon" last evening, when a communication from that journal's travelling correspondent at Port Madryn was published. In the course of his article, the "La Razon" correspondent made the following remarkable assertions, which however, are not difficult to disprove. The views of the Welsh settlers should be interesting:

"Many Welshmen often arrive at Madryn; these are the popular residents of Chubut, concerning whom fantastic legends have been forged, representing them as the pioneers of progress in the Territory.

"Nothing is falser nor more absurd than this halo of legend.

"Nor is the Welshman the man of initiative and sound judgment he represents himself to us; neither are his colonies model gardens of industry, well-being and thrift.

"Any nucleus of people of different origin triumphs over them and imposes itself on them with the characteristics most acceptable to the National interests.

"These Colonies are indeed, as seen here, centres of idleness and vice.

"Nature has done everything, and has given to these Welshmen situated in the richest parts of the territory, spontaneous production of incalculable value.

"It is better that they have not adapted themselves to their surroundings.

"The vices, congenital to their race, have here remained imprisoned like themselves, in their colonies, and while they have not corrupted the life of their surroundings have centuplicated the work of the police and of the Government."

FIRE IN INDEPENDENCIA

ALMACEN ALMOST GUTTED.

Early yesterday morning people passing 1999 Calle Independencia observed a dense smoke issuing from the premises. The police woke the proprietors of the house, an almacén, and sent for the bomberos. On arrival the latter got several lines of hose to work, to isolate the house and prevent the fire from spreading.

After an hour's work, the outbreak was quelled and the losses were computed at $25,000, on a total capital of $30,000. The injury to the premises has not yet been estimated. Neither the building nor the almacén are insured. Nevertheless, the proprietor, Juan Bautista Camerona, and his assistants, have been provisionally detained.

ed German cruisers off this coast." If the resentment referred to is in consequence of carrying coal for the Germans, what must be the resentment felt against my name being connected with the supply of Welsh coal to the same Company?"

TRADE AND BANKRUPTCY

The Returns for August

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE DECREASE

There is a natural feeling of satisfaction in commercial circles at the marked diminution in the monthly some $89,000,000, together with two return of failures and settlements for August. Compared with this time last year the difference is naturally most marked, "Liabilities" then figuring at $86,000,000 against the $11,000,000 of the recent returns. But it ought not to be forgotten that part of the $86,000,000 was made up of the liabilities of the French Bank, or three other big firms totalling at least $5,000,000. Thus analysed, the improvement is not so marked, but nevertheless the August figures are the second lowest for the current year. Where the most hopeful signs are to be found are in the classified statements of the various debtors whose affairs are awaiting legal settlement. Trade in general, wholesale and retail, figures much lower down the list than it has done for several months, the chief proportion of the $11,000,000 aforementioned being chargeable to property owners (in many cases this may be read as speculators) builders, and bakers. This last item may at first appear strange, seeing that bread is always in demand, but their presence on the list for over a million dollars may probably be put down to the adoption of the "cash on delivery" system by the millers instead of the lengthy credits formerly granted to the trade. Spot cash at the mill, together with reduced or cancelled credit in the banks, has brought many bakers to a realisation of the fact that they were merely working with other people's capital.

No value whatever attaches to the statement that assets exceed liabilities by some $3,000,000. It is absolutely safe to say that this superavit exists only on paper, and until the bankruptcy statistics of this country can show against the failures, the amount eventually recovered by creditors, all reference to these much-lauded superavits is mischievous and useless. It is indeed a very great pity that the responsible sections of the Argentine Press do not refrain from repeating month after month the same story. Taking an average it is very doubtful whether 50 per cent would not be too high a proportion to assign to the results of a month's failures when eventually liquidated, and that without taking into account the loss of interest on the original debt. Moreover, however much one may feel that trade is slowly mending, it is as yet too early to hail the August figures as a proof that all is over. There is far too much indebtedness in suspense, and one is giving away no secret when one maintains that a part of the reduction in the total failures is due to the determination of creditors to keep their debtors out of the courts at all costs, experience showing that whilst private assiduity may get part at least of the amount outstanding, once the affair is in judicial hands, private enterprise is helplessly bound by legal red tape, and official action is hopelessly incompetent to obtain what the creditor needs, which is cash in some shape or other.

There is now no longer any attempt made in official circles to bolster up the theoretically perfect and practically useless Bankruptcy Law of this Republic. Its reform was decided upon two years ago, and doubtless, had not politics intervened to take the minds of our popular representatives from practical affairs, it would have been re-drafted ere this. Summary procedure for small firms, with sharp punishment for sharp practices, would do much to improve the tone of a certain class of retail traders, whilst the more important failures as regards the amount in-

DESIRE FOR ITALY'S FRIENDSHIP

Rome Sept. 1.

The Rumanian Government has decided to stand firmly to its policy not to permit ammunition from Germany or Austria to pass through the territory of Rumania for Turkey.

In a statement that has been published explaining the attitude of the Government it is stated that Rumania desires to maintain strict neutrality, and has been confirmed in her attitude by the existence of war between Italy and Turkey, it being her desire to preserve the relations of friendship existing between herself and Italy.

involved ought to be given into the charge of a functionary corresponding to a Public Trustee, when a lengthy liquidation is likely to best serve the interests of the creditors, or be adjudicated upon out of hand when, as in the case of a purely commercial firm, the majority of trading interests favour a rapid settlement. In this case, as in that of the small trader, dishonest practices ought to be stigmatised by punishment, and the individual or firm undertaking fresh responsibilities involving further indebtedness when actually insolvent ought to be specially penalised. At present this is quite a Utopian idea. The popular expression el que no debe no tiene is far too general. It will have to give way to more conservative and more thrifty ideas in course of time, but reading into the August returns does not lead the skilled observer to believe that the much needed lesson has already been learnt, much less put into practice.

Our Point of View: "Herald" Leading Articles of the Week.

CONSCRIPTION FOR BRITAIN

SATURDAY, August 28, 1915.

The political mind of the people of England must be in a peculiar state of indecision or chaos when Ministers of the Crown are permitted continually to worry and threaten the manhood of the country on the question of conscription. Ever since the British people awakened from the slumber into which they had been lulled by the Government itself they have been alternately frightened and bullied. We can find no more fitting description for the policy which appears to have been pursued, and evidently is still to be followed.

Following on the period, marking the first few months of the war, during which the Government's main purpose seemed to be to keep the people blissfully ignorant of the seriousness of the problem of beating Germany, there was a brief epoch—the public having discovered the truth or having had it thrust before them by the Northcliffe press—when the ministers chased one another around the country admitting the danger and offering amazingly contradictory excuses why Germany had not been beaten. Mr. Lloyd George admitted a shortage of munitions, and attributed it to the drunkenness of the British workman; Mr. Asquith declared there was no shortage, and praised the workman. Another minister declared that volunteering had fallen off alarmingly. He was immediately contradicted and the people were informed that the recruiting had been purposely "slowed down," because men were forthcoming in such numbers that they could not be handled or equipped for the fighting line.

Out of this weird demonstration of ignorance or cross-purposes there emerged two or three salient facts, and facing these with apparent determination the Government seemed at last to know where the Nation stood; what was wanted, and what policy was imperative. For a brief time only was this fixity of purpose apparent, and then arose the question of whether volunteering was sufficient, or conscription essential. That such a question should arise was, of course, perfectly natural. Nobody could say definitely at one time whether all the men needed by Britain could be secured under the voluntary system, because it was impossible then to gauge exactly what the requirements were. The situation is different now, and nobody is in a better position, or should be in a better position, than the Government to say what numbers of men are required, and nobody should know better whether those numbers can be secured under the voluntary system, or not. Now it is quite evident that the Government has made up its mind on these points; just as clear as it is that it lacks the purpose of courage to do what it knows should be done.

If there is one minister who has declared that conscription must be considered, a dozen have done so. One after the other, from Lord Kitchener to Lord Selborne, has threatened it. Even the old-avowed opponents of conscription, men like Mr. Lloyd George, and Mr. Asquith himself, have let the public know clearly that the voluntary system must fail, or at least there is some doubt of it proving sufficient for all requirements. For the past three months ministers have been engaged in what we may call a campaign of "compulsory volunteering." In other words they are forcing "volunteers" by threatening the people with conscription, or they think they are doing so. It is obvious that they must fail. The man who wants to volunteer, or considers doing so later on, cannot possibly be touched by threats of conscription. If he wants to fight, he will fight. The man who does not want to fight will not enter the army

THE COALITION FARCE

SUNDAY, August 29, 1915.

Mr. Asquith and his advisers have forfeited the confidence of the British nation. Since the formation of a Coalition Ministry in May last, they have had opportunities of remedying the ills produced by the maladministration of their predecessors, but, except for the creation of a Ministry of Munitions, they have entirely failed to grapple successfully with a situation that demands drastic treatment if Britain is to emerge from the Great War with a maximum of success and a minimum of loss. What is the position in Britain today? Those who follow the columns of the home newspapers—or at any rate that section of the press which places state before party—can only come to the conclusion that chaos reigns where order is essential and that the Government is incapable of dealing with the great problems which confront the nation from day to day.

We have already emphasised the absurdities of the recruiting question; the ludicrous attitude of Britain's rulers towards the Welsh mining dispute and the contraband cotton controversy has been equally obvious. The painful fact is that out of the Greatest Tragedy in History, the men in charge of the affairs of the nation have succeeded only in extracting farce—a pitiful farce for the contemplation of Britons; an amusing one for the entertainment of the enemy.

We are now nearing the end of the thirteenth month of war. The wonderful solidity of the people has given place to labour disputes; the recruiting boom has been superseded by the threatening of the able-bodied members of the community; and public agitation alone has made possible the declaration of cotton to be contraband. That unpreparedness for war which was, in some respects, a credit to Britain in the autumn of last year is now in process of becoming a stigma on the capacity of the Cabinet. They were unprepared in August 1914; they are unprepared to-day. The press and public essay to lead; the Government unwillingly follow. This was true of the late Liberal Ministry; it is equally true of the Coalition Ministry at the present time. Apparently, to the elements which mismanaged the Dardanelles adventure, are added the elements of another party which grievously bungled the South African campaign fifteen years ago. Chaos is at a premium; common sense at a discount.

The plain truth is that the nation is ruled by a body of incompetent optimists. The policy of "muddle through" has proved so successful in the past that the Ministers of to-day believe, or affect to believe, that fate will again guard the interests of Britain. Insufficient attention is because the Government threatens conscription. He naturally says: "I don't want to fight; therefore I don't volunteer. Your threat is empty. I may as well wait and be driven into the army. I escape nothing now by volunteering. When I can't help it, I will submit."

The Government has one clear and courageous course before it. The declarations of ministers are sufficient proof that conscription is felt by them to be necessary. Their duty then is to introduce it. They are, or should be, the governors and rulers of the people, as they are presumed to be their leaders, but apparently they are afraid to govern, and will not lead. If the people of Britain could speak with one voice there can be no doubt they would prefer to be brought under conscription, whether they like it or do not like it, than to be continually lectured and threatened.

paid to the fact—announced in yesterday's cablegrams—that Germany's war organisation "is a model for other countries"; yet that proud boast in the Reichstag is not without considerable justification.

Germany has, from the outset, assumed control of every phase of industry essential to the proper conduct of a great war; no private interests are allowed to subordinate those of the state. The calling-up of recruits, has, under a system of compulsory service, been automatic. The Berlin Government understands its requirements and pursues the most rational path in order that they shall be met. The converse to that picture is to be found in Britain, where we have had the Munitions Scandal, the Dardanelles Muddle, the Welsh Coal Dispute, and the Contraband Cotton Controversy. The British public are paying for the war; they are sacrificing their sons and friends for the glory of civilisation and the Empire. Much of that sacrifice has been unnecessary, and, unless a great change be effected, the wastage will continue.

The facts, so far as can be made out, are that the nationalisation—if only temporary—of the means of production are essential, and that the manhood of the Empire must be called upon to serve the needs of that Empire. A strong Premier would have made these facts plain to the public months ago; a weak Premier surrounded by strong lieutenants would have been compelled before now to take a firm stand. As it is a weak Premier is supported by a wavering ministry and such a structure must fall.

What is the remedy? We have already suggested that nothing short of a dictatorship can place the country on a firm administrative footing. We still incline to that view. At the moment, however, it is scarcely possible either to find the right man or to assure him the support of the country. Improvements must therefore be sought in another direction; and despite the failure of the Asquith Ministry we believe that a Coalition Ministry could be formed successfully and could control the affairs of the nation in a manner much more satisfactory than they are controlled to-day.

The principal obstacle appears to be Mr. Asquith; consequently Mr. Asquith must go. Admittedly a clever politician, he has failed to prove himself to be a great statesman. Always a party man, ever ready to seize upon a point in favour of his administrative lieutenants—whether they be right or wrong—he has yet to show himself to be a man who could rise above party interests and who would be prepared to risk a cabinet crisis provided the country knew the truth. Had the war occurred fifteen or twenty years ago, the possibility is that Mr. Asquith would have guided Britain's destinies with consummate success. To-day however he is approaching the age of retirement and he lacks the courage or inclination to create a political revolution.

After the departure of Mr. Asquith, the first great step involves the installation of Lord Fisher as First Lord of the Admiralty. That must be followed by a plain recognition of Lord Kitchener as Britain's War Lord and immediate conformity to his wishes, whether they include conscription or no. Lords Selborne and Derby, who have both been in close touch with the recruiting movement and each of whom has stated clearly that the voluntary movement has not been entirely successful, should be found places in a reconstructed Cabinet; while Mr. Balfour, whose administrative ability is unquestioned, Mr. Lloyd George and Sir Edward Grey would also be found to be of value. These gentlemen, with possibly the addition of Mr. Austen Chamberlain, would form a Council of Six. The small army of time-serving politicians who cling to office primarily because of the prestige and salary which it brings should be afforded an opportunity of serving the nation in some other way. Russia is forming a National Defence Cabinet. Britain must follow a similar course; otherwise only the

GERMANY'S LATEST PROPOSAL

TUESDAY, August 31, 1915.

Germany is reported to have proposed, in response to protests from the United States, to abandon her submarine policy, provided the States will undertake to break down the blockade of Germany established by the Allies. It is no surprise to learn that such a proposition has been described in America as "inacceptable." The basis of America's position as placed before the world, is the recognition of international law, and an insistence upon its observance by all belligerents. Did the United States accept Germany's proposition, she would violate her own conceptions of what is right, and at once admit the abrogation of the law on which she has made her stand.

There is a clear difference between the positions of the Allies and Germany as they appear before the bar of the International Court of Right. The Allies have conformed to the letter and spirit of the law. Germany has not, and in her attempts to put herself right, she only aggravates her offence, and must finally irritate the world which judges her. There is such a thing as a blockade, recognised by convention as a legitimate weapon of warfare. The conditions under which it may be established, and how it may be used are clearly written. Britain and her Allies have put a blockade into force against Germany. That they were in a position to do so, or were fortunate in being able to do so, or that Germany suffers heavily by their success, does not alter the position. So long as they have conformed to the law, the law allows them the right to continue to employ the weapon they have forged against their enemy.

In asking that the United States should mediate to break the blockade Germany is asking what it is impossible to grant. She is asking in effect to have a legitimate and recognised weapon of war rendered useless because its employment injures her, and her prospects of defeating her enemies. In return, she promises not to employ a weapon she never had the right to employ. Putting her for a moment in the position of an individual suitor at the International Court of Right, she is making just as ridiculous a request as would be that of a private individual who entered a court of ordinary justice, and demanded that a certain law be annulled because its observance or enforcement against him, injured him, or pressed heavily upon him, and in return promised not to kill—not those who forced the law against him—but people in no way concerned with his grievance.

Germany, of course, recognises this clearly. She has deluded nobody with her plea of justification for her submarine campaign against merchant shipping. The United States might well say to her: "You complain that a blockade imposed in accordance with law, and in the observance of which there is nothing legally wrong, injures you severely. That is one of the penalties of war; the result of the use of a legitimate weapon against a belligerent who cannot, or will not attempt to overcome it by using another weapon, equally legitimate. You have your fleet. That should be your weapon against the blockade. You say you are not strong enough to meet the one weapon with the other, and you claim the right to employ a third, which is neither legal, nor legitimate. We cannot admit your claim."

This argument would admit at once the sincerity of Germany. As the Government of the United States is not a coterie of imbeciles no such waste of time is indulged in. It is courage of her people and their refusal to be defeated will save the nation from disaster. In the latter event, however, the cost would be heavy; indeed, so great that immediate steps are necessary in order that it may be averted.

merely stated that Germany's proposition is "inacceptable," and quite possibly Germany expected that answer. She knows very well that there is no question of right or wrong about her policy. Questions of right and wrong do not count with her. If there were ninety-nine legitimate and humane methods of overcoming the blockade, and only one illegitimate, brutal, and cruel way of doing so, and she fancied the employment of the latter, she would employ it. That is Germany's character; that is the spirit which has been cultivated in the nation since the Prussian Germans became predominant. All the talk about right and wrong is so much cant and humbug, and the United States is right not to waste time in arguing about it. Whether America does, or does not, fight the outlaw of civilisation, is daily becoming of less importance to civilisation, except in a moral sense. The question is now one of importance for America herself. With her is the decision.

BULGARIA'S DECISION

Wednesday, Sept. 1.

It is now authoritatively reported that the treaty between Bulgaria and Turkey has been signed. So far as we know the treaty imposes on Bulgaria no other obligation than that of remaining neutral, but in all probability it means a benevolent neutrality which sooner or later will emerge into active support of the Germanic alliance. There was a time when such action on the part of Bulgaria would have disturbed seriously the equanimity of the Allies, but to-day it is not so vital, except to Bulgaria herself. The idea of that country being bought off by her old enemy, Turkey, is about as difficult to understand, as would be the statement that oil and water had been brought to coalesce, and no doubt the world will yet see the consequences of the attempt to bring about such an unnatural union.

Bulgaria herself will be the first to experience these consequences, and certainly in the event of the Germanic allies proving successful will she regret her action. In that dire case Bulgaria's dreams of power and the peaceful pursuit of her ambitions, will be cruelly shattered, for no one who has studied the deep things underlying this war, can believe for a moment that Bulgaria will ever be permitted by Austria and Germany on the one side, and Turkey on the other, to enjoy any fruits of her own apostasy. The Germanic aim is world dominion. That aim will be shattered for ever if the Allies are crushingly victorious in this war. Should they, however, fail—and God forbid it—then neither Bulgaria, nor any others of the Balkan states, nor even Turkey herself will endure for any longer time than it takes Germany and Austria to recoup their strength and smash down the last barriers that will stand between them and their domination of the world.

The course decided upon by Bulgaria was probably taken primarily with the object of winning the friendship of Germany and Austria. Such friendship will prove valueless, as we have shown. Other considerations unquestionably were antagonism to Serbia and Greece. The decision itself might possibly have been avoided had the present Prime Minister of Greece had more time at his disposal in which to have brought the Balkan powers together. The whole story of the position of the Balkans in the Great War will some day furnish the most interesting history of political intrigue, and German underground engineering, the main plot concerning the manner in which M. Venizelos was disposed of for a convenient space of time, and the democracy of Greece was rendered powerless through the German sympathy of the King, and the corruptibility of the political opponents of M. Venizelos. In this connection an interesting story, which is fully credited in French official circles, states that at the mo-

PRO-ALLY PROPAGANDA

THURSDAY, September 2, 1915.

Is it possible to get together a representative committee to undertake the work of Pro-Ally propaganda in Argentina, to counter the industrious efforts of the German organizations? That is the question which has been put to us by a prominent member of the vigorous and successful propaganda organization in the neighbouring Republic of Uruguay. The letter in which the question is embraced is one that we would like to be able to publish, but which we cannot because the views expressed and criticisms offered, are given us in confidence. We are, however, able to say that the organization with which the writer is connected, has received ample proof that there is every necessity for the British people in Argentina to bestir themselves unless they wish to find their cause undermined, and all sympathy in this great struggle directed where it is least deserved.

We feel that we should quote certain passages from this letter because they serve to explain what course of action is felt to be necessary. The writer says that an important French firm in Buenos Aires communicated the news that the feelings of the clergy, military and high Government officials in Argentina were more or less antagonistic to the Allies, and letters from other correspondents in this country confirmed this view. "As previously remarked," says the writer, "there appears to be no really organized nucleus for effective, discriminate and judicious pro-Ally propaganda in Argentina. There seems to be a general apathy and a want of appreciation of the necessity for such by the patriotic institutions. A perusal of the applications we have received from British, French and Argentines would at once convince you that the individual ally feels intensely this neglect. They in isolated parts of the provinces have to suffer the lying aspersions of the strenuous German propaganda all over the Republic.

ment of the ousting from office of the Greek Prime Minister, Greece was at the point of declaring war against Turkey, and that in expectation of her assuming land operations at once, the bombardment of the Dardanelles by the Allied fleet was commenced. However, before M. Venizelos could secure from the unwilling King, the necessary decree setting the armed forces of Greece in motion, the German influence prevailed, and M. Venizelos fell. If the story be true it certainly furnishes some explanation of why the Dardanelles were attacked solely by warships, instead of warships and land forces in co-operation, which all experts have agreed was the only way to force them.

There can be no question in the minds of those who have followed the political history of the Balkans, and have studied the character and achievements of the strong man of Greece, that the failure of M. Venizelos was a severe blow to the cause of the Allies, but it was a blow to the consequences of which they had become resigned. All hope of the Balkans taking sides with the Allies vanished, or if any remained, the Allies ceased to place any reliance on aid from this quarter. When M. Venizelos returned to power it was believed that there was every chance of the old Balkan Alliance being reconstructed, and to some extent events have taken the character of a race between the German diplomatists on the one side and the Greek Prime Minister on the other. Time, however, has favoured the Germans. They have managed to keep Bulgaria out of any entente favourable to the Allies. They are welcome to their success. The only real sufferer will be Bulgaria herself. The Allies have long since realised that they must win the war themselves, and not rely on the precarious chance of assistance from the Balkans. It is well that it is so.

The Germans have implanted in the minds of the country people that their nation is the wronged one, and to some considerable effect."

We believe that what is stated above is fact. The effect of the cleverly organised and well sustained publicity of the Germans, is, we are sorry to say, just what we feared it would be when our own efforts last October to stir the community to action, proved almost resultless. We argued then in the face of opposition, official and private, that it was the bounden duty of the British people to counter the German propaganda. We have rather sad remembrance of the complete official indifference which greeted our effort, and the tired endeavour to belittle the German activity as ridiculous. Since then, however, our position has been completely vindicated. We have had the pleasure of reviewing and distributing a good deal of British official literature, and we know that largely as the result of our own efforts the British Government actually established a department in the Official Press Bureau, to supervise the dissemination of pro-Ally literature throughout Latin America.

So far as it has gone the official effort to meet the German publicity has been good, but as our correspondent points out, much more is required. We have no mouthpiece such as the Germans have in "La Union," though we should have. "La Union" is entirely the result of a united German community, determined to disseminate German views broadcast in the Spanish language. In addition the Germans distribute tons of circular matter all over Latin America. Go where you will German circulars are in the hands of the Argentine people. The conservative Englishman who knows this invariably satisfies himself that all this mass of literature is lies, and can produce no effect satisfactory to the German. This idea is entirely erroneous, even if it be granted that the German literature is nothing but fiction. No people can stand being bombarded with German views year in and year out, without ever hearing a word from the other side, and not be influenced by the bombardment. But this phase of the question we have dwelt upon many times.

Something must be done to place the point of view of the Allies fairly and squarely before the people of Argentina. The Allies have the best case in the world, and little argument is needed for that case to be accepted. All that is wanted—but it is the essential "all"—is organization. It is surely possible to secure a committee consisting of active and representative men, which will undertake the work of thoroughly canvassing the people of Argentina, through the post, for their sympathy. Such a committee, if formed among the British community, would soon give rise to a French, a Russian and an Italian committee. The welding of all would produce a central organization that in influence and effectiveness would be more than a match for the German organizations. A highly successful working model of such an organization already exists in Uruguay. Its excellence and effectiveness have attracted attention in Argentina among people who would heartily welcome a similar organization in this country. Why cannot the idea propounded in this article be carried out?

SUPPLIES FROM ARGENTINA

PROTECTED BY BRITISH WARSHIPS.

Madrid, Sept. 1.

It is reported from Las Palmas that four British transports loaded with frozen meat and grain from Argentina called there under the escort of warships in order to obtain supplies, after which they left for Liverpool.

Balkan Uncertainties.

The Balkan situation is more extraordinarily mixed than ever; plot and counter-plot, intrigue and double intrigue are tangled in a maze. There must be enough material furnished every day for half a dozen Le Queux novels. Serbia is willing to make concessions to Bulgaria; but Bulgaria has signed a treaty with Turkey and cannot accept (at least cannot collect) concessions from both sides. One fact is certain. Ferdinand of Bulgaria has not that tremendously long, straight nose, the nose of Francois I. of Valois, of Louis XI., and of Leopold II. of Belgium, for nothing. It is a feature indicative, if one may judge by its possessors, of extraordinary cunning and duplicity, sometimes allied with sensuality and cruelty, but one never hears of those unfashionable qualities now. Therefore the said Ferdinand is in his element, and the deep and wily game is one he greatly delights in. However, he may be too clever; Russia made Bulgaria, and will never forget or forgive the treachery of turning on her. Thimble rigging and the three-card trick are not in it.

Writing in English and in ———?

Mr. G. K. Chesterton is a joy for ever, and a refutation of the erroneous idea that a man of corpulent habit must be gross witted. His subtlety is delightful and had one the choice, this is the portly Gamaliel at whose feet I would sit and gather the (badly needed) wisdom. After reading some of Mr. Chesterton's incisive and delightfully written articles, it is positively painful to fall on some of the later and baser efforts of Mr. Jack London. Abandoning his former style this writer is constructing a hideous hybrid language, or at least he is using the worst sort of American he can find, which bears only a distant resemblance to English, and reminds one of certain horrible cinematograph posters. By converting nouns into verbs (brilliant expedient) he gets such delightful terms as "he featured," "he sensed," "he pleased," "and such abominable words as no Christian can endure to hear." Even were the subject not almost entirely confined to the Lust of the Eye and the Pride of Life, such language is atrocious, and it is regrettable to see a writer of such ability and force decking his style with these ridiculous affectations and objectionable mannerisms. If every writer is to coin words at his pleasure, "the well of English undefiled" will soon become little better than a common drain.

De Te Fabula.

Mr. Chesterton is at his best in scarifying British Insularity and Snobishness, and it is impossible to hit these hateful qualities too hard or too often. We know the ladies who "don't like foreigners," and think that outside Wimbledon, Finsbury, or Croydon everybody is "foreign." That a man should be dark complexioned and have black hair is an offence to them, and the lady quoted by G. K. C. who "didn't feel sure of the French because they didn't play football" is quite a mild example. Football in the intervals of fighting is all right, but at home, more thinking and less football would be a good thing. He is quite right in pointing out that while the Hun is hated for his many objectionable qualities which he imagines to be all virtues (some of them are virtues distorted), the British have what he justly terms an air "of vulgar and insular condescension." He is quite right, too; the writer has deserved kicking many times for this very state of mind, and he is not singular in this respect. With a broader outlook and a better opinion of other peoples, we shall be even more popular and more deservedly so, than we now are.

BRITON.

Public Opinion as expressed in the Argentine Press.

THE FUNCTIONS OF PUBLIC OPINION

(La Prensa.—August 26).

The Argentine Republic has been going through one of the severest trials that it has experienced in the course of its history, remarks La Prensa. Two long and difficult years stand in evidence against the ultra-optimism of those who would leave the situation to the curative effects of time, and to-day, as in August of 1912, or the same month last year, La Prensa maintains the need for doing something. Official argument, it continues, is based on the agricultural and pastoral statistics of the Republic, colossal doubtless, but nevertheless in themselves a denunciation of the official policy which leaves a country possessed of such resources to suffer as this country has suffered. This Republic is not good ground for pessimism, yet after two years pessimism prevails, a proof that the present crisis is not mere panic. Panic does not last for two or three years, hence the real causes ought to be sought for.

Capital is not capricious; it is subservient to the laws of interest. Hence, continues La Prensa, enquiry ought to be made into the reasons that keep its circulation within such narrow limits, despite the good returns of the agricultural and pastoral products of the country, now selling at such high prices. Here is where the force of Public Opinion ought to make itself felt. Unfortunately in this country, Public Opinion is not sufficiently jealous of its rights; in all probability this accounts for its trifling influence, and the fact that it is never taken into account in political circles. Were it not for the independent Press, there would be no expression of Public Opinion to speak of, yet there are many means whereby it might make itself heard if it wished. Latterly the public addresses and debates have shown a complete disregard for the facts about us, says La Prensa. "All's for the best in the best of all possible worlds," is their invariable keynote, and with the presidential election but a few months off, no one has spoken as though the crisis was worthy even of being noticed, much less of being included in any definite programme of reform. This is more than Public Opinion ought to tolerate; it is its duty to place itself superior to all party or partial manifestations. The crisis and its terrible effects ought to have first place, and the public authorities must be brought to a sense of their duties in this matter. Given the course affairs are taking, La Prensa calls on Public Opinion to rise in its might and insist on the Government taking such steps as may be necessary for the protection of the general interests of the community.

HANDS FOR THE HARVEST

(La Nación.—August 26).

Notwithstanding the great diminution in the stream of immigration, calculations based on the figures obtained by the Department of Public Works go to show that there are in the country a sufficiency of hands available to cope with the next harvest. It is reckoned that 200,000 hands will be required and that this number can be made up by recruiting from the large number of men thrown out of work owing to the economy forced on many trades and industries by the commercial condition of the country. The railway companies, for instance, says La Nación have had to suspend their programmes of extension owing to the war, thus releasing thousands of hands who will naturally gravitate towards the capital in search of work. These will all help to augment the number available, and will counterbalance the effect of the decreased immigration. The question which presents itself is that of transporting the hands to the agricultural districts as soon as they are required. These men, says La Nación, are naturally without means of any kind, and facilities must be afforded them to enable them to reach the camps. This question claims the attention of Congress and of the railway companies. The companies should be induced to arrange special regular trains for transporting the hands at reduced rates, and Congress should vote the funds necessary. The project already presented to the Chamber authorising the sum of $500,000 from which to advance the train fare to those workmen without funds, is says La Nación efficacious, and will conduce to the rapid mobilisation of the peons. It falls short however of meeting the necessity fully, owing to the condition imposed that this benefit be restricted to the native peon only. To be effective the privilege should be extended to all native and extranjero, alike who are required for the harvest. The project stipulates that the cost of the fare advanced must be refunded. The Nación points out that in the majority of cases the refund of the money is problematical, notwithstanding which it is of opinion that these losses must be faced without alarm, and the hands given every facility for reaching the agricultural centres, thus avoiding the serious consequences of a shortage of harvest labourers, such as happened in 1912.

A NATIONAL MERCANTILE MARINE

(La Prensa.—August 27).

Yet another project has been laid before Congress for its consideration dealing with the creation of a subsidised shipping company that shall realise the dream of an ocean going Argentine Mercantile Marine, says "La Prensa." The latest scheme has behind it the weight of Sr. Pedro Mihanovich's name, and draws attention to the advisability of Argentina improving its position afloat, both as a means of building up a reserve for the navy, and as an aid to the national export trade, at present subordinated to the exigencies of foreign shipowners. Without state aid this desired end is unattainable, declares Sr. Mihanovich, pointing out that under his scheme, official contributions will not prove a heavy drain on the treasury, whilst there is every prospect of interesting Argentine capital in the venture. The principal clauses of the project deal with the domicile and nature of the company; the former is to be in Argentina, and half the board of directors must be made up of Argentine citizens. A line of 10,000 ton boats, beginning with six vessels, is to be created, fitted with storage capacity for chilled meat, built under Argentine government supervisors in accordance with plans that will make the ships suitable for transport. Minimum speed to be ten miles per hour.

Exemption from all taxation, direct or indirect, is asked for, government cargo to be carried at 10 o/o less than current rates of freight, mails and specie for the government to be carried free. The wages of captain and crew are to be paid by the state, the latter having the right to ship conscripts for the navy as part of the regular crew, engineers to be taken from the fleet's personnel, and officers appointed by the Minister of Marine, exception had to the pursers. Captains to be appointed by the Board of Directors, but they must be selected from the roster of naval officers, active or on the reserve list. Within six months of the decree being promulgated, the concessionaire must give guarantees and sign the necessary contract, same to be transferred to the government, and the ships to be built within a year from the approval of the plans of the vessels.

THE RIGHT OF MEETING

(La Nación.—August 27).

The present social law was drafted, says "La Nación," under the impression caused by the anarchist attempt in the Coion, as a species of general protest, and "La Nación" admits that it supported the measure at the time, whilst drawing attention to the need for future revision. It was certainly never supposed that a law designed to protect the community against the lowest form of expressing an opinion would have been made use of five years later to throttle a students meeting, and incidentally to annul for all intents and purposes a constitutional and individual right to meet for the expression of spontaneous opinions in the shape of public meetings. The clause under which previous notice of ten days must be given cannot be applied with any commonsense to the case of the students meeting in a public place and marching through the streets of a civilized city, the more so when sufficient notice has been given to the police to enable them to take such steps as are necessary for the maintenance of order. To class the students as though they were on a par with rabid anarchists is not only an unwarranted insult, but also shows ineptitude on the part of the police, who moreover have always been supposed to be able to use their discretion. Hence the present case, according to "La Nación" smacks of officiousness, and a wish to stand well with the government. The right of public meeting ought not to be at the mercy of subaltern officials, and the point ought to be settled once and for all.

THE COMING OF THE LOCUST

(La Prensa.—Aug. 28.)

In the North of Santa Fe, South-West part of Corrientes, and the North-East of Entre Rios, there has been, declares "La Prensa," an invasion of heavy swarms of locusts. And notwithstanding that the scourge is almost endemic in the northern and central regions of the Republic, where climatic conditions are favourable to its development, special attention ought to be given to the defence of the crops at the present time. The orange groves of Corrientes, round Empedrado, Saladas, Lavalle and Goya are seriously threatened, whilst in Entre Rios and Santa Fe wheat, maize and linseed are all likely to suffer severely, the swarms being favoured by the drought and the high temperature that prevails. Given these antecedents, "La Prensa" very rightly maintains that the action of the Agricultural Defence Commission, as well as that of private individuals, ought to be persistent and well controlled, both on account of their own personal interests and also in order to prevent the spreading of the plague.

The information to hand does not state the direction that is being taken by the swarms, but, given the prevalence of northerly winds, the danger of other regions being invaded is very real. Little can be done to harm locust when in flight, the only practical measure being to kill off those that settle, and at the same time destroy their eggs. It is, says "La Prensa," a moot point as to whether it is not better to let the swarm settle on one spot to lay, and thereafter destroy all the eggs at once, but much depends on the ground. Wooded country and orchards are notoriously difficult to keep clear. What must be done is to provide abundance of barriers in the shape of zinc sheets, and these ought to be served out now in order that no time may be wasted in administrative procedure when the swarms are almost on the camp. The early appearance of locust ought to warn the Defence Commission that they are in for more work than usual if the scourge is to be stayed.

(La Nación.—Aug. 28.)

Ere long the Chamber of Deputies will have to consider the committee's report on the projected Agricultural Bank, and "La Nación" feels that it is its duty to draw attention to some of the salient features of the scheme, owing to the double importance that attaches to it, politically and economically. The whole affair is on a false foundation. Sr. Dávila's project is admittedly founded on the investigations of Dr. Lobos, made in 1911, wherein it was established that an agricultural bank ought to combine the function of diffusing credit with that of aiding in the work of colonisation. This important factor justified the creation of an autonomous body, but the scheme as passed by the Minister of Agriculture does not include this function. Hence the new bank will be merely an ordinary commercial establishment, receiving deposits and making loans, the fact of its clients being drawn from the agricultural class having nothing to do with its manner of working. This is made still clearer by a study of the sources whence the new establishment is to derive its funds.

The initial capital will be formed by a loan from the Banco de la Nación, plus the proceeds of the liquidation of the old National Bank, plus the rent from fiscal land. Of these sources, the only one that will actually bring in anything is the advance of the Banco de la Nación. This establishment is to receive bonds for $20,000,000 against which it will lend a similar amount to the Agricultural Bank at 4% per annum, amortisable in three years. From this sum the new bank will have to pay interests and amortisation, working expenses, and bad debts, with the ever-present menace of having to renew its borrowing after three years, failing which it must close its doors. Hence, says "La Nación," unless something akin to the miracle of the loaves and fishes takes place, the rural industries can hope for but little assistance from the new concern. Agricultural loans call for very liberal terms, both as regards interest and amortisation; hence what advantages the new bank can offer "La Nación" fails to see, since if it is to cover the 4% interest it must pay on its capital, it must perforce charge high rates; in which case the borrower will be better off by having recourse to a mortgage, or a loan guaranteed by pledges. The problem of agricultural credit is undoubtedly urgent, but, concludes "La Nación," it calls for a more practical and less brilliant scheme than that which is now to be discussed by the Chamber of Deputies.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM IN BUENOS AIROS

(La Prensa.—Aug. 30.)

Commenting on the building regulations of Buenos Aires, Sr. Augusto Bunge again exposes the utterly utilitarian and absolutely unhygienic methods that characterise this Municipality. After remarking that architects are put in the second place in comparison with builders and engineers, their signature being sufficient to warrant the plans of various classes of buildings, the writer draws attention to the height of the various edifices allowed by the Buenos Aires authorities, and adds that in comparison to the width of the streets, the 21 metres allowed in a street less than 10 metres wide, or the 32 and 40 metre buildings allowed in avenues and open places, is proportionately higher than the skyscrapers of Broadway. Moreover, these lofty buildings may be put up anywhere, darkening still further the central thoroughfares and cutting off what little air remains.

After citing the German building regulations, admittedly based on hygienic principles and aimed against the exclusion of those two great disinfectants, Light and Air, Sr. Bunge shows that the ordinance increasing the permissible height of buildings in Buenos Aires at a stroke doubled land values, and that in a fictitious manner. There is also the question of interior air space to be considered. "Patios" bring no rent, hence they are discouraged, whereas in Paris and Berlin from 30 per cent. to 70 per cent. of the ground built upon must be left open. Here courtyards must be left before living rooms, but the minimum area is, not eighty metres, but four metres square. And the minimum width must also be noted: one metre! In other words, light and air for living and sleeping rooms that are immured at a depth of 30 to 40 metres from the sky is to be derived from a space of 4 metres by 1. To show what this implies, Sr. Bunge gives graphic comparisons with the various zones of Berlin. In the central area of that city the proportion of air and light per 100 metres frontage is 3,100 sq. metres; in the suburban area it is 3,900 sq. metres. In Buenos Aires, anywhere within the municipal limits, there are 960 sq. metres air and light to the 100 metre frontage. Thus by authorising excessively high buildings and unduly compact construction, the health and well-being of the population is sacrificed for the benefit of some speculators.

THE ROADS

(La Nación.—August 31).

For what is perhaps the hundredth time, the question of the roads is made part and parcel of a project destined to be buried in the abyss of parliamentary procedure, remarks La Nación. It is fathered by a group of deputies who, though animated by motives of undoubted patriotism, have not been able to distinguish between what is and what is not feasible. Hence talk, reports, and nothing more. The new project would imply the reform of the Mitre Law; it would further affect provincial and federal rights; would need the consent of the communes; and, last but not least, would have to meet with the approval of the Treasury, since it calls for 10 per cent of the Internal Taxes, plus a minimum $3,000,000 to be found from general revenues. Undoubtedly when working on purely technical, judicial, or legislative grounds, a scheme can be drawn up, but this does not say that it can be as readily translated into practice. Moreover, adds La Nación, the idea ought to be combatted owing to its inherent ignorance of the various phenomena that affect viability in this Republic. It is assumed that roads do not exist, indeed the whole project is too general, and does not take into account the systems now in force.

The promoters forget that they are dealing with Argentina, a country with its own special problems. All questions of transit and traffic in this country turn on its exports and imports, the road being an affluent of the rail. This system is already in operation. What is needed to-day is not a complete change to some other system but rather money to perfect existing plans. The building and the upkeep of the roads must always be borne in mind as two separate problems. Centralisation is suitable for the former, since it cheapens cost, and makes for uniformity. As regards upkeep, a matter of immediate needs and local application, the aid of the municipalities and other local bodies is more directly indicated as the best means of maintaining the traffic and making the best use possible of the Mitre funds. Culpable negligence has led to the destruction of roads that were built after much sacrifice, and it is here that the spirit of reform ought to get to work. For to think of planning macadamised roads such as those that cover Europe is merely megalomania, and quite beyond realisation in a country with an area of 3,000,000 kilometres and a population that certainly does not exceed 10,000,000.

A COMMISSION IN DIFFICULTIES

(La Nación, Aug. 30.)

The San Francisco Exhibition has, says "La Nación," given the Argentine Republic an excellent opportunity of showing up what it can do in the way of natural exports, and that at a time when general attention has been turned hither in the northern markets. To bring about this very satisfactory result no details have been spared, and the prizes and honourable mentions that have been conferred upon Argentine products prove that the effort has been appreciated. Everything has gone off perfectly and the Argentine Commission has been feted and congratulated in official and commercial circles. Unfortunately, however, continues "La Nación," this favourable opinion is likely to be put in peril just when the good impression that it was sought to create appeared to be consolidated. Cable advices state that the commission is short of money; not merely of sufficient funds wherewith to maintain the dignity of its position, but lacks actually enough cash to pay its debts, the wages it owes, fares, freights, and similar items. True, $20,000 dollars was remitted on Friday last, and $30,000 more is to be sent shortly. But it is doubtful whether even this will meet the needs of the situation. Already Dr. Angel Gallardo, President of the Commission, has had to resign owing to the difficulties created by the shortage of funds, yet the matter is treated in official circles with the greatest indifference. It was known at the outset that the cost of attending the exhibition would run into some $700,000, yet but $400,000 was voted, and the shortage of $300,000 still remains. In conclusion "La Nación" calls on the Minister of Agriculture to take some steps to remove this disgrace and help the Argentine Commission out of a position that, according to last reports, could scarce be more unpleasant than it is to-day.

CATTLE SHIPMENTS TO ENGLAND

(La Nación.—September 1).

Necessity rather than inclination has led the British Government to open its ports once more to Argentine cattle, and, as La Nación remarks, so many years have gone by since the palmy days of the trade that capital, fleets, and installations in general, have been turned to other uses. For the Argentine cattle trade, the export of cattle on the hoof is of secondary importance, but is useful as a control on the possible monopoly of the industry by the freezing companies. This is the chief advantage, but the British Government, by stipulating that the freedom of its ports will only rule until three months after the cessation of war, nullifies the effects of its own decree, since it is evident that capital will not enter into a costly trade which may be stopped at any time.

Hence La Nación is of opinion that the new measure will have little effect on the Argentine cattle trade, and declares that it would have been better for the permit to have been given without a time limit, the British Government reserving to itself the right to control the import of cattle in accord with the degree of competition it inflicted on the home herds. As it stands the decree will not help British ends, and is entirely illusory in so far as Argentine shippers are concerned. Moreover it shows, says La Nación that the so-called sanitary protection which Great Britain has always alleged as the reason for the closure of her ports, is merely commercial, a fact that renders it advisable to revise our own laws, which were based on the probability of these ports being re-opened.

THE NOISES OF BUENOS AIRES

(La Prensa.—August 31).

In this country it is far too frequently seen that rules and regulations are made of no account almost as soon as they are decreed, and the worst of it is, says La Prensa, that the very authorities do nothing to see that rules are observed. Most people have no idea of the innumerable laws, regulations, ordinances and instructions, that surround our social state, merely because most of them are never enforced. It may be said that in theory everything in Buenos Aires is regulated, always with the understanding that everyone may do as he likes until such time as someone in authority happens to turn up a musty old ordinance and applies it for the first time. Summed up, La Prensa states that the conclusion one reaches is that everything is regulated that is not susceptible of regulation, whilst things that ought to be controlled are left at liberty, including the right of personal action, which at times ought to be prudently checked.

These paradoxes are readily proved, and can only be explained by the lack of all practical commonsense in our legislation, coupled with the vicious custom on the part of the authorities whereby it is assumed that the public are not going to obey such rules or regulations as are formulated from time to time. The immediate occasion of these reflexions is the absence of any symptoms tending to show that the recent ordinance of the Intendente designed to check useless noise in Buenos Aires is being enforced. The riot of sound goes on as before; motor horns, street sellers, gramophones, all contribute their quota; people are still waked by sirens and steam whistles; tramway bells are banged as much as ever; overseers shout as much as ever at their gangs during the still, small, hours; and all with the tacit consent of the police and the Municipal inspectors. There is a vast difference between the enthusiasm with which this measure was passed, and the manner of its application recalls to "La Prensa" the ridiculous situation of paterfamilias when he calls a noisy child to order without effect and then pretends to laugh at the infant's tricks.

THE OUTLOOK FOR PASTORAL LAND

(La Prensa.—September 1).

Referring again to the paralysation of all dealings in land on an extended scale, La Prensa enlarges once more on the inaction of capitalists in this country, commenting on the curious fact that they prefer to let their funds lie in the banks rather than employ them in the purchase of land. Yet never was the demand for agricultural and pastoral products greater. Next year's crops will be just as much sought after as were those of the current year; indeed prices may even be higher. Moreover what will happen after peace is declared? La Prensa indulges in gloomy vaticinations as to possible political convulsions that may continue to disturb labour—and incidentally keep up the demand for Argentine cereals.

Moreover however permissible it may be to have a doubt as to the future of agricultural land, there is no reason, so says La Prensa, to have the slightest fear for the future of the pastoral area. Markets that prior to the war were closed to chilled meat have now thrown their doors wide open. Formerly England alone was accustomed to eat frozen meat, now its use has extended throughout the whole of Europe. It must also be remembered that the war has swept the fields bare of stock, and only by eating imported meat can the herds be built up once more. Horses too will continue to be shipped from Argentina for a long time after war is definitely over. What clearer proof could there be of the increase in value that is bound to set in for pastoral land, asks La Prensa. Land devoted

STRANDED VESSELS IN THE PARANA

LOSSES TO SHIPPING.

The shipping business appears to have almost been brought to a standstill as far as the River Parana is concerned and unless there is a quick rise in the waters of the river the losses that will be occasioned will be very considerable. For some weeks past, the river has been falling and shipping has daily been carried on under increasing difficulties. In consequence of this abnormal fall an English vessel, the "Lowne," ran ashore last week in the channels called the "Paso Paraguayo." She was proceeding from Rosario to this port preparatory to a voyage to England. The result of this accident was the detention of a Danish vessel the "Wladimir Reitz," an Italian ship the "Salvatore" and another English steamer the "Chorley," which were all fully loaded and waiting to proceed to their ports of destination. All efforts to refloat the "Lowne" were failures. This accident was sufficiently serious to shipping at Rosario, but worse followed yesterday afternoon when in the same channel the "Thessaly" went ashore close to where the "Lowne" has been hung up for a week.

It has been proved impossible to float either of them and the result of the last accident has been to detain the "Sanmanger," the "Rakura," the "Polynesia," the "Tresillian" and the "Bilswood."

The "Thessaly" was built in 1909 by Messrs. Richardson, Denek and Company of Stockton-on-Tees, for the MacIver Line.

Due to these vessels running ashore navigation is practically at a standstill in Rosario and the rise in the river is the only possibility of saving considerable losses to shipping.

Much comment has been expressed that dredging operations have not been more rigorously carried out and the problem is regarded as a serious one.

A later report arriving yesterday afternoon states that a slight rise of the river Parana is reported in Corrientes and that hopes are now expressed that the river is beginning to resume its normal depths.

Information of a later hour concerning the stranding of vessels in the Parana states that the "Thessaly" has been floated but that an equivalent accident has occurred in the stranding of the "Dawlish" stated to be an English cargo vessel. The "Lowne" is still a fixture and must remain so until the river rises. No information as to the stranded "Dawlish" has yet been received.

THE ALCORTA APPOINTMENT

PRESIDENT SIGNS THE DECREE.

Yesterday afternoon, in accordance with the vote of the Senate, Dr. Victorino de la Plaza, President of the Republic, signed the decree appointing as Minister of the Supreme Court of Justice, Dr. José Figueroa Alcorta.

to cattle breeding is certain to go up. Capitalists who state that they are waiting for the situation to become normal are but stultifying themselves. Now is the time to buy, for normal prices mean higher figures than at present rule the market. Contrast the activity in the cattle market with the paralysation in dealings in camp. The reason is said to be that camps abound and cattle are scarce, but La Prensa thinks that the extraordinary amount of pasturage now found on the camp is not normal. A hectarea of camp was formerly looked upon as giving pasturage to a cow; to-day two or three animals can be fed on that area. But let there come a return to normal conditions, or a drought, and the value of grazing camp will perforce go up.

SALE OF IMPORTED BULLS

MR. A. J. MARSHALL'S CONSIGNMENT.

Yesterday afternoon the Messrs. Adolfo Bullrich and Co., disposed of a select lot of Shorthorn sires, imported by that well-known breeder, Mr. A. J. Marshall, Bridgebank, Straanraer, whose reputation as a breeder and importer is most favourably known in this Republic. Several of the magnificent specimens of the Shorthorn breed submitted deserved a firmer competition than that with which they met yesterday afternoon, at the hands of the large assemblage present at the sale. This is the first sale of pedigree Shorthorns, at which the bidding could be described as slow, considering the high quality, and splendid pedigrees of many of the bulls catalogued. One noticeable point was the good serviceable condition the bulls were shown in; but this is rather the reverse to a successful sale in this country, where a large percentage of the buyers are not really judges of Shorthorn bulls; but recognise those animals carrying a lot of fat as good specimens of the breed, when very frequently an animal, not so much over fed is a far better sire, and can be utilised at the time of purchase. Mr. A. J. Marshall's bulls gave an average of $4,272.72. The following is the sale list:—

1 Shorthorn bull, "Dunglass Pocket," sold to Sres. Farran and Zimmerman; at $9,000.

1 Shorthorn bull, "Dunglass Archer," to Sres. Farran and Zimmerman at $8,500.

1 Shorthorn bull, "Prince Adino," sold to Sr. F. Leloir, at $5,500.

EXPORTATION OF CEREALS

WEEKLY RETURNS.

The official statement concerning the exportation of cereals for the past week shows that wheat to the amount of 2388 tons has been shipped, all for Brazil. Maize shipments equalled 105,201 tons, of which 48,468 went from Rosario, San Lorenzo, and 41,655 tons from Buenos Aires. Oats shipped were only 226 tons, and flax 8473. Barley shipments were recorded. 1685 bales of wool were exported from Buenos Aires. These above shipments show a very great falling off from previous weeks, and are even lower than were expected. The present flatness in exportation of all kinds, it is hoped, will soon alter.

LONDON MARKETS

"PALL MALL GAZETTE" ON ARGENTINE CROPS.

London, Aug. 28.

Exchange reports: money in quiet demand; discount rates harder and rather more business passing particularly short bills, Bourse markets remained firm with restricted trading. Gilt edged securities maintained their previous firmness. Home Rails continued dull owing to Labour Troubles in the Welsh Coalfield. Argentine rails again showed to advantage in traffic and crop prospects though less business recorded. Most leading lines are higher; Cordoba Central four per cent. debentures firm; sixty-six four and a half per cent. finished fifty-eight. Foreign Bonds remain listless. Rubbers are idle and Marconi's easier.

Referring to Argentine conditions the "Pall Mall Gazette" says, the recent improvement in climate has been advantageous in handling the maize crop, the quality of wheat shows further improvement. Various traffic returns look well. While the fine weather is excellent for grain it does not assist the growth of the young wheat. Oats and linseed now need rain and the lack of moisture is causing anxiety in some districts as to the condition of the crops. In Central and Northern Buenos Aires, Santa Fe, Cordoba and Entre Rios a decided change of weather is badly wanted. The market here is being favoured at present. The buoyancy of Argentine rails is one of the most hopeful features of the market.

TO REGULATE EXPORTATION OF FLAX

EXPERT CALCULATIONS OF STOCK IN HAND.

In order to regulate the exportation of flax and the demand for this commodity in the Argentine and with a view of preventing over exportation at the expense of home demand experts have been busy with calculating the amount of flax in stock and the probable amount of the year's export. They conclude that some 850 to 950 thousand tons will be the amount of the current year's export and base their conclusion on the fact that up to August 19 725,000 tons had been exported.

The amount of flax in the various centres in store either in the hands of the agriculturalists, at the ports, in the "galpones" or at stations is stated to be: at Rosario 85 to 90 thousands tons, 42,000 of which are lying in the port. At Parana 15,000 tons, at San Nicholas 910 tons and at Santa Fe 32,000 tons. It is stated that this amount may be insufficient.

HOMEWARD FIXTURES

The following vessels (says the Times of Argentina) were fixed during last week to load homeward:—

S.s. Sophia, 5300 tons, 10 per cent, October 10, can. from San Lorenzo to United Kingdom, loading grain, at 63|9, no reduction; to Holland, option at 5| extra.

S.s. Unita, 5000 tons, 10 per cent, October, from San Lorenzo to United Kingdom, loading grain at 62|6, no reduction.

S.s. Evangelos, 5000 tons, 10 per cent, October 5, can. from San Lorenzo to United Kingdom, loading grain at 63|9, no reduction.

S.s. Duncutha, 5700 tons, 10 per cent, prompt, from San Lorenzo to New York, loading grain at 38|, no reduction.

S.s. Verdun, 7000 tons, 10 per cent, prompt, from San Lorenzo to Birkenhead, loading grain at 63|9.

S.s. North Wales, 6200 tons, 10 per cent, prompt, from San Lorenzo to United Kingdom, loading grain at 63|9, no reduction.

S.s. Eolo, 5500 tons, 10 per cent, prompt, from San Lorenzo to Holland, loading grain at 72|6, no reduction.

S.s. Lania L., 3300 tons, 10 per cent, from San Lorenzo to Marseilles, loading grain at 62|6, berth terms.

S.s. Borgland, 4000 tons, 10 per cent, from San Lorenzo to Scandinavia, loading grain at 82|6; from Buenos Aires, option at 80| bran at 5| extra.

S.s. Denewell, 5500 tons, 10 per cent, from San Lorenzo to Mediterranean, loading grain at 66|3.

Deckspace s.s. Brodliffe, prompt, from Buenos Aires to France, loading horses at £9.10.0.

INCREASE IN WEEK'S SHIPPING

RENEWED ACTIVITY AT THE DOCKS.

There has been a lively increase in shipping, in vessels entering this port, during the past week, which is causing considerable satisfaction. For the past few weeks business at the docks, shipping exports and imports has been very dull, and this sudden and very appreciable increase of incoming vessels is regarded as a sign of renewed activity.

The net tonnage of vessels entering the port during the past week has been registered at 96,300 tons, which is practically an increase of 30,000 tons, for the amount registered for the previous week was only 65,018 tons.

Exports have been but slight and inclusive of wheat, flax, maize and oats has only reached 130,000 tons but this is exclusive of a fair quantity of other agricultural shipments.

ARTILLERY ACTIVITY IN BELGIUM

Fighting With Bombs in the Argonne

WOMEN AND CHILDREN MURDERED
BY ZEPPELINS.

French Liner Sunk by a Submarine

Paris, Sept. 8.

An official communiqué issued by the Government this afternoon says:—

"Last night was marked by artillery action in Belgium to the north of Ypres, in the Artois region to the north of Arras, in the region of Roye and on the plateaux between the Oise and the Aisne.

"At various points in the Champagne district between Rheims and the Argonne there was fighting with bombs and rifle firing with the artillery occasionally intervening; but there were no infantry actions.

"In the sector of La Harazee in the Argonne region there was a violent cannonade, also on the northern Woivre. Elsewhere along the front the night passed quietly.

"Five German aeroplanes bombarded the Malzeville plateau without effect. They also bombarded Nancy where there were several victims.

"In co-operation with the British flying squadron our aeroplanes bombarded the German hangars at Ostend, and another French squadron did the same to the aerodrome at Saint Medard."

Belgian Coast Shelled

BRITISH SQUADRON IN ACTION.

Paris, Sept. 8.

A telegram from Dunkirk states that a British squadron has shelled the German positions along the Belgian coast as far as Ostend.

Belgian Minister's Wife

ARRIVES AT BASLE.

Paris, Sept. 8.

A telegram from Basle announces the arrival there of Mme. Carton de Wiart, wife of the Belgian Minister of Justice, who had been imprisoned by the Germans for writing to her husband and was recently liberated.

The lady was the object of numerous demonstrations of sympathy.

Murdered by Zeppelin

10 CIVILIANS KILLED IN EAST ANGLIA.

London, Sept. 8.

The Government has issued a bulletin concerning a Zeppelin raid last night upon part of the East Anglian coast.

The casualties caused were 10 killed, 3 injured and 3 missing. All but one are civilians.

Material damage consisted in the destruction of fifteen buildings.

The British aerial flotilla was unable to determine the position of the enemy.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN KILLED.

London, Sept. 8.

The latest official announcement regarding the Zeppelin raid of yesterday says that two men, three women and five children were killed and a man and two women are missing, probably buried under the debris of the buildings destroyed by the explosions. Thirteen men, sixteen women and fourteen children were injured and fifteen houses destroyed.

Back at the Front

JOFFRE RETURNS FROM ITALY.

Paris, Sept. 8.

General Joffre arrived in this city yesterday from Italy and departed at once for the front.

SUNK BY THE SEA HUNS

LOSS OF FRENCH LINER
GUATEMALA.

London, Sept. 8.

It is announced that the steamer Guatemala, 6,000 tons, belonging to the Compagnie Transatlantique, has been sunk by a submarine off Belle Isle. The crew landed at Saint Nazaire.

ALLAN LINER HESPERIAN SUNK WITHOUT WARNING

MANY LIVES LOST

London, Sept. 6.

The Allan liner Hesperian, 10,920 tons gross register, was torpedoed on Saturday evening by a German submarine off the southern coast of Ireland.

The vessel, which was bound from Liverpool to Montreal, was attacked without previous warning.

The passengers and crew have been taken to Queenstown.

CAPTAIN REMAINS AT HIS POST.

New York, Sept. 6.

A telegram from London reports that, according to advices from Queenstown, the steamer Hesperian with 700 passengers on board was struck by a torpedo at dusk on Saturday evening southwest of the southernmost point of Ireland. Twenty persons were injured. Three of the lifeboats capsized on being lowered.

The captain, W. S. Main, and twenty sailors remained on board awaiting the arrival of a tug from the Admiralty to take the vessel to port.

Many of the passengers and crew have already reached the shore.

The United States ambassador in London has opened an inquiry in order to ascertain whether there were any American subjects on board, and if so whether any of them were injured.

THE HESPERIAN SINKS.

London, Sept. 6.

The Allan liner Hesperian sank this morning while being towed to Queenstown. Those on board her were removed to the steamer Berlin.

U.S. CITIZENS SAVED.

New York, Sept. 6.

It is reported from London that the United States consul at Queenstown has telegraphed to the embassy that there were a few American subjects on board the Hesperian but that all have been saved.

WOUNDED CANADIANS ON BOARD

New York, Sept. 6.

From Queenstown it is announced that among the passengers aboard the Hesperian were many wounded Canadian soldiers who were going home.

On Saturday evening when the twilight was nearly replaced by night the Hesperian was travelling at full speed, the captain hoping to get clear of the danger zone before nightfall.

A slight mist was hanging over the water, and the captain had therefore ordered the men on the lookout to keep a specially vigilant watch. The men were called down on deck and the officers continually scanned the surface of the sea with their glasses but observed nothing alarming.

They had begun to believe that the ship was out of danger when the explosion of the torpedo threw those on board into a panic. The vessel's bows were lifted out of the water by the force of the explosion, and for some time it was feared that she was about to founder.

The first orders given by the captain were to lower away the boats and for the officers and crew to take their places. He then had the leak examined and it was found that the ship was capable of floating for some time provided the weather continued calm. The S.O.S. call was sent out, and picked up by several vessels which hastened at full speed to where the Hesperian was still floating.

A MURDERED WOMAN.

Queenstown, Sept. 6.

One of the bodies of the women who died of injuries has been identified as that of a Miss Carberry, probably of Newfoundland.

Washington, Sept. 7.

The report of the United States Ambassador at London on the loss of the Hesperian is as follows:—

"The Hesperian sank at 6.41 this morning, Monday, near the place where she was torpedoed. No further loss of life occurred.

"The Allan Line officially reports that there were no American passengers, but there were two American stewards both of whom escaped uninjured. Both were below when the torpedo struck the ship.

"The total loss of life is probably about twenty.

"The British Admiralty states that the Hesperian was sailing as an ordinary passenger liner. She has never been in the Government service since the war began.

"There were no troops aboard, but there were some wounded Canadians travelling on individual tickets as passengers."

The Department of State announces that the Ambassador has not stated whether the Hesperian was warned or not.

"NEVER USED FOR MILITARY PURPOSES."

Washington, Sept. 7.

The United States Ambassador in London has telegraphed to the Department of State that the First Lord of the Admiralty has officially announced that the Hesperian was an ordinary passenger boat and had never been utilised for military purposes.

THE BERLIN VERSION.

New York, Sept. 7.

According to a despatch from Berlin the German newspapers refer to the torpedoing of the Hesperian as follows:—

"A big steamer of the British Allan Line suffered such severe damage off the southern extremity of Ireland in a manner which has not yet been made clear, that she sank before she could be brought into harbour."

SUNK BY A TORPEDO.

New York, Sept. 7.

It is reported from London that the officers of the Hesperian have stated that the fragments of steel which fell on the vessel's bridge indicated that she had been torpedoed.

117 TRANSPORTS LEAVE ITALY

Great Expedition to the Dardanelles

ESCORTED BY 16 WARSHIPS

Turkey's Sultan Complains of Desertion by Germany.

Geneva, Sept. 8.

It is reported that a fleet of 117 transports with troops and munitions of war have left Taranto under the escort of sixteen Italian warships.

The Duke of Aosta was present at their departure.

It is conjectured that the transports are conveying the Italian expedition for the Dardanelles.

TURKISH VESSELS SUNK

BY RUSSIA'S BLACK SEA SQUADRON.

Petrograd, Sept. 8.

A despatch from Tiflis reports that during the last few hours the Russian warships in the Black Sea have sunk over twenty Turkish sailing vessels.

SULTAN'S COMPLAINT

DESERTED BY GERMANY.

London, Sept. 8.

The "Times" has been informed from Mitylene that the Sultan of Turkey, when receiving Prince Hohenlohe, the new German Ambassador to Turkey, complained bitterly that Germany had left him without aid and without funds in a desperate and unequal combat.

KAISER'S EMISSARY EXPLAINS.

London, Sept. 8.

A despatch from Mitylene says that the new German Ambassador to the Sublime Port, Prince Ernest of Hohenlohe, was completely taken aback by the outspoken vehemence with which the Sultan complained of having been deserted by his allies in the Dardanelles and the Caucasus in spite of the Kaiser's promises of assistance.

The Prince explained that the action of Germany in the Balkans had been delayed because the Central Powers had been compelled to concentrate their main strength on the eastern front.

Cargo of 11 in Guns

SUNK BY BRITISH SUBMARINE.

London, Sept. 8.

The newspapers announce that a British submarine in the Sea of Marmora has sunk a Turkish transport which was conveying a number of 11 inch guns for the Dardanelles.

HAS NOT RESIGNED

VON TIRPITZ STILL CHIEF PIRATE

Amsterdam, Sept. 8.

Despatches from Berlin deny that Admiral von Tirpitz has resigned, or that there has been any disagreement between him and the Imperial Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg.

War Profits

LLOYD GEORGE REASSURES TRADES UNIONISTS.

Bristol, Sept. 8.

The Trade Union Congress assembled here received yesterday afternoon a telegram from Mr. Lloyd George commenting on the speech of Mr. James Seddon, President of the Congress, in which he emphasised the desire of the workers to assist the Government but hoped that the Government would do its share towards limiting the profits made by the employers.

Mr. Lloyd George stated in his telegram:—"In every instance the benefit of the suspension of the Trades Union regulations will accrue to the State, not to the employers. I beg to make this clear."

LLOYD GEORGE ASKED TO ATTEND THE CONGRESS.

London, Sept. 8.

The Trade Union Congress in session at Bristol has passed a resolution inviting Mr. Lloyd George to attend the sessions and give information which is lacking in his telegram with reference to the disposal of the profits of industries now under the supervision of the Government.

CONFIDENCE IN THE GOVERNMENT.

Another resolution to support the Government in the successful prosecution of the war was carried by 600 votes to 7.

Kaiser's Lost Grand-daughter

DEATH OF PRINCE ADALBERT'S DAUGHTER.

London, Sept. 8.

Berlin advices report that Princess Adelaide of Saxe-Meiningen, wife of the Kaiser's third son Prince Albert, has given birth to a daughter which died soon afterwards. The Princess is in a satisfactory condition of health.

Leman of Liege

STILL ALIVE AT MAGDEBURG.

New York, Sept. 8.

A wireless telegram from Berlin says that the Paris papers have announced the receipt of information from Belgium that General Leman, the brave defender of Liege, has died of a broken heart in a German prison.

The message says that as a matter of fact the General is living at Magdeburg with other officers in the prisoners' camp where he is being treated according to his rank. He is suffering from an attack of gout, but otherwise is in excellent health. He read his obituary notice with much amusement.

VIGOROUS OFFENSIVE

By Allied Armies

ONLY WAY TO RELIEVE RUSSIA

New York, Sept. 8.

The "Evening Sun" of to-day publishes a despatch from its correspondent in Tokio who gives the result of an interview with Japanese military men.

The latter say that Japan can undoubtedly be of much use to Russia in the present emergency; but what is really essential is that Russia's allies in the West commence a vigorous offensive and drive the Germans out of France and Belgium, threatening Germany with invasion. This will be the only way to relieve Russia of the weight of the concentrated attack which Germany is now delivering upon her. Unless this is done soon the Germans will continue to strengthen themselves in Poland and make it increasingly difficult to dislodge them.

All now depends on the potentialities of the Franco-British armies. This no doubt is enormous, seeing that for a long time they have been preparing for the war, and are provided with skilful leaders and strategists, and thousands of highly competent officers.

Spain and the War

ALFONSO SAYS "ONLY I AND THE RABBLE ARE FRANCOPHIL."

London, Sept. 8.

The "Times" gives the substance of a report from a French correspondent regarding the division of opinion in Spain over the war.

The report says that very few Spaniards know France well. Among the enemies of France must be numbered those who have been won by the skilful and systematic German propaganda which has been carried on in Spain for the last ten years.

Fault is found with the attitude of France in regard to Morocco, which has sometimes offended Spain. The correspondent quotes King Alfonso's saying:—"Only I and the rabble are really Francophil." He says that Spain is scantily and badly informed. The attitude of the Spanish Press is at bottom merely a pretext for continuing the domestic war between Republicans and Radicals.

Persecuted Armenians

PROPERTIES CONFISCATED AND PILLAGED.

Athens, Sept. 7.

There are increasing fears that the persecution of the Armenians by the Turks is continuing.

According to diplomatic reports, the Armenians in the regions of Angora, Erzerum and Sivas are being deported to the interior and their properties confiscated and pillaged.

"Within Three Weeks"

RUMANIA MAY INTERVENE.

Paris, Sept. 7.

A despatch from Zurich says that M. Pherekides, President of the Rumanian Chamber of Deputies, made the following statement to an employé of an Austrian company at Bucharest:—

"I am persuaded that the Dardanelles will fall within two or three weeks, and then we shall intervene in the war. We would advise you to leave the country."

Plot Against Enver

DISCOVERED IN THE TURKISH NAVY.

Amsterdam, Sept. 7.

The Information Bureau in this city state that a widespread plot has been concocted in the Turkish army for the overthrow of Enver Pasha, and for driving the Germans out of the country. The capital was to be seized, and the opponents of the Young Turk party were to be installed in the Government.

The Germans are known to be in a critical position, as the responsibility for the war is laid upon their shoulders.

The Government is taking great precautions, and has made numerous arrests with the intention of stifling

Turkish Torpedo Boat Sunk

BY ALLIES' SUBMARINE.

London, Sept. 7.

A telegram from Athens announces that a submarine belonging to the allied forces in the Dardanelles sank the Turkish torpedo boat Yar Hissar in the Sea of Marmora.

Sunk by the Sea Huns

London, Sept. 2.

The British steamer Savona has been sunk by a German submarine. Three of the crew are missing.

The Savona was a vessel of 1180 tons gross displacement, built at Greenock in 1881 and registered at Leith.

LOSS OF BRITISH STEAMER WHITEFIELD.

London, Sept. 3.

A telegram from Hartlepool announces that a German submarine has sunk the British steamer Whitefield.

The vessel was of 2422 tons gross displacement and belonged to Messrs. W. Maclean and company of Hartlepool.

BRITISH SEAMEN LOST IN DISASTER TO STEAMER CYMBELINE.

London, Sept. 6.

The British steamer Cymbeline, 4505 tons gross register, belonging to Liverpool, has been sunk either by a mine or a torpedo. Twelve of the crew perished and several others injured. The survivors, 31 in number, have reached land.

LOSS OF A HARRISON LINER.

London, Sept. 7.

It is announced that the British steamer Dictator, 4000 tons gross, has been sunk by a submarine. All the crew escaped and have landed at a British port.

LOSS OF LARGE FRENCH STEAMER.

Paris, Sept. 7.

The French steamship Bordeaux, 4530 tons gross register, of Havre, was torpedoed and sunk twelve miles off the mouth of the Gironde. The crew were taken on board a pilot boat.

Missing Pirate

NO NEWS OF SUBMARINE WHICH SANK BRITISH AUXILIARY CRUISER.

New York, Sept. 7.

It is reported from Berlin that the German Admiralty announces that the submarine which sank a British auxiliary cruiser last August off the Hebrides must be considered as lost, as no news has been received of her since.

RUSSIA'S GENERALISSIMO REMOVED

Grand Duke Nicholas Sent to the Caucasus.

GREAT RETREAT ALMOST ENDED

Petrograd, Sept. 8.

It is officially announced that the Tsar has appointed Grand Duke Nicholas, Viceroy of the Caucasus and Commander-in-Chief of the Southern Army.

THE IMPERIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Petrograd, Sept. 8.

An Order of the Day signed by Tsar Nicholas has appeared saying:—

"I have to-day taken over the supreme command of all the forces operating by sea or by land in the theatre of war.

"With firm faith in the clemency of God and with unshaken assurance in our final victory we shall fulfill our sacred duty to defend our country to the last. We shall not dishonour Russia."

TSAR'S MESSAGE TO THE GRAND DUKE.

Petrograd, Sept. 8.

The communication of the Tsar to the Grand Duke Nicholas relieving him of the supreme command, reads as follows:—

"At the beginning of the war I was unavoidably prevented from following the inclination of my soul to put myself at the head of the army. That was why I entrusted you with the Commandership-in-Chief of the land sea forces.

"Under the eyes of all Russia Your Highness has given proof of a steadfast bravery which caused a feeling of profound confidence, and called forth the sincere good wishes of all who followed your operations.

"But through the inevitable vicissitudes of war, my duty to my country, which has been entrusted to me by God, impels me to-day, when the enemy has penetrated to the interior of the Empire, to take the supreme command of the active forces, to share with the army the fatigue of war and to safeguard the country.

"The ways of Providence are inscrutable; but my duty and my desire have determined me in my resolution for the good of the State.

"The invasion of the enemy on the western front, which necessitates the greatest possible concentration of the civil and military authorities, as well as the unification of the command in the field, has turned our attention from the southern front at this moment. I recognise the necessity for your assistance and counsels on the southern front, and I appoint you Viceroy of the Caucasus and Commander-in-Chief of the valiant Caucasian Army. In doing so I express to Your Highness my profound gratitude and that of the country for your labours during the war."

THANKED BY THE TSAR.

Petrograd, Sept. 8.

The Tsar has issued a manifesto congratulating and thanking Grand Duke Nicholas for his services to the country during the war.

His Majesty declares that so long as the operations were being conducted in the south in the enemy's territory the appointment of the Grand Duke fulfilled all the aspirations of the Russian nation; but now that it is a question of repelling an invasion and defending the nation it is for the Sovereign to unsheathe the sword and lead the army to victory.

The Tsar trusts that the Grand Duke will continue to give the country the benefit of his talents in that theatre of the war whither he has been appointed.

The presence of the Tsar at the battle front has caused intense enthusiasm throughout the Empire, and perfect confidence prevails.

GRAND DUKE'S FAREWELL TO HIS TROOPS.

Petrograd, Sept. 8.

The following is the text of an Order of the Day issued by the Grand Duke Nicholas to the army and navy:—

"Valiant Army and Fleet:

"To-day your august Supreme Chief, His Majesty the Tsar, places himself at your head.

"I bow before the heroism you have displayed for more than a year, and I express to you my cordial, warm and sincere appreciation of all you have done.

"I believe steadfastly, because the Tsar himself, to whom you have taken oath, conducts you, that you will accomplish achievements hitherto unknown. I believe that God, from this day, will accord to His elect His all-powerful aid and will bring to his Majesty the victory."

WHAT WILL THE TSAR DO?

London, Sept. 8.

The greatest interest is taken in London in the question as to what sector of the firing line will be chosen by the Tsar for his first personal efforts against the Germans, and where his Majesty will establish his headquarters.

SUCCESS OF GENERAL RUSSKY.

In view of the fact that General Russky is holding Von Hindenburg in check with remarkable success on the northern front, it is generally believed that the monarch's energies will for the present be directed towards rallying the Russian central army, which is now fighting from a point east of Brest-Litovsk to the north-east of Grodno.

Petrograd Chief of Police

ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN ASSASSINATED.

Athens, Sept. 7.

A despatch from Petrograd, announces the assassination of the Chief of Police of that city. No further details have as yet been forthcoming.

German Propaganda

NEWSPAPERS FOUNDED IN NEUTRAL CAPITALS.

Amsterdam, Sept. 7.

The Germans are stated to be working actively in Holland and the Scandinavian nations in favour of the Governments of those countries endeavouring to obtain from Britain a diminution of the severity of the blockade of the German coast, on the ground of the heavy losses which neutral commerce is suffering. With this object in view the Germans have started newspapers in the capital cities of each country and have commenced the publication of articles upon the subject.

The campaign is however believed to be a futile one as the British Government is determined to keep up the pressure on Germany at all costs.

ALMOST ENDED!

Russians Approaching Close of Great Retreat

PROBABLE BREAKDOWN OF GERMAN PLAN

London, Sept. 8.

All the newspapers here publish specials from Petrograd which express the belief that the Russian retreat is practically ended, and that, with the Tsar in the front and the army again well supplied with munitions, the Russian general offensive will soon be renewed.

The "Times" correspondent reports that the careful linking up of the Austro-German movements betrays the most important object of the enemy, which is to obtain possession of the railways between Riga and Lemberg in order to cope effectively with the transport problem which is hourly growing more acute.

Along a front of nearly 700 miles the tentacles of this gigantic combination embrace Drinck, Vilna, Libau, Baranowitz, Luliniec, Varmy and Rovno, forming a semicircle along which the enemy would be able to bring supplies by sea to Riga and establish direct communication with his main international lines.

After commenting on the enemy's grandiose strategy and discussing the Russians' power of resistance, the correspondent adds that the enemy's sole opening for activity now lie to the north and south of the Poliesie forest, but the d  nouement must be enacted, not in the Poliesie's but on the flanks of Riga, Vilna and Kieff. However, as Von Meckensen has been unable to press further north the enemy has been forced to deploy about 18 army corps in order to force the Russians back from the Rumanian border, and the successful completion of the great German scheme now appears improbable.

GERMAN OFFENSIVE HELD IN CHECK.

Petrograd, Sept. 8.

The Russian War Office announces to-day:—

"In the region of Koval Sarny the Russian cavalry executed several desperate charges on the enemy, with very successful results.

"Between the Sienowka and Ikwa rivers there has been obstinate fighting. Under the pressure of the enemy our troops proceeded to the occupation of stronger positions on the Gorinia, Stubel and Ikwa rivers.

"South of Friedrichstadt our troops repulsed repeated and energetic attacks by the enemy.

"In the Riga region, between the Sventa, Viliya and Niemen rivers there has been no change in the situation.

"On the middle Niemen the enemy is continuing operations.

"In the Wolkouky region between Hasselda and Acina a fierce combat is in progress. Our troops are holding the enemy's offensive in check."

RAIN IMPEDES GERMAN ADVANCE.

London, Sept. 8.

Official despatches from Russia report that military operations are completely interrupted over a large extent of the line of battle in consequence of the torrential rains that have ushered in the autumn.

All the rivers running in a northerly direction, which are the largest and most numerous, as well as their tributaries, are over their banks and a wide extent of country is inundated by the flood waters. The low swampy flats which for the most part constitute the theatre of operations are transformed into shallow seas.

In consequence of this change in the weather a large portion of the German forces are not only unable to continue their advance but will be in serious danger if the rains continue.

Joffre Decorated

ON VISIT TO KING OF ITALY.

Rome, Sept. 7.

Last Friday, the French Commander-in-Chief, General Joffre, visited King Victor Emmanuel, who bestowed upon him the Grand Cross of the Military Order of Savoy.

General Joffre stayed two days at the headquarters of the General Staff, during which time he visited various points of importance on the front.

Rust-proof Steel

MANUFACTURED BY KRUPPS.

London, Sept. 7.

A despatch from Berlin states that the German poet Rudolf Hans Bartsch, at the conclusion of a long series of articles on the subject "Germany as seen by Austrian Eyes," gives a vivid description of the works at Essen, wherein he reveals the interesting fact that Krupps have developed a process for making steel absolutely proof against rust, and even against the action of nitric acid.

Cruiser's Golden Cargo

SOVEREIGNS AND BONDS DESPATCHED TO THE STATES.

Portland (Maine), Sept. 7.

A train from Halifax going to New York has passed this city conveying 11,650,000 English sovereigns, 7,850,000 United States coins and bonds to the value of 13 million dollars, all of which were brought in the British cruiser Argyll.

Gold for Cuba

20 MILLION DOLLARS ON BOARD FRENCH VESSEL.

New York, Sept. 8.

A cable message from Havana says that the steamship Navarre, due today from France, is bringing twenty million dollars' worth of French gold for the Havana banks.

"Watchful-Waiting" Wilson

ATTACKED BY EX-PRESIDENT TAFT.

New York, Sept. 8.

It is reported from San Francisco that the ex-President, Mr. William Taft, addressing the California Commonwealth Club, criticised the policy of President Wilson in Mexico, and denounced his rule in the Philippines. The gist of his speech was as follows:

"Our policy, so called but misnamed, of 'watchful waiting,' has dragged on, greatly to the detriment of all concerned, and now the anarchy for which in part we are responsible has developed into raids into the United States and the killing of our own people with the very weapons which our unwise lifting of the embargo furnished to our assailants.

"I only refer to our Mexican policy by way of illustration, warning you that the policy which is now being pursued in the Philippines is likely to return to plague us and to command our attention as much as the Mexican affair is thrusting itself upon us now."

Serbian Artillery

PREVENTS AUSTRIANS FORTIFYING THE DANUBE.

Nish, Sept. 8.

The Serbian Government announces that during the 3rd and 4th inst. the Serbian artillery was very effective in preventing the Austrians from fortifying themselves on the left bank of the Danube.

AUSTRIAN AMBASSADOR'S PLOT

Widespread Strikes in the States

TEXT OF THE LETTER TO VIENNA

President Wilson's Ominous Intervention

Washington, Sept. 8.

Official circles consider that the explanation given by the Austrian Ambassador, Herr Dumba, to the Secretary of State for having written to the Austrian Foreign Minister, Baron Burian, offering to get up industrial strikes in the United States so as to hinder the supply of munitions to the Allies, only makes the matter worse.

The Ambassador's explanation was that he had instructions from his Government to distribute among the Austrian and Hungarian residents of the United States the decree issued at Vienna prohibiting the subjects of the Empire from working with establishments which produced munitions for the Allies.

President Wilson is known to have visited Mr. Lansing this morning; and as this is a departure from the recognised practice in White House the matter is regarded as serious.

A SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENT.

Washington, Sept. 8.

A sensational development to-day in the situation with regard to the incident in which the Austrian Ambassador is concerned was the fact that President Wilson has taken the unusual step of cabling through the Department of State for a copy of the letter from the Austrian Ambassador to Baron Burian.

No official statement has yet been made on the subject.

ARCHIBALD'S EXPLANATION.

Rotterdam, Sept. 8.

Prior to sailing to-day for America, the man Archibald, who was arrested in England and was found to be in possession of a letter from the Austrian Ambassador in Washington to the Austrian Foreign Minister, Baron von Burian, made the following statement to a Central News representative:—

"I am absolutely innocent, and know nothing of what the papers charge me with. I spoke to nobody about plans for disturbing the Austrian labour situation in the United States.

"I am an English American, and am of neither German nor Austrian origin. The contents of the letter which I carried were absolutely unknown to me. Shortly before I left New York, the Secretary of the Austrian Embassy in Washington came to me to say farewell. During our conversation he remarked casually:—'Will you oblige me by handing this note to the Vienna Bureau?' I had no reason to suspect that serious or base secrets were hidden in a simple unscaled letter, and I put it among some other papers in my possession. I learned the contents only when the British authorities intervened. It is obvious that if I had known its contents I would have destroyed it before my arrest. Nothing was said to me in New York by the Secretary of the Austrian Embassy to indicate that I should observe any mystery."

Archibald admitted that Herr Dumba knew that he had a letter of recommendation from the German Ambassador, Count Bernstorff, because of his intention to travel in the war zone. In conclusion he said:—

VICTIM OF TEUTON CUNNING.

"To you and to my American compatriots I declare that I have nothing to do with German or Austrian plans. I am under arrest and forced to return to New York simply because I am a victim of their cunning methods in making me the bearer of an incriminating document."

AMERICA NOT "A MENTAL INCOMPETENT AMONG THE NATIONS."

London, Sept. 8.

The "Times," endorsing the editorial remarks of the "New York Herald," says that forbearance has ceased to be a virtue in the case of Herr Dumba. The United States cannot afford to be regarded as a puerile, inferior and pusillanimous country, to be treated alternately as a coward or as a mental incompetent among the nations.

The paper expresses confidence that the American Government and people can be trusted to deal with the blundering Ambassador as he deserves.

The "Daily Telegraph," "Daily Chronicle" and others hold that Herr Dumba's action is a direct insult to the United States, and an unpardonable breach of neutrality, and express the conviction that the Ambassador will be told to go.

The Ambassador's Letter

A WIDESPREAD PLOT.

Washington, Sept. 8.

The contents of the letter from the Austrian Ambassador to the Foreign Minister in Vienna have been cabled by the United States Ambassador in London to the State Department which has published them. The context is as follows:—

"New York, Aug. 20,

"My Lord:

"Yesterday evening the Consul General, Von Nuber, received the enclosed aide to memorie from the chief editor of the newspaper locally known as the 'Szabadsag,' after a previous conference with him, and in pursuance of his proposals to arrange for strikes in the Bethlehem Schwal steel munitions of war factory, also in the Middle West.

"Dr. Archibald, who is well known to Your Lordship, leaves to-day at 12 o'clock on board the Rotterdam for Berlin and Vienna, and I take this rare and safe opportunity to warmly recommend the proposal to Your Lordship's favourable consideration.

"It is my impression that we can disorganise and hold up for months, if not entirely prevent, the manufacture of munitions at the Bethlehem works and in the Middle West, which, in the opinion of the German Military Attaché, is of great importance, and amply outweighs the expenditure of money involved.

"But even if the strikes do not come off it is probable that we should extort, under the pressure of the crisis, more favourable conditions of labour for our poor downtrodden fellow-countrymen in the Bethlehem works. These white slaves are now working twelve hours a day for seven days in the week, and all weak persons succumb and become consumptives.

"So far as the German workmen found among the skilled hands are concerned, the means for leaving will

AIR AND SEA WARFARE

EXCELLENT WORK OF FRENCH NAVAL AND AERIAL ARMS.

Paris, Sept. 3.

The Department of Marine has issued a report as to the action of the French fleet and aerial flotillas during the war.

The report says that since the commencement of hostilities the French naval squadron and the aeroplanes have co-operated in the defence of the Suez Canal, the operations in Syria, the actions in the Gulf of Trieste and the watch along the coast of France with the object of destroying the German submarines and Zeppelins.

During the last week they have bombarded the German positions at Bruges, Zeebrugge and Ostend; and last night, notwithstanding heavy artillery fire and the glare of rockets, our aviators dropped more than three hundred 90 mm. bombs on the German bases along the Belgian coast, besides taking an effective part in the bombardment of the Mont Huist forest. All the machines returned to their bases, although several were damaged severely.

In Egypt, Syria and Venice our hydroplanes displayed great activity. Engagements occurred recently with Austrian hydroplanes which were put to flight and pursued by a French machine as far as Pola.

MUNITIONS SCANDAL

BRIBES OFFERED IN FRANCE.

Paris, Sept. 3.

M. Leblond, manager of the Carmaux munitions factory, has been arrested for offering bribes to the inspectors of the War Office and the Marine Department appointed to take over the ammunition, not to be too particular in examining the quality of the ammunition.

It is believed that this will be followed by other arrests.

POISON GAS SEIZED

BY RUMANIAN CUSTOMS OFFICERS.

Paris, Sept. 3.

It is reported from Bucharest that the Rumanian Customs officers have seized six wagons from Germany loaded with cylinders of asphyxiating gas for the use of the Turkish army.

ANGRY ITALIANS

ASSAULT STATION AUTHORITIES IN THE STATES.

New York, Sept. 6.

A telegram from Brookfield, Mass., reports that a number of Italian reservists who were travelling in a special car from Boston to New York were deprived of their flag by the authorities. Indignant at this they drew their knives and attacked several persons on Brookfield station.

In the melee that followed the station master and his assistant were both wounded. Their assailants regained the car escaping arrest and the train proceeded. A telegram was then sent to Springfield warning the police to prevent a repetition of these acts.

be provided for them. Besides this a private German registry office has been established which provides employment for persons who have voluntarily given up their places, and it is already working well. They will also join and the widest support is assured.

CORRESPONDENCE BY WIRELESS.

"I beg that Your Excellency will be so good as to inform me with reference to this letter by wireless, replying whether you agree."

The letter is signed by Herr Dumba and addressed to His Excellency Baron von Burian, Vienna.

TURKISH TROOPS BLOWN UP

BY BRITISH SUBMARINE'S CREW

Athens, Sept. 4.

Part of the crew of a British submarine in the Dardanelles is reported to have landed at Kretzno in the Sea of Marmora and blown up the Haidar bridge with the Turkish troops upon it.

The British were however obliged to return without completing the destruction of the defence works owing to the arrival of Turkish reinforcements.

A DARING EXPLOIT.

Athens, Sept. 4.

Under cover of the darkness the crew of a British submarine made a daring attack on the important Gebze railway bridge and succeeded in blowing up one of the spans.

Despatches received to-day said that the submarine's crew returned to their base without detection.

The same submarine is credited with having sunk several Turkish transports in the Sea of Marmora and bombarded the docks in Constantinople harbour.

The vessel entered the Gulf of Ismid at dusk and disembarked several of her crew with dynamite bombs and then stood close into the shore. The men made a detour round the Turkish military encampment, having several narrow escapes of detection by the Turkish patrols. They planted bombs upon the bridge over which passes the chief railway connecting Constantinople with the interior of Asia Minor. One bomb exploded and wrecked the middle span of the bridge, but the others failed to go off.

TURKEY'S ARMY

NOW CONSISTS OF 850,000 MEN.

Paris, Sept. 6.

A telegram from Dedeagatch says that, according to data of Turkish origin, the Ottoman Empire has at the present moment 850,000 men under arms. Since the beginning of the war she has lost altogether 500,000 men.

The troops are distributed as follows:—190,000 in the Dardanelles, 300,000 in the Caucasus, 70,000 in Constantinople, 50,000 at Adrianople, 40,000 at Tchataldja and 200,000 in Asia Minor.

TURKISH TRANSPORTS SUNK

MORE VICTIMS TO BRITISH SUBMARINES.

Paris, Sept. 2.

A despatch from the Dardanelles states that four Turkish transports have been sunk by British submarines.

TURKEY AND PEACE

CONSTANTINOPLE PRESS OBJECTS TO CONCLUSION OF SEPARATE COMPACT.

New York, Sept. 3.

According to a despatch from Constantinople, the official organ "Tanin" resents the idea suggested by M. Gustave Hervé in "L'Humanité," the Paris Socialist newspaper, that the Quadruple Entente should offer to make peace with Turkey separately.

PAYING FOR PROFITS

KRUPP'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE WAR LOAN.

London, Sept. 4.

The Exchange Telegraph Company announces having received a despatch from Amsterdam which states that the firm of Krupp has subscribed 40 million marks to the new German war loan.

GENERAL JOFFRE VISITS ITALIAN FRONT

CONSULTATION WITH GENERAL CADORNA

Rome, Sept. 6.

It is stated that the French Commander-in-Chief General Joffre, is visiting Italy. The news of his coming had been kept secret.

INSPECTION OF ITALIAN POSITIONS.

Rome, Sept. 6.

"L'Idée Nationale" announces that General Joffre accompanied by General Cadorna has visited many of the Italian advance posts and inspected the troops, expressing admiration for the behaviour of the men in such difficult country.

GIGANTIC OPERATIONS IMMINENT.

The paper says that the French Commander-in-Chief is consulting his Italian colleague and General Staff on the general plan of operations including those on the Gallipoli peninsula. It adds that the armies of the Quadruple Entente will probably commence operations before long of which no one had dreamed at the commencement of the war.

BATTLE OF THE MARNE

CELEBRATIONS IN FRANCE.

Paris, Sept. 6.

Yesterday being the anniversary of the victory of the Marne, the occasion was celebrated by a religious service in the afternoon at the Meaux Cathedral.

The building was decorated with the flags of the French and allied nations, and the service was attended by an enormous congregation.

The Bishop of Meaux pronounced a benediction for those who fell in the battle.

GERMAN OFFICERS SENTENCED

GAOL FOR RECAPTURED PRISONERS.

London, Sept. 3.

Three German officers who escaped from the detention camp at Denbigh and were recaptured have been sentenced to confinement in a military prison.

This is the first time that prisoners of war have been sentenced to gaol.

SIR E. GREY'S HEALTH

ANOTHER TEMPORARY REST FROM OFFICE.

London, Sept. 3.

It is announced that the British Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey will take a few days' holiday, his place being temporarily filled by Lord Crewe.

STRIKE-MAKING SPY

ARRESTED IN LONDON.

London, Sept. 6.

A telegram from London states that a man named Archibald has been arrested as a spy. He tried to pass himself off as an American subject.

Among the papers found upon him was a letter addressed to the Austrian Minister Baron Burian offering to organise a strike movement in the United Kingdom so as to impede the manufacture of munitions.

The letter was written on August 20, after the request of the Austrian Foreign Office to the United States Department of State to lay an embargo on munitions from that country was presented to Mr. Lansing.

ALLIES' DETERMINATION NO PEACE BEFORE VICTORY

U.S. NOT TO INTERVENE

Washington, Sept. 3.

It is authoritatively stated that the United States Government will abstain from opening negotiations in favour of peace until it is quite certain that such action will be well received by all the belligerents.

In official circles it is considered that the intimacy which is noticeable between the Central Powers and the Vatican means that the former are anxious to discuss the conditions of peace now; but it is also known that the Allies are determined to continue war and to reject all the petitions of the Central Empires until their ultimate victory makes peace practicable.

The United States will take no step which might compromise relations with any of the belligerents.

BRITAIN HAS TAKEN NO ACTION TOWARDS PEACE.

London, Sept. 3.

It has been learned authoritatively from high official circles that the recent rumours of peace are unfounded. No steps to that effect have been taken by the Government, nor have any statements been issued on the subject from authoritative sources.

BRITAIN'S PEACE TERMS

ENTIRELY DIFFERENT FROM THOSE OF GERMANY.

London, Sept. 4.

From what is stated by those who are in a position to speak with authority, when the time comes for consideration of the terms of peace the minimum conditions upon which Britain will insist are those which were enunciated by the Prime Minister on November 9, 1914. Those conditions are, the restoration of the Belgian and French territory occupied by the enemy, the adequate safeguarding of France against any future aggression, the right of the small nations to exist, and the destruction of Prussian militarism.

For the rest, the terms upon which peace will be celebrated depend upon the other allied nations as well. France for example will have to determine what she considers an adequate safeguard against future aggression. In any case the Governments of the Allies are all resolved not to make peace separately, and recent events in Russia will have no effect whatever upon that resolve.

It is also stated that the change introduced by the German Government into its submarine campaign will in no way affect the blockade established by Britain on German overseas commerce. It is considered that it is perfectly legal to prevent the importation of foodstuffs into Germany. Were the British Government convinced of its illegality it would stop the blockade at once.

FUTILITY OF PEACE TALK

PARIS PRESS AND CARDINAL'S INTERVIEW.

Paris, Sept. 4.

"Le Temps," discussing the interview between Cardinal Gibbons and President Wilson, does not consider that the President is likely to be influenced to take a futile step towards bringing about peace at a time when, upon the statements of the highest authority, Russia, Britain and France are affirming their fixed resolution to continue the war to the sole logical conclusion admissible for peoples who had war forced upon them, and are defending their moral dignity and independent existence.

BRITAIN'S LATEST CASUALTIES

INCLUDE MEMBERS OF ARISTOCRATIC FAMILIES.

London, Sept. 6.

Recent casualties at the front include Lieutenant the Hon. Charles Alfred Lister, only surviving son of the 4th Baron Ribblesdale. He was born in October, 1887, and was educated at Eton.

The list also includes Major-Genl. Thomas Packenham, 5th Earl of Longford, aged 50. He served with the Imperial Yeomanry and Household Cavalry, in South Africa. Also Major Knollys, nephew of Baron Knollys.

HEAVY LOSSES AT THE DARDANELLES.

London, Sept. 6.

The last lists of casualties issued by the Government contain the names of 194 officers and 4,000 men, including army and navy. Most of the casualties were in the Dardanelles.

LOSSES ON THE ROYAL EDWARD

London, Sept. 6.

The last British casualty list referred to in a previous telegram contains the names of 194 officers and 4,000 men including army and navy. The roll of privates includes 851 who are missing and are believed to have been drowned in the transport Royal Edward.

The majority of the casualties among the officers is still from those who are serving in the Dardanelles.

GREECE AND THE ENTENTE

CONCLUSION OF COMMERCIAL AGREEMENT.

Paris, Sept. 3.

A despatch from Athens says that a final agreement has been signed by Greece and the Powers of the Quadruple Entente regarding commerce and navigation.

Greece undertakes to adopt strict measures for the suppression of the trade in contraband; while the Entente consents to the free exportation of tobacco and grapes on the basis of exportation before the war. All goods imported from British colonies are to be exclusively reserved for individual consumption in Greece.

The despatch adds that the searching of Greek vessels trading between Greek ports is to cease at once.

KING OF SPAIN'S AID

SECURES RELEASE OF BELGIAN MINISTER'S WIFE.

Havre, Sept. 4.

The Belgian Government announces that, in deference to the wishes of the King of Spain, the wife of the Belgian Minister of Justice, M. Dewiert, who was arrested by the Germans in May last for having written to her husband, has been liberated to-day. She however will not be allowed to return to Belgium.

HOW PEGOUD DIED

IN COMBAT WITH GERMAN AIRMAN.

Paris, Sept. 2.

The Paris newspapers state that the French aviator Pegoud met his death in a combat with a German aviator at an altitude of 6000 feet.

All the papers pay tributes to the memory of the famous airman whose skill and daring frequently drew forth admiration from the enemy.

"Le Matin" proposes that one of the principal streets in the capital be called after him in order to perpetuate his memory.

ALLIES AND AMERICAN EXCHANGE

FRANCO-BRITISH DELEGATES' MISSION TO NEW YORK.

Paris, Sept. 3.

A party of French and British delegates are about to leave for New York with the object of conferring with the American bankers on the abnormal situation with regard to exchange. They will propose that the American bankers advance sufficient sums to stabilise the exchange market. American securities will be offered as guarantee, and the proceeds of the loan will be used for the settlement of bills for American exports now due.

It is believed that the French and British Treasury Departments will find it impossible to acquire a sufficient amount of American securities either by exchanging for them Treasury bills or national bonds on the basis of their realising prices in New York or by simply borrowing them from the European holders. The opinion is held here that the American financiers would prefer to advance the money on American securities rather than have the securities sold in the open market. The sales of American obligations in the United States in this manner would constitute an obvious means of paying American bills, and it is believed that the depreciation on account of heavy sales would be less than the losses now incurred in exchange transactions.

The Paris banks recently arranged among themselves to place fifty million dollars worth of American stocks and bonds in New York to be sold for the credit of their account.

The opinion expressed by Paris bankers is that unless effective measures are taken quickly to stabilise the exchange market importations from the United States to Europe must fall off to such a point that only war materials will be brought over; and the French will prefer to do without these importations rather than pay six francs to the dollar.

ISLAND ANNEXED

FRENCH TROOPS LAND AT RUAD.

Paris, Sept. 2.

An official despatch received by the Marine Department states that a detachment of French marines has occupied the island of Ruad, off the coast of Syria between Latakia and Tripoli.

The troops occupied a fort on the island without meeting with any resistance and hoisted the French colours. The population was friendly.

PRESIDENT WILSON THANKED

BY MERCANTILE MARINE SERVICE ASSOCIATION.

London, Sept. 2.

The Mercantile Marine Service Association has cabled to the American Secretary of State their thanks and congratulations to President Wilson on behalf of the masters and officers of British ships for the success of his humane efforts to safeguard the lives of non-combatants at sea.

SWISS NEUTRALITY

REPEATEDLY VIOLATED BY GERMAN AIRMEN.

Geneva, Sept. 4.

German aviators continue to violate the neutrality of Switzerland making frequent incursions into the territory despite the protests of the Confederation to Berlin.

This morning three German aviators were hovering about near the frontier and let fall a number of bombs which caused damage to buildings belonging to Swiss subjects.

In consequence of these repeated breaches of international law the Swiss Government has decided to mount several batteries of powerful guns on the frontier to stop aviators who persist in these acts.

"GET TO WORK"

TSAR'S ADDRESS TO RUSSIAN NOTABILITIES

THE TASK CONFRONTING THE EMPIRE

London, Sept. 6.

Despatches from Petrograd announce that great importance was attached to the first conference of Russian notables, held yesterday, to settle what measures to adopt for the defence of the nation, especially with reference to the organisation of the output of munitions and the means of transport.

His Majesty the Tsar, who presided at the conference, after declaring that Russia would continue the war until victory had been won, proceeded to say:—

"The problem before the Conference is one of the utmost importance. The Conference will have to examine the methods of accelerating the supply of munitions for the army. It is one of those things for which our brave troops are waiting in order to check the foreign invasion and give afresh the triumph to our arms.

"Parliament has given me without the slightest hesitation and with perfect decision the only reply worthy of Russia, the reply which I looked for; Russia will go on with the war until a complete triumph has been gained.

"This, I doubt not, is the cry of all Russia. Nevertheless this resolve implies the utmost efforts on our part. The idea is universal, but it is necessary to put it into practice without delay, and this Conference must determine the manner in which to go about it.

"This Conference comprises, in its common labours and in solidarity, the Government and the delegates of Parliament, of public institutions and industries, in short, the representatives of the whole of Russia. You are invested with exceptional powers. I for my part shall follow the results of your labours with the most lively interest, and I shall personally take part in the work if necessary.

"Great is the task we have to fulfil, and upon it we shall concentrate all the efforts of the country. Let us for the time disregard all else, no matter how important, even if it affects the State, provided it does not affect the defence of the nation. Nothing must distract our thoughts, and we must strive to reach a single end—to drive the enemy beyond our frontiers.

"With this ever in view we must produce complete equipments for our active army, and for the troops that have been called to arms. Such is the task confided to you, gentlemen; and I am confident that you will devote all your strength and love of country to carrying it out. Get to work, then, and may God grant you His aid."

ANTICIPATING THE HUNS

ART TREASURES REMOVED FROM PETROGRAD TO MOSCOW.

New York, Sept. 2.

Communications from Petrograd state that in view of the possibility of the Germans menacing the capital all the artistic treasures of the museums and private galleries are being removed elsewhere. The Tsar's Palace is being dismantled and the furniture taken to Moscow or other cities inland. Whole trainloads of valuables have already left Petrograd. Meantime the work of erecting region is being rapidly pushed forward.

TRANSFERRED IN SECRET.

London, Sept. 2.

A wireless message from Berlin says that Russia is sending all the art treasures from the Hermitage and Alexander museums in Petrograd to Moscow. The transference has been concealed from the public.

Since last Thursday only three of the customary eight trains a day have been operating between Petrograd and Moscow.

IMMENSE SEA OF FLAMES

RUSSIAN DEVASTATION OBSTRUCTS GERMAN ADVANCE

Geneva, Sept. 4.

The "Lausanne Gazette" publishes a letter from an Austrian officer who is fighting on the eastern front, who says:—

"The Russian retreat is a masterpiece of terrifying and systematic devastation which recalls the retreat of 1812, when Napoleon invaded Russia. Behind the retreating Russian armies is an immense sea of flames, caused by burning houses and crops.

"General Mischenko is followed by a well organised detachment of Cossacks, whose duty it is to burn everything left behind the army; and they accomplish their task implacably.

"When the Austrian Honveds tried to enter Krylow in pursuit of the Russians, every street was aflame. They were unable to pass through the huge furnace and lost many precious hours going round the town by indirect roads and across fields.

"When the Austro-Hungarian forces arrived at Vladimir Volynskri they found the town burning, also Verva, and every village on the Volynski plain as far as Kovel. They had no shelter for days.

"The roads are indescribable cut up and obstructed. Convoys have arrived a day and a half late. It would take fifty soldiers to drag one cart out of a mudhole.

"Thousands of men worked at the repairs to the Sokel-Vladimir-Volynski railway. If the line had not been repaired in time we should have met with disaster."

PETROGRAD'S DEFENDER

APPOINTMENT OF GENERAL RUSSKY.

Petrograd, Sept. 3.

General Russky has been appointed commander of the Russian northern army, and upon him will devolve the duty of defending the capital in the event of a Teutonic invasion. The appointment gives general satisfaction, and is said to have been made by the Tsar at the instance of the Grand Duke Nicholas.

PARTING COMPANY

AUSTRIAN ARMY TO ACT INDEPENDENTLY OF THAT OF GERMANY.

London, Sept. 3.

According to a despatch received from Amsterdam by the Exchange Telegraph Company, the German and Austrian armies on the Eastern arena of war are about to part company.

The despatch quotes a message from Vienna as announcing that the Archduke Frederick to-day made an official farewell visit upon General von Mackensen, and henceforth the two armies will cease operating together. It adds that it is believed that the Austrian armies which have been operating in Poland will soon be removed in the direction of Serbia.

AUSTRIA'S BOLD PLAN.

Copenhagen, Sept. 3.

A despatch from Berlin states that the Austrian General Staff contemplates a great invasion of Southern Russia from East Galicia.

The Austrians will attempt to reach Odessa and Sebastopol, whence they can aid Turkey.

KITCHENER'S NEPHEW

LEAVES FOR THE FRONT.

London, Sept. 2.

Lieutenant H. H. Kitchener, whose commission has just been announced, has gone to the front in France. This officer is a nephew of the Secretary of State for War.

FRANZ JOSEF'S HOPE

"HONOURABLE AND PERMANENT GUARANTEED PEACE."

New York, Sept. 4.

A telegram from Vienna says that Emperor Francis Joseph, when addressing a delegation of Hungarians and Croats which his Majesty received a few days ago, said:—

"One of the greatest joys of my life has been that the leading Hungarian statesmen have succeeded in bringing Crown and Nation into complete accord. The good feeling in the Hungarian State and other parts of the Empire has also given me unqualified pleasure, by thus laying a firm foundation for the removal of any misunderstanding among the States and ensuring their harmonious relations for centuries to come.

"We now see more clearly than ever that the present great trials are proving the completeness of the work of reconciliation and adjustment which has permeated the hearts of all the nations under my sceptre.

"When our enemies, driven out by just conquest, fell upon us Hungarians, the Croats responded loyally to my call to defend the nation, and devoted their entire strength to the task.

"We are confident that the heroic troops of the Empire and of our loyal allies will succeed in bringing an honourable and permanent guaranteed peace."

The Emperor concluded his remarks with an expression of heartfelt thanks for the loyal and heroic conduct of the people.

HUNGARY'S CASUALTIES

250,000 MEN LOST IN WAR WITH ITALY.

Rome, Sept. 4.

A Hungarian statistician has calculated that in the war with Italy the Hungarian losses up to August 1 have amounted to 250,000 men in killed, wounded and prisoners.

CHOLERA IN GERMANY

DEATHS IN CONCENTRATION CAMPS.

Amsterdam, Sept. 3.

According to news from Berlin, cases of cholera have occurred in the concentration camps in Brandenburg, Silesia and Posen, many of them having been fatal.

23 CAMPS AFFECTED.

Washington, Sept. 3.

Twenty-three prison camps in the provinces of Silesia, Brandenburg, Posen and Ziska are infected with cholera, according to the announcement of the United States Public Health Service.

A worldwide investigation just completed by the Service shows that cholera has been found in Austria, Russia, Ceylon, Egypt, Dutch East Indies, the Philippines, the Balkans, and near Venice and Leghorn. As a result, vessels from infected places will be denied landing at any American port.

DON'T ANSWER QUESTIONS

NO INTIMACY WITH FOREIGNERS IN GERMANY.

New York, Sept. 6.

It is reported from Berlin that an official warning has been issued to the population of the Empire not to answer questions asked by foreigners about the status of German industries until the War Ministry has decided as to the propriety of such questions.

The heads of all industrial establishments are likewise urged to exercise care, in the interests of the Fatherland, in conversing with strangers who are residing in Germany.

GERMANS DEFEATED

IN FIGHTING IN THE KAMERUNS

Paris, Sept. 2.

The French Colonial Office has published the following despatch regarding the progress of the campaign in the Kameruns:—

"The French forces in the eastern and southeastern Kameruns are continuing a vigorous offensive in the direction of Yaunde, the capital of the colony. The German troops have been defeated in a series of engagements and are retreating in disorder. Many of the native German troops surrendered with their arms and other equipment.

"A party of these deserters, while on their way to our post at Aradma-kei, encountered a company of Germans which attempted to bar their way. The deserters defeated the Germans and also attacked the German post of Sangermelina.

"From July 23 to 25 a column of our troops coming from the north attacked the strongly fortified positions at Dume station simultaneously with an attack by a column from the south. The Germans, completely defeated, abandoned the positions, and in their retreat threw most of their supplies into the river, allowing the natives to pillage the other stores they abandoned.

"On evacuating Dume the enemy set the place on fire, making a stand on a hill overlooking the town. This position, which was defended with artillery and machine guns, was carried by assaults by one of our officers at the head of a body of prisoners."

OCCUPATION OF GASCHAKA.

London, Sept. 2.

An official statement issued to-day by the War Office says:—

"The town of Gaschaka, in the Kameruns, was occupied by us on August 16 without opposition.

"On the 29th ult. an enemy position near Gaschaka was taken by surprise and the enemy forced to retreat. Our casualties were one native soldier killed and two wounded. The enemy is reported to have lost one European and five men in the ranks killed."

SEVERE GERMAN LOSSES

IN BOMBARDMENT OF ZEEBRUGGE.

Paris, Sept. 2.

Details received from Amsterdam concerning the recent naval bombardment of the German positions at Zeebrugge show that the German casualties included 600 killed. Several of the military establishments suffered considerable damage.

GERMANY'S GIANT BIPLANE

WONDERFUL NEW WAR-ENGINE.

Copenhagen, Sept. 6.

A new type of giant biplane which is undergoing its tests in Germany is said to have a measurement of 42½ metres across the plane. Its motors develop 300 H.P. Each of them works three propellers.

These biplanes carry sufficient fuel for eight hours and are equipped with wireless installations and searchlights. Each carries twelve bombs weighing 22 lbs. apiece, and five machine guns. They will have crews of eight men and will be able to travel to London and back in five hours.

PRICE OF VICTORY

GERMANS ADMIT HAVING LOST 110,000 MEN IN RECENT FIGHTING

Amsterdam, Sept. 4.

Semi-official estimates published in Berlin of the casualties suffered by the German troops, in the eastern campaign during the month of August fix the number at 110,000.

ROSARIO NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

The Methodist Church: Lecture by the Rev. P. Hill Nicol.

September 7.

There was an encouraging attendance at the Methodist Church, Bd. Oroño esq. Salta, on Wednesday evening, when a short musical programme led up to a lecture by the Rev. P. Hill Nicol, on Roosevelt's trip through the Amazon basin. A pianoforte solo by Miss Millan opened the proceeding. Mr. Robert Watt contributed a song entitled "When the ebb tide flows," and a violin solo "Cavalliera Rusticana," with much acceptance; and Mr. J. J. Taylor gave a good rendering of "Macgregor's gathering." Mr. Nicol based his talk on the book in which the Big Sticker described his discovery of an "unknown" river, and showed that there was after all very little to bring about in the achievement which the Ex-President so insistently drummed into his readers' ears. "I am a little critical of Roosevelt," said the lecturer, "because he in turn is so critical of Mr. Savage Landor. He practically says Mr. Landor's statements are misstatements, but the arguments he gives are very paltry indeed.... I think the remarks of Roosevelt about his brother explorer should have been left out. If every explorer calls the man who went before him a liar, we shall never get on." Speaking of the great man's book as an effort in literature, Mr. Nicol added: "Roosevelt's style is not very intelligible, but some of his descriptions are very good indeed. If you are a sort of millionaire and are able to take a caravan a mile long it is good to take his advice. I cannot understand why he is not able to provide better maps; I never saw two such wretched maps. He also has some very curious spelling, he spells maté with two 't's'—that may be the Portuguese way." I am sorry I cannot give further extracts from the interesting talk: one felt grateful to Mr. Nicol—as Mr. Werner afterwards stated—for saving one a dollar, the price of the book.

A meeting of the committee of members of the Scottish Church was held subsequently, "in camera." I understand that a decision to dissolve the committee was reached.

Speaking of the Methodist Church I may mention that a final statement of the receipts and expenditure in connection with the recent Grand Patriotic Bazaar has been issued: and other organisations please note for a total receipt of $4,334.55 only $75 was written off for expenses, leaving a handsome balance of $4,259.55, which was duly handed over to the British Patriotic Committee.

"Fiddlewink's"

Everybody has heard of the unintentionally paricalid barber. The local "Tiddlewinkses" have unfortunately attracted the attention of the powers that be, and have had framed for them a serious of regulations as to how they must set about the disinfection of their various tonsorial armaments. This means that for a little space they will have to suffer the attentions of the Maternal Municipality: and I can only hope that intentional matricide may not become an added stain on the profession. They may, however, take comfort in the thought that the authorities will soon tire of enforcing the regulations.

How the Poor Live!

A general inspection of "conventillos" has been ordered by the Intendente and many have been found in very bad repair. Orders have been given that they shall be put in repair and made thoroughly hygienic. In the meantime owing to the number which have been closed many people have found themselves homeless and special provision has had to be made by the Chief of Police.

Unreasonable Beef.

Once more the price of beef has been raised by the dealers no less than six cents a kilo. The Municipality are said to be seriously considering whether it would not be possible to approach the frigorificos with the idea of getting them to undertake to supply the Municipal Market with meat to be sold at a fixed and reasonable rate.

Prison Abuses.

Many complaints of the ill-treatment of prisoners in the gaol have been brought to the notice of the Juez de Instrucción, Dr. Claude Newell, who has ordered an inquiry into the matter. It is alleged that these abuses were committed during the absence of the Governor.

The White Plague.

It is proposed to erect in the course of next year a model dispensary under the Auspices of the "Liga Argentina contra la Tuberculosis," (Rosario Committee). Architects and engineers are invited to send in plans for the proposed building, which is to consist of six rooms all on one floor, and a vestibule or corridor to serve as waiting room for patients. The cost is not to exceed $15,000. A gold medal is offered for the plan which is accepted, and two silver medals as 2nd and 3rd prizes. Further details may be obtained from the Secretary, Catamarca 1435.

Football: Asociación Argentina v. Liga Rosarina.

The Copa Rosada given by the Municipal Intendente of this city was played for on Sunday last at Palermo for the first time by teams representing the Asociación Argentina and the Liga Rosarina. Under ordinary circumstances the game should have aroused great interest, but the unfortunate weather conditions completely destroyed it, rendering play in the true sense of the word almost impossible. The game ended in a win for the Asociación Argentina 3 goals to 1.

A new championship has been instituted in this city under the name of "Campeonato Central." Eleven gold medals are offered for competition. Clubs who wish to enter should give in their names to the Secretary, Calle General Mitre 1379, between 7.30 and 9 any evening up to the 30th of this month.

JUDICIAL REFORM IN ROSARIO

COMMITTEE OF INVESTIGATION.

On September 7, the commission nominated by the Government of the Province of Santa Fe will commence their work of reforming all the judicial codes which exist in that province and which have been for some time quite inadequate.

The commission will sit under the Presidency of Doctor Julio Busaniche, a member of the Superior Court of Santa Fe and is composed of Dr. Absalon D. Casas, Dr. Zenon Martinez, Dr. Elias Guastavino and Dr. Juan Depetris. Meetings will be held on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays and the work is to be concluded in the month of November.

All commercial, civil and sanitary laws are to be reformed and recoded and will come in to force on January 1 of 1916. The commission has the authority to call an extraordinary session of the Legislatura, to approve of the new code.

ROSARIO'S INDEBTEDNESS

$22,798,000.

The consolidation of the internal municipal debt of Rosario, $6,000,000, has raised the question of the city's total indebtedness.

The external debt amounts to $22,798,000, or £1,995,175 sterling, half of which concerns the Provincial Government, in accordance with the arrangement entered into in 1907. As interest, the Municipality and Government actually pay $920,000. The amount to be paid next year in amortisation will reach the sum of 55,000 pesos additional, to be paid in equal parts by Rosario and the Provincial Government.

SENSATION IN RIO

ASSASSINATION OF GENERAL PINHEYRO MACHADO.

An enormous sensation has been produced in Rio de Janeiro by the rumour, later confirmed as true, of the assassination of General José Gomes Pinheyro Machado, Vice-President of the Senate and Head of the Conservative Republican Party. He was Senator for Rio Grande also and his influence with that of his brother, Salvador, was decisive. The Presidency was considered practically in his gift which however, the pressure of his friends could not induce him to accept himself.

He was highly respected as a generous, courageous and highly cultivated man of lofty views. Hostile politicians regarded him as representative of the military tendency and designs against the autonomy of the Federal States. There have been frequent rumours of plots against the late Senator.

A detailed account states that General Pinheyro Machado was at the Hotel de Extranjeros in the Plaza Alencar engaged in conversation with Senators Cardoso, Albuquerque Lins, Dr. Rubianam Junior, and Deputy Bueno de Andrade when a man approached the group and seemed to give a push to General Machado.

The latter exclaimed "I have been stabbed," reeled two or three paces and fell, Cardoso Almendra seeing the assassin flying pursued him. In the street he was seized by the police who found a stiletto in his hand. The police refuse to give the name of the assassin and state that the crime was one of personal revenge but no one believes this as it was too evidently political.

An enormous crowd quickly filled the Hotel. The Argentine Minister cancelled at once an entertainment for the afternoon at the Legation.

On hearing of the act, the President at once sent Captain Dodsworth of the Brazilian navy, his aide-de-camp, to the Hotel to enquire.

AEROPLANE "RIVER PLATE"

$30,000 RECEIVED.

Just over $30,000 has now been subscribed for the aeroplane "River Plate." This sum is roughly $4000 in excess of the estimated cost of a 100 H.P. Vickers' gun biplane, but further and more precise details are awaited before the required sum is remitted to England, or any decision taken with regard to the surplus.

With the amount in hand it may be possible to obtain a more heavily armed machine, or one, possibly, of a later and improved type. If so, such a machine will undoubtedly be purchased in order that the River Plate aeroplane may be the best of its kind.

During the early part of August, the British Society wrote stating that the money would probably be raised by the end of the month. On Sept. 3, a cable was sent announcing that these expectations had been realised and making enquiries regarding the earliest possible date of delivery, etc. It is the reply to this cable for which the British Society is now waiting.

CORDOBA NEWS

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

September 6.

Church Services.

Church services were conducted at the English Church Hall, Calle Pringles on Sunday, by the Rev. Mr. Sugden. Next Sunday the offertory will be in aid of the Church Building Fund. A debt of some $1,700 still remains to be cleared up.

Blackheath Cup Golf Contest.

The Golf Competition for the Blackheath Cup, to remain in possession of the winner for the coming year, will take place on Sunday next at the Alta Gracia Golf Links, by kind permission of the Central Argentine Railway Company. Play will commence at Alta Gracia at 10, the majority of the players are leaving Cordoba on the 8.20 a.m. train on Sunday morning. The contest is open to all active members of the Club, and entries will be received by the following golf committee up to September 10: Messrs. A. D. Dunbar (Golf Captain), T. G. Ferguson and S. T. Harris Smith.

Italian Red Cross.

The Italian residents of Dean Funes are actively engaged in collecting funds for the Red Cross Society. Sra. Virginia Antognazza de Albizzati, wife of the proprietor of the "Varese Hotel," has been the leader in collecting the contributions. The first collection resulted in the sum of $124 being realised, a second call on the rather small colony brought forth some $121.

The concert given at the Rivera Indarte Theatre in this city last week was a social as well as a financial success. The Commission of the "Bell Artes" gave the use of the theatre free. The gross amount received for the sale of tickets and donations was $2,361.30, deducting the expenses of $528.80, leaves a very satisfactory net sum of $1,832.50.

$2,000 Fire.

Fires are very rare in this city, but a blaze occurred in the "Dulce" Factory at "Alto de la Gloria" on Thursday night. The fire was started by a spark from the refuse burning plant of the Municipality, which is situated alongside the factory, falling on some material on the floor building which quickly ignited causing a loss of some $2,000.

Explosion in a College.

On Wednesday morning the neighbours near the Italian College in Alta Cordoba were startled by a loud explosion, which seemed to have taken place near the College building. The police arriving on the scene started an investigation and found two unexploded bombs, also the cartridge of one that had been exploded. The proprietor of the College could not give any information as to who the perpetrators of the act might be as he had no enemies. As nobody had been injured and no damage done, the police decided that the explosion must have been a joke which had been played on the proprietor of the College by some friends.

News in Brief.

The Cordoba Lawn Tennis Club, composed of members of some of our first Cordoba families, has been formed and interesting matches are taking place at the tennis courts at Sarmiento Park.

The railroad crossing of the Central Argentine to the new flour mill crossing the tracks of the electric tramway at the Sarmiento bridge has now been completed.

Some 15 days ago an Arab was found murdered in Biale Massé, the motive evidently having been robbery. After a thorough investigation by the police two suspects have been arrested charged with the crime.

The absence of rain in the camp is becoming a serious matter; it is said that should there not be a fall of rain within the next two weeks the damage

NOTES FROM PARAGUAY

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT].

Asuncion, Sept. 5, 1915.

Visit of a Poet.

Asuncion has again settled down after the visit of Dr. Juan Zorilla de San Martin, the poet, from the Republic of Uruguay. The Paraguayan people did all in their power to do him honour—giving him receptions, banquets, a concert, lectures, dinners, teas, etc.

Lawn Tennis.

To-day the two Lawn Tennis Clubs met in the Quinta Mendez Goncalvez. The Paraguayan and the English-speaking club. The revenge tournament was to have taken place to-day, but there was some difficulty, so they played some friendly sets. A number of members of both clubs were present, also many friends of the Paraguayan members. Among them the Argentine Minister, Dr. Mario Ruiz de las Llanos, an honorary member of the Club, his sister, Sra. Marcelles Ruiz de las Llanos, the wife of the Mayor, the Chief of Police, Dr. Velasquez, Dr. Ayaler, and many others. Among the English-speaking club members were: the families of Vruyk, Browning, Bohm, Campbell, Duke, etc., etc. When too dark to play, the guests were invited to take refreshments in the dining-room of the Mendez Goncalvez mansion. The table was loaded with good things to eat and drink, and decorated with beautiful flowers.

From the dining room the guests passed to the drawing-room and dancing was indulged in until long after dark.

The Paraguayan Club won every set, with one or two exceptions. Two members of this Club, brothers, by name Quevedo, played very well indeed, and two members of the other club, Mr. L. Bohm and Mr. Daaar, made fine opponents, especially the former.

Another of the tennis clubs, "Les Amis du Sport" had a paseo to-day to the Botanical Gardens, leaving in the 2.30 p.m. train. Judging by the crowd, there were many on the look out for a good time.

Churchgoing and the Weather.

We had one small shower before Santa Rosa, and on that day we had another, both have done no end of good, but much more is needed. To-day the sky seemed to be making preparations for rain, but it would have been a pity if it had come to-day—much as it is needed. There was service in the Anglican Church to-day, and in spite of the heat a very fair congregation. Being so far away, and the train running so inconveniently, it makes it very hard for those living at a distance to attend service in bad weather.

Personal.

The American Minister, Mr. Daniel Mooney, though still on the "sick list" is better.

Mrs. Hartmann who has been very ill, is now on the road to recovery.

Another Englishman—Tetilla by name—leaves to-morrow for England and the war. He was formerly an employee of the Railway, but lately of the Electric Tram Company.

to the crops on account of the drought, especially the wheat, will be very heavy.

Several days ago a waggon load of maize containing some 400 bags arrived in town consigned to Sr. Jorge Moroni. When the maize was unloaded a shortage of 20 bags was noted. The police are investigating the matter.

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY

Case of the Northern Assurance Company

REPLIES TO "BRITISHER"

(To the Editor)

Sir,—Though not an Insurance man I should like to criticise the letter of "Britisher" in your issue of 8th inst. In the first place the British government has stated that in neutral countries British firms may trade with enemy firms domiciled in such countries, provided that they can convince themselves that the profits arising out of such business are not being remitted to Germany, and that the business itself is not calculated to be of direct benefit to the enemy in the field. In the case of Fire Insurance, the premium profit goes to the British company which the agent represents, less the latter's commission. The Northern has, I understand, one of the largest fire businesses here, and a complete change of agents might mean a considerable loss of profitable insurance, seeing that local insurers are frequently influenced more by the standing and reputation of the local agent than by the name of the company issuing the policy. Hence any abrupt change might well prove equivalent to the cutting off of one's nose to spite one's face. The same thing applies to the sale of Swiss milk, mentioned by your correspondent. If a British representative can show Messrs. Nestle that he can turn over as much or more of their products than does the present German agent, then there would doubtless be some ground for the company to make a change. As things are the alleged pro-German tendencies of the gentleman referred to probably only serve to increase the profits of the British firm, owing to increased sales, whilst the money that he remits home serves to strengthen still further the British financial position. The same reasoning applies to many other commission businesses in South America, although the case of Messrs. Brauss Mahn comes under a different category, and certainly ought to be investigated, always providing that the facts are as stated. This firm has from the outset been active on behalf of German interests, is credibly reported to have been concerned in the provisioning of the German raiders when they were above water, and in many other ways has shown itself to be a very active commercial enemy in this field, vigorous in its methods and earnestly engaged in furthering German propaganda in this part of the world.

I enclose my card, and remain, Sir, Yours, etc.

ANOTHER BRITISHER.

Bs. Aires, Sept. 8, 1915.

MR. AGUET EXPLAINS.

(To the Editor)

Sir,—With reference to "Britisher's" letter published in your to-day's issue under the above heading, in which I am incidentally mentioned, I wish to make a correction. I was born in Italy, of Swiss parentage, and following the rule of the Swiss born in the former country and in accordance with the liberty accorded by that government to the foreigners born in the peninsular, I renounced Italian rights and chose the Swiss nationality in the year 1900, and not when the war between Italy and Austria broke out, as "Britisher" erroneously states. The proof of my assertion can be verified by any person who cares to see my papers at the address mentioned below. It is to be regretted that this anonymous Britisher, before writing incorrect statements to such an important paper as yours, did not reflect sufficiently on the subject. "Les faits sont des faits, et non pas des paroles." With regard to the nationality of the married woman, it is an accepted fact that the wife assumes that of her husband. I do not consider that any "defence" can be called for in answer to your subscriber's attack on the firm I represent, but in order that your many readers may not be misled by his remarks, which although made with patriotic motives, are scarcely applicable in this case. I would like to state that the firm of Nestlé and Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Co. was founded in Switzerland, with its capital inscribed in that country; it has its head offices in Cham and Vevey, and possesses branches all over the world, of which London is the most important.

Yours, etc.

L. AGUET.

Manager,

Nestlé and Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Co., Buenos Aires Agency. Lavalle 130, Bs. Aires, Sept. 8/15.

MR. BAHNTZE'S POSITION.

(To the Editor)

Sir,—In your issue of 8th inst. appears a letter over signature of Britisher in which I am referred to.

My parents were Hanoverians (where the late Queen Victoria hailed from). When Hanover was swallowed up by Germany my parents emigrated to this country and established themselves in Chivilcoy, where I was born. I am, therefore, Argentine by birth and as such strictly neutral and intend to remain so.

Personally I take no side whatever in the question of the war, believing that as a business man it is my duty to study my firm's interest and leave these much debated questions to those directly interested.

Yours, etc.

E. W. BAHNTZE.

CORDOBENSE ECONOMIES

LEGISLATURE WANTS MORE MONEY.

Owing to the crisis through which the country is passing, and no doubt to compensate them for the worry, anxiety, and moral and intellectual damage consequent thereon, the legislators of Cordoba wish to relieve the Treasury by putting up their salaries from 400 to 700 pesos per month. This kind of thing looks like taking both hands to fill the pockets in a hurry. This action, of which the Conscript Fathers of Cordoba propose to be guilty—and it is stated that all parties show an edifying unanimity in desire to collect as much as possible—would be extraordinary in ordinary times, but is reprehensible in the extreme at present, and appears to exhibit a Legislature chiefly devoted to considering the state of its pockets. A fine example of economy, truly!

FLOODS IN INDIA

DAMAGE ESTIMATED AT 1,100,000 STERLING.

Bombay, Sept. 3.

Heavy rains have set in and vast areas are under water in this region.

A hundred houses have collapsed and a thousand more are damaged.

Several lives have been lost but it has not yet been possible to obtain precise information as to the full extent of the casualties.

According to reports from Cawnpore the damage to property is estimated at about £1,100,000.

'THE DOWAGER'

Wig and Powder Play

AT B.A.C.C. ENTERTAINMENT

The Buenos Aires Cricket Club, not having the fear or the dismal example of dramatic failure consistently before their eyes, last night gave a concert accompanied by, or rather, dominated by, for the dramatic part was the chief item of the evening, the one-act comedy of Chas. Mathews' ("The Dowager.")

The entertainment was given at the Salon Suiza, 254 Saenz Peña, and the choice was on the whole happy. The acoustics are good, and the hall just comfortably accommodated the really excellent audience which was present. There were none of those resounding empty cavernous spaces, which, in a cold and quarter-filled theatre, give a skull-like aspect to the house when seen from the front. The musical part of the entertainment was of itself, good enough to stand alone and constitute a satisfactory show.

Miss Isabel Roberts sang Tosti's "O dolce Meraviglia," in a very sympathetic manner, to the accompaniment of Miss Nina Atwell. Señor Pedro Lafuente followed with Meyerbeer's "O Paradiso" from L'Africaine most acceptably. Miss Lucie Menzie's cello solo, accompanied by Miss Lily Moss, was well rendered, as was Mr. Fairfield Magrane's song, which succeeded. Miss Eileen Scott then contributed a song from La Bohème, and Señor Pedro Lafuente sang "Mi Nina Habanera" with the requisite feeling. No. 7 was the duet and dance of Mr. Bideleux and Mr. Ellis Griffin. Those who know these gay owls in their moments of expansion will not doubt that the result was amusing.

"The Play's the Thing," and, as it is well to know one's subject, the caste was as follows: The Dowager, Countess Tresilian. Mrs. H. R. K. Richards; Lady Bloomer, Miss Ivy Bulman; Margaret Beauchamp, Miss Gladys Baillie; Lord Alfred Lindsay, Mr. Hubert Waldron; Sir Frederick Chasomore, Mr. Richard Peard; Edgar Beauchamp, Mr. H. Waite; Servant, Mr. A. N. Onymous.

It is stated that the period is circa 1760, and the dresses plausibly bear out the idea, although the waistcoats should be flapped to mid thigh and the coats longer, fuller and stiffer in the skirts. This, however, is mere cavilling. Everybody concerned was gratifyingly clear in their articulation. One knew what it was all about and if the atmosphere were perhaps not all that one imagines of "the age of snuffbox and fan," it was an excellent imitation. "La Madam, I protest" that the ladies curtsied à merveille, and the gentlemen in their bagwigs and solitaires, bowed with much grace, walked as if their swords were part of their daily costume, without falling over them, and generally had that "stap my vitals" suggestion which is associated with the Beau Frisks of the time.

The plot is one of misunderstandings in which a handsome and intelligent woman, the Countess of Tresilian, comes to act as Chaperone and Providence at a Country House where she is supposed to be "an actress creature" masquerading as herself. Mr. Waldron as the Gay Don Juan, the irresistible, "the dog," was excellent, with his flair and confident manner. As Edgar Beauchamp, Mr. H. Waite, the timid lover who is a kind of young Marlowe without that young gentleman's impudence to waiting-women, gave the proper stiffness to the character. Mr. R. Peard's Sir Richard Chasomore was a very creditable performance, and Mr. A. N.

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY

CASE OF THE NORTHERN ASSURANCE CO.

(To the Editor).

Sir.—Under date of September 7, a circular on paper of The Northern Assurance Co. Limited, signed Hossmann & Co., has been circulated, intimating to the clients of the Company that the Power of Attorney formerly held by Messrs. Hossmann and Co. had been transferred to Mr. G. E. J. Boer, partner in the firm of Hossmann and Co.

Now, Sir, is this transference not, in spirit, if not in fact, a breach of the King's Proclamation, re trading with the enemy?

Mr. Hossmann is doubtless a most estimable gentleman. The writer has not the pleasure of his acquaintance, but he is a German. His partner, Mr. Boer, is put forward to save appearances—and incidentally to conserve the pecuniary advantages of the Northern Agency.

Britishers have a right to enquire into these questions—not only that it is a duty that devolves on all of us.

Who is the Mr. Boer, now holder of the Powers of the Northern?

If I mistake not he is of Dutch extraction, and Argentine born.

He is well known here as a strong, very strong pro-German, as is also his brother-in-law, Mr. Bahntje, also Argentine born, of German parentage, and equally strong, as a supporter of the Teuton race.

Mr. Bahntje holds an important position in the Nestlé's Anglo-Swiss Milk Company—a concern that in England makes a great display for advertising purposes of the number of employees that have gone to the war in favour of the Allies—and yet here, in the Argentine, their business is in the hands of strong pro-Germans.

The Manager of the Nestlé's Company, is Italian born. He is married to a German—and it is a notable and incontrovertible fact that immediately the war was a certainty as between Italy and Austria, this gentleman transferred his papers from those of Italy to those of Switzerland. There is no need to ask why?

So far THE HERALD has shown a good deal of courage in tackling these questions—and even Mr. Editor if it is impossible for you to publish this letter, the points raised may be of more than passing interest.

There is another matter that may be of interest—and that is the export of tinned beef for Britain, that is said to come from the factory at Concepcion de Paraguay, owned by Messrs. Hermann Krabb and Co., and under mortgage to the Banco Germanico. These tins of beef come down (2 lbs. each) in plain tins to Messrs. Braus Mann and Co., and are being sold, if report be true, for export to England, through a well-known Anglo-Argentine firm, to the representatives of British firms.

These questions may merit a few moments of your valuable time.

Yours, etc.

Buenos Aires, BRITISHER.
August 4.

Onymous as the Servant performed his part with due dignity.

As the "Dowager" Mrs. H. R. K. Richards invested her part with a great deal of arch fun, checking the rapid advance of the all-conquering Lindsay. Miss Ivy Bulman has distinctly improved on her previous performances, and the part suited her better than a former one has done. She was distinctly pleasing, and Miss Gladys Baillie was a charming Margaret Beauchamp. The setting was adequate, and the stage, while not a large one, was fully equal to the occasion. By not trying to do too much at once, the Buenos Aires Cricket Club have done what they did distinctly well.

SUCCESS AND INDIVIDUALITY

DEBATE AT LOMAS.

Tuesday, Sept. 7.

The unfortunate indisposition of Mr. Wolcott kept him out of the chair at last night's meeting of the Lomas Debating and Literary Society. Mr. Herald officiated in his place. The meeting was both a business and a debating meeting, and proceedings opened with the reading of the report of the 1915 season.

The Honorary Secretary stated that a nett increase of eight members could be recorded. During the season only one debate has been held, the reason being that the consensus of opinion was in favour of lectures and addresses. The report continued with thanks to Messrs. Attwell and Shepherd, also to Dr. Felix Vitale, Dr. Fleming, to Mr. A. S. Smythe, Mr. Rodger and those gentlemen who had given lectures and addresses, and made the season a successful one. The report closed with reference to the illness of Mr. Howard, and of the indebtedness of the Society for his many valuable suggestions. The Hon. Secretary's report, which was received with applause, was duly adopted. The statement of accounts likewise received similar treatment, and the election of officers for the coming year resulted in the re-election of those of the past season.

The business of the meeting then closed, and the remainder of the session was filled with two interesting addresses.

The first of these opened by Mr. Taylor discussed the question: "Should the United States of America participate in the war?" There was but little difference of opinion in deciding this question in the negative. The opinion expressed was that the States by keeping out of the war were doing more good to the Allies, more good to humanity than by participating therein. Supplies of munitions and of the necessities of war from the United States to the Allies was considered by the meeting as more important than joining in the general upheaval. The speakers were Messrs. Taylor, Shepherd, Triggs and Herald.

The second address created considerable argument and was of a lively and interesting nature. Mr. Triggs of Banfield, introduced the subject and question of "Can a man be successful in life and maintain his own individuality?"

Mr. Triggs was very definite upon the point that this was impossible. He considered that an employee was dominated by his employer, and was forced to do the work set him in a manner dictated by the employer. It was chiefly a question of bread and butter.

If you discovered your boss was a cheat, would you tell him so? Would you beard the lion in his den and assert your individuality? If so you laid yourself open to be told you were working for him, not your own character, and would immediately find yourself on the streets. If you persisted in this you would find yourself anything but a success in life. Every pastor was governed by his own people, and if he did not fulfil their wishes his church would be empty, and he would not be a success, therefore his individuality had to be sunk. Every employer was governed by circumstances, and environment, and these governed the successful man, not his individuality.

Mr. Smythe thought that Mr. Triggs was himself a governed man, and asked the question "What is success?" If a man stuck to his principles he might get a smaller salary, but that did not say he was unsuccessful.

In respect to telling one's boss he was a rogue, or doing something wrong, and thus asserting individuality, the question as to whether one was making a success of life by doing so or refraining, Mr. Smythe would leave to a higher judge.

Mr. Triggs explained that success

BRITISH AND AMERICAN BENEVOLENT SOCIETY

The monthly meeting of the general committee of the British and American Benevolent Society was held in the board room of the Royal Insurance Company, Calle Bm6, Mitre 478, on Monday at 5 p.m., the following members being present:—

Mr. H. G. Mackie (in the chair), Mrs. Raynes, Mrs. Huntington, Mrs. Botting, Mrs. Lighton Robinson, Rev. Dr. Fleming, Rev. F. O. Spanton, Rev. F. H. Somerville, Mr. W. H. Robertson, Mr. E. Millington Drake, Mr. R. W. Huntington, Mr. W. R. Cassels, Mr. James Marr (Hon. Treasurer), Mr. G. H. Hayward (Hon. Secretary), Mr. Alexander Law (Superintendent).

An apology for unavoidable absence was received from Col. Palmer.

The Hon. Treasurer presented his statement of receipts and expenditure for the month of August, which was duly approved, the following being a résumé of the disbursements:—

	$ m/n.
Charity grants	445.75
Pensions	291.—
Salvation Army Shelter . .	114.75
Loans	30.—
General charges	185.—
	1,066.50
British Aged and Infirm Fund	177.—
	1,243.50

Various matters were brought before the committee for their consideration, amongst them the cases of a young Englishwoman who has been in hospital for some two or three years, an old British woman who has been bed-ridden for some long time, and an aged Englishman who has become completely blind, all of whom are without means of support. Also that of an American citizen, with two young children, who through misfortune finds himself in a destitute condition.

was dollars in the bank, and drew an instance of asserted individuality being a failure.

Mr. Shepherd rose to refute every word Mr. Triggs had said. He explained success in life and in business were two different matters, and he challenged the point that dollars meant success in life. One could be polite without sacrificing one's individuality, and this was a point of immense value. In referring to a remark by Mr. Triggs that even Job had lost everything, even his wife's confidence, Mr. Shepherd believed he remembered that Job got it all back again.

Mr. Taylor said he agreed with much that had been said on both sides, but was much more in favour of what Mr. Triggs had said. In five per cent. of successes the man might assert his individuality, but in the remaining 95 per cent. he would be a failure if he did. He told a tale of Government bribery, in which a man had been successful enough to retire, always asserting his individuality, but would have been more successful if he had not done so, and if he had waived his principles and used bribery as a means to obtaining contracts.

Mr. Triggs, in referring to a remark of Mr. Shepherd's, that business methods were to-day cleaner than ever, and that the impression Mr. Triggs had given concerning employers and that they were all bad, said that business methods to-day were worse than ever, and drew an illustration, and again he firmly stated that pastors to be successful had to sink their individuality and pointed out that an earnest pastor fulfilling the ritual would lose all his congregation and church support, if he insisted on his congregation fulfilling the letter of the law in this respect.

Mr. Herald closed the debate with a few remarks and drew attention to next Tuesday week's closing social evening of the season.

BRITISH AGED AND INFIRM FUND

The donations towards the deficit are coming in gradually, but there is still a balance to wipe out. As the general meeting is to be held this month, sympathisers are requested to send their contributions to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. F. P. Simpson, 750 Moreno, as soon as convenient, so that the committee may be able to report that the year begins with a clean sheet.

ANOTHER AEROPLANE "RIVER PLATE" ?

PROBLEM OF THE SURPLUS FUNDS.

On August 2 subscriptions were opened for the aeroplane, "The River Plate." On August 31 not only had all the required money been received, but further subscriptions still poured in, and still continue to pour in to-day.

What will be done with the surplus amount is not yet decided. The British Society have received hundreds of suggestions, many of them of an entirely impossible nature, and the declaration of Mr. Watson, the treasurer that the money was subscribed for an aeroplane and for no other purpose may be taken as an indication of what the Society's intentions are.

The original sum required was some £2250 sterling. Yesterday well over £3300 had been received, and lists were still outstanding. Nothing has yet come from Rosario, who telegraphed requesting the lists to remain open. Nothing from the Western Railway, who also are working patriotically.

Mr. Watson pointed out to a representative of THE HERALD that it was interesting to note that all subscriptions received had come from private sources, no societies or firms, banks, or large business houses had subscribed a cent. One gentleman had collected $1270, odd, and that was the way the money had come. It was magnificent. As for the surplus, there need be no surplus. A more perfect machine and more powerful gun might be bought, but that was for the War Office to decide, but if money came flowing in as it had been doing, why should not two aeroplanes do credit to the Britirers in the Argentine?

Another point of interest was the fact that the Central Argentine Rail-

TROOPS DESPATCHED TO TEXAS

New York, Sept. 7.

It is stated in military circles that the United States Government, foreseeing a battle on the Mexican frontier which may result in the rupture of relations between the two countries, has sent forty-four car-loads of troops and war material to Texas.

The state of affairs is considered delicate.

BELGIAN AID COMMITTEE

IMPORTANT GRAIN PURCHASES.

A meeting took place yesterday afternoon of the Sub-Committee on purchases appointed by the Belgian Aid Committee. The subject to be considered was the provision of maize. The lowest tender was quoted as by Messrs. Bunge and Born who offered 4000 to 5000 tons at 4.82½ f.o.b. up river or 4.74½ in Buenos Aires with weight guarantee at port of disembarkation.

This quotation it was decided to accept with the addition that in case of the grain arriving in perfect condition and without necessity to make any payments in Europe, 5 cents per 100 kilos shall be returnable.

The Committee will shortly ask tenders for lading another ship expected about the middle of the month.

Towards this worthy cause the Sub-Committee of the Sociedad Rural Argentina has collected the handsome sum of $13,875 collected up to date and has handed over a cheque for that amount.

TROPHY FROM THE FRONT

"SHINY SEVENTH" SEND HOME A GERMAN FLAG.

The 1st Battalion of the 7th City of London Territorials (the "Shiny Seventh") have sent to their depot at 24, Sun-street, Finsbury, some interesting trophies of the fighting in Flanders. One is a German flag which was hoisted by the Germans over their breastworks in the "Rue de Cailhous." It was shot down by Company Sergeant-Major R. Hill, of B Company, and was subsequently captured by A Company during an attack upon the breastworks on May 16. The breastworks were carried with the bayonet.

Other souvenirs captured in this engagement include German helmets, bayonets, cartridges, and a bolt from a German rifle.

A symbol of the "entente" between the French and British soldiers is a drinking mug made from the shell of a French '75. The handle is formed by three cartridges—a French, a German, and an English. It was made by a French gunner, and has now been presented to Major Sir Pieter Stewart-Bam, the officer commanding the third line of the battalion.

way were non-subscribers, because they themselves had a scheme of an aeroplane subscribed for amongst their employers.

It was possible, and how splendid it would be that one, two, or three, or four "River Plate" aeroplanes would be harassing an enemy and doing a work in which every Britisher in the Argentine would take a personal interest.

The surplus money would not be used for any scheme other than that for which subscribed.

A LONDON LETTER

(EXCLUSIVELY COMMUNICATED TO THE BRITISH PATRIOTIC FUND, URUGUAY)

London, July 15, 1915.

The British War Loan.

Although the British War Loan is not yet complete, it is already clear that the operation is to be an unparalleled success. When the loan was floated, Mr. McKenna announced that there was to be no limit to its amount, or at any rate, only a limit which might be considered limitless, say, ten hundred million pounds. About three-fourths of that total was probably aimed at as a possible maximum, and half of it as a workable minimum. It is now known that, apart from the subscriptions of the working classes, the total applications up to date amount to upwards of six hundred millions sterling, all new money fairly and squarely raised without any sort of manipulation. Numerous banks applied each for £20,000,000 or more, the total applications from bankers amounting to over two hundred millions. Insurance companies, corporations and private investors are responsible for probably about five hundred millions more. How many additional hundreds of millions have still to come in can only be guessed, but it is quite conceivable that the limits of the supposed limitless limit may yet be reached. Never before in the history of the world has there been such a prodigious financial operation, and never before has any demand on the resources of a nation met with such an impressive response. Last year, it will be remembered England's first great loan—the greatest up to that date—amounted to only 350 millions.

America's Wager.

People in England have a saying to the effect that money talks. So it does and what it says in this instance is that England is determined on victory, believes in victory, and is prepared to pay, fight and work for victory. Some time ago the German newspapers, in jesting allusion to the sporting habits of the British race, were asking if England would be willing to bet on her chance of success. Here is the answer in the form of a stake which may ultimately rise to eight or nine hundred million sterling. It is interesting to know that America also is backing the Quadruple Entente with her money, for America is even more businesslike than England in such matters, and would be unlikely to place her investments in a quarter where any risk of a loss was to be feared.

Botha's Victory.

From the European point of view the final triumph of General Botha in South-West Africa has more than a military significance. It represents the vindication of a political principle which although it has been successfully tested again and yet again in the history of British Colonisation was distrusted and challenged by the less experienced and more arrogant school of empire-builders who have sought to achieve a world conquest from the bureaux of Berlin. Local responsibility, full of self-government, a free and unfettered autonomy—such were the privileges for which South Africa fought, bled, and conquered. Both Boer and Briton knew that if victory should be obtained by South West Africa, they would at once have to exchange their own homely and sociable civilization for the stiff dehumanized and Prussian brand with all its accompaniments of militarism and local subordination to a distant centralised authority. No episode of the war has given more pleasure to Englishmen than the supreme tribute thus paid by Boer loyalty to the practical wisdom of the British method of colonial rule. When self-government was first granted to the Transvaal, General Botha promised that while he lived he would see to it that England should never have cause to regret her magnanimity. Nobly has he kept his word.

Germany as a Colonial Power.

By the rules of conquest, South Africa will doubtless desire to retain her great territorial prize of arms. She has abundant reason for wishing to rid herself permanently of her German neighbours. For many years the harsh treatment of the native tribes in South West Africa was responsible for constant unrest among the native populations, not only in German territory but in every neighbouring colony as well. In the common interest of the various white peoples, England found it necessary more than once to assist in putting down the periodical native revolts provoked by German ideas of colonial administration, and was rewarded for her good offices by efforts on the part of the German officials to stir up rebellion against the British flag among the Boers, while at the same time strategic railways were being constructed, and armaments secretly piled up in South-West Africa with a view to an eventual attack on the frontiers of the unsuspecting British Powers. In a country where the coloured races so largely predominate as they do in South Africa, one can imagine how such treachery by one white nation towards another must be resented. On a smaller scale, though perhaps in a still more detestable form, the Dutch and British colonists consider themselves to have been the intended victims of a long and secretly prepared plot of aggression not unlike that which had laid Belgium in ruins. They are just as likely to set a neighbour capable of such conduct on his feet again as Belgium would be if she had the chance.

The Submarine Campaign.

Students of psychology are said to be still following with unabated interest the endless German-American controversy on the use of submarines against neutrals. Other people have long since made up their minds as to the merits of the dispute and are only waiting for America's final decision. While each successive statement on behalf of Admiral Von Tirpitz seems to provoke more and more indignation; yet so far as this country is concerned, the anger is chiefly expressed by residents of American birth, among whom unquestionably there is a very warlike feeling. Perhaps it is natural that English people should view the quarrel calmly, not to say with some cynicism. For obvious reasons they have no desire to see America involved in the war, but at the same time they have a shrewd idea of what would be their own answer in similar circumstances to such a document as the latest German note. Probably the predominant feeling in this country is one of profound contempt, not unmingled with bitter amusement, at what is regarded as the hypocritical effrontery of Germany's apologia.

Kitchener's Army Complete.

From the speech which he delivered in the City of London a few days ago, Lord Kitchener would seem to have completed the massing of his

POST OFFICE EMPLOYEES AND TUBERCULOSIS

A PROPOSED HOSPITAL

A campaign against the deplorable hygienic conditions existing in the General Post Office of the city has been commenced in the native press. The inevitable contagion which is occasioned by the post bags being thrown down in airless, dark and dirty places, the general uncleanness of the offices in which hundreds of employers work, with killing hours and miserable wages is the general tone of these complaints. It is claimed that there are societies for the protection of animals but none for the protection of these Government officials, amongst whom anemia and tuberculosis are rife.

The inroads made by the latter disease are terrible and at the suggestion of certain chiefs of the post-office four or five months ago it was decided that each employer should voluntarily pay 25 cents a month to go towards a fund for the construction of a hospital for tubercular patients. Already $12,000 has been raised in this way.

But it remains for the Government to act and act firmly.

new armies, and also their equipment. We are not yet told the strength of this great force. Other Ministers have put it roughly at from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000, and there is a general impression that it is nearer the larger of these two estimates. General impressions, as Lord Kitchener says, do no harm, whereas precise information might gratify German superiority as well as our own; and accordingly we (and the enemy) are still left on this matter in the region of conjecture. On the other hand it seems clear that the army is now at full strength since the Minister for War tells us that a good guide to the numbers required for future recruiting may be obtained from the published lists of casualties—a hint which suggests that the chief problem is now the building-up of a constant and efficient supply of reserves. That this will be done nobody can doubt who has had an opportunity of testing the spirit of the people in recent weeks. Alike in men, munitions and money, England is now pouring forth her resources with both hands, and not even yet, it may be said, is she at the top of her capabilities.

Seapower and the War.

Self-criticism has been playing a great part of late in British public utterances, especially in the press, where the extravagances of this national habit have taken on an almost ridiculous aspect. Apparently our French allies have been touched by those essays in self-depreciation, for they have just been assuring us in columns of cheerful print that it is only our modesty that prevents us from seeing that we have been of some little use in the war. For instance, there is our navy. What, we are asked, would have happened to the French coasts but for the British navy? (What for that matter would have happened to our own?) And but for the same magnificent instrument where would the commerce of the Allies have been, where their troop transports, where the Dardanelles expedition, and where Russia's White Sea supplies? Perhaps France sees more clearly than ourselves what a difference seapower in the hands of Germany would have made to German prospects, for England, it would seem, in so accustomed to the miracle of her world-wide sea security that she has almost come to take its effects as a law of nature for which she herself deserves no credit. Perhaps a frank German opinion on this subject, and a candid German statement of what it means to be absolutely excluded from the freedom of the seas, would open English eyes a little. Meanwhile it is not unpleasant for once to be invited to see ourselves as our French comrades see us.

BAHIA BLANCA NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

September 5.

Increase in Railway Fares.

The railway companies here have decided to increase the present rates on their charges for fares and freight by 10 per cent from the beginning of next month. The reason for this is, it is stated, the prolonged crisis of the country which has caused a great reduction in the takings, the war, and the large amount of loss and expense caused by the inundations. The latter have done considerable damage to the lines, culverts and bridges which have all had to be repaired at considerable expense, especially now that the price of material has gone up so much since the commencement of the war.

Departure of Italian Reservists.

Well over a thousand people were at the station last night to see the Italian reservists, some fifty in number, off to Buenos Aires to leave for Italy. They were accompanied by a band to the station and met there by another one from the Port. The band was not allowed to play in the streets either coming or going. The reason for this not being permitted is said to have been that the Hun Consul here wrote to La Plata and complained of this on former occasions.

Fatal Accident on Board Ship.

An accident resulting in the death of one of the crew occurred on board the s.s. Cloutsam on her voyage here from Baltimore with coal. It appears that the peak tanks were being cleaned out when a fire broke out in one of them the fumes from which prevented the other two men from getting near the third. It was not till an hour afterwards that he could be rescued but his condition was so bad that, he died shortly afterwards and was buried at sea.

Veterans Football Match.

The return Veteran's match was played this morning. There were some changes in the teams on both sides. The Portenians had amongst others, Mortimer, Kelly, Campbell and Horton playing for them. The Veterans, whose team was: goal, J. S. Sewell; backs, Pearson and McKerron; half backs, McCoubrey, Caldwell and Moore; forwards, Maples, Abel, Clydesdale, Kingspark and Andrews, were the stronger team and had the ball most of the time in their opponents half. The two goals, scored by Clydesdale and Maples, were made in the first quarter of an hour. Both these players were again very good and the combination amongst the forwards was excellent. Mr. N. Geddes again acted as referee and an interesting game was witnessed. During the interval, the rival teams had their photographs taken together by Senor L. Plo, the ladies amongst the spectators standing on the pavilion at the back. The score was not again added to and the game resulted in a victory for the Veterans by 2 goals to nil.

Sale of Livestock.

At the sale of animals held here last Wednesday the following prices were obtained:—Fat half bred steers $125 to $192, criollos $95 to $122, for fattening $68 to $92, half bred cows, fat $108 to $156, criollos $100 to $116, cows stall fed $141 to $300, young heifers $56 to $78, bullocks $110 to $127, bulls $105 to $400, wethers $8.40 to $11.80, wethers for fattening $7.20 to $7.90, lambs $5 to $8; the total amount of the sales made realising the sum of $261,607.

Items in Brief.

A fire broke out early on Thursday morning in Ingeniero White, in a wooden house near the foot of the bridge furthest away from the station. The house or almacén consisted of six rooms, some of these being let to peones. The fire is said to have originated in one of these occupied by a man named Martin, who was not in a very sober state at the time, and who was arrested by the police until the matter was cleared up. Two fire brigades were quickly on the spot—that of the Volunteers and that of the Southern Railway.

The representatives of the Southern Railway have invited the President and Dr. Moyano to visit the irrigation works that the Company are now constructing for the Government on the Rio Negro. The President will not be able to take advantage of the invitations but Dr. Moyano has already done so.

District Notes.

The Governor of Neuquen has been in Buenos Aires for some time past in order to discuss with the authorities the question of the exemption from duty of the material destined for the building of the workmen's houses in Nuequen.

A visit has been paid by the children of the National School in Tandil to the well known cheese factory there (the Tandilera). They were shown over this factory by the manager who explained the working of different machinery, where from ten to fifteen tons of cheese was made daily as well as a large quantity of butter, for which work one hundred thousand litres of milk were received daily from the surrounding district.

The Chief of the Police force in the Capital has recently sent a representative down to Tandil in order to investigate the reports of the Socialist Deputation with regard to the indulgence in prohibited games in several of the provincial towns.

In the construction of the line from San Antonio to Nahuel Huapi the following amount of work has now been done. The line has been made as far as Kilometre 421. The laying of the rails has been carried as far as Kilometre 416, and they are still to be laid as far as Kilometre 450; the telegraph is now as far as Kilometre 415; and 29 kilometres of auxiliary lines have been laid. 313 culverts out of the 322 projected have been built as well as 17 bridges, and, of the 75 proposed buildings, 47 have been erected.

A man named Vasquez has been arrested on suspicion of camp robberies near Azul. This same man succeeded in escaping from the prison here in 1908 where he was detained for fighting in Juarez.

A series of lectures is being given in the district of Olavarria by the Government farming expert here, Sr. Izard.

In Tandil a list of all the empty plots of land without walls and proper footpaths is now being made as well as the owners of these so that when finished contracts may be called for for this work at the cost of the owners, in order that the work may be done as cheaply as possible.

Arrangements are being made in this same town for the necessary repairs to the race course and grand stand there in order that proper race meetings may be held again. The Municipality are also discussing the question of naming certain places in each district for the slaughter of animals for consumption.

BAHIA BLANCA SHIPPING.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

September 5.

Ingeniero White: Anglesea, sailed on September 1, for the Bristol channel; Chile, Italian steamer, discharged 500 tons of cargo and proceeded to Buenos Aires; Cloutsam, arrived on September 3 from Baltimore with coal for the Southern Railway.

Port Galvan: Cotovia left for Rio; Bocaina, loading from Bunge and Born; Hjalman Serensen, loading for Bunge and Born; Delagoa, discharging coal for the B.A.P.

Steamers expected: Bilksworth Hall, Celia. Also sailing vessel "A. T. Lucknow" with timber from the States for the German Consul here.

ROSARIO NEWS

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

Santa Rosa.

This dear good lady of Lima duly provided us with a storm, but to the great disappointment of everyone in this district, it was a dry one, and we only had a couple of millimetres or so, where a good downpour was expected. Some complaints are beginning to come in from the colonies about damage having been done to the growing crops by the prolonged drought. This may be credited about linseed, but it is surely too early to talk about damage to wheat. It would be more correct to say that the crop is backward, and that rain is becoming needful.

Golf.

In my last letter I mentioned that there had been a tie in the match for the F.C.C.A. Cup. The replay took place at the Rosario Golf Club on Sunday, August 22, and Mr. Hugh Buchanan ran out winner.

Last Sunday the Northern Championship match was played off, Mr. Donald Frazer winning the trophy with a score of 207 for the 36 holes. There were only three competitors—all local men; and it certainly seems a pity that this event should not attract a better entry.

The River.

At last the tide has turned. The river is now rising at Corrientes, and it is expected that the worst has been seen, and that at any rate for the present there will be no trouble about draught of water from this port to Buenos Aires. In official quarters it is anticipated that as much as 24 feet of water will be available between here and Martin Garcia during next week, and this will be good news for the shipping industry, for steamers will once more be able to follow their usual course of full cargo up river, and thus avoid the heavy charges which lighterage has incurred. I understand that as much as £800 has been paid by steamers to lighter surplus cargo over what they could carry in order to pass over the bars between here and San Nicholas. Several steamers have been aground, and have had to incur the expense of lighterage to enable them to get off.

The Anglo-German Hospital.

I reported at the time that at a meeting of subscribers to the Anglo-German Hospital a Comisión Liquidadora was appointed for the purposes which its name implies. The members were: Messrs. G. J. Van Oppen, A. Murray Hudson, C. C. Cox, Pablo Wiedenbrüg, Rodolfo Schmidt and Jorge Pöhrig, with Messrs. A. M. Barnes, C. C. Day, Albin Schneider and H. Graf as suplicantes. A delay occurred owing to the necessity for fulfilling the requirements of the Provincial Government, and then two valuers were appointed, Messrs. Barraco and Schneider, to appraise the property and give an estimate of its market value to the present moment. It was currently reported that the valuers had not been able to agree, and that the Comisión had been obliged to name an umpire; but as a matter of fact an umpire had been nominated before any discussion at all had taken place, and moreover his services were never called upon, as Messrs. Barraco and Schneider were quite unanimous in their judgment as to the various values. They found that the whole concern, lock, stock and barrel, the site and everything on it, were worth $170,916.20 m/n.

What next is to be done I may be able to suggest next week, as the Comisión will have held a meeting before I next write.
